FARCE TO BE GIVEN BY SOPHOMORES

"Magistrate" to be Presented on Saturday Afternoon and Evening at Eggan's Hall.

On Saturday afternoon and evening, the sophomores of the University of Idaho will bring to production at Eggan's, Plener's farce, "The Magistrate." For one month, under the direction of Mr. Lehman, the play has been in rehearsal. The plan has been to get every bit of fun out of every speech, every character, every situation that the play contains. To that end, a carefully chosen cast has worked hard and well.

The feminine roles will be played by Gladys Collins, Dorothy Taylor, Maude Himes and Florence Stephenson. These parts promise very well indeed. Four more charming and subtly contrasted characters than Agatha Posket, Charlotte Verrinder, Beatie and Pojsham could not be found. The high quality of Miss Collins and Miss Himes' interpretations are well-known here. Miss Taylor and Miss Stephenson, with less experience, promise equally gratifying presentments.

The men in the cast are Herman Nuffer, Lawrence Stone, Robert Gerlough, John Phillips, Joseph Pond, Robert Leth, Mark Anderson, Oliver Nisbet, Alvin Beckman, Allen Anderson, and Marvin Monroe. The variety of the characters from the shy young fellow, Cis Farrington, played by Mr. Stone, to the hesitant, helpless, pompous little Magistrate Posket played by Mr. Nuffer, includes every size and type and profession of manhood.

All together combine to form a spirited cast for a very rollicking farce. A gay evening promises at Eggan's this Saturday. The seats are on sale at Hodzins. If you can not go at 8:15, try the matinee at 2:00 p. m. Buy the matinee seats at the door.

German Party.

Mrs. Isaacson, Assistant Professor in German, is very busy arranging for a "Deutsche Gesellschaft" which in English means German party. All German students in the university will meet at the Guild hall on next Tuesday night where a supper will be served, a la German, songs sung in German, and a German dance will wind up the evening. Mrs. Isaacson is trying to arrange with Miss Stephens to obtain the dancing hour, Saturday morning, so her proteges can make themselves proficient in the German style of dancing.

FRESHMEN HUMILIATE SOPHOMORES ON THE SEVENTEENTH

Sophomores Greatly Outnumbered by the Class of 1916. A Great Fight.

In one of the most spirited class fights ever seen at the university, the freshmen made their natural enemies, the sophomores, bite the mud in the most humiliating matter. The fact that the sophomores were greatly outnumbered by the freshmen does not detract from the brilliancy of the victory.

Every member of both classes was on hand, and on hand for business. After jaggling about the specifications for the kind of flag, the distance, and the method fastening for an hour and a half, the freshmen attacked the forty-two sophomores standing at the base of the fifteen foot telegraph pole. The sophomores had placed a leather strap about twelve feet above the ground, securely fastened with staples and large nails. The freshmen committee headed by Carl Meluzin did not like either the style of flag or the method of fixture to the pole. After both committees had consulted with the referees and senior committee, it was decided that a green flag, a piece of an old carpet, should be placed at a height of ten feet and fastened with bailing wire.

When Referee Van der Veer gave the signal, the shooting of a revolver, the freshmen attacked the pole on all sides and it was only a few seconds until every freshman had a sophomore singled out and piled on the ground. But when they came to take down the flag they met with unexpected obstruction, for on a cross piece securely nailed and wired on the pole was Ray Tingley, with his feet dangling at about the height of the flag, and every time a freshman would get close, he would kick him off the pole. Mitchell was the first freshman to get close to the flag but he did not last long on the pole. Brookhart also made an unsuccessful attempt. Doc Numbers then managed to get hold of Tingley's leg, but just then some soph came along and pulled Numbers down. After about ten minutes Jardine managed to get his leg and hold on with a vise-like grip and down came Tingley, crosspiece and nails, together with Jardine. Shroke then shinned up the pole and with a knife cut the flag to pieces and pulled it down to where the rest of the freshmen could get hold of it, and thirteen minutes after the gun was shot, Referee Van der Veer officially declared the fight ended with three gun shots. To make a good job of it, the freshmen then tied a piece of orange bunting around the pole.

There were about forty wrestling matches in progress during the fight. In several cases a sophomore had two freshmen and in some places this condition was reversed. Many of the combatants had their shirts torn completely off them, and some were even without undershirts.

The campus was crowded with college and down town people, many of whom were provided with cameras. It was a hard task to keep the crowd back from the pole and in some cases a struggling pair would break clear through the crowd out into the open.

Both freshmen and sophomores spent a restless Sunday night. The freshmen to soothe their nerves placed their numerals on the standpipe in such an artistic manner that it could scarcely be transcribed from the campus, and also painted up many of the show windows in the down town district. Many phone calls and more meetings took place among the sophomores, and much plotting, but to no avail.

Before the fight the freshmen and sophomore girls formed perades and serpentine and marched around and sung and slung caustic remarks at the opposing girls, but no hair pulling was noticed, nor any personal satisfaction demanded.

Everything was good natured and after the fight each faction quietly retired, the sophomores the more so.

The rules under which the contest took place are as follows:

AGREEMENT.

We the undersigned members of the committees from the sophomore and freshmen classes in charge of the class fight to be held

LAW SCHOOL FRATERNITY FORMED

Pi Alpha Delta is Name of New Secret Organization at Idaho.

After several feeble efforts during the past three years, the lawyers have finally perfected the organization of an honorary law school fraternity, the name of which is to be known as Pi Alpha Delta.

The fraternity is to be purely honorary in nature, and has been recognized by the faculty. The membership is composed of second and third year students. Clay Koelsch and Jim Hawley are both freshmen lawyers but have had work in other departments of the university. The members were chosen for the most part on a scholarship basis, and they hope to keep it on this standing.

It is understood that the organization was perfected for the purpose of petitioning a national fraternity. It should not be at all hard for a local law fraternity to obtain a charter in a first class national at Idaho.

The following men are charter members of Pi Alpha Delta: John Boyle, Parker V. Lucas, Harry MacAdams, Arthur Sutton, Arthur Heer, R. D. Leeper, Clay Koelsch, Lawrence O'Neill, Jim Hawley, Herbert Whitten, Horace Chamberlain, Don Buffington and Russell Adams.

Monthly Warnings.

"If you receive a hurry-up before the middle of the semester, do not be surprised," said Dean Eldridge, "for the faculty at their last meeting passed a ruling that warnings should be issued to the students each month.

"A student may accidently be passed up when the warnings are sent out at mid-semester, and he will think he is doing good work, while as a matter of fact he is below passing, and the result is that he will fail at the end of the semester. The monthly warnings will in all probability do away with cases of this kind. The information concerning the student's work is to be in my office by the twentieth of each month, and while it will mean much more work for my office, I consider it a very good plan."

Many students took advantage of the primary election Monday afternoon to vote for the delegates to the city caucus. The party in favor of paving was strongly supported.

ONE VICTORY AND ONE ADVERSE DECISION IN GONZAGA DEBATE

The First Debates With Gonzaga Prove Interesting Encounters.

On Friday evening, March 14, Idaho and Gonzaga met for the first time in forensic conflict. There were two debates: one at Moscow and the other at Spokane. The question was: "Resolved, That congress should provide for the construction of two or more battleships each year." At Spokane the affirmative was upheld by Gonzaga and the negative was defended by Idaho; while at Moscow the positions were reversed, Idaho having the affirmative and Gonzaga arguing the negative. The decisions were both unanimous: that at Moscow for Idaho, while that at Spokane was for Gonzaga. Honors thus far are even.

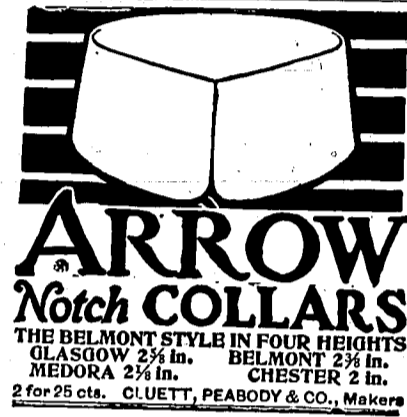

At Moscow the debate was opened by Theron Warren, who unfolded the first part of an effective affirmative case in a pleasing manner. Francis McKeivitt, like his two colleagues, was an eloquent speaker, virile and dramatic. Rollo Crater did effective work in refutation and then proceeded with the affirmative case. He is a sound thinker and with further training will make a good public speaker. Robt. McFarland is a fluent speaker with a capacity for bringing out the meaning of every sentence and of winning the good will of his auditors. Dwight Leeper closed the constructive case for the affirmative and did some telling rebuttal work. Then Maurice Meagher gave the last speech for the negative in a most forcible way. After that the final rebuttal for the affirmative by Leeper brought the debate to a close. Not a single important argument advanced by the negative was left unanswered; while the affirmative case, every attack upon which had been promptly repulsed, stood out clear and unanswered. The decision was unanimous for Idaho. Contrary to the usual case the Idaho debaters were completely outclassed in delivery. The Gonzaga speakers are masters of a vigorous, emphatic, and effective style of speaking reinforced by gestures at once virile and graceful.

At Gonzaga the result of the debate was not so happy. The affirmative speakers were Edward Connelly, John Raftis, and Bernard Hoey. The boys who upheld Idaho's fame were Paul Ostrout, Frank Osborne, and Ellsworth Davis. We are proud of those boys. They left not an argument of the affirmative unrefuted. They shot the affirmative case to pieces. On its head, so to speak, they left not a single hair, and their own arguments were left untouched by the affirmative. Elementary logic and common justice both withhold a verdict from the affirmative if at the end of the debate there remain a reasonable doubt upon a single essential point. But let us see: The chairman of the debate, who is one of the teachers in the Gonzaga Law school, said the decision should have been unanimous for Idaho. Rev. Father Louis Taelman, the president of the university, said he fully expected the decision to go to Idaho. Some five or six of the Jesuit fathers said that the work of the Idaho boys was so far superior to that of the Gonzaga representatives as to entitle them clearly to the decision. And finally, Mr. Edward Connelly, leader of the Gonzaga team, said that it is beyond dispute that the decision should have gone to Idaho. For these frank and honest expressions, gentlemen, we thank you. We harbor no grudge. It is not we who are disturbed, nor you. These statements of the Gonzaga faculty and students to our debaters remind us of a remark recently made in a court room. The evidence clearly proved that the accused was guilty. It was a serious crime. Yet the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." Rising to his feet the judge turned to the jury and said, "gentlemen, it is your verdict, not mine." It is such decisions as the one given at Spokane, so we believe, that have been the greatest factor in the decline of interest in debate. Students realize that months of work spent in preparation are liable to be publicly stamped as a failure, or at the least, as a comparative failure, without due reason, and they are, therefore, reluctant to engage in such work. But we would much rather have an unjust verdict rendered against us than for us. Should Idaho ever be given a verdict to which we thought we were not entitled we should disclaim it as readily and as frankly as Gonzaga has done in the present case.

After all it is not the decision which is the most important thing in a debate. The finest thing of all is the debate itself. The experience of a good, sharp, fight is sufficient reward in itself. And it is lots of fun; and fine to look back upon. It is not an adverse decision that we dread, but that we shall not be deemed perfect sportsmen. We are glad that we met you, Gonzaga. Your boys are among the best sportsmen we ever met. The three boys who suffered defeat here are fine, manly, hearty fellows who took the decision against them like men. The three boys to whom the decision was awarded in Spokane were generous and frank to us. We appreciate your virtues. And a word must be said for the sound good sense and the unfailing courtesy that marked every letter that came from Gonzaga in the course of the correspondence. Here's to you, Gonzaga, may you live long and prosper. And may the debates between our two institutions in the future be conducted with the same good feeling as that which characterized the two that have just passed into history.

THE JUBILEE SINGERS COMING TO MOSCOW NEXT WEDNESDAY.

The Jubilee Jubers Will Jube in the High School Auditorium Wednesday Evening, March 26—Under the Auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

You will enjoy hearing the Jubilee jubers jube. March 26 at the high school auditorium. Here is the personnel of the company:

S. S. R. S. Stewart—Baritone—Pianist—Soloist.

Mr. Stewart is known as the Black Paderewski and is considered America's greatest negro concert pianist. He plays the most difficult pieces with a touch and execution that is only characteristic of the trained musician. From his two years' study in Germany he acquired a mastery of technique and harmony that places him foremost in the rank of colored pianists. Mr. Stewart plays a number of left-handed pieces, among which is the Sextette from Lucia.

Ivan H. Browning—Tenor—Soloist.

While in Wiley University Mr. Browning was associated with the best musical talent in that section of the country. He possesses a pure sympathetic tenor voice that adds materially to the quality of the quartet work. A prominent musical critic in Stockton, Cal., says that Mr. Browning possesses the purest tenor voice she has ever heard.

John C. Page—"The Double Voiced Concert Singer"—Pianist.

Mr. Page's singing in two voices is indeed a novelty. He can change his voice instantly from baritone to lyric soprano. Mr. Page has a most wonderful lyric soprano and baritone combination of voices. He sings to D above the staff. A number of difficult high soprano solos are included in the evening's program.

J. T. Hill—Basso—Soloist.

The bass singer has spent years in Jubilee work. His training has enabled him to render the more difficult classics as well as the ever-popular plantation melodies. His bass is deeper than Crab's. Remember the time and place.

W. E. Leigh came down from Spokane Sunday to visit his daughter, Muriel Leigh.

Morleys Entertain Seniors.

Nearly every senior attended the party given by Professor and Mrs. Morley at their home on Elm street last Saturday evening.

The evening was spent in different kinds of games and stunts. After all the guests had assembled and chatted for a few minutes, a gilded clothespin decorated with the senior class colors was given to each person, and then a conversation ensued for ten minutes; and whenever a person used the word "I," he lost his pin. Through a very careful command of the English language, Ray D. Bistline was able to gather five pins, which was just one more than anyone else had. The next event was a button sewing contest for the boys.

The object was to see who could sew twelve buttons on a piece of cloth in the shortest time. Louis T. Jessup, who claims he got his experience from sewing sacks, was easily a winner. In the nail driving contest for the girls, Miss Anetta Mow was declared the winner over Miss Brown by the slight margin of one twentieth of a ten penny nail. Each of them drove six and one-half nails in a minute and in the finals, Miss Mow won out.

One of the most interesting of the events was the eating contest when each college chose a member to represent it to eat four crackers. Carl Johnson of the agricultural school got away with his first and Louis Peterson of the law school was second. Ray Armstrong of the engineers was a very poor last.

At eleven o'clock a sumptuous supper was served by the Misses McFarland, Taylor and Denecke, after which Professor Morley sang his annual song to the seniors, a song that he sings at no other time. At twelve o'clock the delightful party broke up.

STUDENT DISCUSSES REMOVAL OF "U"

Law Student Would Move Lewiston Normal to Moscow and Albion Normal to Pocatello.

Harry McAdams, a law student at the university, whose home is in southern Idaho, at Corral, Blaine county, has pronounced views in regard to the educational institutions of Idaho that ought to appeal to every citizen of the state, north or south.

Mr. McAdams said: "The university is not a Moscow institution, nor a Latah county institution, but an Idaho institution in which every citizen of Idaho is equally interested. It is the duty of every citizen of Idaho to bury every selfish preference he may have in regard to the location and do everything he can to build up the university and increase its usefulness and efficiency.

"In my judgment that can be accomplished best by consideration, and I am in favor of abolishing the Idaho academy at Pocatello, moving the normal school at Albion to Pocatello, moving the Lewiston normal to Moscow and putting it under the supervision of the university faculty, with such additions to the faculty as may be required.

"By so doing the Pocatello institution will develop into a great normal school, and the university will grow in prestige, importance and usefulness, until every citizen of Idaho will feel a just pride in both institutions.

"Idaho is particularly fortunate in having the three big educational institutions of the state located at one point, and under one management. The states of the middle west have made a serious blunder in scattering their educational institutions. It has put them to millions of dollars of unnecessary expense, duplicating buildings, duplicating instructors and maintaining competent heads for each separate institution. It is a sinful waste of funds. It increases taxation to a maximum and instead of increasing the efficiency of the educational forces it actually retards them. One good prosperous institution of any kind can accomplish more than a dozen half-starved, struggling ones.

"Another evil feature of segregation is that it forces the educational institutions into politics. Each separate school is a lever in the hands of the designing politician. By threatening its appropriation he can coerce it into supporting his net legislative measures. The more educational institutions there are asking for appropriations, the easier it is for him to enforce the cooperation of each or any of them. By reducing the educational institutions of the state to two in number, as I have suggested, and providing for the support of each by a special tax levy, it will remove them still further from under the influence of the politicians.

"In the course of a few years at the farthest, a railroad will be extended from Salmon down the Salmon river to Lewiston, and another from Meadows down the little Salmon river to connect with the former near the junction of the two streams. This will put the northern and southern parts of the state in closer touch with each other. There will no longer be any demand for removing the university into the southern part of the state and no sentiment favoring the secession of northern Idaho to form a new state in connection with a part of Washington. The good people of every section of the state will work together in harmony to promote the development of both the university at Moscow and the normal at Pocatello and take especial pride in the success of both institutions."

Prexie Urges Moscow to Pave.

There were 52 present at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday.

Senator Fields was present and was called upon by President Green to speak of the legislature's action, which he did at some length.

Acting President Carlyle followed Mr. Fields and briefly stated what had been accomplished, in the face of the opposition the university had encountered. The appropriations for maintenance, equipment and improvements exceeded expectations by about $60,000. He said that it is up to the university to make its influence felt throughout the state during the next two years. He urged that something be done to improve the approaches to the university, calling attention to the condition of the sidewalks leading to the university at present and said that the Northern Pacific is ready to cooperate with Moscow in making the necessary improvements and that it should be done at once.

New Western "Frat" Has Three Chapters.

A Rocky Mountain fraternal organization, Beta Phi Omicron, has been organized by local fraternities at Wyoming, Utah and Arizona. A convention was held recently in Denver where delegates from the three chapters met to formulate an organization. The motto of the new organization is the Holy Cross, and the flower, a red rose.

Frank Marsh has been elected King and Florence Richardson has been elected Queen of the Proms.

Miss Virginia Shearer of the home economics department spent the week-end in Lewiston.

GREAT INTEREST IN ROAD WORK

Seventy-five Road Overseers Attend Second Annual Road School.

The second annual good roads school held at the University last week was very successful. The sessions were attended by about seventy-five road overseers who took great interest in the work. The purpose of the school was to help make more effective current expenditure of road funds and to stimulate interest in permanent improved roads. Lectures were given by Professors C. N. Little and D. B. Steinman of the civil engineering department, Mr. J. P. Congdon a consulting engineer of Boise, and Dr. L. I. Hewes, chief of economics and maintenance, U. S. Office of Public Roads. Some of the topics discussed were earth road repair and maintenance, road management, road location, concrete construction for culverts and bridges, economic influence of highways, and recent development in road building.

"The use of the split log drag is the only hope for keeping earth roads in good shape," said Dr. Hewes. "It should be used after every rain. By attaching handles similar to plow handles it can be made to bite in where thought necessary. It is an advantage to have the front log shod clear across. In using the grader, work should be done from the center outward cutting the shoulders deep, instead of beginning at the outside and throwing scourgings and light dirt onto the middle of the road. The slope should be one inch to the foot and should be maintained by dragging.

"Money spent on improved roads is a profitable investment. It has been estimated that it costs twenty cents to haul a ton one mile and that on improved roads where larger loads can be hauled the cost is reduced twenty five per cent and more. Investigation shows that every acre under cultivation yields on an average half a ton of produce a year. The tonnage passing over roads leading to markets is amazing and a reduction of five cents a ton per mile in the cost of hauling means a tremendous saving to the community in the course of a year. It more than pays interest on the investment and often pays the entire cost of the improvements in a very few years."

Mr. and Mrs. Safford and Mrs. Sterling Davis were the dinner guests of Delta Gamma last Thursday evening.

Miss Permeal French returned to Moscow Wednesday from Boise where she appeared before the legislature.

Dr. E. T. Baker, professor of veterinary science is in Potlatch.

High School Boys Have Trouble.

An attempt by members of the junior and senior classes of the Moscow High school to over-ride the faculty and precipitate trouble resulted yesterday in the expulsion of four young fellows and the suspension of several other members of the ranking classes.

There had been an endeavor on the part of the youngsters to emulate the class fight which is an institution of the university yearly program. Last year this resulted in a more picturesque fight between the high school freshmen and sophomores than was the fight on the university campus. This year in order to prevent any such interference with the studies of the school an agreement between the two lower classes was arranged whereby a hurly-burly party would be indulged by the faculty if no fight between the classes was made.

This was agreed to and ratified. The party was held under the auspices of the faculty. And some of the members of the two elder classes attempted to break the party up.

They managed to gain an entrance to the building and took occasion to scarp not only with the younger classes, but to attempt to start a fight with faculty members. This resulted in their being ejected from the building, and was followed by the expulsion of some of them and the suspension of others. Four members of the attacking party were expelled. Several others were suspended and still others whether from taking an active part or from being concerned in the movement were suspended until satisfactory arrangements for their reinstatement are made.

Youthful Lecturer Gets Ducking in Paradise.

Lawrence Hoff, '16, B. A. essayed to lecture on the slides of the freshman-sophomore scrap prepared by the management of the Casino theater, Tuesday night. Hoff, losing his head, made some rash remarks praising the victors and slandering the sensitive feelings of about twelve sophomores who were in attendance at the show. After Hoff had completed his number on the program he adjourned to the Moscow pool hall, where the sophomores swooped down on him, demanded an explanation and apology, and then holding a consultation among themselves, decided to throw him in Paradise creek. He was marched down to Eighth street bridge, given an opportunity to remove his outer garments, and was then heaved into the middle of the stream.

While this was in progress Howard Holaday, '16 ran into the mob, and immediately made a dash for a telephone to call up the freshmen at the different houses and have them come down to the river and rescue Hoff. The actions of the sophomores were too swift, however, as only about five freshmen were on the scene and they were carefully concealed in a box car.

After Hoff came out of the river, looking like a mud duck, he was hastened to the Zeta Delta house where a warm bath was given him, and dry clothing furnished, so that he might go back to the Casino to give his second lecture on the slides.

The management of the picture show changed the announcement slide from "Described by a victor" to "described by a mud duck."

What Home Town Means.

People seldom realize how much their home town means to them. Traced to their source many of life's blessings will be found to have their root in that aggregation of persons and interests known as a town. The town is the basis of modern civilization and there is scarcely a desirable phase of civilization that does not find expression in the life of the town that is large enough to have a school, church, some stores, library, bank, mill or factory, brass band, newspaper and a railroad station. These institutions express all that is highest and best in human achievement. Instead of casting wondering and envious eyes upon a distant New York, let us glow with pride for our own town, realizing that the difference is only one of degree and that the home town possesses social and moral advantages seldom to be had in the big city.

There is no town that does not possess some advantages and resources and every town is, to a considerable extent, what its citizens make it. Instead of kicking, instead of complaining and sulking, get busy and help make your town what it should be. Resolve that you will vote, talk and work for a bigger, better, brighter town. Every man owes a duty to the community in which he lives and can discharge it only by doing something for its betterment. The home community is entitled to first consideration when improvements are to be made or money is to be invested. Invest your money where you make it and where you can watch it. There is no pot of gold at the end of the rainbow; the place to do things worth while is right here at home. And above all, throw away the "hammer" and never miss an opportunity to speak a good word for your community.

Acting-President Carlisle returned from Boise Wednesday where he appeared before the state legislature.

L. I. Case, '13, went to Spokane last Thursday on a brief business visit.

MAY HAVE INTER-FRATERNITY BALL

Coach Griffith Agitating Movement to Have Fraternity League.

Coach Griffith, when interviewed by an Argonaut reporter concerning another fraternity baseball league, said:

"I am convinced that it would be a good plan to have another fraternity league, similar to the one we had last year, except that no varsity men will be allowed to play with their fraternity team. This would make the teams more evenly matched and the contests, while probably not as fast, would be more exciting.

"There is only one objection and that is the fact that we would have to provide another field. I will want to use the baseball diamond on the athletic field every night in the week for practice for the regulars. I do not see why the athletic board could not be induced to fix a diamond up on the hill."

These statements should bring joy to the college students who take any interest in athletics. The fact that only four college games are scheduled at home, and only one track meet, will make the Saturdays dull. By forming a fraternity league wherein each team meets each other team twice, there would be sufficient sport provided.

There is also some talk of reviving the interclass league, similar to the one last year. The trouble with this league is that there is usually one real strong team that has easy sailing, and the race becomes uninteresting. The faculty would probably not organize a team for this league again this year.

Plus Ultra's Entertain.

The Plus Ultra class of the Presbyterian Sunday school entertained their parents at a three course supper Tuesday evening. The supper was given in the new kitchen recently added to the church. About seventeen were present and a pleasant time was reported. Ronald Romig and Ed MacConnell acted as waiters.

Why is it that our halls must be littered up with the wraps of the students? On the tables, on the floor, on the windows, on the steps and on the railings are found almost a limitless number of coats, hats, rubbers and books. One or two more particular students have chosen nooks on Prexie's door way as their favorite depository for their personal adornments.

"I doubt if any other university in the country these peculiar conditions exist," said Dean Eldridge. "It is a disgrace to litter up the hallway as is the custom here."

There is sufficient room provided in the basement of the Administration building for the men's wraps. A good plan would be to deposit the overcoat down there in the morning and leave it there until ready to go home and carry the head covering with you to classes, in case the classes are scattered over the different parts of the campus. By all means let us keep the hallways in the Administration building clear.

University Receives Painting.

Through J. J. Scheer, a representative of the Great Northern Railway company, the university has been made the recipient of a large painting of Iceberg Lake in Glacier Park, Montana. The painting, which is about five by eight feet in size, will probably be placed in one of the panels in the new auditorium. It is now in the publicity office.

THE QUILL TO BE OUT SOON

Some Good Numbers of Unusual Merit Promised by the Editor.

The Quill will be out the last of this week. The present issue contains a number of articles of unusual interest and genuine merit. "The Revolt of Byron Trot" a story by R. D. Leeper, '13, is sure to be enjoyed. Byron Trot was a henpecked husband who finally resisted the tyranny of his better half. Read the story to find out why and how. Incidentally the scene of the story is Moscow and the characters are taken from life.

For verse Miss Alice Chase is the only contributor, but her contributions are excellent. "The Lark Song" is a genuine lyric; "Extase" is a translation of Victor Hugo's poem of that name, "To Sleep" is a beautiful lullaby.

"Desert Sketches" by Ray Armstrong are vivid pen pictures of the desert in its various aspects. They are remarkable bits of description. "Among Friends" by B. E. Davis is a charming little essay which entertains and at the same time contains food for thought.

The editor was so hard pressed for material that he had to provide some himself. "Wanted, a Chance to be a Hero," is a confession in a whimsical, humorous vein. It is almost entirely fictitious but yet has an air of verisimilitude. "Our Nation's Mission" is an essay on the peace movement.

"Comrades" a story by an anonymous contributor is a delightful little tale of youthful affection and constancy. This story, too, is taken from life.

The Argonaut urges every student to buy a copy of the Quill. It needs your support. They will be placed on sale in the publicity office, and also at the sophomore play Saturday night.

Danced Monday Evening.

While the freshmen and sophomores were holding their annual bury-the-hatchet party, Monday evening to show that there were no hard feelings as a result of the outcome of the fight, the seniors and juniors decided to celebrate by giving a dance in Hodgins' hall. About twenty-four couples attended this dance and spent a very enjoyable time. Music was furnished by Harriet Wildenthaler, '15, at the piano, and L. C. Baumer, '16, on the drums.

Peace reigned supreme at the freshman-sophomore party. The time was spent in dancing until half past ten, and then all participated in a big feed, and the crowd broke up about a quarter after eleven.

AT ASSEMBLY

Those who missed the lecture at assembly last week certainly missed a broad discussion of the athletic situation of today. The musical number was a vocal solo by Miss Waters. The address was given by Professor Stewart on "Ethics of College Athletics."

The professor stated that the reason he had chosen to speak on this subject was the agitation in the east for the total abolition of college athletics. He showed that the main causes for this agitation was the roughness of the game, the time taken from studies and the low ethical standard which prevails. "My statements will be regarding conditions in the east," stated Mr. Stewart, "and if you find that there are any like conditions here, you can make your own applications. It is strange that the gambler, pool room loafer and other men who have scarcely any moral standard at all, have the virtue of fair play and cling to the motto, 'either win fairly or not at all,' while college athletics, participated in by men of good morals, are filled with unexcusable tricks and cheating."

He went on to speak of the practice of such tricks as the holding in line in football and the putting a man out of the game when the referee is not looking: the shoving of a fellow in basket ball to keep him from making a sure goal, and take the chance of his making a free goal, providing he is caught by the referee: the cutting of bases in baseball; these and other unfair tricks which are practiced and applauded by the side that gains.

The professor then discussed the eligibility rules which make many ineligible men sign and the students support and condone their lies. "It simply seems to be a question of doing anything that you can get away with," he remarked.

Mr. Stewart then cited many instances of which he personally knew, where trickery and crooked work were indulged in for the sake of winning. He showed how the spirit of "doing anything you can get away with" has been carried over into the business world; how the business man will violate the law, knowing the fine will not be as large as his gains.

"The college athlete is a hero," he declared, "and I do not know but that he should be. Many honors are bestowed upon him, no matter even if he has won his success by trickery and dishonesty. It seems to me that there is danger of lowering our moral standard by condoning principles wholly unworthy of our college men."

The professor then took up the discussion of the proposed remedies of the evils. When speaking of the idea of doing away with the professional coach, he said, "It is not a matter that is to be thrown upon the coach, for he is bound to carry out the sentiments of the students and faculty."

Later, in speaking of the plan to abolish college athletics entirely, he continued, "It seems to me that it is begging the question. It shows a weakness for one to dodge an evil rather than to face it squarely. We should eliminate the weakness of our present system and preserve the good points. We should abolish the rules which are unpopular and disobeyed."

"I cannot understand the hypocrisy of those who advocate the rules against professionalism," he concluded, "when we know that at least 90 per cent of the men on college athletics have received money at some time which would bar them from participation or force them to file. The only real rule that ought to be applied is that a man should be a bonified student."

Angered by the sting of defeat in the class fight, the sophomores took out their revenge on Harry MoAdams, second year law, who thought he was too sick to participate in the fight but did the coaching act for the sophomores. Had the sophomores won, MoAdams would probably have been as much of a hero as is Coach Griffith when Idaho defeats W.S.C. in a football game. But, inasmuch as the sophomores did not win, MoAdams had to pay the penalty by being tossed into the icy, turbulent water, of the river Paradise. The committee of sophs who waited on him let him strip down to his underclothes and shoes, and then catching him by the head and feet, heaved him into the air and let him fall into about five feet of water.

MoAdams took punishment in a good natured manner and after he climbed out of the water rushed hastily over to a box car and dressed.

Vocal Solo.

At the debate Friday evening Mr. Carl K. Humphries sang Herman Lohr's pleasing song, "You'd Better Ask Me," in a most effective manner. His annunciation was very distinct and the humor of the song was well expressed. In response to a hearty encore another Irish song was given and it met with an equally cordial reception by the audience.
