Appropriation Is Topic On Year's First "Probe" Tonight On U. TV; At 6:30

The University and appropriations from the current legislature will be discussed on the first "Probe" program of 1965 on KUID TV 6:30 p.m. tonight.

"Probe", a television program sponsored by the Educational Improvement Committee for the past two years, appears on the closed circuit campus station.

Panel members, moderated by Dave Soper, off-campus, will discuss "The Importance of the University in Getting Appropriations from the Current Legislative Session."

Panel members will include Dr. R. Theophilus, university president; J. W. Watts, business manager of the University; Troy Bussey, manager of the Moscow Chamber of Commerce, and Larry Grimes, Beta, Executive Board member.

"We hope this program will provide the students with an insight into the financial crisis approaching the University," Soper said.

"Some of the questions to be discussed will include what efforts, the University makes, what if we should fail, and the proposed increase in faculty salaries."

"The program will concentrate on the real importance of the money to be appropriated and the plans for salaries and general expenses," said Dick Owen, FarmHouse, chairman of "Probe."

It will serve as a follow-up to the visit of the legislators to the campus in November, he said.

Originally the program was scheduled to appear before the Christmas holidays but the number of activities forced its cancellation, Owen said.

Another program being considered for "Probe" is the future of the University as a physical plant. It would show locations of buildings and malls to be constructed.

Programs included in last year's "Probe" were one interviewing Senator Frank Church of Idaho and one discussing the publishing of the Argonaut.

As a part of the Educational Improvement Committee, "Probe" is an aid in studying grievances, evaluating courses and probing areas of interest.

The first "Probe" concerned the 1962 Cuban crisis. Since that time the tone has changed from national interest to more of a State and campus level.

The legislature has served as a topic for Probe before. Probe was televised each week until this year, when the committee, headed by Bill McCann, SAE, decided that monthly or bi-monthly presentations would arouse more interest.

E-Board To Hold Meeting On TV

Tonight the E-Board meeting will be televised at 7 p.m. on KUID-TV with part of the agenda devoted to the Interim Committee's consideration of dropping mid-term grades.

E-Board members have been taking sample polls of the students' opinion as the make living group visitations.

"The meeting will be a regular one to give students a chance to see what actually happens at E-Board meetings," Jim Johnston, ASUI president, said.

While the meeting is in progress, Dave Soper, off campus, will be commenting from the announcer's booth at the Radio-TV Center where the program will be televised.

First Time
The program which will follow the first "Probe" program is the first time an E-Board meeting has been televised.

If there is an audience of 1500 students, the program's purpose will be successful, Johnston said.

Interim Committee is scheduled to act on the proposals to drop mid-term grades Thursday. The committee is comprised of professors from each of the colleges of the University.

Religion Institute Changes Name

The Idaho Institute of Religion recently changed its name to the Idaho School of Religion. The change has involved consolidation of the Idaho Institute, Catholic Institute, and the Episcopal Institute.

C-CAP Plans Program, Elects Officers At Meet

Morris Campbell, Delt, newly elected president of the Cross-Campus Action Party, said that for the recruitment of individuals, not of living groups.

Campbell, elected at the C-CAP meeting Wednesday night, said that C-CAP will continue its grievance committee as a check on elected student officials, C-CAP officials as well as others.

This year C-CAP elected two vice presidents instead of one. They are Larry French, Lindley, vice president in charge of public relations; and Bob Aldrich, Theta Chi, vice president in charge of publicity. Sandra Funk, Gamma Phi, was elected secretary, and Bob Anderson, Sigma Nu, was elected treasurer.

Campbell said that some of C-CAP's projects are the revision of the party's constitution and its convention system.

Convention chairman is Pat Cobb, Hays, and Jan Wendler, Gamma Phi, is the constitution chairman.

The constitution as it now exists is only a rough draft and lacks such important items as the listing of the officers' duties, Campbell added.

Campbell said the past election has proved that C-CAP is an established party on campus.

Outgoing officers are Pat Cobb, president; Gary Mahn, Sigma Nu, vice president; Jan Wendler, secretary, and Larry French, treasurer.

'I' Computer Course Set

The University is cooperating with IBM to offer Fortran, a course in computer programming for faculty and staff members this semester.

The course is a universal programming technique adaptable to most computers, according to Ward Crowley, director of the computer center. The course runs from Monday to Thursday Jan. 18 to Jan. 21, and will enable teachers to use the computer located on campus for research work.

The course, according to Crowley, will be problem oriented, enabling students to solve problems of their own interest.

Jim Robinson, an IBM systems engineer will be teaching the course. Sixteen hours of instruction will enable faculty members to teach it to their students.

During each day of instruction two sessions will be held; one from 3 to 5 and the other from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Fortran stands for Formula Translation.

Governor's Budget Message Wed. Will Be First Glimpse At Ed. Fund Prospects

ITS DONE NOW... But heavy snow prevented Argonaut photographers from reaching the site of the transmitter building for the Educational TV building. This picture was taken a month ago when workmen were laying the foundation for the building that will house the transmitter. It is located on Paradise Ridge southeast of Moscow.

Weather Slows Ed. T.V. March Is New Deadline

Bad weather and a lack of parts have caused a slowdown on the construction of the Educational TV facilities southeast of Moscow, according to Gordon Law, acting head of the Communications dept.

Law said that the "harsh winter weather" was to blame and added that a new date for the opening of the facilities would be "sometime around March 15." The original date was in mid-February.

At that date he said the station would be on the air with a test pattern and would probably begin regular telecasting on or about April 1.

Law said the building was complete at the transmitter site but snow had prevented the Washington Water Power Co. from completing the power hookup to the site. It is expected to be completed in two weeks.

The site is located about five miles southeast of Moscow on Paradise ridge and is 1,100 feet above average terrain. At the present time there is about 30 inches of snow in the area and access to Paradise ridge is limited to 4-wheel drive vehicles.

KUOI-TV now provides University and Moscow public schools with closed-circuit instruction and in-service teacher training on the public school level. It has been in operation since 1960.

Plans call for an eventual state-wide Educational TV network with other stations at Boise and at Idaho State University. When this plan is completed 92 per cent of the public schools in Idaho will be able to receive programs from this network. The network is scheduled for completion in 1969. The ETV project at the University is the first of the proposed stations. Part of the financing is through a grant enabling the University to receive Health Education and Welfare department funds.

Dr. Myhre presented fundamental facts on sex and emphasized the importance of being well and accurately informed on such information before a couple is married.

She said that "living by the book" was not one of the better ideas for making a marriage a success, and that human instinct and happiness was better by far.

"Couples who live by the book have the tendency to say 'It's time to pat me now honey,'" she said. "This isn't too desirable."

Dr. Myhre emphasized the importance of frankness about sex facts in raising of children including the teaching of the correct terms.

Pre-marital counseling was recommended, but not termed a necessity in making a happy marriage.

Idaho PDK Head

State Education Future Said Bright

Education in Idaho has a bright future, according to a prediction by Virgil Young, president of the University Beta Omega chapter, Phi Delta Kappa, men's national education honorary.

Young said that the chapter has terminated the final stage of its statewide FIRE project. The organization sent the report on Idaho education, "Financial Information Report on Education," and a PDK publication, "Guidelines for Public School Finance," to all members of the 1965 Idaho legislature.

Project FIRE included presentations of the report and a 14-minute sound film throughout the state. The film was shown to legislative candidates before the fall national elections and later to the 94 legislators invited to Moscow and the University by the Chamber of Commerce.

Frank Hirschi, chairman of the House Education Committee, thanked PDK and said the reports of that organization would be of benefit to him during this legislative session, he said.

Young pointed out that Gov. Smylie's state of the state message to the legislature listed four recommendations for Idaho education which were included within the full text of the PDK report.

Broadening the tax base, the first of the four points, will probably be implemented through the enactment of a sales tax, said Young. Everyone seems to be favorable, he added.

If the sales tax is enacted and the state income tax reduced, the reduction bill will probably not be significant enough to offset increases in revenues, he said.

The second point of the PDK report recommended by Gov. Smylie was an eventual minimum of 50 per cent state support for public schools.

Not Sure
I'm not sure this will be enacted this session, but it's quite possible," said Young.

The last session of the Idaho legislature passed a retirement system for all state employees, including the University staff. Gov. Smylie suggested a re-examination of the teacher retirement system for fiscal soundness in his annual message.

"The last legislature enacted a good retirement program for state employees, but didn't ensure there was sufficient revenue," said Young.

Majority Required

A majority vote to pass school bonds or levy elections was the fourth item on Idaho education recommended by Gov. Smylie.

Young was asked whether Idaho State would receive more of its required appropriation than the University. He said that in the past the percentage has been greater for ISU because of a rapidly growing enrollment and the development of the school into a university from a college status.

Legislators received indications that the Governor's budget figure would be in the neighborhood of $118-140 million. State agencies have asked that their total appropriations reach on the tax structures. Sen. Majority Leader George Blick, R-Twin Falls, agreed.

"We will have to be able to justify the total amount to be brought in," he said last weekend, "and to do this we will almost have to act on appropriations."

Another supporter of the plan that the appropriations come before the tax bill is the senate minority leader, William J. Dee, D-Idaho, who termed Murphy's plan to draw the tax bill first "not realistic."

He said it would cause departments and agencies to push for increase in their appropriations regardless of any ceiling that might be set.

Legislators received indications that the Governor's budget figure would be in the neighborhood of $118-140 million. State agencies have asked that their total appropriations reach on the tax structures. Sen. Majority Leader George Blick, R-Twin Falls, agreed.

Topping the list of appropriations request is the State Board of Education who will ask $87 million. In the last biennium public education in Idaho received $40 million.

The University has requested that it be appropriated $18.5 million of the monies in the education appropriations.

Also included in the final education appropriation are expected to be funds for establishing a state-wide junior college system and funds to bring state's local school districts closer to a goal of 50 percent state support.

Rep. Frank Hirschi, R-Bear Lake, chairman of the House Education Committee, said a proposed new formula for distributing state funds to local school districts will be introduced on the floor of the house "no later than next Monday."

Meanwhile, some difference of opinion among the legislators has appeared on the knotty problem of when to go about providing a tax program which will give the state necessary revenues for increased appropriations.

The differences are over whether the legislature should go ahead with appropriations before drawing up sales tax bills. Members of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee are agreed on the necessity of promptly initiating a sales tax bill. Actively initiating a sales tax bill.

Committee chairmen for the production have been chosen. They include: Auditions, Don Mottinger, SAE; publicity, Fred Freeman, Sigma Chi; judges and trophies, Dave McClusky, Sigma Chi; tickets, Jim Berry, Delt; sound and radio, Mike Olson, Campus Club; backdrop, John Sackett, Fiji and Gordon Judd, Delt; programs, Tom Lynch, off campus; and Cues, Chick Cutler, Fiji.

The Golden Fleece

By Jason

Today or tomorrow, the Governor will present his biennial budget message to the legislature. University Regents and Administration eyes, and the eyes of the heads of all state departments will justifiably be on the budget recommendations of the governor.

For these administrators, the governor's message might be likened to the primary election for a politician. For them it is the first show of how well they have done in the campaign for funds to run their departments.

Unlike the politician who loses out in the primary race, no matter what the Governor recommends, the final appropriation for the administrators will be on the floors and the committee rooms of the two chambers at Boise.

The Governor's message is important, however. He called for sweeping programs to be instituted by this legislature in his State of the State message a week ago. Among them was one calling for a junior college system and another asking for the state to come closer to fulfilling a goal of providing 50 per cent of the total cost of public school education in Idaho.

But in that same message, the Governor listed no figures.

How Much Contest?

The analogy of a contest among the strongest candidates (for larger percentage of the total appropriation) is not unreal. The competition for funds could be minimized, the closer the Governor's figures come to the total requests of the departments.

Speculation is that the Governor will ask for between $118 million and $140 million. A total of $153 million has been asked by the various departments.

If Smylie's recommendation is for $140 million, he will be asking for an appropriation increase of $42 million over what the state agencies will spend when this biennium is over June 30.

Even if Smylie does recommend that the legislature appropriate the larger sum; competition -- to be cut less from the $13 million difference the agencies are asking -- could be tough.

Educators Ask 67 Million

Education with the largest appropriation request, $67 million, also asks the largest increase, $27 million. Lawmakers estimate that the Governor will ask for at least $50 million for education.

Educators can be especially watchful for the percentage of the education appropriations that Smylie recommends for his newly outlined programs in the State of the State address.

An assurance to administrators at the existing state universities can be found in his address; "while our junior college system is coming into being, we must continue strong, effective financial support of the best possible programs at our existing institutions."

Who Is Responsible?

Every once in a while we feel that a return to the days of Mark Twain and the Laramie comic, Bill Nye, would really be beneficial. Then we could use a little journalistic license and call a spade a spade with vituperous vilification.

The worst they generally received for their comment was a severe caning. In our case we are liable for libel. And that necessarily restricts what we are about to say.

We don't know who is responsible for the almost criminal negligence of the icy sidewalks and street crossings but we sincerely wish they would get off their rear ends—just as we have had to these past few days from the sidewalks they are responsible for—and take proper care of them.

If these are the responsibilities of the University then they should get on the ball and keep us on our toes. If they are the responsibility of the private groups on campus—and you know who you are—then we suggest a little more diligent scrutiny of their pledges' spare time. Private citizens are responsible for the maintenance of their sidewalks and porches and are liable for damage suits when they are negligent. Perhaps these private groups, if the fault is theirs, are just as responsible.

There are a few other things that can come under the miscellaneous heading of things that need to be done.

One of these is the real need for street lights in some of the less well-lighted areas, for instance on Elm street along "Greek Row."

It could be that there is no need of lights as a preventive measure but crimes have been perpetrated in less likely surroundings. It's time to take care of the situation before anything does happen. A little bit of foresight could save a lot of sorrow later.

Another item is the sad, rundown state of the campus streets. They are not a benefit to anyone and there is no doubt that many of them need repairing or even replacing. Granted, it can't be done in this weather, but it is time to start thinking about it. How about that last stretch of Nez Perce drive? Would it have cost so much to pave that as long as the other work was being done last summer? Or it could be that the powers that be are waiting for the day when the streets will no longer carry vehicle traffic and won't need the repair? More than likely it is the old problem of money—and not enough of it as per usual.

Finally, to get back to the sidewalks: Why not widen the sidewalks going from the Ad Building to the Library. They need it. There is probably more danger of being rundown on the sidewalks — with serious injuries resulting — than there is from walking in the middle of the campus streets all day. It could be that the sidewalks should have been color-coded for traffic and not the streets. —J. B.

WHERE GOOD WILL IS IMPORTANT

Dear Jason

Dislikes Nudes

Dear Jason: The other evening as I was walking down the hall toward the cafeteria of the Student Union, my attention was attracted to a large, colored poster displayed on the bulletin board. By the pictures on the poster I got the impression that some men's group was planning a stag party. The colorful display of nude and partly nude women would probably put a Playboy Magazine to shame.

When I got closer to the poster, I found it was announcing a series of lectures for married and soon-to-be married students, and . . . it was being sponsored by the Campus ministries. I was astonished! A series of lectures on marriage for interested students is a superb idea, but what could the campus ministries have in mind by advertising it in this manner? Were they only trying to attract attention to their cause? Couldn't they have just as successfully attained their goal by using a large picture of Hereford cattle upside down for a background?

The Campus ministries, I feel, are for the students who desire religious guidance, but how can they retain the students' respect with displays such as this?

Clarifies Stand

Dear Jason: I would like to take this opportunity to clarify an article based on Susie Smith's interview with me, which appeared in the Argonaut.

In reference to my remarks about the Catholic Church and the governments of Bolivia, and of South America as a whole, as being restrictive and suppressive toward potential leaders and rational thinkers, Miss Smith has missed the main points of my argument.

First of all, I said that these were the big problems of the past, caused by the oppressive Spanish colonialism down through the years, but that they are fading out, as most of the recent governments have been relatively progressive, reform-minded, and have become more conscious of individual rights.

Also, the Church has taken great strides in bringing in selfless, conscientious priests, in establishing countless vocational schools for underprivileged children, and in loosening its hold on local political machinery. Most important of all, the South American people as a whole are far more aware of world events and economic problems than the average North American, and are actively anxious to improve their way of life.

However, large improvements cannot be made overnight, as all Peace Corps Volunteers have found out, and too big a change either too fast or in the wrong areas is more harmful than it is good. As I said before, the problems still exist, but the government, the Church and the people are all working at alleviating them, slowly but surely, and the results are beginning to show.

Actually, the South American people have a far more logical approach to life than we do. They don't waste much energy competing among themselves for material things and social position. They work hard to keep the family supplied with basic essentials, then they knock off and relax or have fun. They don't let pressures build up inside them, but let off steam frequently, and soon are back to normal again. They have close personal relationships and don't hesitate to show feelings of deep appreciation, respect, or love, as we often do.

Referring to the statement that we were resented in some areas by the Church, I said that this occurred in just one town, where the priest was a very selfish and power-hungry individual. Generally, we were able to work quite well with local Catholic officials, though not always agreeing with their policies.

I hope it is clear that Miss Smith did not seriously misquote me, but that most of my remarks were taken out of context and thus needed explaining.

The Operations Council issued a clarification on one of the student parking sections recently.

The area on University avenue from Ash to Line was declared to be 2 hour parking for off campus commuters and visitors.

Some misunderstanding had resulted from faulty description in the student manual and as a result some tickets were issued, according to Frank Young, Chairman of the Operations Council.

Former Idaho Graduate Is 'Mad, Mad Physicist'

Students at the University in 1938-40 called him the "human dynamo." Students at El Camino college in California today refer to him as the "mad, mad physicist," but an article in the January issue of Reader's Digest hails him as one of the most extraordinary and successful science teachers in America.

Prof. Julius Sumner Miller of El Camino contends that if the teacher is dead, and the textbook is dead, the students will be dead. He lives up his classes with simple but effective demonstration. Carefully filling a glass flask with water — "a bubble means trouble, because gases are highly compressible" — Miller uses the flask to hammer a three-inch nail into a piece of soft pine. "Why is it so?" he asks. A student waves his hand enthusiastically. "Because of the incompressibility of water, sir, Pascal discovered the principle."

"Right," says Miller, with a pleased nod. Masters From Idaho While working on his master's degree at the University of Idaho as a graduate student from Mattapan, Mass., Miller taught in physics laboratories. A never-stopping young man of great energy, he drove the Idaho students to learn, and earned the "dynamo" title. The following incident, reported in the Digest article, indicates that Miller — now 55 — has not changed: The professor arranges a long, gently sloping board on a table. He holds up a thin iron hoop, a solid wooden disc and a steel ball — all of different weights and sizes. "The question is: Do all these things roll at the same speed? Or does one beat another? Let's place some bets. Choose your favorite horse for the Lecture Room Derby." Miller tallies the bets, and notes that three students did not pick a horse. "No enthusiasm," he groans. "Please leave the class and come back another day." When the sheepish trio has departed, Miller runs the Lecture Room Derby, and the sphere wins. He tries hoops, discs, and spheres of different sizes. The spheres are still victorious. "All spheres will beat all discs, which beat all hoops," he intones. "Look up Huygens' moments of inertia and Newton's laws of rotation. Clearly, it is not the mass that is significant but the distribution of mass." A recent student of Miller's at El Camino has summed up the feelings about the mad, mad physicist. "You either love him for awakening you intellectually," he says, "or you hate him for making you work so hard. But Julius Miller is one teacher you never forget." The "dynamo" hasn't been forgotten by former University of Idaho students, either.

Vandals Face Third Home Game; After Playing Eight On Road

MSU And U of M To Meet Vandals In Big Sky Play

Idaho's traveling basketball Vandals settle into Memorial Gym for a three-game stand beginning this weekend and Coach Jim Goddard says, "Its sure going to be good to get home—I think."

Friday night, Idaho basketball fans will get to see what Coach Goddard calls "a much improved group of boys," when the Vandals clash with the defending Big Sky champs, the Bobcats of Montana State. The Bobcats are 1-0 in the loop after a two-point overtime win against Montana State last Saturday night in Missoula.

This Saturday night, it's the twice-beaten Montana Grizzlies who will test the Vandals. MSU bowed to the Vandal cagers in the opening game of the conference season, 77-58.

Idaho has played eight of its first ten games on the road, posting a 2-8 mark.

Different Feeling
"I've almost forgotten what it feels like to play at home," Goddard said. "I hope the players recognize one another in those white uniforms."

The big job for the Vandals on Friday will be to stop all-conference ace Kermit Young and Don Rae. The pair finished second and fourth in scoring last season. Rae holds a share of the loop's one-game scoring title with 41 points, while Young has a piece of both the one-game and season rebounding marks.

On Saturday, it will be a much improved Montana club that makes its appearance in Memorial Gymnasium. A pair of junior college transfers, Ed Samelton and Wade Hughes team with veterans John Quist and Bill Rice to strengthen the "tips."

Ready To Play
"Now that we're back on our own court, I think we are ready to play good basketball both offensively and defensively," Goddard said. The road trips were good as far as experience goes — and we sure got a lot of that against some real top notch ball clubs."

With regard to last Saturday night's 60-63 defeat at the hands of the fast moving University of Utah Redskins, Goddard stated that he thought that the play went well for the Vandals, considering that they were matched against the nation's fourth ranked team in total offense, and that they did succeed in holding them down to 13 points below their current national average.

Pressure Hurt
Goddard went on to say that he felt that the deciding factor in the contest was the tremendous amount of back court pressure exerted by the Ute guards.
"If we could have scored more from the outside, I think it would have changed the complexion of the game considerably," said the Vandal mentor.
However, Goddard did have words of praise for the fine efforts of his two guards, Mike

Quarterback Wracked Up

Football may or may not be the roughest sport, but for University quarterback Joe Rodriguez, at least, football season is the safest time of year.

During football season the junior from California incurred no major injuries, despite seven team trips out of Idaho and one to Boise.

Since football seasons ended Rodriguez's luck has changed. He was a passenger in cars involved in accidents both on the way home and on the way back to school during Christmas vacation.

On the way home he was riding with Cecil Melsler, Theta Chi, when an accident took place 60 miles north of Winnemucca, Nev. On the return trip his luck caught up with him again in Oregon as he rode with John Whitney, SAE.

Yesterday Rodriguez was released from the infirmary where he spent the past week in isolation with the measles.

GOES HIGH—Vandal guard Jerry Skaife jumps high above the ominous outstretched hand of an Augsburg defender as he prepares to dump in Idaho's 86th point in a game that Coach Goddard referred to as one of the toughest played in anticipation of a possible rebound arc guard Ed Tollefson (11) and center Tom Moreland (52).

Finmen Sink Whitworth 59-36 In Season Opener

Idaho's Vandal finmen successfully opened their regular swimming season in Spokane Saturday with a decisive 59-36 win over Whitworth College.

With seven first places boosting the Vandals, in what was scheduled as a three-way meet, there seemed to be no way to stop the Idaho tide from sweeping to victory.

"We were up against a strong team," swim coach John Cramer said. "But we managed to get the needed power to do the job, and they (Whitworth) couldn't stop us."

Fairchild Air Force Base was the third team slated to compete in the meet but were forced to withdraw due to a Base alert, Cramer explained.

Seven Firsts
Idaho took firsts in the 200 meter free style with Kris Kirkland winning, the 50 free style with Karl Von Tagen in first, the 200 butterfly with Rich Dooley taking the honors, the 100 free style with Karl Von Tagen first again, the 500 free style with Kris Kirkland on top, the 200 breaststroke led by Bill Stillmaker, and the 400 free style relay with Karl and Fritz Von Tagen, Tom Kirkland and Dave Grieve doing the work.

American battle fatalities classed as "unknown dead" numbered 8,491 during World War II, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Brian Anderson took two second places for Idaho with the first coming in the 200 free style and the second in the 500 free style. Fritz Von Tagen had

Vandal Babes Dump LCN 85-63 For First Victory Of The Season

Idaho's Vandal Babes used a big height advantage in the second half to trim the Lewis-Clark Normal Warriors 85-63 in a basketball game at the LCN gym Saturday night. The game was rugged and sometimes ragged as a total of sixty fouls were called.

The loss was the third straight for the Warriors and gives them a season record of 3-5. The Vandal Babes are now 1-2.

Idaho's next game will be against Columbia Basin Junior College preceding the Montana State - Idaho game Friday night.

The Babes lost their first two games to Washington State's Frosh.

The Warriors stayed in the ball game until midway through the second half when the winners launched a rally that saw them outscore LCN 24-4 in a stretch of less than seven minutes. It was in this stretch that the height advantage told.

The Vandal Babes began getting good position for rebounds, something they had been unable to do in the first half, and in desperation the Warriors began fouling. The winners hit the

From an obscure substitute behind the unforgettable Gus Johnson to a top candidate for Idaho, Tom Moreland has made in the past two and one-half seasons.

Moreland came out of Coeur d'Alene high school with top prep recommendations and made the transition to college ball with ease.

He paced the Idaho Frosh to a 12-5 season record firing at a 55.5 per cent clip from the field. His 211 points that season was the second highest in history for a freshman at that time. He picked off 131 rebounds to lead a team which had four men for the century mark in rebounding.

Moreland is off to a good start this season with a 15-point-per-game average and over 100 rebounds in the first nine games. "The thing that makes Tom's performance even more remarkable this season," Goddard notes, "is the fact that everyone knows what an offensive threat he is and they try to take away his scoring and rebounding moves."

"Up to dates"—for daytime and dateline

With the departure of Johnson to professional ranks, Moreland came into his own. As a junior he averaged 14.3 points per game and set a new one-season field goal shooting record with a 46.8 per cent average. His 312 rebounds for the season were second only to Johnson's record of the season before. He also tied Johnson's one-game rebounding record of 31.

Moreland was named to the Big Sky second all-conference team and led the league in rebounding. He was second in free throw accuracy and eighth in scoring.

Tom also led the team in scoring in 14 of its 26 games last season hitting a team high of 26 twice. He was also named winner of the Ronald White award which goes to the player named as "outstanding member of the team" by a vote of the squad members. This award went to Johnson the year before.
