"ARMS AND THE MAN" A SUCCESS

First English Club Play Of The Season Remarkably Well Presented.

The English club of the University of Idaho last evening achieved a notable triumph in a carefully prepared, and thoroughly spirited presentation of George Bernard Shaw's brilliant comedy, "Arms and the Man," while a delighted audience attended an intellectual Donnybrook Fair, with the witty Irish author and the military men, and applauded the Shavian spirit as Shaw followed that historic Irish saying: "If ye see a head hit ut."

War, heroes, youthful ideals, meat-eating, new-gained wealth, servility, the fiction of truth, and a thousand and one other human foibles are targets, in "Arms and the Man," for Shaw's biting wit. Although the Irishman has been placed high among the high-brows his wit and his fun have a universal appeal. Shaw, with characteristic iconoclasm has broken the classic rule that comedy consists in differences from common humanity, while tragedy is effective because of its similarity to the hopes and aims and emotions of the audience. The audience last night felt itself unmasked as Bluntschli ruthlessly stripped Saranoff and Raina of the trappings and tinsel of fictive idols and ideals, and had to laugh at itself.

"Arms and the Man" is the most difficult play ever attempted by the English club with the exception, perhaps, of Ibsen's "Doll's House." It is a play difficult of interpretation, because of Shaw's irrepressible determination to poke fun at at everything, and everybody, even to the actors, and because Shaw has his own theories of dialogue which makes action slow. Notwithstanding these difficulties the players last night achieved a distinct success. Miss Beth Soulen was an admirable type of Raina, a splendidly sympathetic type of the gushing, dreaming girl of illusions, and possessed a remarkable stage presence. Professor Lehman was almost too good, as Saranoff, interpreting the "hero" of ideals with such sympathy as almost to carry the audience with him in spite of Shaw's evident purpose of mockery in the character; almost, but not quite, and in that distinction was his triumph. Professor Lehman has a beautifully sympathetic and vibrant voice that was distinctly pleasing in his juvenile character. Miss Kathryn Smith, the "Louka" was interesting in her spirited and petulant interpretation of that ambitious servant, and Miss Weyman in the ungrateful part of the newly rich Mrs. Petkoff left little to be de-

H. M. S. PINAFORE NEXT FRIDAY AND SATURDAY EVENING

Gilbert and Sullivan's Famous Operas Will Be Presented By Students In The Vocal Department of Music.

The production of "H. M. S. Pinafore," next Friday and Saturday nights, will give the students and people of Moscow an opportunity of hearing a comic opera that has made actually millions laugh. The delightful, whimsical humor of Gilbert, wedded to the tuneful music of Sir Arthur Sullivan, makes an entertainment that one should be sorry to miss. It is the classic of its kind.

An acquaintance with the characters of the play enriches one's experience. Captain Corcoran, R. N., is a very humane, gallant and distinguished officer, who does everything in his power to make his crew happy and comfortable. He encourages musical taste among his crew,—he makes it a rule on board that nobody shall ever say anything to him that can possibly be sung,—a rule that is relaxed only when a heavy gale is blowing, or when he has a bilious headache. He has vanilla ices, sugar plums, hardbake and raspberry jam served out every day with a liberal hand. In short, he does everything possible to make thoroughly ill and happy. The part of Captain Cocoran is taken by Mr. Ernest Loux.

Captain Cocoran's daughter, Josephine, a beautiful young lady, is very popular on deck. Every single gentleman who sees her falls in love with her. Perhaps her most attractive feature is her nose, which is neither too long nor too short, nor too narrow, nor too broad, nor too straight. It is such a maddening little nose, and has such an extraordinary effect on the world at large, that whenever she goes into society, she finds it necessary to wear a large paste-board artificial nose of so unbecoming and ridiculous a description, that people pass her without taking the smallest notice of her. Miss Mary Petcina has this part.

One of the smartest sailors on board Her Majesty's Ship Pinafore, is a young fellow called Ralph Rackstraw, although that is not his real name. Unhappily he has got it into his silly head that a British man-of-war's man is a much finer fellow than he really is. He is, no doubt, a very fine fellow, but perhaps not quite so fine a fellow as Ralph Rackstraw thinks he is. He actually thinks he has a right to aspire to the hand of Josephine, the Captain's daughter. And, strange to say, after much heartbreaking trouble and adventure, he does so. This part is played by Mr. Enoch Perkins.

Little Buttercup's real name is Poll Pineapple, but the crew had nicknamed her "Little Buttercup," partly because it is a pretty name, but principally because she is not at all like a buttercup, or indeed anything else than a stout, quick-tempered, and rather mysterious lady with a red face and black eyebrows like leeches, who seems to know something unpleasant about everybody on board. She has a habit of making quite nice people uncomfortable by hinting at things in a vague way. They begin to wonder whether they have n't done something dreadful at some time or other and forgotten all about it. Maude Gregory has the part of Little Buttercup.

Dick Deadeye is one of the most interesting characters of the play. At Dogwatch he always sits apart from the others, he is so ugly. (He spends such time busily manicuring his nails.) He is positively the ugliest man in the navy. His face has been so knocked about and burned and scarred in various battles and from falling down from aloft that not one feature is in its proper place. The crew has a joke to the effect that his two eyes, his nose and his mouth once played "puss in the corner" and that his left eye having been unable to find a corner that was unoccupied, was consequently left in the middle. He was hump-backed and bandy legged, and round shouldered and hollow chested and severely pitted with small pox marks. He has broken both his arms, both his legs, his two collar bones and all his ribs and looks as if he has been crumpled up in the hands of some enormous giant. He should be given a pension but Captain Corcoran is so kindhearted to hint that he is deformed, and so he is allowed to serve his country as a man-of-war'sman as best he can. William Hillman has this difficult role.

A very important personage is Sir Joseph Porter, the First Lord of the Admiralty. As a matter of fact, he is the only man in England who knows absolutely nothing about ships. When it was found that his ignorance of a ship was so complete that he did not know one end of it from the other, some important person said, "Let us set this poor, ignorant gentleman to

INTRA-COLLEGIATE BASKET-BALL ON

First Games Of The Series Played Saturday.

The first games of the Intra-Collegiate Basket Ball league was played in the gymnasium before a fair sized crowd of rooters, last Saturday, December 9th.

The game between the Juniors resulted in a one-sided victory for the Juniors. The final score was 38 to 7. Captain Ernest Loux and Foester did good work for the Juniors, and Ellis and Black showed up the best for the Seniors.

The game between the Sophomores and Freshmen was well contested, the teams alternating for the lead. The Freshmen started off strong, but could not keep up the pace. Curtis was practically the whole show for the Sophomores, while Zabel and Nuffer played good ball for the Freshies. Following is the line-up:

command the British Fleet, and by this means give him an opportunity of ascertaining what a ship really is." This was done. Sir Joseph has once seen Josephine without her artificial nose and has fallen a victim to her extraordinary beauty, and so he proposes to win her. In spite of his position, he encounters very, very many difficulties and finally fails,—but you mustn't know the story until Friday night. Mr. Carl Loux will appear in the part of Sir Joseph Porter.

Bill Bobstay is a boatswain's mate, who takes the lead in all amusements of the dog-watch. He is of a very artistic disposition, doing much fancy work. He is very proud of his name embroidered in red worsted on a canvas "nighty case." Mr. Wendell Phillips plays this part.

Considerable objection is registered in the matter of student activities limited to students in cases in which this is clearly possible. In some departments, for instance, a greater proportion of the necessary work is being done by students than formerly—as freshman's pay roll shows. In some departments this might be improved.

Another phase is the matter of music for social purposes. The University indicates has not had even an offer as far for the big dances this year and yet if the most important have been put off. This is not left to any one person. In other words, students who are inclined to do this work, it is not necessary compelled to do so, should at least be given the courtesy of acceptance or refusal. For it seems the purpose of those in authority is entirely ignores this side of the project.

By all means encourage University students and boost University affairs first. Then, if conditions do not meet your approval, resort to outside help. But it will lower the spirit and standard of the school to do so first. Every year the argument has been compelled to call attention to this matter, and it is high that that a newer and more formal procedure were observed in the carrying out of student activities.

Co-Eds: Attention to This! Debaters: What Have You to Say?

Not a debate, and not musical. Fashion the plagiarism. And it is not a high class entertainment, as the professional phrase runs. But it is a thick ought and honest effort to see whether or not the literary side of Idaho has scribbled beyond a possibility of re-visit. An illustrious part is over. Are we content with a part? Is there not room in our list of societies for a good lively co-educational literary club? It is up to you. It is not necessary to revise the details of our decision pending. They are happily tossed from a common tongue. No insinuations, other than those of praise are cast toward any particular or individual effort. They are made with regard to the lack of opportunity at present for developing general public traits, such as debating and reading. Altogether too few have been given the chance to develop along these lines. The highest possibility outside of this organization is that ten men will receive instruction in debate this year. Probably several men will be on both teams which Idaho puts out, thus reducing the total number even lower. When we know that without modern methods we are more and more compelled to submit to Spencer's idea of "The survival of the fittest." It becomes evident how much depends on our ability to stand alone before people and fight for ourselves. The world does not need us we need the world. The world was created for us, not us for the world. We must needs win it. That individually must be trained in every possible part if we are to "survive."

If you are from Moscow come out to the University Wednesday night, December 15th, and Prof. Ehlme will "show you" in a short talk about the educational value of public speaking to a college student. Professor Stone will please you with a vocal solo. The violin quartet will play, and many other interesting and instructive stunts will be performed. One of these will be light lunch.

Remember, this is co-educational. It is our first open meeting. It is FREE. Missions is a specialty. Are you in?

Exact hour and program in next issue. E. J. DAVIS, Secretary.

BASKET BALL GAMES

Good Spirit.

The Chester Minder vs. the Chester Smith basket ball game developed into quite an event. Chester, the former, beat Chester, the latter, three points, taking the big end of 9 to 12. Minder's squad will be one of the six teams in the finals.

Better Spirit.

When the Second Bible Study basket ball game was called at 7:30 Monday there was a dignified respectable crowd of spectators—having some better in it than the track above. This one was a real game, though all players were seemingly novices. Spirit could never be gotten, and with science and speed it would have been an event worth considering. The result was: Hawks A vs 14, Davis Preps 6. The A's will also have another game for the trophy cup.

Indoor Track Meets.

The first indoor track meet is officially scheduled for Friday, December 15, at 4:00 p. m. All students should be there as these events are among the most interesting and popular athletic events given at the University. The four college classes will select representatives from their members to compete in the different events against similarly chosen representatives from the other classes.

Following are the various events to be pulled off: High jump, high kick, half mile run, 40-yard dash, and 600 pound team in tug-of-war.

Coach Vander Veer will direct the contests.

Sophomores will hold a class meeting at 1:00 p. m. Wednesday. All be there.—President.

Mr. Fair was interesting in the imagination of the inescapable and vulgar Major Percival and mastered many difficulties in carrying an illusion of age across the footlights. Mr. Wessner, although cast in the part by accident in the eleventh hour, and Mr. O'Connell, were adequate as "Noodle" and the "Officer." To Professor Tall fell the difficult and disillusioning part of "Captain Simonski," and the irony was exact in the university dramatic demonstrated that he could "do" as well as "know." His portrait of the man of hot romance, who was like a "commercial traveler" was delightful in its dry and rather amusing interpretation and entered deeply into the spirit of the dramatic.

Between acts the university orchestra rendered delightful music, although Professor Collins and his musicians were handicapped in an artistic way by the refusal of the audience to accord them that courtesy so necessary to music—silence.

Professor Stewart will address the Associated Women at the rooms of its president, Hugh McGuire, '12, tomorrow evening at 7:30 p. m.

University Agriculturists Strong at Lewiston Stock Show.

The University of Idaho shipped a car load of fat stock for Lewiston yesterday morning, for exhibition at the Northwest Live Stock Show, to be held there December 12, 13 and 14.

A delegation of 15 students from the agricultural department also left for Lewiston to attend the show and take part in the students' stock-judging contest. Two teams are entered for Idaho—one a long-course team of five men, all from the junior class: W. B. Kjosness, L. I. Case, and Carl F. Johnson. The other team will consist of men who are taking the second year work in the school of practical agriculture: M. V. Miller of LaCrosse, Wn.; G. C. Lath of Twin Falls, Idaho; G. R. Adams of Eugene, Oregon; H. A. Fellars, Rathdrum, Idaho; and H. R. Abel, Moscow, Idaho.

The prizes to be competed for are $100 cash and a pure-bred Short Horn heifer, donated by J. H. McCroskey, of Sprague, Washington. As in Eastern schools it is planned to make the stock judging contests a prominent feature in the University of Idaho.

The student teams will be in charge of I. J. Iddings, of the Animal Husbandry department. Dean Carlyle will also attend the show and is scheduled to deliver an address to the stock men Thursday afternoon.

U. of I. Hogs Go On a Trip.

Saturday morning the Live Stock Department of the University of Idaho shipped two fat barrows to Logan, Utah. One, a pure-bred Berkshire, presented to the University by Barrows and Crabtree, of Davenport, Oregon, weighed 650 pounds when crated for shipping, and is an almost perfect specimen of the Berkshire breed. The other hog, a pure bred Poland China, weighed 360 pounds crated. This hog was bred and fed on the University farm. Discarded for the reason that he did not measure up to the standard for breeding purposes, he was fed on wheat and tankage. On this feed he made rapid gains, took on high finish, and at seven month of age reached the rather unusual weight of 270 pounds.

Both hogs will be put on the Oregon Short Line demonstration train and be displayed before thousands of farmers of Northern Utah and Southern Idaho in the next two weeks.

The Theta Mu Epsilons entertained at dinner Sunday: Dean and Mrs. Eldridge, Eva McFarland, Beth Redway, Geneal Hague, Margaret Neuman, Jeannette Fox, Mary Petcina and Gladys McFarland.

The Seniors had a delightful informal party at Ridenbough hall Friday evening. They played progressive dominoes and danced the Virginia reel. A very elaborate and appetizing lunch was next served by the men. Then there was some more dancing. Every body enjoyed himself to the full and felt more loyal than ever to the class of 1912.

An agricultural demonstration train will be run on all lines of the Oregon Short Line Railroad in Southern Idaho and Northern Utah from December 11 till December 13.

Prof. Carlyle had purchased a considerable amount of prize winning stock from the International Live Stock Show at Chicago. Mr. Carlyle says the stock that the University will receive is the best in the United States.

ENGLISH CLUB TAKES OUTING

The "Arms and the Man" Cast Go To Pullman To See "An American Citizen."

Friday afternoon the cast of "Arms and the Man" decided to enjoy a pleasant outing and, as an incidental, to take in a play given at Washington State College. Accordingly at 5 p. m. that afternoon they assembled at the Moscow Hotel and after arranging the matter of "eats" for the trip, began their two hour journey over the muddy and bumpy roads to Pullman.

The play given was "An American Citizen," and was presented very ably by the Dramatic Arts Club, of W. S. C., in their College Auditorium.

After the play another two hours of bumpy roads, plays, reminiscences, and home at quite a late early hour. The possibility of presenting "Arms and the Man" elsewhere was discussed, of which more possibly later.

Those making the trip were: Dr. Moore, Professors Tull and Lehman, Misses Katherine Smith, Josephine Wayman and Beth Soulen, and Messrs. J. R. Wheeler and Geo. O'Donnell.

Minor Changes in Basket Ball Rules to Take Effect This Winter.

At a meeting of the Collegiate Rules Committee, of which Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, Professor of Hygiene and Physical Education, Columbia University, is President, held in the Columbia University Gymnasium Dec. 2, it was decided that in games this year the basket shall be tied at the bottom to eliminate all doubt about a goal; and an insertion was made in the note to Rule 8 which will permit a player who has received the ball to take a step or stride in any direction before he shoots for the basket. Three feet is to be the minimum space between the edge of the court and the spectators. A lively argument arose over the change in the dribbling rule, by which the man with the ball is permitted to use only one hand. No change was effected.

Another change was the elimination of fouls called for a third man touching the ball. At present, if two men on opposite sides have their hands on the ball, and a third man merely touches it, it is not a foul unless unnecessary roughness was used.

Hereafter the umpire will not only assist the referee in calling fouls, but will also keep the time. No team will be permitted to stop the game more than three times in a period, but if absolutely necessary a foul will be called.

If the ball goes out of the bounds, the first player touching it may throw it in, but if it touches a spectator it is dead and must be tossed between the two players nearest the spot. A player throwing the ball may not stand more than three feet back from the line, and no opponent may approach within that distance.

Very Pleasant Social Function For Omega Pi Girls and Their Friends.

One of the most pleasant college social functions of the year was the dancing party given Saturday evening by Misses Gertrude Miller and Kathryn Keane for the Omega Pi sorority. The party took place at the beautiful Miller residence.

The main entertainment of the evening was dancing, and three large rooms and hallway afforded ample space for the twenty-one couples present. Programs were distributed before the dancing commenced, and the first dance of the evening was thoughtfully arranged for upon the programs given to the men.

The dancing ceased at 11:30, when refreshments in two courses were served. The young ladies who assisted in serving were the Misses Tess Keane, Margaret Bourn, and Bell Willis. Partners for the refreshments were selected in a novel way. A large carnation, to which was attached a card bearing the name of a young lady was given to each of the young men. One of the pleasant features of the evening were the two local selections rendered by Miss Irma Turner, of W. S. C., during an intermission in the dancing. Before the guests departed college songs were sung, Mr. Horace Chamberlain and Miss Edna Campbell accompanying at the piano. Miss Turner was called upon to render two more vocal selections.

Those present were the Misses Gertrude Miller, Kathryn Keane, Bessie Perkins, Gertrude Stephenson, Ursel Strohecker, Margaret Brandt, Rose Seiler, Winnifred Brown, Mabelle Rudisell, Ellen McCrossin, Zella Bigham, Margaret Costley, Maud Himes, Vivian Allen, Veda Stoddard, Florence Stephenson, Hazel Woods, Edna Campbell, and Lula Greenwood, of the Omega Pi sorority; and Miss Neta Miller and Irma Turner, of the Sigma Beta Pi sorority of W. ## AT ASSEMBLY

The subject of "Freight Rates" was discussed at Assembly, Wednesday, by Prof. R. S. McCaffery, of the Mining Department. "This is a problem," said Professor McCaffery, "in which the people of the United States should feel a vital interest." There are no individuals or communities entirely independent of, or free from, the effects of freight rates. Freight rates mean prosperity or ruin to industrial enterprises. They are one of the reasons for the enormous growth of the trusts; to them more than anything else is due the development of the cities at the expense of the country. Discriminations practiced by railroad companies in freight rates have led to dishonesty, unfairness, thievery, and debauchery which have been a shame to the United States. Yet these discriminations are made possible because the people as a whole permit them.

"A railway is a corporation," said Professor McCaffery, "granted extraordinary rights by the state, for the public benefit, to engage in the transportation of passengers and goods; and in accepting its charter it assumes obligations to the public and, within constitutional limits, becomes subject to state regulation."

In its duty as a common carrier the railroad makes charges for the transportation of goods from place to place and these charges per unit of weight or volume are known as freight rates. Freight is classified by the railroads and to each class is given a rate for the carriage between any two points. This classification includes the particular materials and commodities that are to be hauled. Such a freight rate is called a class rate and in its making the railroads take into consideration the nature of the commodities, the duration of the haul, the manner of shipment, the space occupied, the speed of trains necessary for perishable goods, the risk of handling, etc.

Speaking of the discriminations that are made by the railroads in favor of certain shippers, Professor McCaffery said: "The Interstate Commerce Commission has endeavored to compel the railroads to give all shippers the same advantages and the same charges for like services and to prevent the railroads from favoring individual shippers or localities. With freight rates made by the general freight agent of a railroad, who may himself be interested with a business competitor, it can be easily seen that there are many methods of discrimination open to him whereby all shippers do not receive the same service or treatment from the railroads." The older methods of discrimination, such as rebates to favored shippers, have been almost entirely prevented by the stringent provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act; but there are other methods now in vogue that are fully as effective as the rebates. All large shippers try to obtain the routing of their freight, for by the control of large tonnage routings, which they can divert from one railway to another, they receive an advantage which the smaller shipper does not possess. Through the control of routing the cars of the large shippers are moved more rapidly than those of the smaller competitor. This advantage of speed has all of the effects of a cash rebate.

Certain shippers have their own cars and by the control of immense volumes of traffic, they compel the railroads to pay exorbitant rates for the use of these private cars, thus securing for themselves a rebate not given to their smaller competitors. Through this means the Armour Company, or the beef trust, secures a rebate of over three million dollars annually.

Professor McCaffery dealt at some length upon the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Spokane Freight Rates case, which has been somewhat nullified by the action of the Commerce Court.

Professor McCaffery's address was followed by a vocal selection by Dean Eldredge.

Seniors Have Party.

Friday evening the girls of the Senior class were very delightfully entertained by the boys of that class, at a party in Ridenbaugh Hall.

The first part of the evening was pleasantly spent playing progressive dominoes. The girls had a chance thus to display their training in mathematics. Mrs. Eldredge won the prize for the ladies and Mr. McCann the men's. After the games, everyone enjoyed a wood old fashioned Virginia Reel.

Refreshments were then served and the evening concluded with dancing.

The girls all joined in proclaiming the Senior boys the most royal of hosts.

Placing Her,

If she goes with all the boys, she's a coquette. If she prefers a "steady" she couldn't get anyone else.

If she majors in Chem. or Greek, she's queer. If she doesn't, she's looking for snap courses.

If she's athletic, she loses her maidenly charm. If she isn't, well, girls can't do very much, anyhow.

If she doesn't wear a diamond, she's not engaged. If she does, she's running a bluff.

If she belongs to a club, she's frivolous. If she doesn't, she couldn't get in.

If she asserts herself in class, she's strong-minded. If she doesn't, she hasn't any brains.

If she doesn't talk much, she's uninteresting. If she does, she's tiresome.

Now, what is she going to do?—Ex.

DON'T be led astray or influenced by others. It is the Hotel Moscow Barbers for workmanship.

woke up and played a good game in the second half with the result that the Ags won out.

The Sophomores and Seniors played Monday night and the Sophs won 15 to 4. The game was very tough.

The Juniors probably have the best team in the league, with either the Freshmen or Sophomores second best. It should be a close race between the Seniors, Ags, and Preps as to which will be at the bottom.

The following compliment for Coach "Pink" Griffith appeared in the Sunday Spokesman for December 10th: It is from the pen of "Offside," who is acknowledged to be one of the leading authorities on football in the Inland Empire:

"Pink" Griffith has had light, mediocre material—that everybody knows—but he has persistently kept Idaho in the running, and this last year gave the champion University of Washington team its hardest game. The old Iowa star is generally credited with being one of the best-versed men in football tactics in the conference, and many contend that, give him the same material Dobie has had these last four years and he would make the University hustle."

The officers of the battalion are planning a trip to Fort Wright to be made at the end of next week.

The Theta Mu's entertained Dean and Mrs. J. G. Eldridge and Eva McFarland, Elizabeth Redway, Geneal Hague, Mary Petcina, Margaret Neuman, Jeanette Fox, and Gladys McFarland, of the Delta Gammas, at a dinner party Sunday.

"IF"

If you can wrestle with the good old classics

And never fret about the midnight oil; If you can keep a-bucking mathematics

And never think about a little toil; If you can buckle in and grapple history

And never quit your lesson till it's done;

If work to you is nothing like a mystery

And digging in, to you, is just like fun.

If you are wise to that old Grecian's lever

And just a few such like and kind-red stunts;

Or if the farm is your field of endeavor Your music-losing kine or barrow's grunts;

If you would penetrate the mountain fastness

And crush the native rock to gather gold;

If you would learn the story of the vastness

Of this old earth—and understand it's old—

If you can smash the line—and keep a-smashing

And fight your limit till the whistle blows

And take to heart the Pink'un's fierce tongue lashing

And never give a thought to "now he knows;"

If you can take your part and do your duty,

And never falter till the race is won,

And give more thought to brain-stuff than to beauty.

You're wanted then at Idaho, my son.
