The coeds will model the latest fashions in casual outfits and cocktail dresses in the Bucket of the SUB at 4 p.m. The sophomore male will narrow the Queen candidate list down to five Wednesday night when they vote at dinner. Final voting for the 1961 Holly Queen will come Friday. The Queen will be crowned at the intermission of the Holly Dance Friday night in the SUB Ballroom.

The fourteen Queen candidates: Judi Anderson, Alpha Gamma; Doris Hatfield, Alpha Phi; Donna Hamlet, Tri Delta; Jeanne Marshall, Delta Gamma; Patsy McCullough, Gamma Phi; Ann Spiker, Theta; Carol Riggsby, Kappa; Jan Thompson, Pi Phi; Carol Thornock, Epsilon; Karen Wightley, Forney; Karen Bohman, French; Jo Millholland, Hays; Marilyn Rowland, McConnell; and Jackie McConnell, Alpha Chi.

Charles "Buzz" McCabe, Phi Delta, will be the master of ceremonies for the event.

Dance, Wreaths Caroling Bring Yuletide Spirit

The distribution of the holly wreaths to each living group on campus tonight will officially usher in the 1961 Sophomore Holly Week activities. The week-long yuletide campus celebration will be climaxed Friday night with the Holly Dance in the SUB Ballroom.

"Winter Wonderland" was chosen last week as the theme for the annual sophomore-sponsored week, which includes selecting a Holly Queen, caroling, a fashion show and dance.

The Dave Trail quartet will provide the music for the dance which has been moved up to Friday night from the usual Saturday night stand due to a conflict in planning. The outstanding sophomore awards will be presented at the intermission of the Holly Dance which starts at 9 p.m. The Holly Queen will also be crowned at this time.

The wreath committee worked late last night in the SUB building the wreaths which will be presented to the living groups tonight.

Thursday night at 7:30 the sophomores will tour from living group to living group entertaining each with a good selection of Christmas carols. All caroling sophomores should meet at the main entrance to the SUB at 7:15.

Prexy Notes Fitness Lack In Speech

Fitness is a challenge which is sometimes easily forgotten, University President D. R. Theophilus said in opening the 15th annual meeting of the Idaho Recreation Society.

Theme of the meetings Friday and Saturday at the Student Union was "Positive Directions for Fitness." About 150 recreation superintendents, principals, physical education teachers and students attended.

President Theophilus stressed the importance of physical fitness.

"To do a job we are mentally capable of rests largely on our physical well being," he said. "It is most disgraceful and regretful that many individuals do not do the best with what they have. This is an unforgivable sin whether it be in athletics or in an English class."

He added that the "individual who is well physically is the individual who has fewer handicaps toward success than one who is not blessed with or who has frittered away physical fitness."

In closing, he said:

"It is not only a matter of survival but a definite need for you to enjoy things to the utmost. It is a frame of mind whether you enjoy your work and this is dependent upon physical well being."

In welcoming the group to the campus, Dean J. F. Weltzin of the College of Education said a gap exists between the theoretical and practical sides of physical fitness.

Republican Club Reconsiders Controversial Resolution

After an hour's entanglement in parliamentary procedure, the Young Republicans reconsidered the controversial resolutions passed at previous meeting. (See Nov. 28 Arg.) last Thursday night.

Changes made included the changing of the wording of a credo from "the" Republican credo to the University of Idaho Young Republican credo.

Bob Plumb's proposal of the following amendment set off debate: "I believe that the Republican Party is built upon cooperation and coordination of all factions of the Republican Party and we do encourage participation and ideological support which will not betray any facet of the Republican Party." After considerable debate and some more argument on parliamentary procedure it passed, by virtue of club president Lon Woodbury's vote to break a tie.

Jim Mullen then moved that the following be added to the last of the credo: "I believe that through the Republican Party these ideals can best become active and successful principles of government."

Then the controversial fifth resolution was brought up. This was the resolution which "recognized the growing swell of conservatism" in the party, and called liberal minded Republicans intellectually decadent. Debate was ended only by a move to table the motion due to women's closing hours. The subject will be brought up again in the next meeting of the club Thursday night.

Though the resolutions passed at the previous meeting had allegedly not been sent out, John Corlett, political writer for the Boise Statesman, quoted certain phrases in his column several days ago.

Apparently a shifting of membership had taken place as the so-called liberals in the club seemed much stronger than they had the week before. The meeting was very well attended with most of members present.

'Folklore And Fakelore' Is Topic Of Last AAUP Lecture Tonight

An expert on folklore will present the differences between the popular opinion and the true picture of that subject tonight in the concluding American Association of University Professors in the Home Economics Building at 8 p.m.

Dr. Jan Brunvand, assistant professor of English at the University of Idaho, will give the lecture 'Folklore and Fakelore: A Folklorist's Viewpoint." Dr. Brunvand received his Ph.D. in folklore from Indiana University last June. This is his first year on the Idaho campus.

In previewing his lecture Dr. Brunvand said he will discuss the differences between the unwritten oral traditions passed down from generation to generation and that "folklore" which isn't considered true folklore by folklorists.

Dr. Brunvand will describe some of his own experiences in collecting information on folklore. He will trace folklore from its early tradition up to the present. He noted that most people think all the folklore is "folksy" and is not a part of everyday life. Dr. Brunvand will attempt to disprove this fallacy.

Dr. Brunvand received a B.A. degree in journalism from Michigan State University and an M.A. in English from the same institution. During the 1956-57 school term he studied Norwegian folklore in Norway on a Fulbright scholarship.

Symphony Orchestra Opening Termed 'Success' By Bauer

The University Symphony Orchestra opened the 1961-62 orchestra season with what conductor LeRoy Bauer termed "the best opening on record."

Over 500 persons attended the first performance of "Sinfonia Piccola" by Heikki Soulahti. The 60-piece Idaho orchestra will perform tonight at Coeur d'Alene.

"We were glad to see the largest student turnout," Bauer, professor of music, said.

Bauer attributed part of the concert's success to the programing.

"We purposely opened and closed with a lively piece," he said. "Such programing is important. It adds to the audience's enjoyment."

Soulahti's featured composition is all that is known of his writing besides "Three Short Songs," Bauer said. Soulahti died at the age of 17 just two months after completing the symphony.

Bauer described the composition as "refreshing music, full of beautiful melody, much in the same style of Sibelius, who was Soulahti's idol. It is certainly a fine addition to the orchestral repertoire."

Four members of the orchestra performed a solo. The soloists were Ralph Strobel, oboe; music faculty members, Warren Bellis, bassoon, David Whisner, cello, and Bauer, violin.

Phillip Coffman, a graduate assistant in the music department, conducted the number, "Symphonie Concertante," by Joseph Haydn.

The soloists were accompanied by the orchestra.

Random Sample Surveys Are Part Of Term Projects

Four political and social surveys, ranging over such topics as attitudes toward racial discrimination and feelings about living in trailer camps, are being conducted by students on the campus to sample the opinions of other students.

The surveys are being taken as term projects for a political science methods class, taught by William O. Lewis, political science instructor. From 50 to 75 questionnaires are being distributed to students selected by "a strict random technique, with the hope of getting a representative cross-section of the campus," Lewis said.

One of the four surveys is being conducted by Wes Bourassa, off campus, and attempts to determine the extent of racial discrimination on the campus and the characteristics of people who display discriminatory attitudes. The questionnaires for the survey include queries on the interviewee's religious, social, economic and political background, his major field of study at the University and his attitude toward racial discrimination.

Another survey, being conducted by Nancy Broughman, off campus, deals with political cynicism and the attitudes people have toward politics and politicians. Larry Woodbury, off campus, in surveying liberalism and conservatism, will try "to create some objective criteria for measuring conservatism and liberalism," Lewis stated.

Trailer Campers Queried
Ronald Parton, off campus, has administered a questionnaire to people who live in trailer camps in Moscow, Pullman and Spokane. The questionnaires for Parton's survey have been sent in, but the answers to other surveys probably won't be collected for about two weeks, the instructor said.

The results will be processed through an IBM machine at the Statistical Service Center. The students then will write reports on the results they found.

To Lewis' knowledge, surveys like the ones being made have never been conducted on the campus before. "It's all a part of the relatively new methodology used in political science on campus," the instructor said.

"Just in the past 10 to 15 years have quantitative techniques been applied to political science," he explained. "Survey sampling is just one of a variety of techniques being used."

Dr. Eilenberg added he was impressed with the good size of the Idaho mathematics department.

"Types of students vary considerably from one university to the next," he said. "Students pretty well follow the faculty. Where a teacher is inspired, students are inspired."

Fields In Math Are Wide Open Says Speaker

Mathematics graduates can write their own tickets in regard to employment, according to Dr. Samuel Eilenberg, professor and head of the department of mathematics at Columbia University.

On the Idaho campus last week for a three-day lecture sponsored jointly by the department of mathematics and the Mathematical Association of America, Dr. Eilenberg said, "The field of mathematics is wide open. Starting salaries for college teachers of mathematics today are above that of a department seven years ago."

The well-known mathematician has had an opportunity to visit many departments across the nation in his visits.

"Types of students vary considerably from one university to the next," he said. "Students pretty well follow the faculty. Where a teacher is inspired, students are inspired."

Dr. Eilenberg added he was impressed with the good size of the Idaho mathematics department.

Art Displayed In SUB Lobby
An exhibit of "Water Colors of the United States" from the collection of the International Business Machine Corporation will be displayed in the SUB until Dec. 14.

The display will consist of 30 paintings by the same number of artists. The pictures will be hanging in the lobby of the SUB.

Meeting Slated On 'Congress'
The University of Idaho Chapter of the Young Americans for Freedom, Inc., will discuss a Mock Congress they hope to hold on campus at a meeting tomorrow at 7 p.m. in SUB Conference Room A.

Eleven living groups and Town Men's Assn., are invited to send a representative to give their opinions and suggestions on the proposed Congress.

Dr. Richard Carrigan, executive secretary of the Student National Education Association, will deliver an address on the Conference topic. He has been touring the northwest in the interest of the teaching profession.

THE GOLDEN FLEECE by Jason

Leaders of the campus Young Republicans have drawn a lot of criticism lately for their so-called attempt to turn the GOP group into a conservative, and even an ultra-conservative organization.

The members of the more "liberal" wing of the campus group are quite justified in their opposition to the passage of certain resolutions which conflict with their political views. And the other faction of the group has every right to defend its resolutions.

Jason does not pretend to be an expert on political matters and will not attempt to analyze those incidents which took place in the young Republicans last week.

However, it is significant that campus chapters of national political groups are beginning to assume a role of some relevance to the campus. Groups such as Young Republicans, Young Democrats, and Young Americans For Freedom, if properly supported by students and faculty can stimulate effective thought and discussion on national and world events, and at the same time provide important experience and contacts for future state and national politicians.

If the Young Republicans can resolve the present conflict without leaving a deep split in the organization; and if the Young Democrats can stimulate more interest in its activities, both groups can carve themselves a sizeable notch in the social activity—laden totem pole of ASUI activities.

At least this is one activity which promotes rather than discourages, thinking, discussion and action in matters not ingrained within the limited structure of traditional student government and activities.

Weekend Library Hours Justified By Beck, Gagon

Ed. Note — The letter appearing in the Dear Jason column in this issue, calling for the library to be open Saturday night, was received after the following interview with Asst. Librarian Richard Beck and University Engineer George Gagon, and this is not a refutation on their part.

The University library is closed Friday and Saturday nights of regular weekends because not enough students use the facilities to warrant its staying open, Asst. Librarian Richard Beck said yesterday.

George Gagon, University Engineer, said that staying open another night would not make much difference in the overall yearly cost of operating the building.

"However, we would notice the extra night in our janitorial expense," he said. "We are near the saturation point now, and we would probably have to hire an extra man."

A petition sent to the Argonaut, signed by seven graduate students, called for the library to be left open at least on Saturday nights.

According to Beck the library is open a total of 76 hours every week, about the national average. On week days the library opens at 8 a.m. and closes at 10 p.m. Also, it is closed during the dinner hour. It is open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturdays and from 2:30 to 10 p.m. on Sundays.

During mid-final and final weeks, the library is open on Friday nights, Beck said.

"We do not set the library hours, but only recommend a tentative plan to the Administrative Council. The Administration sets the hours."

The University of Detroit, where Beck worked before coming to Idaho, has the same hours that the University library does, except that it is closed all day Sunday, Beck said.

According to Beck, the library receives heavy use during the week, but the number of students dwindle during the weekend.

In 1957 when the library was first opened it was left open on Friday night instead of Sunday. This was changed when a student poll revealed that students preferred the library open on Sunday night. Now about 200 persons use the library on Sunday nights, Beck said.

The few times that the library is left open on Friday nights not many people have taken advantage of it, Beck said. The Friday night of mid-final week this year only 29 persons were counted going into the library.

Last year during final week in January the library was open two Friday nights, Jan. 20 and Jan. 27. According to library statistics only 126 students used the library the first Friday and 156 the following week.

Saturday night library hours have not been considered. "Saturday night is the time for dancing, and ball games," Beck said. "No one can study all the time."

According to Beck the general policy that most libraries follow is to close Saturday nights.

At Washington State the library is open Friday and Sunday nights, but closed Saturday night.

Both Beck and Gagon indicated the two weekend night were needed to clean the building.

"We have a well-kept library," Gagon said. "But if it was kept open another night the janitorial crew would rapidly fall behind."

Gagon continued giving a detailed list of the expenses of running the building. He has the expenses broken down to cost per month.

According to Gagon is costs about $432 to heat the building; $250 for electricity; $20 for miscellaneous expenses; and $1,500 for janitorial expenses.

Idaho vs. ISC At Boise? No

As many University of Idaho sports fans are aware, a football game between the Idaho Vandals and the Idaho State College Bengals has been scheduled. The long-awaited renewal of athletic competition between the sister institutions is set for next Sept. 29.

The game is to be played here in Moscow — unless a recent proposal made by State Rep. Carl Burt (R-Ada) is put into effect.

Last week Burt said "he would attempt to persuade the State Board of Education and the presidents of the two institutions to transfer the first meeting between the two schools next year from Moscow to Boise."

The Ada county Representative gave a good-sounding reason for this proposal. "I think this would do a tremendous amount of good to pull the state together as a unit," he said.

At first glance this may sound like a very good opportunity to do just that, but upon closer examination it is difficult to find merit in the proposal.

There are no two parts of the state which need pulling together anymore than north Idaho and southeastern Idaho where the University and State College are located.

In order to "pull two parts of the state together," it is necessary for groups within these separated parts to exchange visits to the other part, so each can become familiar with the other's geography, people and problems.

If an athletic contest is to be held in Boise to bring north and southeastern Idaho closer together, the whole purpose of unity has been defeated. Let the Bengals and their backers come to Moscow next fall for the football game. Let the Vandals and their boosters travel to Pocatello in 1963 for that game. That's the only way we can help to pull the state together.

Idaho Athletic Director and head Football Coach J. Neil (Skip) Stahley thinks the proposal "is due some consideration," but he doesn't think the game site could be changed this late in the year since schedules are drawn up a few years in advance. He was doubtful that the Boise Junior College Stadium (the one suggested by Burt) would be available on Sept. 29.

Besides this complication, the Vandals would be playing only two "real" home games next year.

Burt, in his effort to sell his plan, noted that by adding extra bleachers to the BJC Stadium, 14,000 persons could be seated at the game. He must have forgotten that Idaho's Neale Stadium can hold 15,872 without the addition of bleachers in the end zones. Approximately 23,000 fans can watch the Vandals and the Bengals play if extra bleachers are added.

The adaptability of Burt's "pull-the-state-together campaign" by the use of college athletics is not feasible. Lets keep the home and away-from-home football series as was originally planned.—L.R.

Demos Support YAF, CCH

Young Democrats gave tentative approval to a Mock Congress by Young Americans for Freedom and to the Citizenship Clearing House's planned political workshop in a recent meeting.

Six new officers were elected at the same meeting. Linda Williams, Gamma Phi is the new secretary, John Webster, off campus, was elected treasurer, and four members at large are Marilyn Hereth, Hays, Kathy McNichols, Gamma Phi, Bob McFarland, Upham, and Bill Jenkins, Beta.

The group voted full support to their new advisor, Clifford Dobler, associate professor of political science.

Mrs. Kay Pell, state committee woman for Latah County Democrats, gave a speech on "Operation Support," an organization backing President Kennedy's program. Mrs. Pell is state chairman for the project.

Readers Dispute Arg Editorial, Library Hours

Mix Answers Holly Dance Editorial

The editorial in Friday's Argonaut labeled, "Holly Week Confusion," should be clarified as the statements and inferences are somewhat misleading.

It has been the policy of the Student Union Building on those dances which are traditionally closed night affairs, to reserve the ballrooms for these events on the same date for the coming year as the dance the previous year, until we receive confirmation from the officers of the organizations involved or the University Calendar Committee of any changes in date. This was done for the Sophomore Holly Dance and entered on the Student Calendar of this year.

The faculty committee in charge of their dance contacted our reservations department on a probable date for their Christmas Dance. They were shown the open dates on our calendar and the probable date of the Sophomore Holly Dance which we had listed as a Friday night instead of Saturday. This was prior to the class elections. The faculty committee contacted our reservations department on several occasions, and as we had received no further information as to the date of the Holly Dance, we assumed, as in the past, that it would be held on a Friday night, and gave permission to the faculty to hold their dance on Saturday, December 9. The faculty would have been happy at that time to have their dance Friday night had they known the Holly Dance was Saturday. Student organizations have always received priority on scheduling these dances but these dates cannot be kept open forever.

Evidently the trouble and problems of this year's Holly dances have arisen because this office and our reservations department did not receive a confirmation of dates from the calendar committee. Whether they were lost in the mail or not delivered we do not know.

We would certainly like to make it definitely clear that the faculty and all persons connected with their dance are certainly not responsible for this so called "confusion."

We want it definitely understood that the sophomore class officers are certainly not responsible, and all of us are very proud of the job they are doing on this year's dance.

We have discussed this matter on closed night affairs with the Vice-President of the ASUI who is going to be responsible for the transmission of these dates from the University Calendar to the one in the Student Union Building. The Sophomore class officers as well as the other class officers will also recommend dates for the next years dances before they go out of office. We would like to clarify any misunderstandings so not to impare any Student-Faculty relationships on this campus, which we believe is one of the finest of any University or College in the Pacific Northwest. I assume full responsibility of these scheduled dates and I don't believe anyone in any way should blame any faculty member or the sophomore class officers for the present scheduled dates.

Gale Mix, ASUI General Manager

equipped with all the journals and books and these are accessible to the graduate students at any time of day or night. The policy of the University to close the library after 5:30 p.m. both on Friday and Saturday is not in any way improving things to satisfy the needs of the students.

We hope to see some action taken to keep the library open at least on Saturday nights to compensate the absence of individual departmental libraries.

Prexy States Young Republican Goals—Purpose

With all the publicity concerning the Young Republicans lately, perhaps a word of explanation is needed to clarify the purpose of the Young Republicans. As I see it, this is the education of the student body in current political thinking of the Republican party. This is bad if the group at the University of Idaho simply parrots what has been agreed upon by the National Republican party; but is good if the students consider issues themselves and come to their own conclusions.

Being Republicans, the group will basically reflect the thinking of Republicans as opposed to that of the Democrats. However, within that limitation, the group has a wide leeway within the various philosophies of Republican factions in which to act and believe.

The duty of each United States citizen, and particularly of college graduates who will become community leaders and respected citizens, is to learn the functions of our government. The person should then make an intelligent decision as to which party he believes is the best equipped to run the government, and then support that party. The University of Idaho also have similar plans for the future.

With a term in the armed forces facing many of us in the near future, we should learn why we are going to be called. The Young Republicans and the Young Democrats can help somewhat if the students will use these organizations and others on campus to learn. The Young Republicans usually have open meetings, and all students and faculty members are invited to come and listen or, if under the age of 36, join and participate.

A statement I once read is appropriate here. "An intellectual awakening must be obtained before political action is possible." An intellectual awakening cannot be obtained solely from textbooks.

Vandals Grab Two Victories In Opening Tilts

In The Spotlight

by Herb Hollinger

Basketball Strategy Pays Off In Pair Of Wins Says Columnist

Whoever set up the Idaho basketball schedule for this year was evidently a master of strategy. Not taking a thing away from the Vandals, they played their hearts out and rightfully won; but scheduling Whitworth College for the first game was definitely a good move. The Pirates played on even terms with the Vandals the first half, not that they should have but they seemed fired-up and Idaho was cold. In the second half, Idaho seemed to sharpen considerably and showed the type of ball they are capable of playing and I hope they can continue to play.

The point is, that Idaho could afford to have a first half like Friday night and not worry too much about whether they would have a big insurmountable lead to overcome. Since the first game is always rough for a team, playing a smaller and easier squad that first game gives it time to iron out mistakes which in later games may be very costly.

Saturday night's game with Gonzaga University showed marked improvement for the Vandals. They were playing a tougher opponent than the night before and so had to play better in order to win. Cipriano has said that Idaho will play each game as they come and with the first two games under his belt, I think it definitely was good strategy to play two teams like Gonzaga and Whitworth, especially Whitworth Friday night.

Even though the game Friday night was a little rough, there were signs of top performance. Namely, Rich Porter, Chuck White, and Lyle Parks looked sharp. White is definitely, along with Porter, a candidate for season scoring honors. Parks was a definite surprise, a pleasant one, in that he looked better than expected at this early in the season.

Saturday night the whole squad looked improved over the previous evening. Jim Scheel came off the bench in the fourth quarter to completely steal the show; and I think that Scheel will be playing a lot of ball this year, if his knee injury will permit him to play the season. Tom Whitfield looked highly improved over the previous night's performance and I think that his performance will improve each game. Whitfield is the type of competitor who gets better every time he plays.

Something else was evident both Friday and Saturday night. Coach Cipriano has two good teams. From the way the reserve strength played those two nights Idaho has probably the best overall strength it has had in many a year. When you have ballplayers like Reg Carolan, Bill Mattis, Fred Crowell, Lyle Parks, Jim Scheel, Tom Gwilliam, and John Penney on the bench you know you have qualified Vandal to fill his spot. In fact, and this is strictly my own opinion, I wouldn't be surprised to see Cipriano play two squads the whole season. When you can do this, you have a good change of playing consistently good ball all year.

The next game will be another step up the ladder to meeting rougher competition. Montana State College ran over WSU and Charlie "Sunk" Sells last weekend, so this might be an indication of a real good ballgame this Friday night for the Vandals.

Personally, I feel that Idaho will beat Montana State College, but by how many points is another question which I wouldn't care to answer. One big factor is that the game is in Memorial Gym and visiting ballplayers have voiced many times before that it's difficult to play here. It seems that Vandal fans are pretty biased and seem to let opposing teams know it thoroughly. This is definitely the way it should be. After all, nobody can expect students to act normally when we're winning, can they?

The frosh squad looks every bit as good as the pre-season reports indicated. Nelson Lavius ran circles around defensive opponents and the rest of the squad seem to be just as qualified.

I might be going out on a limb, but I think that this year's frosh squad can equal or better last year's top frosh record. It is a lot to shoot for but they have the material and Coach Anderson's charges could be another fabulous team for two years in a row. From nothing the attendance this weekend I think that Idaho students feel the same way, regarding the frosh. The gym was more than half filled for both frosh games, mostly by students. This helps considerably in boosting morale for the squad and provides the right atmosphere, provided you are winning.

Whitworth, Gonzaga Felled By Idaho In Rugged Contests

By HERB HOLLINGER

Hopes for one of the strongest Idaho basketball teams in recent years were strengthened this weekend when the 1961-62 Vandals opened the season with a pair of victories over Whitworth College and Gonzaga University, both of Spokane. Idaho downed Whitworth Friday evening 67-56, and Saturday dropped the Bulldogs of Gonzaga 70-57.

Against Whitworth in the season opener, the Pirates grabbed an early lead from a cold shooting Vandal five. In fact both teams were having their troubles as they frequently threw away passes and committed fundamental offensive miscues. Idaho was especially cold on rebounds in the first half but still took a 26-21 lead with them at the gun.

Immediately after the start of the second half, Idaho threw a half and full court press on the Pirates, enough to make the Pirates lose the ball several times. At the end of the third period the Vandals had a commanding lead that they never relinquished. The last of the second half saw Idaho substituting freely with both teams trading basket for basket. The final score: Idaho 67 — Whitworth 56.

Porter, White Lead Rich Porter and Chuck White were the big guns in the Idaho offense with both grabbing 18 points. The other regulars had their troubles as big Ken Maren failed to produce a field goal but had six points on free throws. Lyle Parks, reserve guard, came off the bench and displayed some fine shooting and ball handling, ending the night with eight points.

Whitworth's big guns were guard Clayton Anderson with 16 points and guard Ed Hagen with 11 points. The Pirates' big center, Gary McGlocklin only had five points but was a big rebounder for the shorter Pirates until he fouled out late in the second half.

Gonzaga Tough In the Saturday night contest the Gonzaga Bulldogs, without fabulous Frank Burgess, fought a tight defensive battle with the Vandals the first half. Idaho got better rebounding than the previous encounter with Whitfield and Maren leading the attack on the boards.

Another of Idaho's reserves came off the bench to break open the game when Bill Mattis dunked two in a row to give the Vandals a 30-20 lead near the end of the first half. At halftime Idaho led 30-22.

Idaho Goes Cold The start of the second half was a different story as the Bulldogs began finding the range while Idaho went stone cold. Gonzaga closed the Vandal lead and with 12:25 minutes left in the second half the Bulldogs went into the lead for the first time. The lead was short-lived, however, as Maren sank a 20 footer to give Idaho the lead 37-26.

The Vandals managed to keep a small lead on the strength of Porter and Floan while the rest of the squad had difficulty finding the hoop. With 5:30 left in the game the Bulldogs went out in front again on a shot by standout sophomore guard Jim Harris. Porter then hit two quick jump shots to tie the game and Jim Scheel, sophomore reserve, dunked two free throws to send the Vandals into the lead for the rest of the game.

Scheel really poured it on in the last three minutes with nine points to ice the game and give Idaho the final nod, 70-57.

Rich Porter was again Idaho's top scorer with 16 points with the red-hot Scheel next with 13. Tom Whitfield broke into the scoring column with 11 points. White had 8, Maren 7, Floan, Parks, and Mattis all had 5 to round out Idaho scoring.

"We did a pretty good job on defense, a couple of breaks helped us beat Gonzaga," commented Coach Cipriano on the weekend games.

"Our press helped beat Whitworth. The offense isn't very good yet, but the sophomores did pretty well for their first couple of games," he said.

INTRAMURALS

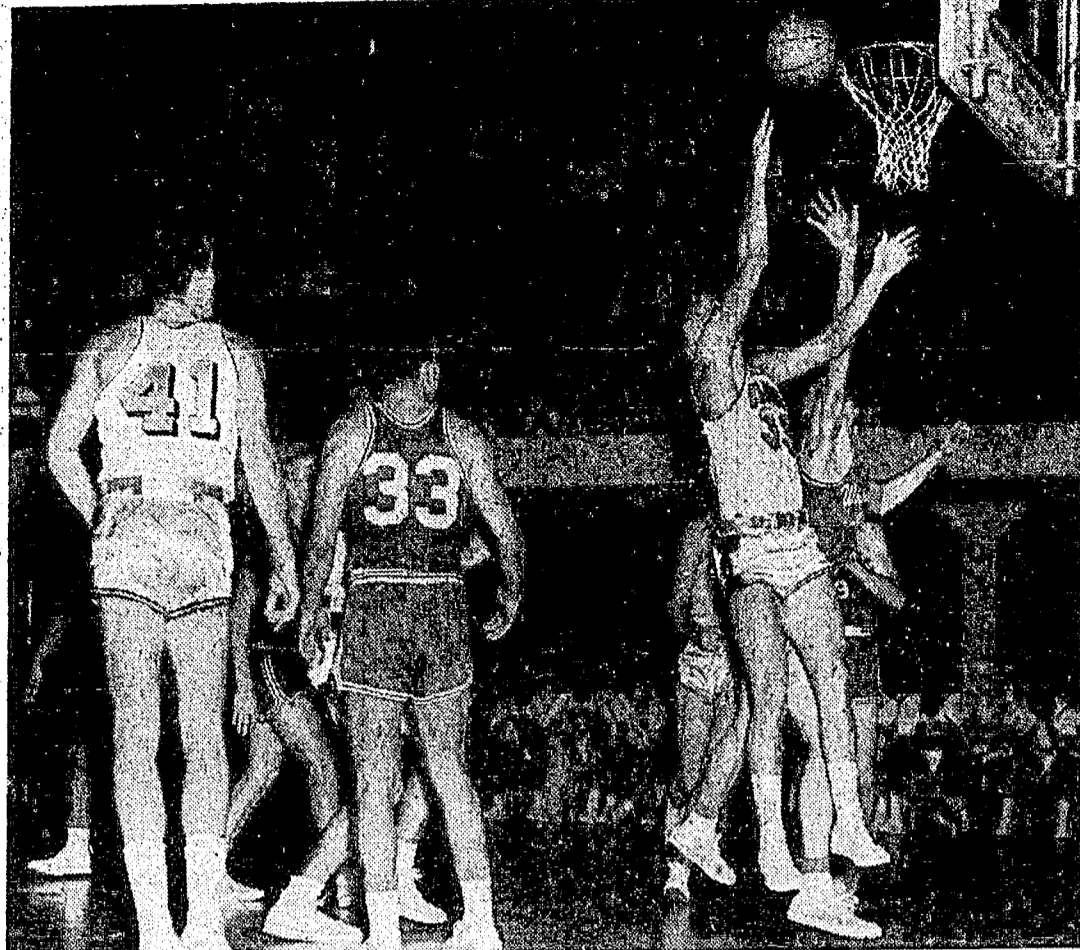

Two more league games are left to be played in intramural volleyball before the regular season comes to an end. All that will remain after that will be playoffs to break ties, interleague playoffs, and the campus championship game.

Here is the last of the action in League III play: Willis Sweet downed Gault, 15-8, 9-15, 15-4. TMA and Shoup shared a double forfeit. Lindley took Campus Club, 15-3, 17-15, and Upham nailed down the league title solidly by downing Chrisman, 15-10, 15-0.

Final League IV action looked like this: Chrisman 2 defeated Upham 2 to gain a tie for first place. Lindley 2 downed Campus Club 2, 13-15, 15-7, 15-1. TMA 2 took Shoup 2, 7-15, 16-14, 15-7. Willis Sweet 2 defeated Gault 2, 15-4, 15-1.

Fin Men Lose But Not Beaten

Defeated in points but not in spirit, the Vandal swimmers returned to Moscow late Sunday from the Far West Relays at Eugene.

Oregon's Ducks easily won the meet with 78 points, while WSU was second with 54. Oregon State and Idaho rounded out scoring with 44 and 11 points, respectively.

Although the Vandals were far back pointwise, Coach Clarke Mitchell said his inexperienced squad surprised him by showing good desire.

"The boys have a lot to learn before they will start winning any events, but they learned a lot last Saturday and I hope they will improve enough to give WSU a battle this weekend," said Mitchell. Both the frosh and varsity meet WSU in Pullman this weekend.

Frosh Hoopsters Notch Two Easy Games During Weekend

The Idaho frosh basketball team opened its 1961-62 season by duplicating the varsity record-two victories in two games. Friday evening the frosh dropped the Whitworth frosh 68-45, and Saturday night the same fired-up squad mangled an outmanned, small North Idaho Junior College five, 88-55.

Starting for the Vandalbabes were Terry Henson and Ed Tollefson at guards, Nelson Lavius and Jim Halte at forwards, and Tom Moreland at center. In the game against Whitworth, Idaho took a lead and never was headed with Nelson Lavius leading the way.
