The Recital

(By A. P. Beckner)

To know that it was thoroughly appreciated, one needed only to watch the faces of the people who were present. "Wasn't it good?" "Enjoyed every minute," "Thoroughly a success," were the comments of the audience as they left the hall. On Friday evening Mr. Hellier-Collens showed that he has a mastery of his art. His work was entirely memorized and he did not once use the music in the dozen difficult pieces he played. Miss Caldwell, Idaho's soprano, was also in good voice and did justice to the pieces she sang. Miss Sams, who would rather play than eat, threw herself into the accompaniments in a way that made them count.

First Miss Caldwell sang "Love's Coronation," by Aylward, and Mr. Collens played the violin obligato. Then Mr. Collens rendered three selections. In Mendelssohn's "Andante from Concerto," he displayed skill with the difficult high strains. De Bériot's, "Seventh Concerto" was a light, airy piece with some lively-fingering which brought loud applause. The third was Ernst's "Elegie," a beautiful expressive tone poem.

"Songs my Mother Taught Me" was done such justice by Miss Caldwell that the audience would not be satisfied until she sang as an encore a ditty with a moral. Mr. Collens rendered Chopin's "Nocturne with feeling" and although he was very obstinate about answering encores he was forced to follow his capricious rendering of Sarasate's "Gypsy Dances" with "Cavalleria Rusticana."

"Villanelle," by Dell Aqua, is a vocal solo, containing difficult cadenzas and variations, and everyone said that Miss Caldwell sang it beautifully. Afterwards Mr. Collens concluded the program with four numbers among which was the best of the evening, "Humoresque" by Dvorak. He plays "Humoresque" with extreme delicacy. Drdla's pensive "Souvenir" and the playful "Mazurka" by Wieniawski preceded it and Brahms' "Hungarian Dance" concluded the program. When the curtain was about to fall the audience, unwilling to go home, gave another encore and Mr. Collens responded with "Traumerel."

The music loving people were all there. The city was much better represented than even the student body. The music department has a just complaint against the student body for its lack of appreciation of this finest of the cultural accomplishments. Why should a student prefer a cheap melodramatic performance furnished by a worn out stock company to an evening of real enjoyment given by a department of his own institution? If you cannot appreciate good music you ought to educate yourself to it by hearing all the good music you can.

O. A. C. AND IDAHO BREAK EVEN

After Two of the Fastest Games Ever Played in the Idaho Gym. Horton and Montgomery Star.

With the O. A. C. basketball squad playing here last Saturday and Monday evenings, Idaho rooters were treated to two of the fastest basketball games ever played in the local gym. The teams were evenly matched and in either game it was anybody's till the whistle blew. Idaho won the first game Saturday evening by a score of 28 to 25. O. A. C. came back at us and Monday evening won the game by a 22 to 15 score. With the even break on games the contest next Friday at Corvallis will be watched with interest.

In the first game, Curtis and Montgomery were the point getters, but the other members of the team were scrapping all the time and are deserving of great credit. The O. A. C. five played well together, their team work was of high order. Cooper was the start point scorer. The first half ended 13 to 9 in favor of the visitors. In the second half Curtis began to forget his guard and left him behind enough times to score ten points. McWilliams and Lundstrum held fast to the O. A. C. forwards and prevented any very effective basket work for the visitors. Montgomery did some dribbling and wasted 5 points in this half. Tate came forward with his donation of four points and did some very clever floor work.

Putman of W. S. C. was referee; Angell of O. A. C. and Nissen of Idaho scorers. Fields of Idaho held the watch.

Line up for Saturday game:

	Idaho	O. A. C.
Curtis	F	Reed
Tate	F	Cooper
Montgomery	C	Keck
McWilliams	G	Pugh
Lundstrum	G	Horton

Evender replaced Keck in the last six minutes of play. Putman was holding the whistle in a fast game and while his decisions were at times unpopular he cannot be held as unjust; as fast a game as he worked in would have kept two men busy in order to see all that was going on and Mr. Putman's decisions under such conditions are not to be taken as showing partiality to either side.

On Monday evening, "Deacon" Thomas of somewhere started the game at eight o'clock. Both sides began to play real basketball and before the Reverend had time to blow his whistle two fouls had occurred, in his estimation. Everyone present now saw chance for an exhibition of a gentle little parlor game. Too bad Professor Thomas had never witnessed a basketball game played under intercollegiate rules. He evidently wanted to have the boys game give an exhibition of a girls' game. The game went merrily on, no one interfering with an opponents chance, for something like five minutes; finally the boys forgot themselves and gave a few seconds to basketball playing, but the Deacon promptly called a halt by accusing O. A. C. of fouling. Horrid men, you treated Idaho rudely. The first half ended without a mishap, except in score, Idaho 7, O. A. C. 12.

The second half started with a rush and the Deacon couldn't keep up but presently he found himself and reprimanded the boys most heartily—they are actually fouling each other without even asking permission. Montgomery was punished severely, he had shocked the "man of the hour" five times and was dismissed by the over zealous Deacon. Reilly replaced Montgomery, but still the boys behaved shamefully and the Deacon had to use drastic measures; he still called fouls. McWilliams replaced Capt. Edmundson in the second half and in the last three minutes of play Shangnon replaced Tate. Keck of O. A. C. replaced Evender in this half but Keck was equally rude and the Deacon called a foul on him. The game ended, with O. A. C. in the lead, 22 to 15. This is undoubtedly the fastest game ever played in the local gym, why, it was so fast that the referee couldn't see a foul until everyone had forgotten it. He certainly had a good memory.

For O. A. C. Horton was the star and his pretty goal tossing was a feature. O. A. C.'s victory was due to the fast floor work of this player. For Idaho Montgomery did some good work as did Lundstrum.

Oh! what did we ever do to you. "Deacon" take our advise and at least read the rules before attempting to referee a game.

Those who took part in the little love feast lined up as follows:

Idaho—forwards, Curtis and Tate; center, Montgomery; guards, Lundstrum and Edmundson; Changnon replaced Tate, Reilly relieved Montgomery and McWilliams replaced Edmundson.

O. A. C.—Pugh and Horton, guards; Evender, center; Cooper and Reed, forwards; Keck replaced Evender. Nissen and Angell kept the score but most of their time was taken up by the Deacon's interruptions.

Senior Class Meeting.

Thursday afternoon the Seniors held one of the most enjoyable meetings in the history of the class.

Officers for the ensuing semester were chosen as follows, president, Frank Stewart; vice-president, R. LeBaron; secretary, Nellie Myers; treasurer, Mr. Hopper.

After many eloquent introductory speeches William Leonard was elected Sergeant-at-Arms. "Mike" accepted the position on condition that the class choose an assistant for him. Cy Perkins was thereupon elected assistant Sergeant-at-Arms. The Seniors feel that with two such mighty men guarding them, their meetings will be model ones.

Evan Lewis was unanimously chosen class monitor. Lewis has always been a good worker and will no doubt see that every senior attends assembly regularly. Other business was discussed and the meeting adjourned.

Professors Address School Trustees

Professors Soulen of the department of Education and Nicholson of the School of Agriculture returned Sunday from a trip to Lewiston and Grangeville where they represented the University at the first School Trustees' Institute of Nez Perce and Idaho counties.

Two addresses were delivered by each, Mr. Soulen speaking on "Adolescent Attendance at School" and "The Possibilities of the Rural School" and Mr. Nicholson on "Nature as a School Text" and "Progress of Agricultural Education." At both meetings the University and its interests were given an enthusiastic boost.

A Correction

We wish to correct an omission which was made in last week's paper. This was in giving the cast of "The Doll's House" in which the character of Mrs. Linden, one of the most important parts, was omitted. This part will be taken by Jessie Sams, 13.

The date for "The Doll's House" has been fixed at March 4, and Ernest Ellis, '12, has been chosen manager. This is the second English Club play that Mr. Ellis has been asked to manage and the fact that he is manager is enough to inspire confidence in the play.

Farmers' Week opened here on Monday. The attendance this year far surpasses that of any year since the inauguration of this movement in the institution.

Shattuck Addresses Assembly

At Wednesday's assembly Professor Shattuck, of the Forestry Department, addressed the students. He prefaced his remarks by saying that it was a particularly difficult task to assign oneself a subject for a speech to a body of students. Some are interested in Engineering, some in Science, some in Athletics, etc. It is hard to choose a subject that will interest all these different classes. Mr. Shattuck, however, succeeded in finding a subject of interest to all students. He spoke on the "Conservation of Minutes." He began by drawing a comparison between two classes of students: those who get A grades and those who get C and D and E grades. The second class, Mr. Shattuck said, most probably have as much ability as the A students. The reason they didn't get A grades is not because they are not smart, but because they do not work. When President Garfield was going to school he had much trouble with Latin. Across the street from Garfield's lodging roomed a man who was a "shark" in Latin. So one day Garfield asked him how he got his Latin and how much time he spent on it. The man said he began at 8 o'clock and studied till he got it. The next evening Garfield started in on his Latin at 8 o'clock. When he got over it once and knew it fairly well he went to the window to see if his classmate had quit yet. The light was still burning, so he went back to his Latin. He went over it again and again as long as the Latin "shark" kept his light going and the next morning made a good recitation. So Garfield decided that it was work and not especial ability which procured good grades.

Then Mr. Shattuck went on to show the importance of economizing our time. He used Ex-President Roosevelt as an example of a man who makes use of every minute of time. He said that if a sample day of Roosevelt's were taken record of it would be found that not a minute was wasted.

Mr. Shattuck, however, does not favor spending all our time on our studies. He believes in Athletics, social functions, etc., but he believes that these things should be taken in moderate enough doses so that one would not have to neglect one's studies for them.

Jubilee Singers Heard From

The editor of the Argonaut recently received the following communication from "The Williams Jubilee Singers" who charmed large audiences both last year and the year before under the auspices of the University Y. M. C. A.

London, Eng., Nov. 31, 1909.

Dear Sir:

As we are on a tour of the world, and will probably not return to America for two years or more, we write to thank you and our friends for their patronage.

Our tour will consist of sixty-five thousand miles or more. We shall tour Great Britain, Norway, Sweden, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, the Holy Lands, the Philippine Islands, Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii, thence to California. We hope you will not forget us, or confuse us with any other company and if possible you will have this letter printed in your local paper, that the public may not mistake another company for ours.

Again thanking you and soliciting your future patronage,

I remain,
Yours truly,

Major Fenn Lectured

On Tuesday, Friday and Saturday
February 17, 18 and 19, Major
E. A. Fenn, supervisor of the Clearwater National Forest of Idaho, lectured at several lectures to the students of the School of Forestry of the University. The lectures were highly interesting and well attended. Major Fenn discussed the various phases of forest management as practiced in the clearwater, the most successful in the world, the principles of the subject, the selection of the sites, the selection of species up an undeveloped forest, and the third was illustrated with
the pictures and lantern slides, showed the proper knowledge permitted, showing the resources of our forests.

Probably no man in Idaho is better acquainted with her forest resources than Major Fenn. His lectures with his excellent collection of pictures and illustrating with point taken up causes his special visits to Moscow to be highly appreciated by the students of the school department and others interested.—Star-Mirror.

Fishing

(Meryl Dunkel '12)

Perhaps I don't fish as some sportsmen do. I have never yet had my picture taken with three or four hundred lifeless trout hanging behind me, or a 250 pound sea bass suspended over me. It may be that I take too much pleasure in catching the fish that I do get to ever break any records. But that is not all. I may as well take you into my confidence soon as late. I don't often go fishing for the sake of the fish. I see that you are rather inclined to smile at that confession, but it wasn't meant as an apology for an empty frying pan at supper.

I am, deep down in my heart, a fervent lover of nature, and even when there is plenty of time at hand, an exponent of the simple life. Have you ever watched a child at play when it was all unconscious of any alien presence, and all masking restraint was thrown off? If so, you will know what I mean when I say the only real way to enjoy nature is to take her in her unguarded, unsuspecting moments. Unfortunately, however, I am a sensitive person, and dislike to have smiles exchanged behind my back, and you know as well as I that an ordinary person is sure to excitement if he sets off to the woods or streams with no visible purpose. In fact, I rarely dare to brave my own sense of fitness. The possession of some tangible aim gives one an unlimited amount of moral courage. Thus with rod in hand one can saunter off and idle his way along dreamy streams and only be considered a little lazy, which is such a common human failing that no particular odium is attached to it.

So it is that ambling leisurely along the banks of a thousand and one "little rivers," I have made many of my most valuable acquaintances among the wild folk. Then, too, there is something alluring in the water as it murmurs over stones, or mirrors back the high over-arching trees from the calm surface of some deep, mysterious pool; there is something so enchanting in the moist, heavily-clothed banks of a woodland stream that it makes the taking of a good string of fish a matter of secondary importance to one who fishes more for pleasure than for the sport. Still, fighting for bass at dusk in the hill lakes of New York, I have dreamed away in contemplation of the beauty of the velvet water and the weird forested shore until a "strike" would have been felt as an interruption. I have followed a trout stream all day in the rain through the heavy woods of Pennsylvania and taken a somber pleasure in the sodden wilderness that I would never dared to seek without the moral support of a rod and fly. I don't remember when a love for angling first seized me. It may have been in some early Paleozoic age for all I can recollect. But I suspect that, like Topsy, it "just grew." I presume I can remember more streams from my childhood than I can remember playfellows. I believe I could describe an old mill dam in the Chataqua hills that I haven't fished in since I was eight years old better than I could name the kinds of Latin subjunctives.

Still I am not exactly an enthusiastic fisherman. I don't wear hip boots, a creel, a duck boat or carry a fly book or a pair of pocket scales with which to weigh the big ones. Yes I don't deny myself the luxury of shabby clothes, and when so inclined I may even indulge the company of a supply of Bristol and a good assortment of flies in some old tobacco box. Indeed I was once a collector of fancy fishing tackle, but I have never let such devices interfere with my fishing trips. I have a deep conviction that three-fourths of the fishing tackle made, like a house-wife's plate, was never intended for any other use than display.

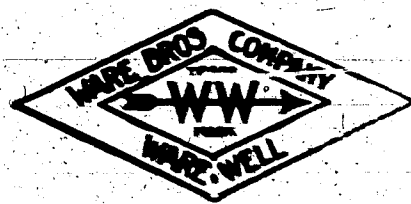

It isn't that one wants to fish all the time. I suspect that would be as tiresome as we might think of heaven after a billion years of unalloyed bliss, with the prospect of billions more. Fishing is truly a recreation. It transports one away from human life and activities and reveals the staidism in us. We are surprised at the artificiality of our life when we return from even a day's sojourn along some stream or lake.

While travelling I have tired of cities and conventional sights, and have dropped off the train at night in the heart of the Rockies. Here I have subsisted on fish and trading post rations while I could view at leisure grand bits of scenery that but few people ever see, and then only under the guidance of rod and line. At picnics and pleasure parties I have rowed for miles with the most entrancing company, but never with the healthy zest as when a flashing "spoon" was following forty yards behind through the shimmering wake.

Thoreau once wrote in his diary: "My friend must be my tent companion." I would like to add to that and say that my friend must also be my companion fisherman. I know of no better place to try out the real nature of a man than on a several day's fishing excursion. The Nazarene knew what he was about when he went to the lake and chose his first four followers from the fisherman he found there.

However delightful fishing may be at any season of the year, there is one time when it is of paramount necessity. When the first balmy days of spring arrive, when the hylodes are in full chor-

Y. W. C. A. Party

Monday evening, February 21st, the Nips and Tucks of the Y. W. C. A. gave a chafing dish party at Ridenbaugh Hall.

The large dining room was made very attractive and homelike with penans and couches. Delicious refreshments were served from the chafing dishes. The guessing of musical numbers afforded much pleasure. At a late hour the party broke with much regret to all present. Everyone had a most enjoyable time, and hoped to be able to attend many such affairs.

A number of students were guests at the Kappa Sigma ball in Pullman Saturday evening. Among those who attended the party were Margaret Harmer, Olive Kadletz, Bess Lee, Ruth Arnett, Elsie Larson, Minnie Kiefer, Ruth Broman, Veronica Foley, Helen Noyes, Mary Belle Meldrum, Harvey Slack, Enoch Barnard, Al Jessup, Gus Appleman, Ray Pritchard, Carl Loux, Paul Savidge, George Stearns, Rice Prather and Earnest Ellis.

Lecture for Men

Honorable Burton L. French '11 will give a lecture upon the subject of "Islam" for the men of the University in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Sunday Feb. 27, at 2:30.

This will be the first of a series of five lectures given by Mr. French, including the five greatest religions in the world.

The treatment will be purely expository and the lecture is intended to be educational. All men will find it profitable to be present.

Miss Bernice Maynard, the instructor in the department of Domestic Science at the University of Idaho held a meeting in the Commercial club rooms last Monday. Mr. Elliot had charge of the agricultural meeting which was held in the Armory. Both Miss Maynard and Mr. Elliot came here to demonstrate the work and the different courses in the University and to stir up a more loyal spirit toward our home and state schools.
