An Historical Line On Lines

To the ambitious students who woke up at 5:30 yesterday morning and who waited patiently for two and a half hours for the registration line to open, the Argonaut respectfully dedicates this issue of the campus newsheet (rag) of February 3.

Lines are not only a tradition on this campus; they are an American heritage. Lines began when the serpent approached Eve in the garden and told her about some beautiful wormless apples that she could have just for the reaching. That famous incident began a brand-new series of lines—ever since then women have been trying to achieve new lines in clothes and fashions.

Another famous line is the one Mark Antony handed Cleopatra. His remarks in an Egyptian alcove probably changed more boundary lines than any other bundle of blarney in history.

Lines even roam jungles in Central Africa, we are told, and sometimes they are captured and put in zoos to terrify little children.

Webster uses five and one-half column inches of space in his collegiate dictionary to tell the casual reader about 35 different kinds of lines. Lines, says the dictionary, are terms used in such diversified activities as geometry, course of conduct, advertising, marriage, radio, music, and mathematics.

Twenty other words, such as lineament and line breeding, are off-shoots of the original four-letter Anglo-Saxon word. Sick and tired of the word, the British a few years ago devised a synonym for "line." Now the English "queue up" every time they wait in line for groceries and theatre tickets. Another meaning of "queue" is a "taillike plait of hair worn behind a pigtail."

As this issue hits the campus some students are still waiting in lines for permits to register, final approvals, and for books. Some of the vets in the lines are undoubtedly handing other lines to sweet-faced young freshman girls who graduated in mid-year from Plummer or Acuna high to the upper-state university.

This is the last line of this editorial. —S.H.G.

A Licking Sometimes Helps

In the early twenties, a long, gangling, persistent boxer invaded New York City—Gene Tunney. Not long before he won his championship, Tunney fought Harry Greb, "The Pittsburgh Windmill." Tunney towered over Harry Greb as the Woolworth building towers over the New York City hall.

It was a grueling battle and Greb punished Tunney terribly that night. Tunney lost the decision. And, most any boxer would have hung up the gloves. Not Tunney. He believed that he had gained more experience out of the whipping he got from Greb than he would have received had he won against some other boxer. Right to this day, Tunney attributes to this licking much of the determination, conditioning and planning which enabled him to take the crown from the Great Dempsey.

Most of the men who have built the greatest success in agriculture or industry have reached success by carefully taking the lessons of early failures. And no man, no matter who he is, what he is, or where he is, should ever become discouraged over past failures.

There are two ways to look at failures. If you consider them in the light of valuable assets in future undertakings, they will help you immeasurably. But, if you permit past mistakes, past failures, to fill you with fear, a grudge against the world, or loss of confidence, you have two strikes against you before you start in anything else.—(Sherman Rogers, in the "Spokane Spotlight.")

Grove Represents An Era

Hundreds of people gathered on the lawn in front of the Administration building one spring day in April, 1911. This was a memorable day, for President Theodore Roosevelt was going to plant a tree which was to be the first of five trees in the University of Idaho's presidential grove.

Unknown to many students, this grove represents an era from "Roosevelt to Roosevelt"—a span of over a quarter of a century. The five trees that make up this grove are situated at the end of the Administration lawn between the Ad building and the Engineering building.

TR's Blue Spruce

The biggest tree in the grove is the blue spruce, planted by Theodore Roosevelt. At the right of the blue spruce is the second tree, a Port Orford cedar, which was planted by William Howard Taft in October, 1911. Vice President Thomas R. Marshall planted the red oak, which is on the left of the blue spruce, in November, 1918. Next to this oak is a small spruce planted by Vice President Charles C. Curtis in October, 1932.

The last addition to the grove was made in March, 1938, when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt planted the small Douglas fir.

Girl Dates German Exchange Student From South Idaho

By STAN GODECKE

Carol Fugate, Kappa Alpha Theta, is just a little bit confused as to the nationality of a man from whom she accepted a Thursday "coke date."

It all started two months ago when Miss Fugate was introduced to a bright-eyed young man from Frankfurt, Germany, who said he was Herr Heinrich Schonneberger, an exchange student attending school at Washington State college.

Heinrich couldn't speak a word of English at the time, and Miss Fugate couldn't speak a word of German. Consequently she remembered the incident very vividly, enough so that when Heinrich asked her for a date last Tuesday over the phone she accepted, hoping that Heinrich's two-month broken English wouldn't prove too much of a problem.

Smooth Date

The date went off as smooth as Frankfurt pudding. The couple were even interviewed over KUOI's afternoon dance program at the student union building and Miss Fugate declared emphatically that she thought it was perfectly all right for American girls to be seen with German foreign exchange students, since so many American soldiers were going with German girls.

But she was in for a horrible surprise when Theta pledges informed her at dinner Thursday night that Heinrich was in reality plain Tom Sanford of Fairfield, Idaho, and had been put up to playing the practical joke on her by evil-minded friends merely because he could speak German fluently.

Pledges Informed

Theta pledges had been previously informed about the pre-arranged radio interview, and Miss Fugate was asked a number of times, before the truth was revealed, if she enjoyed her date with Heinrich.

Now rumors emanating from the Theta house indicate that Miss Fugate will refuse to date anybody unless she has before-hand knowledge of the man's place of birth.

Idaho Modernizes Its Labs With Surplus Equipment

Editor's note: In response to queries by readers wondering if Idaho has advanced scholastically as well as athletically, the Arg presents the second in a series of articles on the subject.

By PELIAS

While Idaho's athletic teams slowly climb the hill to victory backed by new coaches and new spirit, the University is not standing still. Evidence that the old institution keeps up with the times is found in the laboratory modernization program.

Because of the large number of veterans (approximately two out of three students) attending Idaho, the university has been able to take advantage of war surplus equipment in furnishing its labs.

Much of the material has been obtained free except for crating, shipping, and reconditioning costs. Some surplus stocks have been purchased at special discounts offered to educational institutions.

Among the equipment acquired this year are a "mechanical cow" built to convert powdered milk into the real product, used by the dairy husbandry department; an arc welder used by engineering students, and a precision lathe for use in the agricultural engineering lab.

A new steam sterilizer, called an "autoclave" by bacteriologists, is in operation in the bacteriology department. An addressing machine, formerly used by the OPA office in Boise is now used by the Publications office.

One of the largest and most valuable pieces of surplus stock set up is a giant marine diesel engine located in Kirtley engineering lab.

"Laboratories tend to grow obsolete and must be modernized about every 20 years," President J. E. Buchanan said recently. "Be-

Dear Jason

January 27, 1948

On page three, column three of the January 27 issue of the Argonaut there is an incomplete joke which states that a girl was called "Chocolate" because she—

We would like to know what it is that "Chocolate" does before we are driven batty. With this on our mind, our study for the finals is merely a farce. Could you enlighten us on this most important subject?

Frustratingly yours,

Stockmen Attend Short Course

Stockmen from all the prominent cattle raising areas in Idaho arrived in Moscow Jan. 24, to attend the breeders-herdsman beef short course," sponsored by the animal husbandry department.

The course, which covered a 3-day period, was devoted to lectures and field work.

Current cattle problems, including the fitting and showing of prize beef steers were discussed.

"I'm losing my punch," said the coed as she hastily left the party.

Recognize This Picture?

It's familiar to almost everyone because pictures and stories of the atomic bomb tests at Bikini appeared in newspapers throughout the nation within hours after the historic blast.

Speed is a creed with newsmen and the Bell System helps make that speed possible.

It provides the local, Long Distance and radio-telephone, telegraph, teletypewriter and wire-photo facilities over which news is channeled to presses and micro-phones.

Keeping these facilities in top condition, ever improving and ever expanding, is the interesting job of many qualified men.

It is but one phase of the many-sided telephone industry in which thousands have found challenging and rewarding careers.

There's a future in telephony.

Duck Scribe Fears Towering Centers

Writing in the Oregon Emerald, Sports Editor Fred Taylor made the following comments about Webfoot center Roger Wiley's chances against the Idaho and WSC fives this weekend in the Palouse area:

Said Taylor (his column was written before the Idaho-WSC game played Saturday night): "A good indication of what Oregon's hoopsters will be in for in their swing through the Inland Empire the week of February 3 through 7 will be seen tonight and tomorrow night when the Idaho Vandals and the WSC Cougars battle."

"The result of the clash between the two lanky centers, Vince Hanson of the Cougars and Jack Phoenix of the Vandals may hint at what Roger Wiley will have to do on the sweep. It's a cinch he will be forced to give out with his very best for all four games."

"And the four games in five-nights routine is plenty hard on a big man."

Vince Hanson scored eighteen points and Jack Phoenix twelve in the Saturday night tussle.

Here's More About JASON

way to keep warm on a winter night, razed the visiting team unmercifully, cheered to the rafters every Wisconsin basket."

Wisconsin won, incidentally, 60-51.

A Closed Chapter
Jason noted the closing of an era yesterday when he unthinkingly dialed 8401, the Idaho Club, to speak to a certain brunette. To his surprise a deep male voice answered the phone.

It may be progress, but somehow, it's saddening to think of the 51 Idaho club women scattered in Hays and Forney halls and among various sororities.

Started as a women's residence at the first of this year, the Idaho club's short history was a lively one. From the first serenade presented by Phi Delta Theta to the last click of the heels along the hallway, the group was a popular one.

The majority of the club's women were freshmen, 36 in all. Only one senior was on hand to guide the younger coeds. But under the guardianship of Mrs. Roy Van Winkle, housemother, the group did all right for itself.

To the 51 members that made up the Idaho club, Jason sends a salute. May your new living quarters suit you, and thanks for brightening up the Idaho campus for a semester.

Helen: How is it that Bert never takes you to the movies anymore?
Mary: Well, one evening it rained and we stayed home.

Know The Faculty Dean T. S. Kerr

"Unless work is a hobby—I don't have one." From this statement and from looking at the record of Thomas S. Kerr, Dean of the College of Letters and Science, one might draw the conclusion that he is an able and industrious man.

Graduating in 1913 from the University of Indiana with a B.A. degree (Wendell Wilkie and Paul McNutt were members of the same class) Dean Kerr went on to receive his law degree from University of Michigan in 1918.

He became interested in public school work and education and served in the capacity of superintendent of schools in Arizona, Montana and Idaho.

Number of Posts
Joining the faculty of the University of Idaho in 1924 as an associate professor of political science, he has since served in a number of posts. After becoming the head of the political science department, he became director of summer school, dean of the junior college, acting president of the university in 1937 and since that time has held his present position.

He is author of two college texts in business law which have been used by some of our most prominent universities such as Yale, Tulane, Syracuse, and Wisconsin. The Armed Forces Institute also used his texts. A high school commercial law text also carries his by-line.

Dean Kerr has the distinction of being the only man west of the Mississippi river to serve in the capacity of president of the American Business Law Association.

PE Class Offered To Faculty Women

A physical education class for faculty women and faculty wives will be offered this semester to those interested, according to Miss Mabel Locke, department of physical education.

The purpose of this class is to correct posture with emphasis placed on general body conditioning, Miss Locke added. The class is scheduled for first period and will begin February 11.

Anyone wishing to enroll may send their name to Miss Locke.

Woman Educator Dies In California

Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, president emerita of Mills college, died recently at her son's home in Palo Alto, California. This well-known western educator taught at the University of Idaho at the turn of the century.

Later she was named president of Mills college and remained there until her retirement 25 years later. Named repeatedly as one of outstanding women of the nation, she was the seventh president of Mills college and was a scholar of international fame.

Hostess Resigns

Miss Evelyn Sheehan, housemother at Hays hall the preceding semester, has resigned and is leaving for her home in Salt Lake City today. Miss Sheehan, who has also been attending the university, graduated at the semester.

Mrs. Roy Van Winkle, former housemother at Idaho Club and the Delta Gamma house, will be the new housemother at Hays.

Phi Deltas Elect

In a chapter meeting held recently Dewey Hudson was elected to succeed Dean Dennison as president of Phi Delta Theta. Other officers elected were William Hays, secretary; Jack Hunt, social chairman, and Jim Klason, warden.

The officers were installed at a meeting last night.

MISSION TO MOSCOW

By RUSSKI
I was attending the Idaho-Washington State college basketball game over in Pullman Saturday night, and after it was all over I decided that I simply must write the folks back in Murmansk and tell them about the curious rivalry that exists between these two Palouse schools. It's absolutely amazing.

I didn't have a ticket, so I borrowed a Washington State student body card to get in the gymnasium. When seated, I found myself right in the middle of the Cougar rooting section, and everybody was jumping up and down and yelling "Fight, fight, fight, for Washington State!"

"I didn't want to fight anyone, so I just sat there on the bench very inconspicuously trying to guess the ankle measurements of the girl cheerleader. Some big husky guy with a gray "W" on his sweater grabbed me by the left clavicle, jerked me up, and said yell, you louse, or I'll paint the sideline markers with your bloody nose."

Wrong Time
So I got up and yelled, but since I don't know much about this game of basketball I kept yelling and cheering when the referee came out on the floor and the big husky guy grabbed me by the right clavicle and pulled me down again.

I decided I better not holler when Idaho made a basket, or it would have been suicide for sure. So at halftime I crossed over to the other side of the gym and sat next to the Idaho Frosh squad.

Near the end of the game three Idaho men made baskets (that was easy—they weaved up and down the floor before they did it) and I got so carried away with the game that I fell off the bench and somehow happened to land in the middle of the floor. Idaho was one point ahead and there was only about five seconds left to play.

All of a sudden somebody dribbled the ball off my head and before I knew it Ed Gayda had the ball, threw it to Norm Lowery, and then Vince Hanson made a basket for the Cougars.

I figured I had better get the heck off the court, but before the gun sounded somebody named Jack Phoenix bumped into me just as he took a last desperate shot at the basket. Then the game ended and the next thing I knew Jack Friel was shaking his fist in my face. I guess he thought I was the referee.

I suppose they couldn't decide who won the game. I wished I was back in Russia. People were swarming all over the gym, cussing and swearing like Cossacks. I sneaked out of the gym and came back to Moscow.
