Thought for Scientists

Students majoring in any natural science or in engineering should carefully consider all sides of the issues involved befor enlisting in the reserve programs. It is no longer a problem of how to serve yourself but rather a problem of how to serve your country best. Industry requires trained engineers and scientists in order to supply the tools needed to equip the fighting forces. As shortages become more acute both in the armed forces and in industry, severe hardships will be caused in industry and production will be crippled, necessitating allocation of service engineers and scientists to the production lines.

As yet the federal government has taken no action to stop the diffusion of badly needed personnel into non-essential jobs. Leading educators and scientists have long pleaded for some sort of master control of the distribution of these men, perhaps similar to the plans in Canada and in Great Britain where all men trained in vital war occupations are registered and are subsequently placed in the most vital jobs. Such a plan must be enacted soon, for the present system of competition on the open market for trained men between the armed forcs, civil government and private industries has proven both wasteful of effort and results.

Unless the present trends are stopped, the war effort is in TODAY dire danger of being crippled due to a lack of trained engineers and scientists. Present army requirements call for terested at 5 p.m. in room 207, more men that can be trained plus the growing demand from Administration building, industry and civil government. Until government action, students must plan for their country's good and give deep thought before enlisting in the reserve programs.

This week's cabinet crisis in Chile is not the result o activity in Santiago by pro-Axis groups that are backed by Nazi agents. The unwillingness of large sections of the Chilean population to co-operate with Washington against the Axis is based upon a traditional national distrust of the Beatin' Round U. S.—and upon widespread Latin American suspicion that Yankeedom is fighting this war mainly to fasten imperialist like to pass it on . . . even if it chains upon Central and South America.

The Hoover and Roosevelt administrations ended the days of "Dollar Diplomacy" and withdrew the U.S. Marines from Nicaragua and Haiti in 1933-34. But Chileans remember with a sense of humiliation instances where Washington has used strong-arm methods to extort concessions from their own weak nation in the less recent past. The Atlantic Charter and the ringing words of Vice-President Wallace are regarded with some mistrust by more than a few Chileans because the Roosevelt-Hull good neighbor" policy in Latin America is still a tender vine of hothouse growth.

At the Rio conference of Latin American foreign ministers last January, Sumner Welles guaranteed aid and protection to our southern neighbors in return for their co-operation with the United States against the Axis and Japan. To date, the U.S. has hot sent to South America the planes, armaments and machinery that the republics of that continent had reason to expect. We have had to cut down on promised shipments to Latin America because of the demands of Britain, Russia, China and our own expanding military forces. This sitution is hard to explain to the Chilean people. There are rumors in Santiago that Uncle Sam wants South American help but will not give something in return.

PCC Situation Idaho lost last week: Maybe you didn't know. They lost by a 54-7 score, and that is the little point which brings us to our topic of discussion. Just how much longer are Pacific coast schools going to consider Idaho and Montana as members of the PCC league?

Montana has lost two conference starts, scoring 16 points to their opponent's 103. The Vandals have also lost two conference starts, and tallied seven points to 86 counters for opponents. We'll grant you that Montana isn't as bad as that 68-16 WSC score indicated, and that Idaho certainly isn't

Frosh Open Grid Season Against Grizzly Cubs

Initial start for the freshman football team and Guy Wicks as freshman coach will be made when twenty five freshmen travel to Kellogg tomorrow to meet the University of Montana yearlings in a night game scheduled to begin at 7 o'clock.

The freshmen will be fighting to continue the undefeated record set up by last year's freshman major sport teams. Wicks said last night. Yearling teams have defeated Montan twice in the last two years.

"We don't have enough men turning out, but those we do have are fine players and I expect a good game," Wicks said draft boards the freshmen lost two halfbacks in Tom Winbigler and Mel Weipert. Both men showed up well in early practices. Bob Barbour, halfback, cracked a rib and Joe Petillo, fullback; injured a knee while scrimmaging the varsity last week, but both were exected to play Friday night.

Jerry Williams, halfback, Rich Gardner, end, and Walt Hoffbohr, guard, are proving to be the most outstanding players on the team, Wicks said, "We don't know too Professor G. O. Baker, assistant much about Montana except that professor of agronomy, left this they are big and will probably reported.
