State Representatives To Pass ISU Engineer Bill BOISE-The Idaho House of

Representatives is expected to pass an amended bill today which would enable Idaho State University to set up a four-year curriculum in general engineering and Nuclear science . but which would prohibit duplication of courses at the University in mechanical, chemical, electrical engineering. Rep. Harold Snow, R-Latah, yesterday predicted a lopsided vote in favor of the bill with possiblely only himself and Latah County's Democratic Rep. Geo. Brocke voting against it.

Amendments prohibiting establishing four-year curricula in the four specific fields followed recommendations of the University's Board of Regents at a House hearing Thursday.

The original enabling legislation. without restrictions to the four fields passed the Senate on a 35-4 vote last month.

The proposed program caused controversy between Dean Laurence Gale. ISU's acting president, and Allen S. Janssen, Dean of the College of Engineering at the University.

Gale contends that ISU would be able to utilize nuclear facilities at the Atomic Energy Commission facility at Arco. Janssen criticized the proposal as being costly and unnecessary duplication of courses offered at the University.

Tuition Bill
