An Open Letter To Next Year's Editor

As Volume XXXIX of The Idaho Argonaut rolls off the press it is with a feeling of sadness coupled with bits of satisfaction and regret that I turn the editor's chair to you next fall. Your position will be one of extreme responsibility. It will be one that you should be able to fill as adequately as any editor the Argonaut has known.

The two semesters now rapidly moving into history have seen many changes on the Idaho campus, not only of physical nature with the advent of a new stadium, golf course, and buildings, but of a social and psychological nature as well. Ideas are changing, and with them customs long in force in "little" colleges. The University of ldaho is rapidly growing out of the small school class, is assuming the appearance and qualities of larger universities: As representative of Idaho students and their activities, the Argonaut is due for change also. Better staff organization, free and unbiased use of news columns, closer cooperation between the paper and classes in journalism, more editions per week—these are all goals to work toward during th coming year.

Characterized by general unrest, the past year has been vital in many phases of college life, to the Argonaut and publications in particular. The exact position of rules, of authority, and responsibility has caused much comment and publicity. These things are evidence of the transition period in which the university now finds itself.

It is one that is not over on June 13. You, as editor, will have to cope with similar situations next year. Don't be influenced by the nearness of the events, but keep an eye on the broad aspect of things. Which is all very easy to say, but considerably harder to do.

If success has been attained by Volume XXXIX, it is due to the excellent cooperation and enthusiasm of the present Argonaut staff, which, as a member, you know full well. Even though chance for advancement has been narrow, and the possibility of obtaining one of the more luctative staff positions slim, the staff has worked long and faithfully. They have worked for the sheer love of newspeper activity. This spirit is commendable.

Remember that the staff and the paper are more important than any individual. The Argonaut is not the editor's papers, but belongs to all the students in the university. It is your duty to serve them.

So, with one more issue to appear, Volume XXXIX will soon be gathering dust in the files.

Good luck to you, Jack.

A good job waits to be done well.

Official announcement from the office of Cap Horton, graduate manager, declared the Idaho-Montana dual track and field met, originally scheduled for next Saturday, indefinitely postponed

Because the season was virtually completed with the running of last Saturday's Coast conference championships, and because the meet would interfere with the revised examination schedule, it was deemed best to postpone it indefinitely.

Baseball, as originally developed, has become a part of America. It would be a shame to drop it as a typical Yankee sport after nearly a century of play. Let's keep the softball game for the middle-aged business man, and keep baseball as "thin king of sports."

The ability of Washington State college to compete so sucessfully with the California track men who have no weather problems, can be attributed greatly to the large field house the Cougars are endowed with.

Principal reason for the difference in track teams from the southern and northern divisions in the coast conference must be chalked up to weather. There is no doubt but that athletesfr om this region could be as successful as the southern boys if given an opportunity to train the year around.

Washington State has aided the situation for her tracksters by providing them with emple space in which to train throughout the winter months. Idaho has men of equal ability, but they are given the undeserved handicap of poor training facilities.

Forced to start training as late as February or March, the Vandal tracksters even then cannot get outdoors until a week before their first dual meet. Obviously, they have not had the principal counter attacks: The time that the point arrives jumper, were the only Idaho eighth place among the ten time to practice starts on the ground, and, of course, they have Time Thrust and the Stop Fencing rules declare that a entries in last Saturday's Pa- conference schools. > Idaho's coaches in baseball, basketball, football, track, wrestling, boxing, fencing, tennis, and cross country have all come to the one conclusion that what Idaho needs most of all for her athletes is a field house. Needless to say, the men who represent Idaho in the athletic world want and need such a building. Students and alumni want their team on top in the athletic world, yet none of them have came to the aid of Vandal athletics in this respect. Certainly nothing finer could be done by alumni groups than to give the school a field house. Is there no group who will take steps to bring this much needed addition to the campus?
