

use:
Programs photo:
computer & 2 people.

408@30%

pms 408 solid

The University Library

Black HT
of programs photo
(computer & 2 people)
tint block 20%
pms 208

The library provides a foundation upon which to build a heritage for the future, a heritage that partakes of Lincoln's vision and goes beyond it. Take advantage of the opportunity to invest in that heritage, the opportunity to bring the University of Idaho into a Second Century of Distinction.

negative

208
s

W

When Abraham Lincoln signed the legislation establishing land-grant universities in 1862, his goal was to provide ready access to learning for its practical application. He knew the value of a sound education. As a boy, he studied long hours, reading by firelight. His own light, his vision of accessible knowledge, burns brightly throughout the University of Idaho Library's history, coloring its land-grant heritage and illuminating its future.

As the major research facility in the state, and a major resource for scholarship in the West, the University of Idaho and its library face the challenge and embrace the opportunity to build a heritage for the future. In keeping with its land-grant mission, the library provides access to 1.5 million volumes of books, bound periodicals, theses, microforms, maps, newspapers, and other materials. It also houses one of the best U.S. government document collections in the Northwest, one of the head 408

Black

rule 208

logo fill 20% 408

line art
black

black

graphic 20% pms 208

Use: Programs
computers
photo: # 2 people
Library (Bldg.)

The University Library

The library provides a foundation upon which to build a heritage for the future, a heritage that partakes of Lincoln's vision and goes beyond it. Take advantage of the opportunity to invest in that heritage, the opportunity to bring the University of Idaho into a Second Century of Distinction.

magenta

W

hen Abraham Lincoln signed the legislation establishing land-grant universities in 1862, his goal was to provide ready access to learning for its practical application. He knew the value of a sound education. As a boy, he studied long hours, reading by firelight. His own light, his vision of accessible knowledge, burns brightly throughout the University of Idaho Library's history, coloring its land-grant heritage and illuminating its future.

As the major research facility in the state, and a major resource for scholarship in the West, the University of Idaho and its library face the challenge and embrace the opportunity to build a heritage for the future. In keeping with its land-grant mission, the library provides access to 1.5 million volumes of books, bound periodicals, theses, microforms, maps, newspapers, and other materials. It also houses one of the best U.S. government document collections in the Northwest, one of the

Handwritten notes and scribbles at the bottom left corner.

LIBRARY : 3000 copies