Service Representatives To Explain Status Of Reserve Programs

A board of officers made up of representatives of the army, army air corps, navy V-1, navy V-7, and marine corps...

A one-hour assembly for all men students will be held in the university auditorium at 8 a.m. on October 21, at which time each representative will explain a part of the program.

No questions will be answered at that time, but the officers will be stationed in offices in the administration building that day and the day following.

Individual departments will still be able to use the recorder, and much of the bother that entailed use of the unit in the past will be done away with under the new scheme.

This elaborate procedure has always involved added expense and extra work which the new plan would do away with.

George's scheme also included a special committee which would arrange for programs, and handle the machine, placing responsibility for the unit on definite shoulders...

His interest in the project was personal, he admitted—he has worked in radio stations and has handled similar recorders, and probably would be the logical man to put in charge of the unit.

It has long been a thorn in the side of central and southern Idaho that the university should have been located so near the extreme tip of the state, and away from the most densely populated centers.

Blessed with an outstanding college of agriculture and one of the top forestry schools in the U. S., along with the home economics department which regularly advances information and research...

October 22nd Elections Will Decide Class Officer Positions

FINAL DATE

Saturday, October 17, 1942 will be the final date for removal of incomplete grades from previous semesters, stated Miss Ella L. Olesen, registrar, this week.

Unless special action is taken in advance, re-registration in a course for which a mark of incomplete has been filed automatically changes the incomplete to a failure.

Wherever a crowd gathers on the University of Idaho campus or in Moscow, we'll have Minute Maids on duty, Buff Walker, organizer of the university Minute Maid group, said Wednesday.

So far only six of the 12 houses and halls have reported names of the women they have elected to represent them.

Dean Lattig Talks To Lions Club

H. E. Lattig, dean of men, traced the problems which have faced the college students down through the years from 1918 until the present time at a meeting of the Moscow Lions club Tuesday noon at the Moscow hotel.

The dean pointed out that college men have always had perplexing problems since the first war; either war problems, depression problems or boom time problems.

He discussed the reserve program at the university and said Idaho students have enlisted in the navy, naval aviation, army, army air corps, marines and the coast guard.

Students have been bewildered by the various turns of events since they know whether to enlist or to carry Pearl Harbor, he said.

He said that not more than a dozen Idaho men have tried to enlist in the reserves in order to dodge the draft.

He said that not more than a dozen Idaho men have tried to enlist in the reserves in order to dodge the draft. They are sincere in doing the best thing for their country and will go cheerfully when their country calls them, he said.

The Everlasting Theme

Journalists and columnists are crying every day about the need for America to wake up and face the war. We're here, they say, asleep; we don't know what we're in.

At first appearance, Vandalltown might be classed in the above category. But after a few weeks here, most of us realize that all is not as it was in 1938 or 1939. There are those differences, not visible to the naked eye, which the collegian of three or four years is sure to notice.

Most important, there is a decided shift in the men-women ratio. It's about two men for every woman now, which is an average quite below former, recent years. Where have all the men gone? Your roomie of last year hasn't come back; the football team hasn't the men it thought it had; you hear of four or five men leaving your house in one week; one of your best friends enlists, and so it goes. The University of Idaho has sent some 350 men into the service since the draft began.

Most of the men and many women worked in defense industries this summer. Projects all over the country had Idaho personnel. Shipyards, plane factories, training stations, munitions factories and other industries essential to defense had Idaho and women on their payrolls.

Pledge sneaks, annual picnic plans and other forms of entertainment which consume tire rubber have given way to the everlasting theme; Victory. In these and other devious ways, Idaho is doing its part.

What To Do

It occurred to some of us gals the other day that we have done practically nothing toward the war effort since school started. Of course, with the rush week whirl and classes to hit our time has been rather limited, but not is the time to start thinking a bit. A little reading matter on the war wouldn't hurt us, either.

Leading educators agree that it is enough for us to further our education, for in the future education will count. All that is undisputed, but most of us sit around and gripe about the "situation" without knowing exactly what any specific situation is. Ask nine out of ten campus cuties what position the Russians are holding at the moment and they'll answer, "A heck of a position." Why don't we start reading the newspapers once in a while?

If you're at a loss for something to do, here are just a few suggestions. The A.W.S. is sponsoring a surgical dressing unit organized by the Red Cross. There is a local U.S.O., and Red Cross sewing rooms. If you'd prefer doing something at home, there are always sweaters to knit.

We might even drink one less coke a day and buy some war stamps.

Campus Activities

Find school boring you? Homesickness setting in? Getting poor grades? The cure is activities and now is the time to start.

The Argonaut, the Gem, the athletic teams, dramatics, debate, and the music organizations, to mention only a few, all need more students to complete their rosters. These activities need not detract from study hours for the time used would probably be wasted anyway. School interest should pick up because you have something to work for—no time for loafing or daydreaming.

Often it is these outside activities which will determine your life work or interest. Contacts made may help you secure a job after graduation for those persons receiving the best recommendations are those students who combine their good grades with numerous campus activities which have developed his or her leadership ability.

Sororities now require each pledge to engage in at least four campus activities. The idea sounds good and should be carried into halls and fraternities. Of course if all of your time is given to studying, eating and sleeping this editorial does not apply. However, if you find yourself "wasting any time take heed and take up an activity."

Communique Comment

Reports from China indicate that the recent visit of Mr. ... the Kuomintang Party that are trying to force Chiang Kai-shek to make peace with Japan. The appeasement blunders at Chungking center around War Minister Ho Ying-chin and are composed of generals and politicians who see profit for themselves in an armistice and who resent the pro-American influence of Madame Chiang Kai-shek over her husband.

The position of Chiang within the Kuomintang is that of an umpire-between rival factions rather than that of an all-powerful military dictator. Since the start of the Sino-Japanese war in 1937, the domestic and foreign policies of the Generalissimo have been marked by constant shifting and compromise. This uneven course can be explained by his determination to keep national unity in the face of the invaders. In this effort, Chiang makes bids for the support of reactionaries who fear a democratic China more than Japanese victory and of liberals who resent the one-party tyranny of the Kuomintang.

Free China in 1942 is still a long way from the democracy envisaged by the founder of the Kuomintang, Dr. Sun Yat-sen. With the aid of secret police on the Gestapo model, the Chungking regime has crushed freedom of the press and academic liberty in the universities. Political prisoners in large numbers have been confined in concentration camps for criticizing the fascist methods of the central executive. The national government cannot be called representative, for the People's Political Council (parliament) consists almost entirely of nominated delegates who are loyal members of the Kuomintang.

Chungking's concern over the growing power of the Communist Party within China seems at times to outweigh its anxiety over the future of China as an independent nation. The First Group Army, one of Chiang's crack units, is not being used to hold back the Japanese but is kept in the far northwest to watch the Red-controlled 18th Group (formerly 8th Route) Army. The Kuomintang fears the Communist Party because the latter has been the only Chinese political group to obtain wide support among the masses. Chiang's party has never succeeded in winning the good will of the poor peasants who form the bulk of China's population.

Officers Hold Tea For New Women

times weekly. One hour will be given to a lecture on hygiene, and three periods to body building exercises. The course will carry two credits and a lab fee of $1.50. Students taking this new course will make the necessary changes in schedules in their deans' offices.

Whenever possible, the hours for PE 37-a will be made to correspond with the hours now scheduled for basic military, with the hygiene lecture to be given at the fourth period on Thursdays.

Reserves Will Probably Stay

"Many of our students have been confused by stories appearing in the press and by statements of those who profess to know the outcome of the reserve program," Lattig stated. "It is true that the secretary of war stated that reserves may be called at the end of the current semester. He did not say that all would be called at that time and there is reason to believe that many who are doing satisfactory work will be told to continue with their college training.

"In view of the fact that college training is considered an important asset for officer training, it does not seem likely that a large percentage of our reservists will be called to active service during the year."

Freshmen May Play

Freshmen are now eligible to participate in varsity athletics in 12 Southeastern conference schools. Conference officials approved the move by a 9-3 vote with only Alabama, Tulane, and Kentucky against the proposal. A move to allow transfer students to play varsity athletics without losing a year of competition was rejected.

The new group of freshmen has a strong, well-conditioned body.

Those who do not keep faith with the army and navy and fail to make an honest effort to prepare themselves for positions of leadership will be recommended for active duty.

Can Be Called

The reserve corps was created by a joint army-navy-army air-corps-marine-coast guard board and not by the colleges. Thus, creation of the reserve corps by such a board implies that college men are invited to enlist, and by the same token it does not seem likely that the armed services will suddenly discard the plan and call reservists to active duty, Lattig noted.

Any enlisted reservist who withdraws from the university or who is dropped for scholastic reasons or misconduct will be called to active duty immediately.

Assembly Selects Candidates

The annual pre-election nominating assembly will be held tonight at 7:30 in the ASUT office of the student union building. ASUI President Harry Lewis announced yesterday. The assembly will be held, as stipulated in the ASUI constitution, for the purpose of putting candidates on the election ballot.

often enough to pay for the expense to which the school went when it purchased the recording unit.

Public Opinion

Dean of Men H. E. Lattig yesterday issued a roundup notice concerning different enlisted reserve programs currently being offered Idaho students by the army, army air corps, navy, and marines, in which he echoed a sentiment expressed by President Dale last week at the convocation assembly in Memorial gymnasium.

Blasting out at public opinion, which at times has made the college student the brunt of "draft dodger" hysteria, both Dale and Lattig explained that the reserve programs were not instituted by the schools of the United States, but by the officers of the armed forces. Obviously, if army and navy officers are asking students to stay in school and complete their education, it must be because the officers believe that these students will be more valuable to the army and navy when they've finished college.

And if any citizen thinks that the college-reserve setup the way it works now is merely a soft way to stay out of the army, Jason suggests that he come up here and try it.

Idaho Competes At Spokane In New Event

Idaho harriers will compete in a cross country carnival at Spokane, newly organized by the Athletic Round Table of that city, and tentatively set for November 23.

Arrangements for the meet are still incomplete, but ART bigwigs hope to use the meet as a medium of making the youth and the Pacific coast conscious of college physical fitness.

Idaho will send a full delegation of freshmen and varsity runners to the Spokane meet. Races will be held for high school boys, college freshmen, college varsity, and AAU trials.

Round Table representatives are making an effort to get the whole Pacific coast represented. Believing that cross country is the cheapest, oldest, and most natural of all sports, the Spokane sportsman's group is sponsoring the contest in an effort to awaken the youth of the coast to the benefits of this ancient sport.

Scene for the course probably will be one of the Spokane golf links or parks.

Qualifications for membership in Phi Eta Sigma, men's scholastic honorary, were announced this week by Ted Merrill, president of the organization.
