

Jason expresses enthusiastic approval of the latest venture of the Associated Women Students' council. Yesterday AWS President Bette French appointed a committee to investigate and straighten out the tangled maze of activity point systems.

Mysterious System
Many students have probably never heard of an activity point system; fewer still have ever seen one or have any idea how many points are received for participating in a certain activity. The point systems have been as carefully guarded as military maps coming to light only once each year when women's honoraries prepare to light new members. These mysterious point systems are merely a rather complicated method that two of the women's honoraries use to determine the quality and quantity of activities in which candidates for membership have participated.

Revision Needed
Jason believes that a fair point system will be a definite help in choosing those who have actually worked in activities for membership in these honoraries. However, the present point systems need considerable revision.

Cardinal Key's point system awards points twice for the same work—points are given for participation in debate and again for membership in Delta Sigma Rho, the honorary for students who do outstanding work in debate.

Encourages Joiners
More points can be accumulated through Cardinal Key's system by joining a large number of clubs than by concentrating on a single major activity. The system encourages "joiners" who sign up for many organizations and then attend meetings spasmodically, if at all.

Insufficient recognition is given to the amount of time and work devoted to the activity. Drama students working 70 to 80 hours per show are on a par with vice-presidents of church organizations. Page for the May Fete receives the same number of points as an editor of a section in the Gem.

Mortar Board's System
Mortar Board has a different system which is simpler. Activities are classified into five groups with five points awarded for a group five activity, etc. However, it's a little out of date. Theta Sigma, the local journalism honorary which hasn't had a meeting all year receives the same number of points as Spurs, the most active organization on the campus.

Jason Recommends:
1. That AWS committee members work out a single, flexible point system to be used by Cardinal Key, Mortar Board, and Spurs (which doesn't use a point system now).

2. That the system establish maximum and minimum point values for each office and refer the actual awarding of points to president or advisor of the activity who knows best how much work the candidate has done.

3. That instead of awarding points to officers who may or may not be the most active in the club, the point schedule recognize hard working members and committee chairmen.

4. That fewer points be awarded for offices gained through political pressure and more for participation in music, drama, publications and debate, activities which are rather slighted under the present system.

5. That AWS discourage women from participating in more than one major activity. Women have managed to amass an amazing number of points under the present system. Jason is inclined to believe that overburdened activity women are more the result of trying to fit a campus activity schedule, built for a student body of 2700, into a group one-third as large as the point system itself.

In straightening out the point system, AWS has undertaken a difficult job. We'll be anxious to see the result!

Library Has Rare Collection Of Souvenirs And Relics

By GENEVA FERGUSON
Most students do not realize that the books and articles displayed from time to time in the glass cases at the entrance to the library represent only a small part of the interesting collection which the library staff has in its files. Pictures of early days on the campus, Argonauts, programs, cups, and even outdated costumes have accumulated through the years.

Debate Medal
Of particular interest at this time is the first Watkins medal, a large gold cross bearing the state seal which was given by Dr. Watkins, a local physician, to the winner of debate in 1896. Mrs. Florence Corbett Johnston, who presented it to the university about eight years ago. Incidentally, Dr. Watkins is the central figure in "Buffalo Coat," a new book by his granddaughter, Mrs. Carol Ryrie Brink, who was a former resident of Moscow and student at the university.

NINE MONTHS OF WORK for 58 ASTR students ended in graduation exercises this morning. The ceremony marked the official end of their stay on the university campus, and their work in university classrooms.

Having reached the age of 18 and completed their scholastic work, the young men are ready to go on active duty with the army, not as soldiers with books, but as soldiers with guns. The age of 18 marks the end of one career and the beginning of another. It marks the end of classical life and the beginning of the strident life of a soldier.

Experiences at the university will aid the young men in bridging the gap between civilian life and the army. It has helped make them aware of the task that lies before them. It will not be an easy task, but they will be better prepared due to their training at the university.

In short months they will embark for points all around the world, trained men carrying the weapons of death.

Students should offer their congratulations to the graduates on their completion of studies, and extend their hearts in the hope for a speedy end to the conflict that is calling them away.

Communique Comment

Two weeks ago the first crack in Germany's defenses east of the Rhine was made when a small detachment of First Army doughboys crossed the river and secured their bridgehead. At that time no one could have foretold the mass collapse of the German line. Allied armies had barely recovered the territory lost to the Germans in the Belgian breakthrough. Our advantage at Remagen was brilliantly exploited, however, as troops and material were poured across the Rhine, German resistance crumbled with astonishing rapidity. With this cue to the enemy's weakness, the well-equipped armies of Generals Montgomery and Patton proceeded in their crossings of the river, respectively to the north and south of the First Army's line. The news since then has told of such lightning drives that communiqes are rendered obsolete even as they are issued.

General Patton's Third Army, having crossed the Rhine in the vicinity of Coblenz, has swept on to cross the Main and enter the city of Frankfurt. The First Army has captured Limburg, 30 miles to the north, while to the rear of the front lines these two armies have joined forces at Coblenz. Specific activities of the British, Canadian and American armies to the north have been concealed for reasons of security, but reports announce that the British Second Army has broken the German line and is racing ahead virtually unopposed. The American Ninth Army, engaged in the Ruhr industrial area, is apparently meeting stiffer resistance than is being encountered in other sectors.

While elation in the allied drive is justified, it should not be imagined that Germany's defeat will be immediate. A decisive victory has been won on the east bank of the Rhine. The German line has been crushed. But the present weakness of German defensive operations will not continue indefinitely, nor can the present speed of our advance be maintained over too long a period. Military analysts have stated that an offensive drive can be sustained only to a length of about 175 miles before a stop must be made for a supply line to be put in operation. If the Allied Armies continue to advance at their present speed, this limit will soon have been reached. There is still a lot of territory between the eastern and western fronts in which the Germans may be expected to put up some tough resistance.

Forensic Meet To Be Held Here

Annual Pacific Forensic three-day session will be held on the campus April 19, 20, 21, Dr. A. E. Whitehead, chairman of the local arrangements, announced.

The purpose of these sessions, which were begun in 1928, Dr. Whitehead explained, is to discuss contemporary problems of a controversial nature out of school.

Variety of Speech Work

Included in the session will be a round-table discussion on such problems as "what type of post-war organizations should be established?" There will also be oratorical, extemporaneous, and after-dinner contests held during the meeting.

The 13 schools in the Pacific league will be represented from Arizona, California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.

Calendar's Events Gets Bright Spot

With the cooperation of the Argonaut editors, the Student Activities board decided to feature the events Calendar each week in a prominent spot in the Argonaut. The action was prompted, according to Elaine Anderson, chairman, by students' complaints that there seemed to have been no definite policy regarding the calendar. All organizations are urged to submit items regularly for the calendar since it will appear in each issue.

Also at the first activities board meeting Lucille Thompson was appointed to take charge of the records on the nickelodeon in the bucket lounge, while Betty Ann Craggs is to supervise the exhibits in the student union.

Veteran Serves In Sicily, Italy and Africa

Listed among the names of freshmen in the class of 1940 is 28-year-old Dwain Gochnour, former forester and farmer but more recently of the army infantry and points abroad. Hailing from Burley, Dwain is taking advantage of his G.I. rights and is aiming for his sheepskin. Not long ago he was aiming for the best of the German army in the seventh army drive through Italy.

With Patton In Africa

Modest Gochnour first got his baptism to fire in November, 1942, when his outfit made the original landing on the coast of Africa, after concentrated naval fire by French warships. His outfit landed at Fideala, a suburb of Casablanca in French Morocco, while the French ships renewed their bombardment tactics. He was a battalion supply sergeant, and his job was to keep the supplies moving up to the front lines to his outfit, a branch of General Patton's 5th army. Finally on the third day after they landed the enemy action was stopped and Casablanca fell. All this time Gochnour was busy running supplies of ammunition and rations to the front and dodging shells.

Jeep Lessons

After the fall of Casablanca his outfit received the surprise of their lives when they were assigned to teach the captured French soldiers how to use American weapons and vehicles. Gochnour said he'd rather face French artillery fire than go through the agony of teaching a Frenchman to drive a U. S. jeep. Gochnour casually mentions the battles of Tunisia and Mateur, and Bizerte, where his outfit was hit with everything the Italians and the Germans could lift to throw. Hardened by warfare, his outfit was selected to land on Sicily. The going was rough, he claims, but the enemy was finally battered down.

Awarded Bronze Star

It was during this campaign that Sgt. Gochnour was awarded the bronze star for maintaining supplies and personally driving trucks to the front under exceptionally heavy fire. In one phase of the battle his group lost 9 vehicles through land mines, driving their trucks with sandbags on the floor boards to keep the shrapnel from coming through. He mentioned finding Italian soldiers chained to their heavy machine guns.

At Anzio

After Sicily, he landed at Salerno on the coast of Italy, and spent 72 days of fighting on the road to Cassino. His outfit was withdrawn and sent to make the original landings at Anzio. Dwain admits the only casualty the first day was a fellow infantryman who stumbled into a fox hole and broke his leg. The days following proved just the opposite; German troops moved from other sectors soon outnumbered the Americans. Sgt. Gochnour was wounded by shrapnel while taking replacements to the front lines.

His stay at the hospital included a bombing by a German plane and he was sent back to duty. Dwain Gochnour was relieved of duty after the Rome breakthrough and was sent to this country for further hospitalization and separation from the service.

RECORD RAMBLINGS

By BETTE FAYE SOLBERG

Since most of us come in contact with the music of the name bands of the country almost every day we don't know too much, on the average, about these bands and some of the songs they plug. Oh, I admit that some of us buy a copy of Down Beat once in a while, thumb through it, and then toss it aside with a Hmmm-I-didn't-know-that-about-T. Dorsey, look on our faces.

Glenn Miller's Saxophonist

How many of you knew that Hal McIntyre was lead saxophonist in Glenn Miller's civilian band three years ago? He left Miller's band with the express purpose of organizing his own jive crew. Now after three years of actual practice with his own band, McIntyre is considered a "name" attraction all over the U. S.

Hal McIntyre has a long-term contract with Victor recording and is finding that his platters are becoming more and more popular. For example, his latest release of "Sentimental Journey," is hitting the high marks in music sales departments all over the country.

The latest plans of the "walking" melody crew is an overseas trip, probably to the Pacific area. McIntyre will leave some time in April, it is reported, and expects the whole excursion will last about a year.

There is very likely a simple explanation for this one: Pat Haight and Irene Daffer being pushed, pulled, shoved and bodily carried from Forney to Christmas by Lewis Lavigne and Don Kamp, respectively, one lovely evening. RASPBERRY BUSH

Timorously extending a pale green leaf into the searing winds of student criticism, the Raspberry Bush takes its place at the bottom of the huge crater where once grew its less barb-atic predecessor, the Mulberry Bush. If a bush can hope, this Bush sure hopes to flower with that stuff called "humor" just as found in students' lives—gleamed from those who take the curved walks from Sweet to Hays as well as those that walk the straight diagonal from the campus steps. And so with the chatter.

G.I. REPORT

Hungry?

Pvt. Bill Fibush of the Idaho club was recently admitted to the infirmary. This may seem unimportant to most people, but it turned out to be a big experience for Bill. He was admitted to help cure a stomach disorder and as a result his diet included such tasty bits as soup and toast. Bill claims that he has spent seven weeks now stretching his stomach to accommodate the food at chow. Now he says, "I'm dying of malnutrition!"

New Officers

Company B changed cadet officers last week. Pvt. Bob Wilson, who we served faithfully for six weeks as acting company commander, is now relieved of his duties by Pvt. Richard Shebler, and Pvt. Bill Fibush was replaced by Pvt. James as the first sergeant. The new platoon leaders are Pvt. George Edwards, Pvt. Roy Green, Pvt. Willard Chinn, and Pvt. Robert Clauson.

Cuts in quantity cookery. "Sure were swell. Look! They don't break." . . . If you have a good friend on the faculty, you may find out that the sand in the street by Morrill hall, and the bricks at the end of the white building recently vacated by the navy indicate fireplaces in the faculty club under construction. D. D. DuSault, registrar, was overheard to observe that there would be only nickel and dime machines, though . . . New toys have a fatal fascination for many, even if it requires shortening periods so that the whole university may enjoy the rattle. (With due apologies to Steinway.)

The gals may be going in for bangs, but the guys are coming out with crew-cuts. Orthographers note: the expression "heinic" denoting a type of coiffure is definitely out this season; however, some circles recognize "teutonic" with a similar connotation. But take a gander at the queer birds whose shorn locks leave a threadbare scalp open to sunburn. Take a bow, Fijis.

Probably it goes with being a journalist. But the trip to Boise also taught Carol Cone something about games of five-card hands. Well, Carol, what sort of an expression is a "poker face," anyway? And when used?

Conference Holds Annual Meeting

from Graduate Manager Earl V. Foster, WSC, that the Pacific coast conference annual meeting is being scheduled for the Davenport hotel, Spokane, on June 11 and 12, at which time the university and WSC will be co-hosts. Representatives of 10 Pacific

Smith has sacrificed his silky locks of hair in order to prove that he really had a head on his shoulders. He won, and incidentally, we hear he didn't lose entirely by the deed. He is said to have been regarded with a little "let-tuce." Anyhow, we have a shining light to guide us through the darkness.

Thanks

Professor and Mrs. A. B. Lamm invited those of the graduating ERC's who had been in one of Professor Lamm's physics classes for the past three ASTR terms, to attend a reception to be held at his residence. It was a very enjoyable affair, and an excellent example of the fine comradeship that developed between a popular professor and his students. As a reciprocating gesture, the N-30-A's presented him with a pipe in the hopes that when he uses it he will remember them.

OSC and Stanford U.

It has been officially stated that fourth-term ERC's will go to either Oregon State college at Corvallis, or Stanford university at Palo Alto, depending upon which curriculum they are taking. N-30-A's will go to Stanford; B-60 students will go to Oregon State, and all men will report to their new bases not later than 11 a. m. April 3.

Alumna Inspects Fighter Arms

Former University of Idaho student, Tech/Sgt. Dudley B. Cameron, is now serving in the army air forces as an armament inspector for P-51 Mustang fighter planes.

It is his duty, in this eighth air force base in England, to inspect, check upon, and supervise, the work on the caliber .50 guns of the P-51 Mustang fighter.

Once a month he must supervise the inspection of all aircraft of the group and keep the armament of the planes in good firing order.

Sergeant Cameron, whose home town is Challis, was a science instructor in the Plummer high school, before his entrance into the army air force. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cameron. His present group, the 479th, is in the second air force division based in England.

Summer School To Feature Special Courses

June 11 marks the opening of the university summer term, reorganized this year with combination of the formerly separate six and nine weeks periods. Special goal of the session will be aid to veterans, teachers, and students expecting to leave for the armed services.

Included in the enlarged curriculum offered are courses designed to keep pace with recent educational developments. Courses given for the first time will be global geography, school and community nutrition, physical fitness in high schools, painting, educational law, and regional literature.

New Features
In addition to the new courses, three special features will be introduced at the session. Reorganization of courses of study will be explained under expert guidance to teachers and school administrators in the new curriculum workshop. Workers in a home economics education workshop will study major problems of their professional field. Opportunity to work with professional authors of the northwest will be given to students of creative writing enrolled in a writer's workshop.

Flexible Language Program
Following the stress put on language courses by the army training program, a flexible program of language and literature will be offered. Class lectures will be given in English with translation of the original text done by students. Those enrolling without sufficient background to translate may take the course for literature only.

Appearing in the curriculum of the law school for the first time will be a course in educational law, given by Dr. J. F. Weltzin. Dr. Weltzin taught one of the first courses of this type in 1929 at the University of North Dakota and later at the University of Wisconsin, Columbia University and the University of Denver. The course emphasizes a study of legal principles which apply to state and federal jurisdictions.

Play Production Course
Of special interest to students enrolling in dramatics will be the play production course, designed to give experience in selection and production of plays. Concluding the course is a production corresponding to summer theatre plays.

Applications for admission should be filed before registration days to prevent delay in registering.

Elmer Beth Heads Journalism School

The former head of journalism classes at the university, Elmer Beth, is now head of one of the country's newest schools of journalism located at the University of Kansas.

The school, which has only recently been elevated from a departmental status, has been named the William Allen white school of journalism, after one of the country's most noted journalists.

"With a name like that, it just can't be ordinary," Mr. Beth has said. He left Idaho in 1940.

Post Office Warns About War Mail

Many students are writing to prisoners of war and are indulging in a practice that means their letters are never delivered, the university post office warned.

Do not put stamps on the letters. Even though instructions on special stationery say to do so, don't. The stamps are not necessary. Air mail stamps will not hasten delivery, for all such mail goes by air anyway. And a stamp may actually prevent the letter from reaching its destination, because many of the stamps have war slogans on them—"Win the War" for example. And the nations with which we are at war will not deliver mail bearing such stamps.

To make sure prisoner of war mail goes through, get special stationery from the post office and use no stamp.

Former S.A.E. Gives Life In Battle

Lt. William Zahora, 21, was killed in action on January 3.

He attended the university in 1942 and was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and the varsity track squad.

He entered officers' school after leaving here at Fort Benning and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry.

The third, presented by Mary Lee Hall, a member of the library staff from 1928 to 1932, is a valuable history of the Hudson River, published in limited edition by Scribner's and edited by Henry Collins Brown, with colored illustrations of Hudson River scenes from early and contemporary sources.

BENCH NOTES

By JACK ANDERSON

Idaho's "Hall of fame" of outstanding athletes who have served brilliantly in this war now has another name to add to the ever-growing list. Veto Barslowski, or Vic Berlus as we know him, left Idaho with one of the most-remembered athletic records of any alum. Four years of football made a top-ranking right end of him, two coaches, Ted Banks and Francis Schmidt, contributed to his development. The New York Giants professional football team signed him for their post-war grid machine.

Vic was the mainstay of the Vandal hurling staff for three years, pitching his way to many conference victories with an overarm fast ball. He was perhaps best known for his boxing achievements, slugging his way to the Pacific Coast heavyweight championship in 1942.

Those who knew him, knew him as a big, quiet, hard-working guy, a good Phi Delt, and a fine guy to know.

No amount of so-called glowing tributes or well-turned phrases can take away the pain and hurt of those who are left, who are confronted with the emptiness that "killed in line of duty" brings.

We owe something to men like him; maybe he wasn't recognized as a hero, for maybe he didn't sink a battleship single handed, or destroy hundreds of Japs, but he, like all such men who do only the common tasks of warfare, are heroes in their own right. Webster defines a hero as "one who does a distinguished service to mankind." Certainly what they are doing is service of the highest.

But what of us who sit home and do none of the sweating or toiling, safe and snug, tossing compliments freely as long as someone else does the dirty work? Are we all that way? No, there are lots of us who would rather be out there with our brothers, roommates and boyhood buddies, but we don't make up the rules of who goes and who doesn't. Sure there are "slackers," as some GIs resentfully term anyone not in uniform, but their own conscience will give them more cause for remorse than any quantity of verbal abuse heaped upon them.

They'll Be Back

Yes, we owe a debt to all the guys fighting this war, and one way we can repay it is by keeping the U of I going so there will be something of the sameness to which they can return. The average GI does not want a kingdom to rule over when he comes back, he'll want the same things that he had before, and will scrap to get them. Looks like I've wandered from strictly sports write-up; maybe so, perhaps this is all drivell, but I hope that it lets a few GIs know that though we don't run through the streets shouting it, at least some of us do care, and are grateful for what they are doing.

Back To His Drill . . .

Kaiser Seeks Help Group Initiates In Clothes Drive

Pres. Harrison C. Dale has received a request from Henry J. Kaiser, chairman of the United National Clothing collection scheduled for April asking that the university cooperate in obtaining clothing for civilians in devastated countries.

The national goal has been set at 150,000,000 pounds of clothing, according to Kaiser, and he added that universities and colleges are an important link in meeting the quota.

Ask Cooperation

"The United National Clothing Collection is counting on the university and college presidents of America to cooperate with our local chairmen by enlisting the support of faculties and students in this newest war effort," Mr. Kaiser said in his letter to President Dale.

As yet no campus plans for assisting in the drive have been announced.

Training Pay
Cadets receive $780 a year during the four-year training, which leads to a bachelor of science degree and a commission as an ensign in the coast guard. Congressional appointment is not involved as in other service schools.

Information on the examinations and application forms may be obtained by writing the Commandant, United States Coast Guard, Washington, D. C., or recruiting offices at 816 Alaska Building, Seattle; 806 S. W. Morrison Street, Portland; 519 Welch Building, Spokane, and 82-A Post-office Building, Walla Walla.

Medical Students Visit Campus

Pvts. Robert Manning and Bruce Jepson, former students of the university, are visiting on the campus this week. Both are attending the University of Oregon Medical school at Portland and are on furlough between quarters.

Was Her Face Red

When the sleepy Pi Phi heard a deep masculine voice on the other end of the line say something about "lemon" she thought it was surely one of her gentlemen friends playing a practical joke. Grumpily, she replied, "You're a lemon? I'm a grapefruit from Texas! What do you mean calling me at eight in the morning? I wanted to sleep in!"

A startled laugh came from the voice at the other end of the wire, "I'm afraid you don't understand, this is Dr. Lemmon of the psychology department."

That isn't a new shade of face-powder that Pi Phi is wearing—she's still blushing!

Men at Work; Baseball Practice, Track Men Train

McLean field is the scene of much activity as track men passing the oval scurry to escape flying baseballs. At one end the baseball diamond is being repaired, the infield rolled, the bases spiked, and the batter's box arranged.

Out on the grass the batters' cage has been rolled out, and the crack of hickory meeting rawhide can be heard, as prospective diamond men slash at the pill in the first batting practices of the season. Frank Henderson has been bouncing them off the fence, and Tiny Viro has been pounding the pellet with regularity.

In the outfield, the track team has set up hurdles, and amid bouncing grounders and sky-gazing outfielders, the hurdle men skim over, sometimes.

In the other corner the weight men are hefting the shot put and the hammer throw. During all these activities, a solid man on a tractor is weaving in and out, rolling the baseball field.

On the diamond, two men work unconcernedly as a discus and javelin whistle overhead, foul balls whiz by, and track men tear past, meanwhile keeping a wary eye open for the man on the tractor.

Between showers McLean field is certainly a busy place, as spring sports swing into the tough part of the training process.

Caps, Gowns Arrive

Chef Kerr, manager of the Student Union Book store, said Tuesday that caps and gowns for commencement have arrived.

He added that announcements are expected soon. Announcements will be sold outright this year.

Engineers To Give Lab Party

Engineering displays, dancing and refreshments will be the order of the day April 6 when associated engineers of the university will be invited to the campus at a lab party in the Kirtley engineering building.

According to Howard Kambitsch, president, each department of the college of engineering is preparing a display, and inter-department committees are making other arrangements. Jack Tarent is chairman of the program committee, and Don Leeper is in charge of refreshments.

Engineering department heads and their wives have been invited to attend the functions as patroness and patronesses.

Journalists Meet At Institute

Dr. W. F. Swindler, head of the journalism department, announced Tuesday that a Journalism Institute for newspaper publishers and editors in this region will be held at the university on April 14.

Several out of town speakers are scheduled to appear on the program, Dr. Swindler declared. Most topics to be under consideration will be news photography and advertising.

The earliest lighthouses were in lower Egypt.
