Emancipation For Males In Sight

The introduction of a camp cookery course at Oregon State college is just another step toward the complete independence of man. We think that through education, his emancipation will be gradually effected. It took almost half-a-century of education to bring about woman suffrage. Only once woman had gained her independence, it took her about five minutes to start dominating. While she was gaining power, man was losing it. No longer does the male rule the house. Many a wretched fellow has to take undue abuse from his wife, because he knows how to cook only two things; fried eggs and scrambled eggs. And many a fellow has unwillingly entered the state of matrimony for the same reason. But education, with the home economics department in the vanguard, should remedy this. Teach the man how to cook and you will make him independent. Washington State college has a course similar to the one at Oregon, and men students at Idaho are only waiting for camp cookery to make its appearance here before they start registering in droves. More and more are realizing every day the eminence of a new freedom for men.

A Line of Tripe or Two

Yes, we could use a few contributions. If you have a yen for making black marks on white paper, if one of the Muses frequently sits behind your chair dictating poetry, if you've heard a good original gag, pun or joke, you too may be a literary success over-night. Your stuff may be just the tripe.

SPRING POME

Professors pedantic,
Students romantic,
Hail the coming of spring.
They're all soporific,
I'm philosophic,
I have no praises to sing.

Then there is the Kappa pledge who thinks a man who sells doughnuts is a wholesaler.

It's an old story but one which bears repeating. The three stages in the development of man, according to an examination paper once received by the university psychology department, are infancy, adolescence and adultery.

AMBITION

I want to be a financier
And have a million grand—
I'd like to have my residence
The greatest in the land;
But still I have a longing
For the little things of life.
Like eating dirt and soup and peas
Upon greasy knife.
—Daily Californian.

TWINKLE, TWINKLE, LITTLE STAR, HOW I WONDER WHERE IN HELL YOU'VE BEEN FOR THE LAST FOUR OF WEEKS.

We point with pride to the passing of the white snow, but view with alarm the coming of the brown snow.

Said the Prof: You can't do that.
Said the Stud: The hell I can't, as he continued to extract the cork from a bottle of Sloan's Liniment.

A SHORT DOGLET

(in two parts)
Time—Near the post.
Place—648.0088 Cent.
Atmosphere—a pound and a half of this please.
Why—Dogs will.

Act the first
Have one on me, said one dog to another.
No thanks, said the other dog. I just had one on the house.

Act the second
Have one on me said the other dog to the one dog.
I don't care for some, said the one dog, as he lifted one.

AFTER I'VE WENT

There was an emotion called love. And sometimes I walk in my sleep. It comes and it goes like a dove. Without ever making a peep. This could continue for ever as above.

THE LAST WORD

"You don't look so tough to me, you big ape."

A freshman at the University of Chicago wrote in an examination, "Only God knows the answer to these questions," his paper was returned marked, "God gets an A; you get an F."

CHANNING POLLOCK DECLARES MODERN LITERATURE FALSE

Crowd That Creates Drama and Literature Not Normal

Modern literature does not represent life honestly, according to Channing Pollock, author of a half dozen or more plays, the latest of which is "The House Beautiful." "Why," he said here recently, "I know more people than anyone outside politics, I think, and not one of them is neurotic. Yet the characters in the modern drama are neurotic, unnatural, and strained. The fault lies with the authors. The crowd which creates literature and drama is not normal."

"It cannot be denied that people are noble, romantic, and self-sacrificing. But even if there were no nobility, no romance, no self-sacrifice, literature would invent them. Without them life would be unendurable. When it was first discovered earn profits, a wave of it spread

On July 4, 1882, the first number of the Moscow Mirror came off the press. It has the reputation of never having missed an issue.

In December 1902, the Jolly brothers sold it to W. D. Smith. When he first took charge of the paper it was a five column, four page paper.
