Championship May Go To Anybody But Idaho, Thinks Coach

By Paul E. Jones With practically every team in the northern division of the Pacif-ic coast conference noticeably weakened by a lack of lettermen the race looks like almost any-body's and may develop into a battle between a flock of sophomore luminaries.

"Slats" Gill at Oregon State is the best fixed man in the north from the veteran standpoint, having six lettermen out for his squad. Gill has two forwards, one center and three guards who made letters last season and the Oregon State quintet, with two victories over the strong Multnomah Athletic club of Portland to its credit already, may develop into the dark horse of the northern division.

The Idaho quintet has three lettermen for a nucleus and Rich Fox will have to develop some of his sophomores or last season's reserves in order to keep in the run-The Vandals have always finished high in the coast basketball and with Stowell and McMillin carrying the big part of the Idaho offence the Vandals should again win a pretty fair share of their The strength of the new men on the squad will probably de-termine, to a great extent, the success of the season.

Huskies Strong Washington, northern division champions last season, has but two returning regulars, the same situation that is facing Billy Reinhart, University of Oregon mentor. The strength of he W. S. C. quintet is not known but reports from the Cougar camp indicate that Coach Jack Friel has uncovered a trio of sophomores that are almost certain to win regular berths on the warsity. These boys are sharp spoters but Friel is not quite satisfied with the defensive strength of his

Hec Edmundson, University of Washington coach, has just about the long and short of it as far as veterans go. Hal McClary, tru veteran center, is a six foot, seven inch giant, while Jiggs Jaloff, forward is probably one of the smallest men playing in the coast cir-cuit. Edmundson is looking over the sophomore crop and with a rew reserves from last, season, should have another winning team. It's a cinch no team is going to get the tip-off from the Huskies as long as Hal McClary is playing and that same Mr. McClary gave the tip-off to Jiggs Jaloff just often enough to win a brace of games from the

Cadet Officers Vote Dedication From Pay Checks to Finance Annual Ball

Funds for the annual military ball sponsored by the R. O. T. C. advanced classes were guaranteed at a meeting of all cadet officers Thursday morning in the main room of the military department in Memorial gymnasium at 10 o'clock. Two dollars and fifty cents will be taken from each man's quarterly federal pay check to defray expenses. Chester Whittaker, treasurer of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary, explained the tradition of the dance and explained the necessity for a guarantee of funds. The dance will probably be held in the eve of Washington's birthday. Committees are to be appointed immediately.

Friday 13th Holds No Terrors for Collegians

Friday the 13th unlucky? Well how about it? Did you know to-day was the fatal day before you read this? Most of the students and faculty on the Gem state's campus maintain that there isn't any such thing as real superstition any more, and we say there is. Aw, come on now give us just a hint and tell us what you have been do-ing today to keep yourself out of mischief—Oh pardon us, we meant, out of danger. Say, are you super-stitious or not?

These most questions, if ever decided probably will not have much influence on the affairs of the big mined on the quest vesterday we set out on the rounds to consult as many people as we could find in the Ad Building—He that hath an ear to hear, and all that stuff—only to find that most of the lucky or unlucky objects of our attention were not even aware of the importance of the day until it was called to our attention so rudely.

Corona Dewey says there isn't consult as mined on the refuses to make good with the fall of the set of the lucky of the lucky objects of our attention are "You and to the step-in," as Dr. Mount characterized the present day progress."

Bound." The story is that of a young man who is engaged to a girl of wealth and social standing, but he refuses to make good with the standards (such as being shocked) at the sight of cerpany use of thinking chert supports.

Corona Dewey says there isn't any use of thinking about superstitition and all that stuff. because she has just found out that there isn't any Santy Claus.

Dr. Barton in characteristic behavioristic terms said however that he believed everyone was more or less modified by superstitution because of the fact that we talk about it. if for no other reason. Feeling hat that dig had some slight(?) relation to us, we hied ourselves out and met some stu-dents in the hall. Upon ouestioning these representatives of a mod ern, oh ves. verv modern-scientific age we were treated to loud and long chortles of laughter and exclamations of "Bunk, there ain't no such vegetable-no superstitionmuch less Friday the 13th-that's just a coincidence." They thought they had us there but we told them we hoped hev'd fall down the Ad building elevator shaft or some-thing like that for making the way of the reporter so hard.

Superstition certainly does exist. says Mr. Howe. At one time he and another gentlemen were trying to engage a couple of rooms in Mos-cow and the price of two of these were $12 and $14 respectively. They decided to look elsewhere and it happened that they did find other lodging that suited them better so that they forgot about these first rooms. However, about two weeks after they had first looked at the rooms the two men received a let-ter from this landlady in which she said that if the price of $13 apiece for her rooms had kept them from engaging them, she was willing to cut the price to $12.75 apiece.

We've all heard of the jinx in college athletics of one kind or another. Baseball players are usually the most added to superstitute the terms of the state of the superstitute. tions, but we find pet peeves in oher lines of sport, too. Two or three years ago Gonzaga played a basketball game with Idaho here on the 13th. To break the jinx which they had heard existed down here for invaders of Vandal territory, the whole squad backed through the door when they came out on the floor of the gym to play. Now please tell us, is that superstition, or merely coincidence? Address your answers to Aunt Prudence, care of the Argonaut. We'll

Contrary to our expressed opinlons, we learned that Friday the 13th was considered her lucky day by Miss Garnett. She has ample proof for this in many ways, especially in the fact that her first real successful piece of work in the field of music was done on that day. It consisted of an operetta that she produced which was published and advertised to such an lished and advertised to such an extent that it drew an enormous crowd and was truly a magnificent

But to give you another idea of our side of the question. There have been numerous chain letters appearing on the campus during the last few days. One has warned faculty members quite seriously against bad luck at railroad crossings. Another one that Dr. Barton received has to do with the curse of Flanders and as the story goes "must circle the world three times, and will bring bad luck to anyone breaking the charm, but will give good luck to the person who makes four copies of it and sends it on.

We thought the librarians ought to contribute just lots in the way of proof for our premise that superstitution exists nowadays just as in the dark ages, and we don't mean dark nights either—but they only said that th-had noticed an unusual amount of rapping on wood, both on library tables and wood, but the students craniums.

Well, we could go on like this through the whole faculty, student and even student janitor roster, to know is whether any of you dear but what's the use? All we want readers have fallen down the Ad building steps today on your way to lunch, and whether you were able to eat as heartily as usual after that sudden descent from the temple of knowledge. You get the general idea, dontcha?—it's today we are interested in—date night and of course—Friday the 13th.

Plans to give young eight-year-old King Michael, of Roumania, a democratic education by picking fellow students for him among the lower classes, came to naught when the school had to be discontinued because the king insisted on beating up on his fellow students, who finally decided to hit back.

CAL. DEBATE TEAM MAY TOUR ENGLAND

Berkeley, U. S. C., and Stanford Will Each Send Man Abroad In Spring

Steps to set in motion a tour of England by an All-California de-bate team have been taken by an action of the California forensics council, Sanction was given by the body to the sending of one repre-sentative debater to form a threeman team next spring in conjunction with the other two large universities of the state, U. S. C. and Plans were instituted on the incentive of a letter received from Martha H. Biehle, secretary of the National Student Federation of America, which in consideration of the anticipated tour of eastern col-leges added the suggestion that the trip should extend to England. Similar letters have been received by the coaches of the other two California colleges, and the council hoped by its action to bring the necessary attention to the plan im-

"We have be come educated to view such things without having any inward inhibitions, for it is the same as when the leg had its "day," the ankle was no longer a thing of curiosity, explained the Doctor.

Then Dr. Mount contends that with the longer dress, people will have a tendency to again return to a state where the upper limb will be a matter of masculine curiosity because it is obscured from view; and people will again begin to as-sume an artificiality of moral goodness by neither attempting to be interested in more than the ankle and on the other side being carefu not to show more than an ankle, but feling much the opposite at-titude. In this way a reversal of morality standards might be at-

"Although vigorously not advo-cating such a situation, if we were to come to a stage of complete nudity in the same stages of evolution that we have progressed from the ankle to the knee, we would not feel any self-consciousness or be any more 'sex' minded than we are today," contended Dr. Mount.
"I don't think that the present generation is any worse than its predecessors. In fact the young lady of today is farther along the road to ideal womanhood than any of her past generations. The co-ed of today, in general, is better groomed, better looking, healthier, and more alert. She is less reticent and self-conscious than her predecessors of unhealthy clothing and assumed artificiality," concluded Dr. Mount.

WHAT YOUNGER COLLEGE MEN ARE DOING WITH WESTINGHOUSE

LIGHTNING HAS LONG BEEN A COSTLY-RAIDER OF POWER LINES

Wild lightning meets his master . . .

REMEMBER how you used to sit on the porch during a thunderstorm and shudder just a little at the forces that seemed to tear open the sky and shake the hills? Electrical men have often shuddered in grave seriousness over those same forces. For lightning has been a costly raider of power lines.

Now, however, many means of defense are available, and many more are being developed. Science has been studying lightning, and experimenting with it. Down in the mountains of Tennessee a group of Westinghouse men? have been making photographic records of the voltages developed by lightning, with the cathode-ray oscillograph and the klydonograph. Guided by their findings, another group in New Jersey is enabled to reproduce lightning artificially, and study its effects on a hightension line. And in East Pittsburgh, with a generator that will produce lightning strokes equivalent to 35,000,-000 horse-power and with a laboratory that duplicates power line conditions, others are learning new facts about the behavior of protective devices.

Much of this work is carried on by young men recently out of college. Their achievements will save millions for power companies, and eliminate many hazards to life in substation operation.

Lightning jumps the gap between these Westinghouse arcing horns, and spares the insulators.

Something On The Hair Sir?

C ENIORS are not pessimistic as a class but if there are any in a university who have cause to reel a little less enthusiastic about life, liberty and the pursuit of an honest living it is those who are soon to go into the home stretch of the four year race against myriads of professors of all sorts and descriptions, quizzes good, bad and indifferent, mostly bad, and side-line distractions by the bleacher-full. Freshmen enter coilege much as a boy goes into a barber shop for the first time. It is an experience he has heard much about from his big brothers and elder companions. The surroundings seem strangely pleasant, the force willing and the expected result the realization of high ambitions. After the young man has been in a barber chair a number of times he discovers that a haircut isn't quite such a distinction after all-its about time to get a public shave. The shaving is accomplished and a barber shop is no longer a place of awe. Hair cutting and shaving are from then on mere matters of social habit. Magazines and gossip are much more interesting in the barber shop than the operations of the tonsorial artists.

The senior is the fellow, figuratively speaking, who has run the gamut of thave, shampoo, finger wave, singe, haircut, massage, shoe shine, and manicure. He is helped out of the chair and brushed down. He gazes at himself in the mirror and says to himself "Pretty swell looking chap, that guy in there." He pays his bill; the door closes behind him as the barber yells "Next." For a time the radiant glow of soft skin and pleasant porfume keeps the subject self assured and confident. Then the whiskers start to sprout again—but there is no shop for the senior to find relief in. It's the old straight edge from now on and not much

This is a jumbled sort of a parable. Substitute if you can a faculty for the barber, various courses for the ablutions, a diplomt for the more or less gratifying reflection in the polished glass, and you will have a picture of a graduate leaving college. Exaggerated it is, to be

Reports from Pocatello are to the effect that fans in the southern part of the state are getting-rather were getting-enthusiastic about the University of Idaho at Pocatello, an institution which does not exist and never will.

After drawing blood on the university eleven the Tigers seemed bitterly disappointed not to continue on to victory. The branch was practically out-classed in every department but local prejudice of ardent my hose straight, 61, wait till I supporters in Pocatello and vicinity is stirring up unfounded pride and prejudice—pride in a team that "almost won from the Vandals," and prejudice against the true university because it is so far away from the education and the fore of gravity.

The University of Idaho is proud of its young and inexperienced diat Pocatello in much the same way that a fraternity takes price in its pledges. An occasional rebuff to put freshmen in their places is we common method of dealing with pledges that assume a little too cocky an attitude. The institution at Pocatello is reminded that it is not The University of Idaho unless the Southern Branch suffix is added to the title.

When Brotherhood Was In Flower

OKLAHOMA DAILY: Within the past five years has been an appalling increase in the number of "joiners" on this campus. More and more students every year join organizations because they are interested or enthusiastic about the particular body, but chiefly for the sake of "belonging," or what is still more likely, for the peculiar satisfaction derived from having a lengthy list of names beneath their pictures in the year book.

Such members not only derive little or no benefit from their affiliations, but in turn injure the organizations to which they belong. If they are conscientious they at best attend a bare minimum of meetings while the large majority even do not take as much interest as that.

In view of the fact that the "joiner" injures the organizations to which he belongs more than he does himself, it is clearly the place of the crders themselves to prevent his membership. Some organizations have already taken steps in this direction by raising the standard for convenient to the powers that be. membership. Others are planning similar measures to be effective within the next year. The activity hound is no longer wanted within the next year. The activity hound is no longer wanted.

The recent snowstorm brings to Miss Bessle Claire was a dinner mind fun of a different sort than guest of Delta Delta Delta Tues-The recent snowstorm brings to Idaho students have indulged in so far this winter. A sleigh, a team of stout horses to pull it, and bells jingling in the night air are pleasant things to think about. Perhaps after Christmas vacation old man winter will be kind enough to send a flurry of snow that will make it possible to realize these anticipations.

In the meantime dancing continues to be the chief form of recreation, with many different kinds on the calendar. The "hokum" dance which Alpha Tau Omega will give tonight is causing much speculation because no one knows just what kind of affair a "hokum" party would be. No doubt a surprise is waiting for those who will be there.

Two "hick" dances are scheduled for tomorrow evening. The Sigma Alpha Epsilon "49'ers" dance and Tau Kappa Epsilon Apache dance were given for the first time four years ago. Cowpunchers, prospectors, farm hands, dancing girls, bowery women, and "lowbrow" characters of various sorts are impersonated at these annual "hops." A saloon or dive of some sort usually provides a setting which stimulates the dancers into a delightfully informal mood and makes for a good time.

An upperclassmen dinner dance is on the calendar for this weekend. Pi Beta Phi juniors and seniors will have their Christmas dinner tonight.

Four informal dances give evidence that many of the groups are anxious to squeeze in just one more party before Christmas vacation. Kappa Kappa Gamma, Hays Hall, and Tau Mem Aleph are included among these groups. Senior Hall and the L. D. S. seminary will have their dance together.

Aldon Tall, A.S.U.I. president, and George Huber, vice-president, Idaho delegates to the fifth annual conference of the National Student Federation to be held at Stanford university, January 1, 2, 3, 4 will meet with representatives from 250 universities and colleges throughtout the United States. Organized at Princeton university in 1925 for the purpose of stimulating student interest in world peace, the federation has since been enlarging rapidly into an effective organiza-tion where national as well as in-ternational problems are intelligently discussed. Hear Prominent Speakers

At each congress learned men eminent in their fields, speak to the delegates on problems common on every campus and offer remedies and solutions for them. Among the activities of the federation last the activities of the federation last year was the sponsoring of the Oxford debate team tour to the United States and the establishment of student tours through Europe.

The discussions of the various groups of delegates will deal with student government, honor codes or systems, athletics, fraternites, non-fraternity organizations, compulsory military training, publications, campus politics, and their problems, all from the viewpoint of the student. Solutions will be sought for these problems and any others that might arise.

Last years' meeting was held at the University of Missouri. The delegates will return to the campus immediately following the conference.

The first snowfall of the year is almost always welcome, but last inght, at the house of Kappa Sigma, it proved disastrous to several. Pandemonium reigned about 11:20, when the frosh playing their trump card, carried out an old tradition and immersed the president in a conglomeration of water, snow, and cigarette butts. This did not prove to be a wise move, for it was retroactive and the frosh had a taste of "you've buttered your own bread, now lie in it." Shortly after, they likewise were ready for the river, into which they were conducted by Bunny (Joe Klutz) Walker, the victure of the last day of school.
