One Campus Fallacy

Collegiate newspaper advertising pays all right. But there are several popular campus ideas concerning business houses in college towns that are gross misconceptions.

One of them is that business men in college towns are out to rim students for all they are worth. It can't be done. Competition is too keen in town and from the outside; and students are not gullible enough to stand for it. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker in a college town have an unusually critical and capricious patronage to deal with. They must tread lightly upon the thin ice of campus favor. And most of them realize this.

Most college-town business men are so whole-heartedly interested in their college or university that they form a definite part of its life, and may be counted on to support its activities. They go wild as a freshman when a football game is won, and sink to the depths of disappointment when unfortunate reverses are encountered. From a purely personal point of view, they are all for the school.

And from a strictly business viewpoint the college offers the business man much; and he appreciates this. As an out and out business matter, he advertises in the college newspaper; and the returns are good. But they should be better.

Students should get away from the popular misconception that the business man is making a donation when he advertises. They should not assume that this business man doesn't expect anything from his ads in the college paper, and so they needn't even notice them. He does; and students ought to.

That is, the business man advertises for results; and students should watch his ads, read them, and respond as a prospective customer to a deserving advertiser.

A Moscow business man has made the statement that if he got the results from all his advertising that he gets from the Argonaut ads, there would hardly be a limit to his advertising budget.

So there you are . . . students: watch The Argonaut ads!

Vandals Star

That's football! Idaho's game against Oregon last week. The aerial game, including the pass over the goal line for touchdown, is probably the most highly scientific of all gridiron styles of play. The successful use of this overhead style of play requires a team unusually skilled in handling the ball, remarkably well-trained in football fundamentals, and supremely confident.

When a team can take a play, recognized to be successful only when the breaks are right, and put it across repeatedly, as Idaho did the pass over the goal line, for touchdowns why, that's football!

Idaho's line measured up to a crucial test last week when it stood up in the face of battering plunges of the heavier Oregon eleven. And while it was plain to everyone that the Vandal backfield and ends were playing wonderfully; it was not so obvious, though fully as true, that the Idaho center, tackles, and guards were also playing the game of their lives.

Probably Oregon would have had a touchdown had they not fumbled under the shadows of Idaho's goalposts. But many times before the Vandals have stiffened and held on their own one-yard, yes, even their one-foot line.

Idaho got some good breaks that game; but isn't that football: to be able to capitalize the good breaks when they come?

The Paintings

Today, tomorrow, and Sunday are the last days of the art exhibit. And as was expected, those who really are interested have been in to enjoy it. But those for whom the exhibit would do the most, and in whom it might arouse a new enjoyable interest, have not yet been in to see the wonderful paintings.

During the last three days the exhibit will be open from eight in the morning until nine at night. Are you coming?

Turn To The Right

Are you using the right hand stairs going up, and the right coming down in the main halls of the Ad building? Remember those traffic regulations, and turn to the right.

Student Opinion

In the main corridor of the Ad building we find a large rectangular space over which are the words Bulletin Board. On this space are posted from time to time notices pertaining to school affairs and other items of importance. The original intention was for students to read these announcements and then pass on so that others might do the same thing.

However, we find in the University of Idaho, as in any other representative group, certain people who insist on monopolizing things. Some of these people can be found parked in front of this bulletin board most any time between classes, causing so much congestion that it is impossible to get within reading distance of the board. We must not forget that there are others in the world besides ourselves, and that sometimes their interests are just as great as our own. To those who are after information on the board I say go to it, take all the time you need, but to those people who, perhaps unintentionally stand there and gossip, I would suggest that a less crowded part of the hall would do just as well. It would be just as easy to talk over that date last night, or the one for next week down the hall a little distance, and it would facilitate matters a great deal.

This is only a habit; but it is a habit that can become a nuisance. If we will all work together and think about this, it will make it much easier to get around in what is at best a crowded part of the building.—H. T.

We are all proud of the fact that the University of Idaho is fast becoming one of the leading schools in the west. In most any newspaper we can find some reference to our school. Our teams are taking a very prominent place in athletics and we know that they will keep the good work up because the student body is back of them.

Our student body is growing at a remarkable rate. We have only to stand in the halls between classes and it is evident that things are becoming crowded. This year's freshman class is the largest in the history of the school and without a doubt next year's class will be still larger. But we must stop and consider the matter. Where are we going to put so many students? During the last few years the number of students have increased many times as fast as the amount of class room space. Something will have to be done soon or we will find classes being held out on the campus, so that the army will be unable to do its squads right.

We all know the plans for the gymnasium, and everyone knows that we need it. That, it is to be hoped, will soon be a reality; but let us think about the library. Even now it is getting too small. At some periods seats are at a premium, and at best it is hard to get in in the evenings. A fine big library would make a very, very acceptable addition to the campus.

The music building is also getting altogether too small to accommodate its students. Moreover the building itself is not in keeping with the rest of the buildings on the campus. A new music hall with practise rooms and a recital room will soon be a necessity.

Another building that is much needed in the very near future is a new men's dormitory. Lindley hall is crowded to capacity at the present time and many students are forced to live down town, because they cannot get accommodations in the hall.

The fine arts courses are growing fast and at the present time they are housed in the engineering building annex. Their quarters are not in the least beautiful, and how can we expect them to do beautiful work unless the surroundings are in accordance with their work?

It takes time to get these things, but in the not very distant future they are going to be badly needed. The thing to do is to start thinking about it now and possibly some creative genius will come along and show us a way to do it.—H. T.

tion is the sort of a hide and seek place one has around the house, especially in plays, for young lovers. How Lady A—, for she is something past 50, ever came to be in the place is more than we can understand. Perhaps Cupid—oh, no, the idea is preposterous, for, as said before, Lady A— is past 50 (of course she doesn't look it—no woman ever does), and besides, she is dreadfully—Victorian.

Domestic life with a patient wife and a restless husband appear in "Over the Hills." There is an old friend of the husband, too, and the resultant family eruption. It all comes out fine in the end, when the husband—but that would be telling. Any way, it all comes out O. K.

QUARRYING—Ancient and Modern

THE quarrying of stone reaches back into the twilight of antiquity. It was practiced by peoples whose only records are written in their crumbling temples and weather-worn monoliths. From earliest times stone cutting has been a well-understood art.

Quarrying today is an important industry. Stone finds a thousand uses in our complex industrial structure. And in stone, architectural genius creates its most eloquent expression.

But the modern quarryman has at his disposal a force undreamed of by the ancients. Explosives have taken the place of arduous hand labor. Now, whole hillsides are blasted almost as easily as one block could be cut by hand tools alone.

Quarrying methods vary with the specific problem at hand. The quality and condition of the stone, the purpose for which it is to be used, and the general quarry conditions determine the type of explosives to be employed.

Du Pont manufactures an extensive line of explosives. Among those recommended for quarrying are: Red Cross Extra or du Pont Extra; Du Pont Straight Nitroglycerin; Red Cross, Du Pont, Repauno and Forcite Gelatins; Arctic Special. Also Du Pont R. R. P.—a "low powder" of granular formation.

The du Pont Company manufactures the proper explosive to do each type of blasting best, at least expense.

There would seem to be no doubt that winter is really here, there are evidences of it upon every hand (and incidentally upon every foot). Students who have been too long cooped up in stuffy classrooms are expending much pent-up energy in maintaining their balance while walking, in coasting, and in skiing. The huge mass of snow which covers the campus gives it the appearance of a scene from the frozen north, where men are men, etc. etc. The cry of "Taxi, taxi, where is that taxi?" is coming from every phone booth in Moscow and vicinity. Winter has come—and let us devoutly hope that spring's not far behind.

Professor—Read eighteen chapters of this volume. It is fine print but the material is good. It will take you no more than three hours and will be well worth the time.

SCENE II—a class room

Professor—Take these references please. They run from one to three chapters and there are only ten of them in all. I advise you to get all of this verbatim as most of it will be included in the quiz tomorrow.

SCENE III—a class room

Professor—I am disappointed that more of you have not read all of Homer, the Bible and Shakespeare. Quiller-Coch advises these works for those who expect to learn to write decent prose. None of you can do that as yet.

SCENE IV—a class room

Professor—Why don't you people read the newspapers. You should read three or four of them a day. Any one who doesn't, cannot consider himself well informed. Besides that the Literary Digest, The World's Work, The Atlantic Monthly and The American Mercury should be carefully followed each week or month as the case may be.

SCENE V—a class room

Professor—You will read these three novels and report on them tomorrow. It will take you no more than nine hours.

SCENE VI—a class room

Professor—For Wednesday, translate the next thirty-five pages of this French. Look up all the verbs and nouns and articles and conjunctions; look up everything. It will take no more than five hours.

SCENE VII—faculty and bullst

First Professor—This generation is too fast. They don't think. They should think more and read less. Lincoln was a one-book man. He was a thinker.

Second Professor—Yes, I think you are right. They should think more and read less. (A student, who has come in unnoticed, falls dead.)

RED MEN!

"We have too many cookie pushers and teahounds in this university," said William Brown, president of the St. Louis Alumni association at a recent football mass meeting in the university auditorium at Columbia. "What we want are some real men who can sit on a porcupine without a saddle and fight a rattle snake and give it the first two bites."

WOMEN CAN'T RIDE

An edict has been issued at the University of Indiana by Agnes Wells, dean of women, preventing women students from possessing motor cars, while attending the university, and denying them the privilege of motoring outside the city of Bloomington, except during the two weeks at the beginning and the close of the school year.

Dean Wells said that 50 percent of the women students who were forced to leave school on account of poor grades were known to have spent much time in motor cars, and the poor scholastic standing of car owners is said to have been responsible for the edict.

Two Leading Frats Are Threatened By Newest Greek Order

"Dambda Phi Data," declared the comely lass indifferently but with firmness. "Three dates are positively the limit."

"Dambda Phi Caree" replied the handsome lad firmly but with sadness. "Three dates are quite enough." And so they parted, never to greet again.

Thus the two great Dambda Phi fraternities, the Dambda Phi Data sorority and the Dambda Phi Caree fraternity, were organized, and, so widely are they known, that the sorority girls are called the Phi Dates and the fraternity men the Phi Cares, the Dambda being taken for granted of course. The constitution of the Phi Dates prohibits under heavy penalty the acquisition of more than three dates with any one man and the Phi Cares have a tradition that no Phi Data gets a chance at a fourth.

But another great Greek organization is rapidly coming to the front and threatens to destroy the Dambda Phis as a whole. The new group, the Psi Phi sorority, takes its name from its motto, "Why sigh? We have men." The girl whose man is farthest from school is generally elected president, and the sorority takes great delight in pledging former Dambda Phi Dates, whose allegiance has been broken, and in thus breaking the spirit, if not the letters, of the Phi Cares. Nevertheless both the Phi Cares and the Phi Dates maintain large chapters on every hill, and manage to keep "the Dambda spirit" well established.

The three chapters are well established on the College of Emporia campus according to the Emporia Gazette.—University Daily Kansan.

Best Way of Making Many Acquaintances In College

How many people do you speak to in the course of your wanderings around the campus?

Do you ever think of that old saying "Am I my brother's keeper?" I read some place where the head of a college said that he didn't consider a man a typical college man unless at the end of his freshman year he had a speaking acquaintance with at least 500 other students.

I would be willing to wager that there are very few men on the campus that can call 100 by name let

There is a great deal more to be gotten out of college than to attend all of the classes and pass all of the exams. If, after completing your course you are unable to go out among people and carry on a conversation with ease, what is the use of your education? No one is sufficient enough unto himself that he can neglect mingling with his fellow-men.

A cheery smile and a nod of the head costs nothing but the effort yet there are many times when that nod and smile may bring a lot of cheer to some one else. Make it a practice to limber up the old smile every morning when you roll out and keep it going all day. Have a greeting of some sort on the tip of your tongue so you can say "Hello" to those you meet and see if it doesn't make you a little happier at the close of the day.—Weekly Exponent, Montana State College.

FROSH SQUAD HAS STRONG MATERIAL

Yearlings' Showing Makes Outlook Bright for Next Year; Seven Vets Leave

It made University of Idaho football followers, particularly those who have been wondering where Coach R. L. Mathews would get the material to patch the seven holes that graduation will open in this year's varsity, smile with satisfaction to learn that the 1924 freshmen had sufficient power to vanquish the speedy Idaho Tech eleven 37 to 0 at Boise. Beating the Tech proved without doubt that the first-year eleven this year is superior to any other at Idaho, for up to the Boise game the Tech had been victorious, scoring 134 points and with no points against it.

In their Boise game the freshmen displayed a versatile and slashing attack, backed by the smart football so characteristic of the Idaho varsity, that the Tech could not fathom. From end to end the frosh presented an impregnable defense and the backfield was too shifty and too heady for the Tech to stop. The first downs were thirteen all but the Tech made all its gains in field and only once penetrated Idaho territory without scoring distance.

This freshmen showing makes Idaho's outlook for next year much brighter, for Johnny Vesser, Larry Quinn, Charles Hausen, Lyle Tapper, and Fat Stephens will be lost from the line and Skippy Stivers, Syb Klossner, and Frank Kinnison, from the backfield. Such a list would be a big loss from any ball club.

The frosh playing the Tech game were Canine, Dean, Thomas, Hamilton, Gregory, Robinson, Chaney, Stark, Wendell, Brandt, Calvert, Inmenen; Hughes, Duff, Walmesley, Ball, O'Donnell, Moore, Jacoby, backs. Coach Dave MacMillan gave every man on his squad a chance to play.

Girl Students Enroll in Architectural Course.

Two girls have enrolled in the architectural course as majors, according to Professor Rudolph Weaver. They are Lucretia Foster of Los Angeles and Gertrude Maloney of Missoula.

"Many women are professional architects and there are many phases of architecture for which women are especially fitted," says Professor Weaver. "Women have been particularly successful in design and residence work, interior decorating and the more artistic phases in which pen and ink and water color perspective drawings are featured.

"The big firms are employing people on merit alone, without discrimination against women. Some women have been highly successful in the purely technical side of architecture and colleges are admitting to their architectural courses all women who are interested in the work."

STUDENTS TO EXHIBIT IN POULTRY SHOW

University students will take an active part in the annual Panhandle Poultry show, which will be held in Moscow December 8 to 13, it has been announced by Prof. R. T. Parkhurst, president of the show association, and head of the department of poultry husbandry at the university.

An exhibit of standard bred fowls will be prepared by the students in poultry judging. The birds will be trained, washed and exhibited but will not be in competition. The marketing course students of both the long and short courses will prepare exhibits of grades of eggs and methods of packing.

Pren Moore, poultry specialist of the extension division, will take part in the exhibit and judge the poultry.

R. E. Everly, district leader of boys' and girls' club work, will promote exhibits from the boys and girls of the northern section.

The officers of the show association are: Professor Parkhurst, president; E. F. Dix, vice president; Hawkin Melgard, treasurer; Prof. H. W. Hulbert, secretary; and E. A. Cruver, superintendent.

FRESHMEN TO MEET W. S. C.

The Cheney Normal gridders slipped through a touchdown against them, but not before the Vandal babes had amassed a brace of touchdowns and had converted the tries for goal in each instance. The final score was Idaho 14, Cheney Normal 7.

Perhaps the hardest game of the season for the youngsters was the contest with the Tigers last week. The Pocateilians have a wicked backfield and carry a dangerous pass. A multiplicity of fumbles and incomplete passes was an important factor in the determination of the final score. The Vandals, however, in the last period, dropped their offensive tactics and contended themselves with shattering the Tigers' attempt an offensive.

The youngsters have been going through daily workouts and will be in prime condition for the game Saturday. There are no hangover injuries from the Boise game, other than the usual bruises and "charley horses" which are inevitable results of every game.

Coach MacMillan has not announced a definite lineup for the W. S. C. clash.

PROF. MICHAEL MAKES TALK AT LEWISTON

Prof. W. M. Michael of the English department gave the principal address in the support of the memorial drive, at Lewiston on Armistice Day. The program was under direction of the American Legion post of that city.

Professor Michael will appear before the Daughters of the American Revolution Tuesday evening to give a number of readings of American poetry.

POULTRY AUTHORITY WILL LECTURE HERE

F. S. Jacoby Will Give Demonstration on November 22

F. S. Jacoby, of the division of dairy and poultry products, department of agriculture, will demonstrate the standard grades of eggs and the candling of eggs in general, in Moscow, November 22, it is announced by Professor R. T. Parkhurst, head of the poultry husbandry department. Mr. Jacoby will appear both in the morning and the afternoon.
