Miracle Has A Moral!

Miracles still happen. As of Thursday evening unofficial representatives of almost every house and hall on the campus were wondering how in the heck they were going to get a homecoming float built. Today they are still wondering, only more so. Tomorrow—there will undoubtedly be a beautiful array of completed floats floating down Main street in the annual Homecoming parade.

How this annual creative explosion can prove so effective may remain forever a mystery. Perhaps the only thing that can compare with it is a student finishing up a term paper the day before finals.

Still, we can list a few factors which help to explain the praiseworthy finished products which have graced Homecoming parades through the years. First comes the idea of welcoming parents and alumni. The small spurt of extra effort is thus an act of affection.

Next there is the matter of personal and group pride in turning out a contraption aesthetically pleasing to those who witness the parade. Then, of course, there is the trophy. These combined factors give a goal and purpose to the entire project which is unusually strong.

Notwithstanding these explanations it's still simply amazing that so many beautiful floats can be turned out in such a short time. And there's a moral to the story:

When you set up a worthwhile goal for a group of enthusiastic young people they are going to do something about getting there. (Football players, please take note. We're counting on you!)

What's In Pigskin?

A football is a chunk of the exterior covering of a pig, hence the name pigskin. But before we get any further let all pigs take consolation in the fact that they aren't the only critters that get skinned. I picked WSC last weekend.

A football is the most fought over article of its size in the world, not excluding the atom bomb.

Did you ever consider what a terrifying life a football leads? Let's take for example a brand new football put into use the first play of a game.

First the poor little creature is propped on a pedestal in a most unsuspecting attitude. Almost immediately it is sent hurtling 70 yards through the air by the blow of a most aggressive shoe. As if that weren't enough to knock the wind out of any self-respecting pigskin, it is then crushed to the chest of a madman and carried at breakneck speed back in the direction from which it came.

The little creature is then placed on the ground again, only to be thrust backward in a dizzying spiral to the madman who had it in the second place. He, in turn, heaves it forward in an even more dizzying spiral. At it is about to settle into another set of protective crushing arms, it is batted to the ground with a resounding thud.

everyone, get under it and we'll hammer 'em on. (Creaking sounds, then silence.) Will someone kindly get out from under the frame and nail on the supports? (Crash, splinter.) Never mind the supports. When you all jumped out to fix it, it just fell apart anyway. Anyone know where we could get some more lumber? (Time passes, more of it. The sun comes up, the ground is littered with the corpses of song birds who should have kept their mouths shut.) Whew, we're all finished. Let's clean up the mess and go home. Toss me the hammer, will ya? (Crunch, moan, blackness. Time passes again, a whole lot of it.) Ooh, where am I? 'Stunny, I could've sworn I saw a nurse. Guess I did, here she comes now. No. I do not want my temperature taken. I've gotta go drive the float in the parade. Huh? Today's Monday?

"What Is Homecoming?"

By John McDermott

Probably one of the most unasked questions on any college campus is, "What is Homecoming?" Nearly every man or woman that winds his or her way to college feels that they should know about such things. However, they hesitate to ask an upperclassman because of the embarrassment they feel when they pop the question, "What does Homecoming mean?"

If a frosh were to ask eight or nine different persons, he would more than likely get as many answers. They would range from, "It's a time when everybody gets drunk and if you don't drink you should stay home," to "Homecoming is when everyone's parents come up and check up to see if they are behaving as they should." There are many more answers, but due to conditions beyond my control, the editor will only give me so much space. Except for a few absurd answers, nearly everyone's answer is right.

A Definition

Homecoming is a time when all the alumni return to the Alma Mater for a weekend and visit their old fraternities and sororities and have reunions of sorts. It is also a time when parents come for a weekend to see the campus where their children are going to spend the next few years of their lives and it is a time when everybody puts classes to work on floats for the Homecoming parade. Oh, yes, there is also a football game on Homecoming weekend which some of the visitors come to see.

There is no definition for Homecoming, but it is a weekend when the campus is full of visitors and everybody is full of spirit (liquid and otherwise) and in a festive mood.

Lots of Work

Actually, to the college student, Homecoming is work and long hours of it. Let's drop into the Eta Beta Pi fraternity house and see what Homecoming is for them.

It is the week before the game and all the members are trying to decide what to have on their float this year. After a two hour meeting they come to a decision and crews are immediately picked for construction. This work will go on every afternoon and evening for the full week, but it is still not ended. House cleaning crews are appointed and the house gets a renovation from top to bottom so that guests over the weekend will have clean comfortable quarters. Pledges are briefed on how to conduct themselves when guests are in the house. Table manners are practiced for a week and to put it crudely, everybody is "putting on the dog."

For seven or eight days, this goes on. Nerves are on edge, coffee has been flowing like water. Every time a pledge hears something he turns around, sticks out his hand and forces a huge smile thinking a former brother might have just walked into the house, only to find his roommate staring him in the face and waving a paddle ever so slowly from side to side.

After nearly a week of this, some of the fellows in the house are so tense that when the big day arrives, they are all worn out and decide to have a beer before the guests start arriving. One football game and fifteen beers later they stagger back to the house to meet the guests and are immediately locked in a closet to keep the guests from seeing them in their inebriated condition.

Students To Study At U. of Lebanon For Two Years

Bill Whitman and John Hansen left September 29 for Beirut, Lebanon, after having spent three weeks in Washington, D. C., completing arrangements for their two-year course of study at the American University of Lebanon, which is an extension of New York University.

Whitman's father, Eugene Whitman, former extension agent for NYU, received a two-year leave of absence to carry out an appointment as agricultural expert for the government's Point Four plan, an agency set up to send agricultural experts to foreign countries as advisors on agriculture. Mr. and Mrs. Whitman will be living in Jordan Valley, about 250 miles from Beirut. They had to take enough clothing and food to last for their two-year stay in the East.

John and Bill plan to attend school, John taking general courses and Bill taking engineering, for two years before returning to the University of Idaho. They plan to spend next summer traveling through Europe, and writing articles of life in the Far East for publication in the Argonaut.

ELECTION IN JAPAN

The Japanese answer to the Russian threat was shown in their first unsupervised election since the war.

They ousted 22 Communists who held seats in the last parliament. The Reds had 107 candidates in the field, and not one was elected. Victory went to the pro-American forces of Premier Yoshida.

Officers Desired In Finance Corps

The Department of the Army is in need of Finance corps officers, according to Lt. Col. A. E. Blewett, Idaho's acting professor of military science, and is offering direct appointments as lieutenant to qualified graduate students.

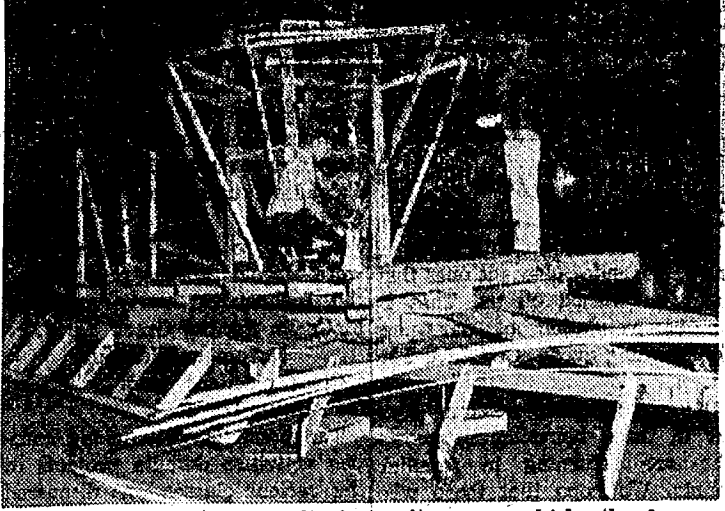

Blewett said that personnel with a master's degree or students who are enrolled in the graduate fields of accounting, business administration and economics, and who meet other requirements, may apply for Finance corps commissions not less than 180 days nor more than 240 days prior to completion of academic requirements for their master's degree.

Additionally, many Finance corps commissions are expected to be tendered students upon graduating with bachelor's degrees in the same fields, who are currently enrolled in Army ROTC.

Blewett said that interested personnel could obtain full information by visiting his office, Room 105, Memorial gym.

Homecoming And Formal Pledging Highlight Campus Social Activities

Formal pledging held the social spotlight on campus early this week. Weekend activities will be dedicated mostly to Homecoming preparations and festivities, including the parade and game.

Delta Gamma
Formal pledging was held Tuesday evening, September 30, for Nancy Biegert, Janet Biker, Pauline Farr, Joyce Genoway, Mary Lou Gonyou, Darlene Horn, Sally Holz, Marcia Jensch, Cynthia Karlburg, Darlene Marsters, Valarie O'Donnell, Karen Jarkinson, Julie Senecal, Marry Ellen Slipp, Marcia Thornton, Jackie Thorsom, Sharon Wright, and Ann Wyckoff. A fireside and refreshments followed the ceremony. Another fireside was held a week previously to honor their pledging.

Nancy Moore was named to fill the vacant office of Scholarship chairman and Ann Holmes was named second vice-president of the house. Harriet Houghton is publicity chairman and Clare Guernsey, historian.

Homecoming plans are now in full swing and the float is being constructed under the direction of Harriet Houghton. A buffet supper will follow the Homecoming game on Saturday afternoon.

Gamma Phi Beta
Sixteen girls were formally pledged on Thursday evening, September 25. They were Beverly Bowers, Patricia Brown, Mary Jean Burke, Darlene Dickes, Madge Foster, Helen Gehrke, Jo Ella Hamilton, Faye Hartwell, Venita Holm, Marilyn Marvel, Daydra Phillips, Gerri Privett, Elaine Schroeder, Shirley Smith, Janet Stanford, and Vanessa Wheatley. A surprise birthday party for Madeline Meltveld was given by the Sigma Chi Monday evening at the Gamma Phi house. A huge cake frosted in pale blue and decorated with white roses and the Sigma Chi crest was presented to Madeline. The cake and coffee were served as refreshments.

Alpha Chi Omega
Tuesday evening formal pledging was held. The new pledges are: Arlene Snyder, Jo Ann Rouch, Judy Swin, Mary Anderson, Mary Verner, Judy Anderson, Renee Thorf, Pat Johnson, Janet Campbell, Elaine Hyland, and Joan Brown.

The birthdays of Barb Hale and Mary Potano were celebrated Tuesday evening. Joan Alexander provided the entertainment.

Engagements
Horning-Crane
The engagement of Grace Horning, Gamma Phi Beta, to Earl Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Crane of Wenatchee, Wash., was announced at dinner on Sunday, September 21. Small white cards bearing tiny artificial white roses and inscribed "One White Rose True Love Shows" revealed the engagement.

The ring was shown in the center of a nosegay of white roses and pink carnations. Pink candles and centerpieces of white roses and pink carnations completed the theme.

The bridegroom-elect is president of the Sigma Chi house on the WSC campus. The couple plan to be married during the Christmas holidays.

Guests at the dinner included Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Horning of Spokane and Miss Nancy Crane. Blocher-Westgate

Carol Blocher recently announced her engagement to Richard Westgate at a dinner. The table was decorated with fall flowers and at each place was an ace of hearts card with "It's in the cards" written on it. The bride-elect is an Alpha Chi Omega.

Schrom-Taylor
Last Monday Lucille Schrom, Alpha Chi, announced her engagement to Bill Taylor. Daisies were the main decoration and for favors each girl was given a small compass with "Headed in the right direction," and Lucille and Bill printed on an attached card.

Students Will Judge At Livestock Show First Time At Home

Student judging teams for dairy cattle and dairy products will attend the Pacific International Livestock Exposition October 4 at Portland. The teams, both winners in their respective divisions last year, will compete with teams from Washington State, Oregon and Oregon State.

Members of the dairy products judging team, to be accompanied by Prof. E. D. McGlasson, are Charles W. Choules, William J. Monroe, Mac A. Porter, and Albert L. Wohlschlegel. The dairy cattle judging team consists of Don Greenwell, Harold Johnson, Don Mitchell, and Ralph Wilder, accompanied by Dr. W. Harvey.

Third Party Meets For Nominating

Members of the third party steering committee met Wednesday to make plans for the Open Nominating Assembly to be held October 11, at 1 p.m. in the SUB.

The assembly's aim will be to adopt a new name for the party, explain the purposes and objectives of the party, and nominate candidates for class officers. The nominations will be made in four separate class meetings immediately following the general meeting.

Bulletins and posters will be distributed to each living group explaining further the ideals of the party and the nominating procedures.

Tuesday, October 7, at 7 p.m. will be the next meeting date of the party.

Alternate Meetings Planned By Guild

The Radio-TV Guild has arranged an alternate meeting time for freshmen women and other students who are interested in joining the group, but who cannot attend regular meetings on Tuesday evening.

The meeting time for this auxiliary group will be Tuesdays at 4 p.m.

All living groups on the campus will be contacted in the near future concerning the musical talent they have available, according to Bob Tracy, radio director. The Radio center wants to find persons to provide "musical spots" on the "Here We Have Idaho" program, heard throughout the state.

Reeve Wins Prize

Reginald Reeves was named the winner of the $150 first prize in the Nathan Burkan Memorial competition for senior law students, according to word received from Dean E. S. Stimson of the college of law.

The competition, sponsored by the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, was set up in honor of Nathan Burkan, recognized as the nation's outstanding copyright attorney of his day.

Reeves' winning paper, a treatise on the copyright law, has been sent in to the national contest.

Beauty And Brawn

The principal players in tomorrow's schedule are shown here looking over the Homecoming trophies. The five finalists will provide a large share of the interest in the parade while Captain Bob Holder will certainly be in for a busy afternoon.

Christian Center Is Busy All Week

A variety of classes, church services, and organizational meetings keep the doors of the campus Institute of Christian Education open throughout the week, according to new Institute director, Dr. Lorell Weiss.

Week-days, six classes are taught at the Institute by Dr. Weiss and one by Catholic Father Schmidt.

Christian Science students meet each Tuesday evening, while Kappa Phi, Methodist coed organization, meets on the first and third Tuesday of each month.

The Methodist church choir practices on Thursday evenings, Lutheran students reserve Friday afternoons from 4 to 5 o'clock for a coffee hour, and Inter-Varsity Fellowship meets on Friday evenings.

Dean Hart Returns From Washington

Dean D. J. Hart of the school of business returned Tuesday morning from a Northwest Trade Association meeting in Yakima, Wash., the first of the week. The meeting included business and educational representatives from Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana, British Columbia and Alaska.

The chairman of this meeting was Mr. Ralph Baker, president of the Standard Oil company of California. A panel was formed to discuss the students who were graduating from colleges and universities and going into the business field.

Most of the businessmen felt that college graduates were too cocky, expected too much money, and wanted to work as few hours a day as possible. In the absence of President Buchanan, Dean Hart was a member of the panel.

Russia Sends Note

Russia's military commander in Germany sent a note to the three Western nations and threatened to take measures "infringing on the normal life of the West Berlin population."

The Red general accuses the United States of financing six kidnaping and spy centers in West Berlin, and he demanded that they be closed.

Western observers believe the note may be a tip-off that the Reds are preparing to seal off the East-West border in Berlin.

The threat brought an immediate reaction from William Draper, our foreign aid chief now in Europe. Draper said the United States will stand by Berlin. However, Draper refused to comment on the Russian note because, he said, "I have not had time to study it."

Two French professors claim that children should remain children longer. Their reason is that soon there won't be enough jobs to go around for teen-agers and persons in their early twenties.
