Independent Majority Captures Eleven Class Offices

/Jason

Even Jason's prediction of 1950 was high this week as Idaho students showed very little interest in class elections. Exactly 1476 votes were cast—a rough 40 per cent of the eligible voters.

For the faith college students profess to have in democracy, that is a poor showing. For the sake of the United States, and indirectly for the rest of the world, Jason hopes that more than 40 per cent vote in city, state, and national elections in the years to come. Pedestrián Puzzles

This week's snow intensified traffic problems on Moscow's narrow sidewalks. The air was blue in places at different times during the week as male students slipped off the concrete into the soft mud of fraternity lawns.

Jason heard complaints agains the fairer sex as mere males were forced into the street by women walking three and four abreast. Complaints stated that men as American citizens are entitled to a few inches of cement footpath.

One well-known Econ professor a large man, has solved the problem nicely. When meeting a bevy of coeds who refuse to share the Russia.' sidewalk with him, he simply stops, holding his portion of space. meekly give way.

Elections Decide Class Offices

Voting was extremely light at Wednesday's class elections as students east ballots for the coming year's officers. Above, election board members check the eligibility of voters. In the background, one member is placing a vote in the locked ballot box.

Executive Board Committee Heads To Give Reports

A decision to require chairmen of all major ASUI committees to submit full reports on the commitee's activities was made at the weekly meeting to the ASUI executive board Tuesday night.

"These reports will enable chairmen in following years to find what their predecessor's have done, and what mistakes they have made," Bob Dahlstrom, board member stated.

The reports, to be filled out by ommittee heads such as Homecoming chairman, Dad's Day chairman, and Rally Committee chairman, will include a section for recommendations for future committee leaders.
