

It Snowed!

The first snow of the season hit the streets and sidewalks of the University of Idaho today, as campus students expressed mixed emotions on nature.

"Great, I can wear my new snowboots!" was the typical remark of the style-conscious coed.

"Where in the heck will I find money to buy snow tires?" campus males questioned.

Although the snowfall was scant, it was enough for University students to gripe about the cold, plan snowball fights and get enthused about skiing conditions on Brundage Mountain and other ski areas.

Sights of "dignified" student leaders merrily sliding down the sidewalk on the way to their next class, was enough to cheer the students who had just flunked their mid-terms.

The snowfall was enough to create slick streets, however, and cause students planning on trips home Thanksgiving to begin questioning the road situation.

Voting Stats Upset By Dull Election And Migration To Complex

By KIP PETERSON
Argonaut Associate Editor

A campus migration and a dull election provided the setting for a general upset in voting statistics. Thus, a capricious voting population — newly concentrated in the Wallace Complex area — migrated from the Administration Building polling station to the Agricultural Science Building — while voting itself dropped 18.8 per cent. This was pointed out by Election Board Chairman Gary Green to the Executive Board.

Party leaders and election officials can only speculate about reasons for the voting drop — from 2,765 ballots cast to 2,445 this fall. A seemingly moderate drop which might be accounted for by the shorter campaign, new poster placement regulations and waning interest in party issues, this drop of 320 voters becomes significant in light of the soaring enrollment of the University as a whole.

As usual, more freshmen voted than in the other classes, although this number was also down from last fall.

All Voting Nosedived
Freshmen voting dropped from 988 students to 870; sophomores, 703 to 662; juniors, 601 to 484; and seniors, 453 to 331.

Seniors posted the only close ballot of the election when Joan Anderson, Kappa, was elected Senior Class secretary over Donna Striegel, Ethel Steel, by a vote of 163 to 161.

Last fall, there were two close races — one vote difference for senior vice president and six votes difference for junior treasurer.

Board Anticipated Need
Election Board members anticipated the need for a polling station close to the Complex, so they changed the one at the Engineering Building to the Ag Science — and results justified their move.

Voting jumped from 25.6 per cent at the Engineering Building to 38 per cent at the Ag Science Building — while it dropped off sharply (from 36.7 to 22.2 per cent, at the Ad Building.

The Student Union polling station showed a moderate increase — from 37.7 per cent to 39.8.

Problem — Class Status
These election statistics, plus some speculation about possible methods of solving problems of class status for five-year students, law students, graduate students and students who have switched curricula (thereby disrupting their class status) were discussed by Election Board Chairman Gary Green, Phi Delta, at Executive Board Tuesday night.

Green guessed that perhaps

'Friday's Vacation Due To Students'

The addition of an extra day to Thanksgiving vacation was brought about by a change in student opinion, Dr. D. R. Theophilus, University President, said here yesterday.

He commented that Friday was added to the vacation as a result of current student wishes, but he declined to say where the credit lay for bringing about the vacation change. He pointed out that the change had to be approved by the Administrative Council, the President's office, and finally the Board of Regents.

Students this year gave up the usual Armistice Day vacation in receiving an extra day off for Thanksgiving. A poll of living groups conducted last spring indicated that Armistice Day was the vacation day most students favored giving up in exchange for the Friday following Thanksgiving.

Theophilus explained that trading vacation days was the only way in which a four-day Thanksgiving vacation could be given.

"The University could not give any more total days of vacation," he said, "because it is getting to the point where it is not a good academic principle.

"The policy of having the Friday after Thanksgiving off has gone back and forth several times during the 36 years I've been here," Theophilus said. He cited changes in student wishes as the reason for this.

"Four or five years ago, in order to get longer spring vacations, students insisted that we would not have Friday off, but would rather have the day off in the spring," Theophilus added. When asked if he thought having the Friday following Thanksgiving off would remain as University policy in the future, he answered, "I have no reason to assume that this is not eminently satisfactory to everyone concerned."

Regional Viceroy Dick Lewis, Montana State University, will preside over the convention. A general business session will be held Saturday from 9 to 10:30 a.m. concerning regional, national and local chapter problems. During the latter part of the afternoon business session the regional princess will be presented to the delegates.

Advisor To Speak
The national advisor of the Intercollegiate Knights, William F. Hoehsel, will speak at the official luncheon at 12:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom. A taped speech by Gene Harder, national IK king from the University, will also be played at the luncheon. Harder is attending another regional convention in Pocatello this weekend.

A tea at 4 p.m. Saturday in honor of the new princess and the duchesses will mark the close of the convention.

CHEM TURNOUT

Six discussion groups will be led by Bill Frates, ASUI president; Dave Soper, public relations director; Tory Nelson, national president of the Association of College and University Residence Halls; Carvel Whiting, ASUI vice-president; and four high school students.

Faculty speakers will be Professor Leon G. Green, head of the Department of Physical Education, and Sidney W. Miller, professor of education administration.

Regional IK Meet Set Here Today

A regional princess contest Saturday morning will highlight a two-day regional convention of the Intercollegiate Knights, national men's service honorary.

Approximately 75 delegates from ten chapters including campuses in Montana, North Idaho and Washington will attend this convention, according to Arlen Marley, IK duke.

Registration at 4 p.m. today in the Student Union Building. Delegates will be housed at the various men's living groups on Friday night. The duchesses, each representing a local chapter of the IKs, will attend a tea at 7:30 tonight with the contest judges. The girls will be judged on their personalities at this time.

The princess contest, which is free and open to the public, is

New Frontier Debated By English Team

"Resolved: That the New Frontier Has Lost Its Way" was the subject of a debate between teams from Idaho and Cambridge University, England, last night in the Student Union Ballroom.

University students Donald Duff McKee, Jr., and Wayne Kidwell, both law students, debated the negative side. Taking the positive side were Cambridge debaters Michael Howard and John Toulmin.

The English debaters are on a tour of ten Western states and will debate 43 different times. Other topics to be debated on the tour include: "This House Would Rather Be Red than Dead;" "The American Dream Has Become a Nightmare;" "God Is Irresponsible;" "The Cold War Is No Longer a Holy War;" "The United States Needs a National Health Service;" "Law and Justice Are Incompatible in a Capitalist Society;" and "America's Record in Race Relations Is a Blot on Western Society."

On some subjects the British team splits and one debates with the American team.

Both students are studying to be barristers, British court lawyers, and are members of the Cambridge University Conservative Association and the Cambridge University Society.

The tour is sponsored by the Institute of International Education.

Freeman Returns 'A Typical Scot'

"Typical Scotsman. Too tight to travel first-class."

And that's how it may have looked to the passing Englishman as he made his way through our group of American college students. We were sitting on our suitcases in the crowded aisles of the British Railway's London to Edinburgh express "The Flying Scot."

It wasn't that we were tight, but we were traveling "the Experiment" way, in accordance with the aim of the Experiment in International Living to provide us with opportunities to meet and talk with British people in ways that American tourists frequently miss.

Our group of 11 students was en route to the Edinburgh area of Scotland to live with Scottish families.

For the next six weeks we would be integrated into these families and our hosts and hostesses would become our Scottish dads and moms.

From the comments of the other members of the group, I knew that all of us were anxious to meet these people who had agreed to be part of the Experiment.

"Was Nervous"

I was somewhat nervous when I stepped off the train in Edinburgh. I knew little about the family I would be living with. I was worried about how different

H. S. Students Debate Here

One hundred high school students will be visiting Idaho Saturday to debate the topic, "Resolved: The Federal Government Should Provide Medical Care for All Citizens at Public Expense."

The tournament will start at 9 a.m., followed by morning rounds at 9:15 and 10:30, and afternoon rounds at 1 and 2:30. The schedule will be posted at the Borah Theater of the Student Union.

Schools participating include Lewiston, Grangeville, Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint, Moscow, Post Falls, Kootenai, Oakesdale, Wash., Colfax and Pullman, Wash.

U.S. Position In India Stronger Now

By LINDA BITHELL
Argonaut Staff Writer

The United States position in India is stronger today than it was a year ago, Sharan Labh Singh, University student from Punjab, India, said Thursday. "The people of the United States are popular in India," she said, "especially after the aid you extended to us during the Chinese attack last year. The Indian people are closer to the Americans than they are to any other country, including the European countries," she said.

Miss Singh, who says she is interested in religion and politics, credits part of the United States popularity in India to American missionaries and missionary schools, peace corps workers, American engineers in India and other people to people programs.

No Matter
"No matter what you read in books," she said, "you can't understand a nation or its problems until you know the people. I knew quite a bit about the United States because there are many Americans in India. Many of them are my good friends. I lived with an American family part of the time when I was in school. . . . I was educated at an American Mission School in Punjab. Still, there were a lot of things to learn."

She Likes Children
"I taught pre-school children before I came to the United States. A friend of mine in Genesee has two children whom I occasionally see. "When I go back, which may be a few years from now, I'll probably teach at a university, however."

Miss Singh prefers America's system of education.

"More and more Indian women are being educated, especially since we have been freed from the British, and our system is getting better, but higher education in America is, I think, superior. In India one takes four or five courses for two years after high school graduation. Here one can take the courses in one semester. Your system seems to go faster and give more."

She graduated from Punjab University in 1957, and came to the United States in 1962. She will have her masters degree by 1964.

Indian women wear bindis, the red spot in the center of their forehead, mostly as a beauty mark, she said.

Traffic Light?
"I wore one when I first came," she said. "When my friend's younger son wanted to know why, I did not have an adequate answer because it means a different thing in almost every area of India. His older brother said that it was a traffic light used to stop cars."

Sometimes little children confuse her with American Indians, she said.

"Once I heard my friend's little boy say to his brother 'Sharan is an Indian but not a squaw, can you figure that out? Another time he assured me that there were good Indians and bad Indians, but that I was a good one. I think he had been watching television."

Miss Singh often sees her name misspelled, she said. "People always misspell my name because they think it is English," she said. "Sharan is a traditional Indian name. It is even in many of the sacred scriptures. People always think it is spelled Sharan."

She thinks that people are essentially the same everywhere. "I don't really feel much different here than I do in India," she said. "I have close friends both places. Some of my friends here want to come to India some day."

"I am very much impressed by the friendliness here. Everyone is helpful. . . especially the faculty. I can go to them any time and they always seem glad to help."

one per cent of the voters voted in the wrong class because of either clerical errors in the Kampus Key or because of their special academic situations.

Also, he noted that "we held this election somewhat illegally," because the ASUI Constitution calls for the election on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November (or Nov. 5) this year while the election was actually held Nov. 7.

E-Board Ignored Illegality
E-Board took no action about the illegality of holding the election on that date and glossed over discussion of the voting date.

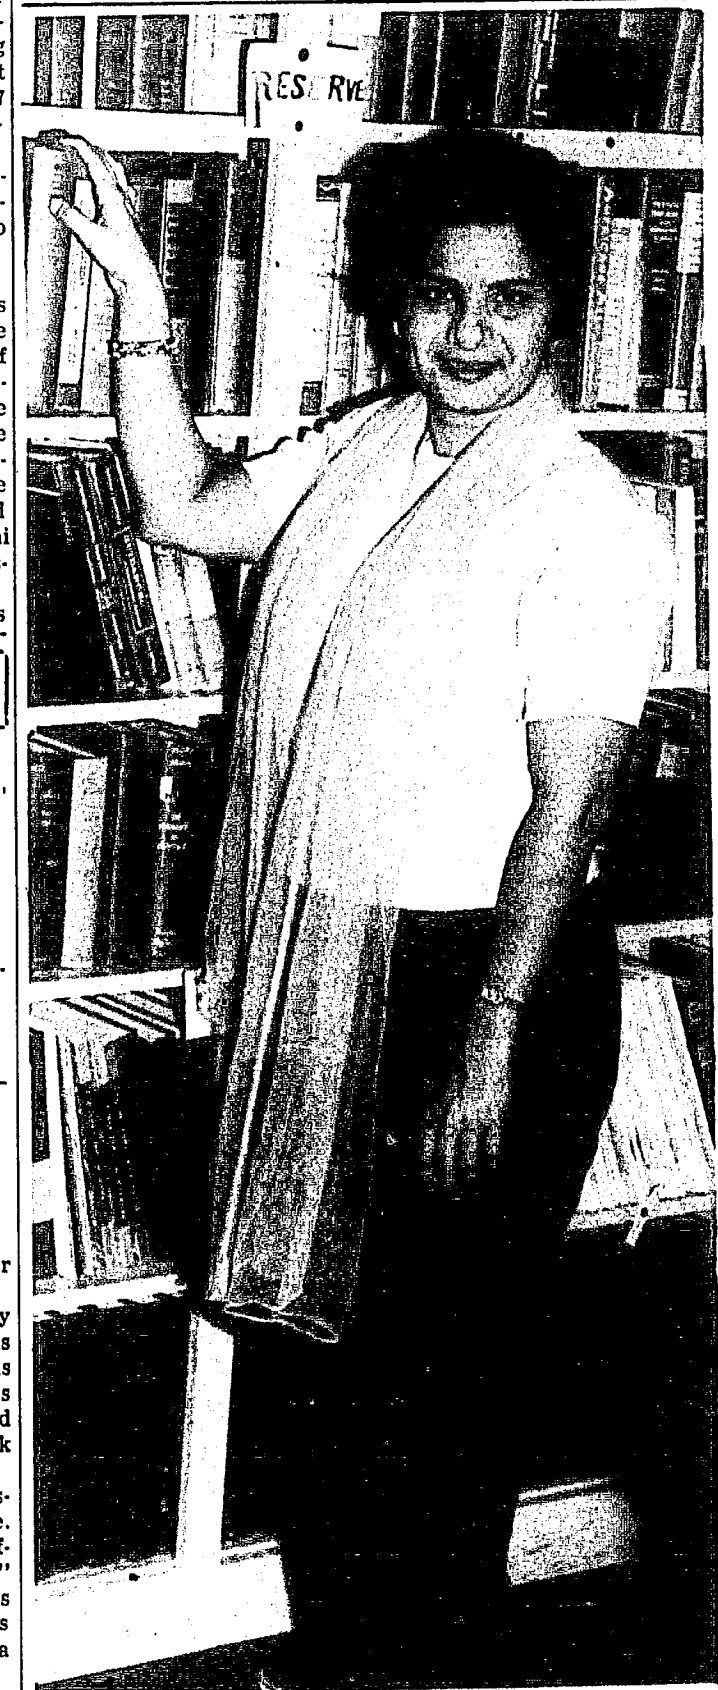

In other business, E-Board retracted its action last week which placed the names of class presidents on the roll as ex-officio members.

E-Board Member Jim Scheel said that there was nothing in

The Golden Fleece

WELCOME NEWS

One of the most welcome bits of news of the semester is that the University telephone switchboard will be going on a 24 hour basis the first of December. Not only that, but the work load of the operators will be somewhat reduced.

There is nothing more frustrating than to try to reach the University switchboard for hours and to receive no answer. We realize that this is not the fault of the operator, nor is it the fault of the University.

The problem lies in the fact the switchboard was built for one operator. Since it was designed several years ago, we can recognize the possible mistakes of the persons who planned the Information Center.

But nevertheless, it seems a shame that the switchboard that serves an area almost the size of the city of Moscow is equipped with only one operator. Not only that, but as the University grows, it is going to become more and more difficult to be able to contact the University switchboard.

Have you ever tried to verify a Moscow line from a University phone? Since you can not contact the Moscow operator from a University phone, you must dial the University operator who then dials the Moscow operator, who then verifies the line.

Even though the procedure seems confusing, it works out pretty well — providing you can contact the University operator, and providing the University operator can contact the Moscow operator.

Well — time will tell!

LOST ITS WAY?

The International Debate with Cambridge University, England, in the Student Union Ballroom last night was a refreshing deviation from the academic way of life.

It's good to see that the debate could be held this year. Last year the Irish debate had to be called off, because one of the debaters had a death in the family.

"The New Frontier Has Lost Its Way" is apropos with the coming national election. I imagine the debate received a lot of comment.

My Column

By Mark Brown

I had a real treat last night. I watched "Probe," an ASUI idiot box show which, fortunately, has a fairly limited viewing area.

"Probe" was started under the ASUI Educational Improvement Committee last year some time.

I can't remember, but I suppose that Sniff Heldred took credit for the idea as he did for darn near everything around springtime last year.

As I recall, he was running for something; either president of the Stigma Cry House or some lesser office.

But getting back to "Probe," I was impressed right away when I heard the opening theme.

It came on with a fanfare that would put Elma Grahn and her great new show, "Math Nine," to shame.

The topic of the show was "How To Get Away With Drinking When You're Only 19 Years Of Age," and it proved quite informative. This was the second or third and hopefully last in a series of morality topics which the cast and panel of "Probe" have been exploiting to build viewer ratings.

The prime air time that the show occupies is due, I suppose, to the fact that there are no old movies available to the KUID studios.

For some reason, the morality angle wasn't particularly stressed in the discussion of "How To Get Around Those Silly Booze Laws." I think this was perhaps the best thing about the show.

No one really came right out and said that he was against drinking for moral reasons and I can guess why.

I got the message, however; I'll pass it along to those of you who weren't lucky enough to be watching.

If you're going to drink don't get caught. This can result in discomfort to the pocketbook and is therefore to be avoided.

Secondly, if you play it smart you won't get caught.

From the originality of these conclusions, I could tell right away that a lot of deep thinking had gone into the subject.

They remind me of some conclusions I drew several years ago after extensive soul-searching and weeks of meditation.

"Be good. Being good carries a more wholesome public image than being bad."

"When you are bad, try to make it seem like you're doing something good. Most people can't tell the difference."

"If enough people think something is good, it will be good, no matter how bad it is."

With the aid of these rules and maybe a poll sci book or two, a person could run for ASUI president.

Juniors To Pick Extended Board

Juniors are asked to elect their extended board members according to Jim Faucher, Sigma Chi, Junior class president.

The names are to be turned in to Gail Nystrom at Hays before Tuesday. The first extended board meeting will be held after Thanksgiving vacation.

Satirist Looks At 'Askance' Wednesday

"Looking Askance" is just what John Stevens, editor and publisher of "Askance," did Wednesday night.

The satirist who publishes a personal journal on social justice and peace and disarmament spoke to an open meeting sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, professional women's journalism society.

His publication is a combination of short articles, original cartoons and a mixture of not-often known facts which he calls "Potpourri." The latter he obtains during hurried noon-time scannings in the Washington State University library.

Through articles such as "World Peace Through World Ball" and "Red, White and Black" Stevens presents his ideas on peace and integration.

His "Potpourri" pages include such things as "Did you know that each issue of 'National Review' carries an ad for McGuffey Readers?" and "Do you know what NAACP really stand for? Never Annoy Adam Clayton Powell."

Stevens discussed his publication after giving a preview of similar papers such as the "Petal Paper;" "Muhammed Speaks," a Muslim paper; and "Monocle," a Harvard paper.

His publication is a quarterly one that is presently being circulated to 400 readers. The subscription rate is one dollar.

In one case he received the rate in the form of ten dime tabs between two bottle caps. This not only answered his request for subscription money but also for reader response, in any form.

In the fourth issue Jim Crockett, former University professor, wrote an article which Stevens entitled "He Didn't Sign the Loyalty Oath." Crockett refused to sign the Idaho loyalty oath which passed the State Legislature last year.

Stevens is currently technical editor of the Washington State University Institute of Technology and assistant professor of journalism at WSU. He began his journal of satire in 1962.

Progress Reports

E-Boarders View Job As More Than Just An 'Area Of Concern'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles explaining and listing the activities of each Executive Board member. Today's pair is Jim Scheel (progress report number 47) and Ken Weatherble (progress report 48).

By KIP PETERSON
 Argonaut Associate Editor
 Executive Board has changed — from one huge committee selection — and organization group to one which instead delves into the basic problems concerning the ASUI government and its functions.

E-Board member Jim Scheel, SAE, explained that until the formation of Activities Council, E-Board members had to handle such things as Homecoming, Dad's Day, Mother's Day, etc. Now the members are free to work on more basic problems affecting the students and to spend more time with such things as improving the image of the campus held throughout the State and by the Legislature.

"Since Activities Council has taken over the legwork of the ASUI structure" E-Board members have worked more with basic problems and have also adopted areas of concern which they do in addition to their basic duties, Scheel said.

Scheel is E-Board's Legalist. Scheel's area of concern deals with revision of the ASUI Constitution and Regulations and clarifying the University Code of conduct for the students.

Last spring Scheel checked the Constitution before printing it in the Student Handbook and worked on revision of the Regulations to make them more complete and up-to-date.

"Upon the printing of the new Student Handbook, I have gone over it and found no noticeable errors in the Constitution or in the Regulations," he noted in his progress report.

Revision Brings Suggestions
 "Through revision of the Regulations which revamped the Pep Band, made a start toward a varsity rifle team, put the public relations director and Activities Council in the Regulations and codified the Election Board rules, he said.

Work on clarifying the University Code and the reasons for its existence will begin Friday with a Student-Faculty Committee meeting, he said.

Why We Have Rules . . .
 "It's to let students know why we have rules and why the Administration has jurisdiction over you even when you're somewhere else in the state," Scheel commented.

Miscellaneous projects (which Scheel said he did not consider part of his basic E-Board duties include checking with the Administration about sanctioning a bus ride for the Idaho State game and assisting with the selection of students for merit citations.

Esox Fables

By Bob Banashek

ESOX WALKS
 I walk around this campus and perceive hundreds of faces daily. Some of them are smiling, some frown, others have squinting eyes in the gaudy brightness before eight o'clock class.

I have been told that the faces I see represent a fair cross section of the upper third of the U.S. population. Faces I see and faces like them on other campuses belong to a future that is rapidly becoming the present.

Some of the faces I see may build bridges that will outlive them by many generations. Some of the faces may make laws that will blind my children's children. Others of them may become physicians and learn how to cheat death.

Some may perform humbler tasks with equal success and less recognition.

Here at the U of Idaho these faces are set aside to learn the arts and sciences of these occupations. A society that strongly demands that the other 2/3 of the faces get out and earn many taxable dollars simply looks the other way, hoping that when they do get out they will be worth even more.

It seems strange and pleasantly ironic that this place, which is the birthplace of maturity and grave purposes is also the last chance for a final fling at the irresponsibility of childhood.

I have seen these leaders of men — these makers of bridges and laws — standing happily knee-deep in mud. I have seen them dancing in the streets; parading through buildings in their pajamas; yelling as if their lives were at stake for the guys in the gold helmets to beat the hell out of the other guys.

Last week I saw a few of those faces on the WSU Walk. They were faces dripping with rain, flushed with cold and smiling with joy at the great insane uselessness of the thing they are doing.

Last week Esox was among those faces. And for some unknown reason I, too, enjoyed walking nine miserable miles in driving rain to pay an annual debt on the merits of those guys in the gold helmets who did not beat the hell out of the other guys.

Here, in this place, are mingled Model United Nations and Turkey Trots; political intrigues and "raunch dances." Here are faces who may try to change the world and who may walk through the rain and cold just because it is raining, and there are nine miles, and because no one in his right mind would want to do such a thing. A time and a place for everything? Yes. . . right here and right now and all at once.

And Esox digs it. Ballad of the Walk. . . (to the tune of "Tijuana Jail")

"Oh back one day About a week ago We set out to walk from Sunny Idaho

"We set out a pacin' Along the Pullman Road When we were halted By a Washington Toad

"Says he with pleasure "You can't use this street In friendly Washington So do they greet

"Did he stop the Vandals? What are the odds? A Vandal not walkin' Can ride the rods

"Now this verse is hurtin' But so was the game Next year I'm certain Won't be the same

"This year o' Moo U We took the train Next year you Cougars Will walk in the rain."

Chorus supplied on request; Esox is open for recording contracts.

Mouse Roars In SUB Film

"The Mouse That Roared," a British comedy, will be shown at the Student Union Borah Theater Friday and Sunday, according to Ron Post, Sigma Nu, chairman of SUB movies.

Stars of the feature are Peter Sellers and Jean Seaburg. Friday's showings will begin at 7 and 9 p.m. and Sunday's at 8 p.m. Admission is 35 cents for singles and 60 cents for couples.

In the movie the Grand Duchy of Fenwick, facing bankruptcy, declares war on the United States, expecting to lose and be splendidly rehabilitated. The little group invades New York during an air raid alert when the streets are deserted.

Unaware that they are supposed to lose the war, they capture a scientist and his assistant and their newly invented terrible weapon. Other nations of the world are forced to make terms with the little country.

"Europe and You," a color travelogue, will be the co-feature. Bushmen of the Kalahari wasteland in southern Africa use an arrow poison so potent that one drop can kill a man if it enters the bloodstream. The primitive tribesmen get the poison from the pupa of a beetle.

Prexy's Son Honors Dad With Plaque

A bronze Lindley award plaque has been placed in the University Administration Building honoring two outstanding students in the College of Letters and Science.

Peter B. Kelly, a 1962 graduate in Pre-Medicine, and Marvin D. Heilesen, a 1963 Bachelor of Arts graduate, have been listed on the Lindley plaque.

The award is made to an outstanding student in the College of Letters and Science on the basis of scholarship and character. It is presented in memory of Ernest Hiram Lindley, president of the University from 1917 to 1920, and Elizabeth K. Lindley, class of 1920.

Lindley, now special assistant to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, is a former editor of Newsweek magazine and the author of numerous books on the political scene.

Dear Jason!

A serious menace to life and limb was revealed on the sports page of the November issue of the Argonaut. It was horrifying to discover that card-carrying gorillas were allowed to roam freely on the U. of Idaho campus.

One's heart feels a sense of pride in knowing that the Army ROTC has organized the Christmas Raiders as an "anti-gorilla" training unit.

No longer must one traverse the campus under a veil of fear, fleeing from shadows, wearing sneakers to the library for that long run home in the dark, and not trusting anyone with more than a day's growth of beard.

Long live the Christmas Raiders and their courage in the face of this gorilla menace.

In Humble Thanks,

Probe—On Immorality
Liquor Problems Aired

"Woodsies," pre-functions, post-functions, altered identification and other problems relating to the use of beer and liquor by collegians were discussed on "Probe" Thursday.

"Probe," a student show on the campus closed-circuit television station KUID, is currently running a five part series about the problem of immorality.

Sam Eismann, off-campus, a member of Judicial Council, noted that the council has "never had a case such as that (referring to liquor violations) and that 'for some reason Dean (Charles O.) Decker doesn't seem fit to refer these cases to our Council.'"

In reference to being prosecuted by local officials for liquor violations and by campus officials also, Eismann said that students could "be prosecuted downtown and get slapped on the wrist by the University at the same time" without involving double jeopardy.

Gary Randall, off-campus law student, asked Len Bielenberg, Latah County prosecuting attorney, if police officers can enter apartments, hotels and motels without search warrants.

Bielenberg said he thought the officers would require search warrants unless they were making an arrest.

"We've been around for a number of years and we've never been raided yet," commented Eismann, noting that "I firmly believe that a law is no better than its enforceability."

Then Sharlene Gage, Theta president, said that the State law isn't being enforced, especially in regard to women students and that many living groups have had to make rules prohibiting underage girls from drinking.

Bielenberg refuted the students' charges that the laws aren't being enforced by saying: "The mere fact that people get away with things doesn't mean the law isn't being enforced" and that usually pre-parties and post-parties are held in an "out-of-the-way place"—and "that's the way they (the students) plan it."

Dr. Leon G. Green, professor and head of physical education at the University, has been given a citation of meritorious service by the Idaho Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

The award was the first of its kind presented to any person in the state. It represents a quarter-century of work by Dr. Green in developing health programs, and developing state parks and recreation programs.

Dr. Green first came to the University as a student from Bancroft, and was outstanding as an end on the football team. Since 1940, he has been a member of the faculty. He holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Idaho, and his doctorate from New York University.

Vandals To Hit Hard

Vandal coach Dee Andros stated that one way that Idaho will win the game will be to hit hard. The Vandals had this trait earlier in the season, and seemed to have lost some of it until this last weekend. Against Idaho State the Vandals set an all-time record in holding ISU to a total net of 78 yards. The old record was 91 yards by San Jose in 1951. It was also Idaho's first shutout since the Vandals blanked Utah 20-0 in 1958.

Andros compared Ariz. on a State with Oregon. "They don't grind out the long drive and they don't throw the long pass. They hit a short pass and run for long yardage or they use their great speed to slip through a hole and go for a touchdown. With the speed that this team has, one mistake and it's six points."

Naccarato Leads Rushing

The Vandals will be calling on top rusher Rich Naccarato to handle the ball carrying on Saturday. The junior from Spokane rolled up 424 yards in 86 carries this season and leads the team by almost 200 yards. Bill Scott, back in the starting backfield after a week's demotion to the second team, holds the best average, 6.9 yards per carry.

Galen Rogers, co-captain full-back from Clarkston, Wash., took over the scoring lead with two touchdowns last Saturday and he now has 38 points. Vern Leyde still is the top receiver with 14 grabs and Mickey Rice pushed his punting average back up to an even 40 yards per kick.

The ol' song goes something like "Don't fence me in..." As the Vandals take the field tomorrow night against Arizona State it might not be a bad idea for them to remember this song. They will be trying for their first win outside of the border of Idaho.

The Sun Devils from Arizona State will be striving to hold the Vandals to this perfect record outside of this State, and they should have their hands full. After beating Idaho State last weekend, the Vandals are definitely "up" for this game, and the Sun Devils might have to resort to cactus and Gila monsters to stop them. The Idaho defense has been spectacular and if the offensive unit gets in gear, the Devils might have to use scorpions.

After the Vandals' last appearance in Arizona, the fans down there might think that the Idaho team should be disregarded. Also, after the Arizona game Vandal Head Coach Dee Andros did quite a bit of switching around. Reason? Nothing officially has been said but it might not be hard to speculate.

The Vandals' first appearance in Arizona this year was definitely a complete failure, and after it Andros moved five men off the starting team. There is one thing which will make a player harder, and that is competition for his position. If this is the reason Andros moved those men off the first team, his plan worked to perfection and the Vandals turned around and beat Idaho State last weekend.

It is going to be a tough game for the team this weekend, there's no denying it. But if the cactus isn't growing too high, and the Gila monsters and scorpions aren't roaming too freely, the team will be singing a song on the plane back to Moscow something like "From the North came a tribe brave and bold..."

Idaho's new Basketball Coach Jim Goddard seems to have his hands full. The team this year has learned five new offenses and defenses. With their first game coming up fast on Dec. 2, it might have to be a little trial and error procedure for the team. The prospects for the players are good, and with the fine coach that they have, the season should be very enjoyable for them and the school.

Goddard's other problem is that of being a new coach, teaching a bunch of boys who have never been under him before, and coaching in a new school. If anyone thinks that the basketball team this coming season will be as good or close to good as the team was last year, I think that they will be disappointed.

The team has a lot of potential which still has to be cultivated. This would pertain primarily to the sophomores and some of the juniors. As to the seniors on the team, many of the starting positions on the team are still open, says Goddard, and over 5,000 fans are waiting for the results.
