MAGISTRATE A COMPLETE SUCCESS

It is always a pleasure to witness a performance of one Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's plays, so unmistakable is the skill in construction and so concise and pointed is the dialogue with always just the right infusion of literary flavor, never too obvious and yet never altogether lacking. And when one of his early farces, written before he essayed to be a serious dramatist, is given so neat an interpretation as "The Magistrate" received at the hands of the sophomore cast last Saturday afternoon and evening the pleasure is a distinct one. When one considers the almost crude limitations of the stage upon which we have at present to depend, its lack of size, of appropriate scenery, and of adequate lighting facilities it is not an exaggeration to say that the histrionic attempt of the sophomores was an unmistakable success.

Something of the spirit of farce animated the performance, its rollicking fun, its absurdity; though there was not quite enough snap, the tempo being too slow. Most of the performers evidently felt the spirit of the play as a whole and realized not only the individual characters they were assuming but also their relation to the others.

Lawrence Stone as Cis Farrington did distinctively well. He alternated successfully between the assumed innocence of the boy in the Eton collar and the youth of the race-track and mid-night snappers.

Maude Himes entered into the spirit of the vivacious music teacher, smitten with love for her pupil; and her contribution to the evening's entertainment was by no means the least important. She presented a most attractive appearance, and spoke her lines with a good understanding of their varied shades of meaning.

To Gladys Collins was entrusted the difficult role of Agatha Posket, the wife of the Magistrate, whose vanity caused her to conceal her real age from her husband and who thus compelled her son, child of her first husband, a youth of nineteen, to masquerade unwittingly as a boy of fourteen. It is this little feminine foible, portrayed by Pinero through a magnifying glass, that gives rise to all the highly amusing entanglements, some probable and others improbable, of the play. Miss Collins made an intelligent attempt to depict for us this lady who would

Bar Exams.

Members of the senior class of the law school and one special went to Lewiston last Wednesday to take the bar exam before the supreme court. They were accompanied by Prof. Wilbur.

The exam occurred on Thursday beginning at 9 a. m. and closing at 5 p. m.

The exam was very long and tiresome. 160 questions were asked on 15 different subjects.

The results were not known until Friday noon, and the suspense was awful, to say the least. In the meantime the boys amused themselves in various ways.

Friday morning the whole bunch visited the normal school in a body and were shown through by Mr. Tierney, the bursar. Their advent created a mild sensation among the students.

At 11 o'clock on Friday everybody assembled in the court room. In solemn silence the three judges filed in and took their places. Chief Justice Ailshie called off the names of the fortunate students. The oath was then administered to them, they gained the roll of attorneys, and 9 more lawyers were ready to accept fees and transact legal business.

Those successfully passing the exam were: Charles Rice, Proctor Perkins, P. V. Lucas, Theodora Swanson, R. D. Leener, Phillip Evans, Louis Peterson, Lester Hoobler, Horace Chamberlain.

Cartee Wood passed the exam but was not yet old enough to be admitted. He will be admitted in June of this year.

This is the second class to be admitted from the U. of I. law school. So far 16 men have been sworn in, 7 last year and 9 this year.

Plea of an Old Grad.

Why don't the "I" men wear the regulation "I" once in a while now a days. Never can one see the big "I" worn on the campus in full view of everybody.

The men all wear the little "I" tucked away on one side beneath their coats.

I for one believe that the regulation "I" should be worn once in a while by every man that has the right to do so.

Certainly a visitor to our campus should see a few of these emblems at least.

Stephen Regan, '14, editor of the Gem of the Mountains has left for Boise where he has accepted a good position. He will return next September to finish his course.

NEW STADIUM FOR IDAHO

Plans Are Under Way For Having Best Athletic Field In N. W.

Plans are now under way to convert the amphitheatre behind the gymnasium into a field for the use of track and the other sports.

The legislature in their last session made an appropriation of $3000 to the University for the purpose of providing a satisfactory place to hold the university sports.

Together with this, the student body intend to sell their interest in the old field which has been badly damaged for track purposes.

The proceeds of this sale will be placed with the appropriation and a good field will be made from the natural amphitheatre behind the gym.

The site of the new field is very large and is shaped like a horse-shoe with steeply rising sides. The bottom is rolling but can be easily smoothed out. When this is done, a quarter-mile track will be built resembling the one on the old field, and inside will be the football and baseball fields.

On the track all distances will be accurately marked and fixtures will be installed with the idea that they will be permanent.

The tennis courts will be set up on the field and given a coat of bitumen.

It seems to be the opinion of the student body that the field should be made as complete and well equipped as possible and when this is done Idaho will have, without a doubt, one of the finest fields in the Northwest.

Track.

Coch Edmundson says that the men are showing up better than was expected. Idaho will be strong in the quarter. Dingle is showing good form in the half. Brown and Van de Bogart are heaving the shot in fine style. Youngs, Rowell, Ankorn, Downing and Lyons are expected to do great things in the distance runs. Morrison is the best sprinter so far, but Lockhart is expected to turn out in a few days. Whitten in the quarter and Phillips in the weights, both old men, are doing better than ever before.

Geo. Scott, the high jumper is in the hospital. It is not known when he will be out.

Gamma Phi Beta will give their formal dance Friday evening at Eggan's hall.

GESELLSCHAFT A BIG EVENT

German Party One of the Best Entertainments of the School Year.

The Guild Hall was crowded last night with German students. Nearly every student who is now studying German who has ever studied it was present. So were Dean Eldridge, head of the German Department, and his wife, also Professors Kostalek, who is a real German, and Dean McCutcheon. The gesellschaft was under the direct charge of Mrs. Isaacson.

After all had assembled, the first thing was the big supper, which is the custom in Germany. The supper was eat and drunk in German style and caused much amusement. Between courses, Mrs. Isaacson called on different students for their Sprichworte, or maxims. After the last course, aufel wein, the tables were cleared out and the chairs arranged for the program part of the evening. First came a piano solo by Goldie Jones which brought much applause and also an encore. Then Josephine Wayman and Bertha Oleson, in the garb of peasant women sang a German duet. Valborg Kjosness sang a German solo, and the German Quartette composed of Paul Wenger, Chester Smith, Elmer Smith and Raymond Safford sang a couple of German songs. The program was topped off with a play in which all the characters were girls and all of the language German. The girls taking part were Miss Lorena Dartt, Miss Nettie Bauer, Miss Edna Bigelow, Miss Ursel Strohecker, Miss Edna Campbell, and Miss Margit Waale.

After the program was completed, the chairs were moved along the walls of the room and a grand march and dancing were enjoyed. The march was led by a peasant and his wife. The dancing, in the German style, continued until twelve o'clock when Home Sweet Home was played, and everyone went home with pleasant recollections of the Deutsche Gesellschaft, and hoped they might be able to attend a similar one next year.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Colver entertained at dinner Sunday Winnifred Brown, Rose Seiler, Hazel Woods, Sue Sinclair, Mabel Rudisell, Vivian Allen, Veda Stoddard, Ellen McCrossir, Bertha Sylvester, and Valborg Kjosness.

Nina Nelson, '16, left college to accept a teaching position in Filer, Ida.

It is the duty of every male student of the University of Idaho to turn out for some form of athletics. In the first place he owes it to himself to do so, for a student cannot do good work unless he has exercise and plenty of it.

In the second place, he owes it to his college. The University of Idaho is one of the smallest schools, and it is with difficulty that it can maintain the standard of the other colleges of the northwest conference. In both track and baseball the prospects are far from bright. With only four letter men in each branch, Coaches Griffith and Edmundson have serious reasons to be worried. All who are in any way athletically inclined should work out with the baseball squad or report to Hek Edmundson for track work.

It might not be out of the way for the faculty to pass a ruling requiring every male student in the university to participate in at least one branch of athletics, as is the case in some of the larger universities.

Baseball.

The baseball squad is practicing in Lewis hall; it is not able to get outside yet. Pink started batting practise a few days ago. There are about 25 out daily. Several are trying out for pitober, Jardine, Gerlough, Hayden, Keane, Perkins, Robinson, Anderson and Gowan are out for catcher. Pink Griffith expects to get a fair battery out of this bunch, but says that he intends to depend more on fielding and batting to win the games. According to all reports, he has some sluggers among the new recruits.

Those trying out are: Infield—Humbries, Fancher, Donart, McEvers, Jardine, Perkins, Maughn, Alberts, Owens, Borden, Numbers. Outfield—Kinnison, Beier, Jones, Knutson.

Anybody with any latent talent is urged to report in Lewis hall any evening at 4 o'clock. Pink needs everybody at this time.

FRENCH GIVES BOYS ADVICE

Idaho Congressman Comments on Law Protecting Migratory Birds.

According to a despatch from Washington, D. C., the women of the country are entitled to great credit for the enactment in the last session of congress of a law for the protection of migratory birds. In a splendid speech made by Senator McLean of Connecticut, which can be had upon application to him he disclosed the startling fact that because of the reckless killing of birds for their plumage and by boys for sport, many of the different species of birds are being entirely annihilated. All the members of the Idaho delegation in congress supported the legislation.

The following letter to Congressman French indicates the interest that even the children have taken in the matter:

Caldwell, Idaho,
Feb. 27, 1913.

Burton L. French,
Washington, D. C.,

Dear sir:—

I wish you would try to get the law passed to stop the killing of birds. I am nine years old, and I want a gun, but I will not kill any birds but the magpies and crows.

Yours truly,

(Signed) LaVerne R. Philpott,

Representative French replied as follows:

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., March 6, 1913.

Master LaVerne R. Philpott,
Caldwell, Idaho.

My dear LaVerne:—

I am in receipt of your letter of February 27th., recommending the passage of a law by congress for the protection of migratory birds, and I am very happy to write you that we have passed the measure, and it was approved by President Taft a few days ago.

I am very glad to know that you have such kind feelings towards harmless birds and animals, and I wish every boy and girl in Idaho could look at the question as you do.

Why does a boy kill a beautiful bird whose young are in the nest in the tree and leave the tiny birds to starve? Why does a boy kill a harmless little squirrel, and leave its young to perish? Boys who do this do not mean to be cruel. They just do not think. I have lots of boy friends, and not one of them is bad, but sometimes they are thoughtless and do things of which they are afterwards ashamed.

We do not like a great big boy who "pitches on" to a little fellow, and he is not brave. It is the same thing when we try to make sport out of killing pure, harmless bird and animal friends that like to live just as well as we do. It is not brave.

Besides that, birds and animals do good. I will tell you of one instance. King Frederick of Prussia was very fond of cherries. Some years ago he became annoyed because he saw sparrows eating his fruit, and he ordered them killed. Many other birds also lost their ives or were driven away. The King was punished very soon, for within two years Frederick's orchards bore little fruit of any kind. Insects had eaten nearly all the leaves that were upon the trees. The King then saw the mistake that he had made, and brought in many birds to make their homes in his trees. Soon after this the trees bore fruit again.

I wish all boys and girls in Idaho could know that most birds and animals are our friends and do us good. Also, if they could know how our little friends love to live, how happy they are in their nests in the trees and fields, how much joy there is in their songs and strange noises, I am sure the boys and girls would be their best friends ever after.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Burton L. French.

LEGISLATIVE DISTRIBUTION

New Apportionment as Designated by the Recent Legislature.

The last session of the legislature reapportioned the state representative and senatorial districts. The Senate is increased from 26 to 33, and the House from 60 to 61, a total increase of eight members. It might be of interest to note that the increase is all from the Mormon counties. The following table explains itself:

The Sheep and The Goats.

As law prizes be to Jehovah, the law sheep are to be separated from the legal goats. Bismillah! No longer, thank God, are those law students remarkable for their legal learning, (in their own minds,) compelled to suffer themselves to be submerged in the common herd of the thick wined. No! By dint of much effort, and straining, and tugging at their boot straps, the "high brow" have succeeded in exalting themselves to that plane of intellectual superiority the Almighty intended they should occupy.

It Alpha Delta is the means by which this was accomplished. This new "honorary" fraternity is to contain all those law students famed for their scholarship. It starts on its career with a membership of thirteen, who freely admit that they are the brightest, braviest, and most brilliant students in the law school. Their names should be inscribed in letters of gold over the portals of the school as an inspiration to future generations. So unassuming, meek, and free from conceit! Imagine that nothing but a most overwhelming sense of duty impelled them thus to come out into the limelight. The Noble Fraternity!

Now we know who are conspicuous for their scholarship in the law school. And scholarship is to be the basis for membership in the F. Addies. Many people are inclined to wonder where and when the present members exhibited any signs of scholarship above the ordinary. But they must have it, for do they not admit it. Doubtless the MacDermots will explain these things if we are patient.

Again, membership is limited to second and third year law men. But evidently this rule is not inflexible, as some freshmen have already been included with the other sheep. It is to be presumed under the clause allowing those to be admitted who are famed for their scholarship. But why, oh why, were these selected above all others. The list of members is valuable, however, as a revelation of the opinion the members have of themselves. These are the brains of the law school! Oh Lord!

This new frat has done some good already, however. It brings into the limelight those who have had the frat bee buzzing in their bonnet. It must hurt them though, to admit that the other frats were unable to discern their fitness. It will also conduce to good feeling among the members of the law school. Those not considered worthy of membership in it will doubtless feel proud at being allowed to attend the same classes as these superior persons. I presume that the goats will be required to tip their hats when they meet any of the frat sheep, not to speak unless spoken to, and always to say "Sir" when addressed. We should be grateful to them for teaching us our places. Those possessing the culture and brains should consort together. We hope they will learn to use them. This frat will also, doubtless result in unifying the law school, and making many pleasant friendships among the sheep and the goats. And when in after life they meet professionally, the memory

BORAH WOULD TAX UNSURVEYED LAND

Idaho Senator Would Place Immense Western Areas On Rolls.

Senator Borah has initiated a movement having for its object the transfer to the tax rolls of the immense areas in the west now un-taxed because of uncompleted pending surveys, lieu land selections, withdrawals and unapproved scrip locations. The success of which would materially increase the tax receipts of every western state—as well as reduce the tax burden now resting on the people of these states. Senator Borah has addressed a letter to Secretary Lane in which he deals only with Idaho lands thus exempt, but since the publication of this communication the Idaho senator has been joined by members from all states similarly situated, who are now bringing the same arguments to bear on the secretary with the hope of securing favorable action.

Senator Borah's letter calls attention to a large area in northern Idaho which has been scripped, and where lieu selections have not been approved. This condition makes it impossible to tax these lands, and until approved or dis-approved the areas can not be taken under homestead entry. Some of the selections mentioned in Idaho have been pending since 1901, being held up because of their alleged mineral character. The new secretary of the interior is appealed to with a demand that these pending matters be cleared up at the earliest possible moment. If the selections are approved the states may open to homestead entry and soon get on the tax rolls in that way.

Isabel Stevens entertained the Gamma Phi Beta girls in her gymnasium classes at a "tally pull" Saturday evening in her rooms on College avenue. A most informal and delightful evening was spent in games and music.

AT ASSEMBLY

Miss Edna Campbell favored those at assembly with a piano solo, and was heartily recalled for another selection. Acting President Carlyle gave a talk on the acts of the legislature as regarding the university. Before entering upon the discussion of the main subject the president passed a few comments upon the spirit of the Freshman-Sophomore fight. "In all the eight similar fights which I have witnessed," he declared, "none have been so highly commendable and free from all signs of slugging or other dirty work. I have not seen anything which made me more proud of this university than did that class sorā. The self control shown by the combatants was certainly admirable." The professor closed the comment by quoting, "He that ruleth his spirit, is greater than he that taketh a city."

The president then turned to the discussion of the acts of the recent legislature aimed at and against the university. He showed that when some of the leaders at Pocatello heard of Dr. MacLeans resignation they began immediately a movement to obtain the removal of the Agricultural College to Pocatello, including a charter which would ultimately mean the University of Idaho being moved to that point. "The movement had a strong hold," said the president, "and had good chances of success had not the trade for votes in the senatorial election defeated the plan."

In other words Pocatello traded the chance of gaining a university for the election of a senator. "Pocatello had to sign up," he explained, "and agree to give Twin Falls their support in an attempt to obtain an agricultural college in return for which Pocatello would receive Twin Falls' support for the election of Brady. It was the worst trading match I ever saw. A Gipsy trading camp would have no comparison with it. They seemed to be all on the trade and willing to trade anything and everything." After the Pocatello plan had been sacrificed and while the war was on over the senatorial election the governor persuaded Mr. Carlyle to go to California, raise the quarantine on Idaho alfalfa, promising with others that there would be nothing done toward the educational plans until his return. Mr. Carlyle went to California, raised the quarantine, and returned to find that the Twin Falls' bill had been advanced and secured many pledges for support. The bill was very indefinite and while it asked only $25,000 appropriation by the state for building purposes, yet its charter was such that it could be construed to be as liberal as that of the university. When the Pocatello members understood the nature of the bill they withdrew their support and the bill was killed.

"Those opposed to present established institutions," said Mr. Carlyle, "the attitude that we have to many educational institutions, that each one is a distinct institution not working in harmony with the other and consequently to expensive for the results obtained."

The president went on to show that there was no common plan among the present schools of the State of Idaho but that each worked independent of the others. He stated that this lack of union was the reason for the doing away with the old board of regents and the providing for a board of control to be appointed. He stated that on the whole the outcome of the legislature was not bad for the university, as the appropriations had been larger than two years ago by $87,900 and though there was lots of squibbling, the university has nothing in the end of which to complain.

Dancing Exhibition.

On March 29th, the pupils of Miss Stevens dancing class will give a recital consisting of fancy dances and singing. This entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Moscow Club women and the proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Moscow playgrounds.

It is not often that such a chance is given to the men students to see the dancing taught the U. girls. It is well remembered that last year a somewhat similar recital was given and that the ban was placed on the men. The other event of the college year—the girls track meet, resembled also a suffrage meeting.

This year however the recital will be given in Eggans' Hall. The national dances of the leading nations will be presented in appropriate costume. There will be given also another chance to hear the vocal artists of the university, as some of the most popular talent of the university have volunteered their services.

The recital will begin promptly at 8:15 at Eggans' Hall on Mar. 29.

Ensemble Concert.

One of the important musical events of the year will be the ensemble concert by members of the faculty of the department of music assisted by Grace Terry, soprano, of Lewiston and Mr. Ferdinand Sorenson, cellist, of Spokane. The program will consist of string trios for violin, cello and piano by Hayden, Godard, Mendelssohn and Sternberg, a sonata for piano and violin by Gade and a group of solos for cello. Miss Terry of the Lewiston will sing a group of songs composed by Prof. J. Francis Maguire. This will be the initial performance of Mr. Maguire's compositions. It is hoped that another year a series of concerts of this character may be arranged for introducing the ensemble works of the great masters.

Students should avail themselves of this special opportunity of hearing this excellent offering. The concert will be given under the direction of Prof. Maguire in high school auditorium, Friday evening, April 11.

Professor and Mrs. Hamilton Entertain.

Professor and Mrs. E. W. Hamilton entertained at cards Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Frevert, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Kennard and Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Cook. The evening was pleasantly spent at progressive "500" tables and at midnight a delicious lunch was served.

Mrs. Kennard and Mr. Cook were the successful winners of the evening's honors.

Herman Nuffer essayed the part of the Magistrate whose daily experiences in the Mulberry police court had yet left him so unsophisticated as to be deceived and led astray by a youth of nineteen. His make-up was quite effective, and his vocal interpretation showed that he had a good conception of the part.

Joseph Pond as Bullamy, a professional friend of the Magistrate, infused a little more of the liveliness of force into his lines than did some of the other members of the cast. Yet his predilection for jujubes was not made sufficiently ostentatious.

Oliver Nisbet as the waiter was not quiet knowing enough. A waiter in the Hotel des Princes would naturally be sharp and sophisticated, quick to seize every opportunity to extract a tip, and fully aware of all that was going on about him. And so while the interpretation of the character was consistent with itself, it seemed hardly the right one.

In the minor parts of servants, official assistants, and police, Florence Stephenson, Mark Anderson, Robert Leth, Allen Anderson, Marvin Monroe and Ernest Beckman, all added to the success of the different scenes in which they figured. Robert Gerlough was too serious as Colonel Lukyn; Dorothy Taylor looked charming as Charlotte Verrinder and gave her lines brightly and with crispness; and John Phillips (one is tempted to give him the familiar name of Buck) was manly and magnetic as Captain Horace Vale.

Puero's plays are always grateful to the performers because they are so full of stage directions, both implicit and explicit. His early farces are all entertaining and his later and serious plays are arresting and instructive. Like Shakespeare he learned the art of writing plays while acting plays.

Any notice of the performance, no matter how brief, would be incomplete without a word of commendation for the work of Professor Benjamin Lehman, under whose direction the play was given. To him is largely due the evident conception of the play as a whole which informed the acting of almost all the participants. And to him is due general success of the performance, the intelligent attention given to the many details, and the fine level upon which the play moved.

Georgia Kaufmann left Sunday for Mullan, Idaho, where she has been offered a fine position in the Mullan high school. She hopes to return by the first of June to make up her college work.

Mrs. Elmer Brown, the representative of the Arts and Crafts Club of Spokane, was a visitor at the Omega Pi house last week.
