ONE Word To The Wise-

At a recent meeting of Seattle alumni, a member of Idaho's coaching staff was asked to say "a few words."

After he had talked fifteen minutes, everyone was bored after he had talked for half an hour, some of the alumni George Denman, Richard Munkstarted drifting out; after he had talked for an hour, quite a number of seats were empty; and after he had talked for an hour and five minutes, he had finished his "few words." There was a moral for everyone attending alumni meetings of any sort: Alumni like to hear themselves talk too well to allow anyone else more than a few words.
