SPORTS GALORE

Although intercollegiate athletics are out as far as Army Specialized Training participation is concerned, there will be no lack of sports for ASTUs at the University of Idaho.

With the cooperation of the athletic department here, the army men are swinging into a fullfledged football program, According to present plans the first contest is slated for McNeal stadium on October 23.

There will be a team from each of the three companies and there are quite a few men around who have had previous college pigskin experience. This should give the games plenty of color and action.

In his statement yesterday, Badoglio promised to his countrymen the freedom to choose their own form of government after an unspecified time. During this vague interim period, the Italian press, radio, educational system, courts, and local and national administration will be largely under the control of the small minority of generals, industrialists and civil servants that stands behind Badoglio. This minority is the same group that sup-ported Il Duce willingly for over 20 years—until selfpreservation dictated a sudden swing to friendship with the conquering Allies. During the interim period, this minority will be certain to use its wide powers to curtail the activities of those Italian political leaders and parties who are striving to bring democracy to the penisula.
