Vandal Battle Is Fought In SUB --- On Mural

A great battle is being fought in the basement of the Student Union Building—at least in mural form. A mural depicting a Viking battle is being drawn on the wall opposite the entrance to the Dipper. It covers the wall from floor to ceiling and runs the entire length of the hall.

Vic Reynolds, off campus, a senior art major, created the design for a composition class and has done all the work so far. He has worked off and on all semester and even worked through spring vacation. Color

He is now applying color to his line sketches and experimenting with the dry pigments used for the paint base. The color plan calls for the use of many bright colors.

"It will be a flat color design with no rendering at all, just hard edge," Reynolds said. "I had quite a time finding the right colors."

The artist hopes that the finished mural will be covered with a clear lacquer so that it can be washed down and the paint won't be scratched.

"Dean Decker wanted the wall covered and suggested it to the Art Department. It was given to the composition classes and my design was chosen," he said, explaining his project.

There's no particular story behind the mural. I just wanted to do a Viking battle scene," Reynolds said.

The project must be finished by the end of the semester.

"I need some more people to get enthused about it and help me. They just have to follow the color patterns, but if they have any ideas, I'll listen," he said.

Simple Solution an evaluation from the current student

Educational Improvement Committee has been struggling for nearly three years to find an effective way for students to evaluate professors' teaching abilities. In an interview yesterday, however, the University's Presidentdesignate, Dr. Ernest W. Hartung, presented a fairly simple idea which may just be what EIC seeks.

Dr. Hartung suggested that a group, of five or six students who are majors in each department could get together with faculty members on an informal basis for discussion of University programs. While these discussion groups need not be for personal evaluations, some of this would be permitted.

Minutes taken at these meetings would become a permanent record. When University administrators are considering promotions and program changes, officials could refer to the minutes as a guide to how the selected students and faculty members felt.

Dr. Hartung suggested that if these minutes were allowed to build up over period of time, they could be quite valuable references to help administrators in settling fairly, the often touchy problem of promotions and program changes

Dr. Hartung made it clear that he believes it is good for students to have an interest in what they get in their education.

"It's the students themselves that are buying the product," he said. "It boils down to, just that you have to get fessors has come up several times in the past at the University of Idaho. EIC has taken to the idea of publishing a booklet showing student ratings of various professors. The booklet would be patterned after similar booklets at Harvard, Stanford and other institutions.

Where EIC has bogged down is on just how to get adequate student evaluations. On the national scene, recent student demonstrations (at Yale, Amherst, and several other schools) over professors whom the students consider "good teachers" but who haven't been promoted (or have been fired) have brought the question of student evaluation to a head. The "publish or perish" doctrine is unpopular. The system that Hartung described would fall short in giving students a guide on which professors are most desirable. But, it would accomplish the primary objective behind teacher-evaluation.

Instead of calling administration attention to a poor professor or a poor course, through embarrassment to the professor and the University, when students boycott the course, Hartung's system would provide the administration something to use in evaluation. It would be a guide other than the often over-used guide of a professor's "publications."-F. F.

SEE THE NEW CHRISTY MINSTRELS IN PERSONI

Gadfly . . . Dear Jason: In re David Soper's "Gadfly" column of April 20th: Mr. Soper's description of a need to "educate" the Board of Regents about "filthy and unsafe conditions" in off-campus housing perpetrated by "landlords who would endanger students' health and safety" seems somewhat priggish to say the least. At the conclusion of his polemic Mr. Soper concluded that "the great majority of apartments are not in question."

The question then is: If one admits that the "great majority" of apartments in Moscoware not "filthy and unsafe," why should all students who pay ASUI fees allow their money to be spent by a board which is intended to investigate offcampus housing?

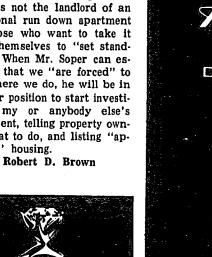

The main argument for spending ASUI funds for this purpose is that living conditions for off-campus students are deplorable. As an off-campus student I have had opportunity over the past four years to see what is available in town apartments and rooms.

Some facilities are not what I would choose to live in, and perhaps where I choose to live Mr. Soper might find undesirable. I, for one, object to a board telling me which apartments are not healthy or safe to live in when I, or any other student, am capable of deciding this for myself. I moved off campus to avoid exactly that sort of management. Before Mr. Soper and others decide that off-campus housing is in need of their prescience they should examine some oncampus facilities such as the holes in Wallace Complex which are far less comfortable (and with four roommates sleeping in practically unventilated bunkrooms next to shower and toilet stalls) less "healthy" than most off-campus housing.

The real "enemy" (Mr. Soper's term) of off-campus students is not the landlord of an occasional run down apartment but those who want to take it upon themselves to "set standards." When Mr. Soper can establish that we "are forced" to live where we do, he will be in a better position to start investigating my or anybody else's apartment, telling property owners what to do, and listing "approved" housing.

Director will be chosen May 4 in interviews by Executive Board. Applications are now available in the ASUI office and are due May 3.

Applicants are encouraged to have ideas prepared for the interview which they would like to see implimented into the public relations department.

The job is extremely important, according to Bill McCann, ASUI President. It not only projects the image of the E-Board but that of the entire University. The job includes public relations work within the university and also on a state wide level. It pays $35 monthly and lasts from May 4 through next year.

The gift was accepted on behalf of the University by Guy P. Wicks, associate dean of students and a member of Sigma Nu.

"Eventually it is hoped that the Student Union will become an important Northwest center of art, and Mrs. McDonald's gift is a significant step in that direction," said Wicks.

"It is fitting that the gift should honor a man who had such a fine sense of cultural values," he said.

80 Alumni

About 130 people attended the banquet in the SUB ballroom, including 80 alumni and wives. At another gathering of the Sigma Nu's over the weekend. University president Dr. D. R. Theophilus said, "The public image of fraternities is good, here and everywhere."

"DEAR HEART"

By JOHN JAMES Argonaut Sports Writer

Ever seen an athletic news director's office? If you were scheduled, a rainstorm al- comparison to Washington's and haven't look at Tom Hartley's. This 32-year-old father most washed out the action. It in light of track conditions. of three children is surrounded by 43 pictures of Idaho's outstanding athletes and teams since his Vandal converting of August, 1960. It looks busy; journalistic is the word!

"I entered the relatively new field of public relations because it gives me a chance to meet people and to do more things," said Hartley, "P.R." legman, in an interview here Friday.

The 5th year "beat" man in the Vandal publicity office came from the sports editor's position in Caldwell to the Idaho campus, looking to get into the sports field more and moving up fast in public relations.

Journalism Masters

Prior to his Vandal up-raising, Hartley served two years on the sports desk of the largest Oregon daily newspaper—The Oregonian. This he did before grad-uating from Lewis and Clark College in 1956 with a Bachelor of Science degree in journalism.

He is also a graduate of the University of Oregon, College of Journalism, with a Master of Science in 1958. To add to his professional training, he was editor-in-chief of the Baker Democratic Herald at the age of 25. What's It Like?

When asked exactly what his job entails, he replied: It's to promote the University of Idaho and to keep this beau in the high jump and Rolf athletic program in print. This means two types of work-the "outside" and the "inside." It's a combination of gathering information and the resulting publicity."

"At home the statistics need to be kept up-todate. Also, there's the news writing to the various media.

"On the road I try to inform people about the university, to build up the gate, and to work with the sports writers. One of my biggest responsibilities is to become familiar with athletic-writing persons met in order to do my job better and to help their's."

Goes On TV

Hartley said that some of the "outside" comes from the two to six hours a week promoting the University of Idaho and Vandals on television. This is while the team is in preparation to play in such big-name cities as Phoenix, Tucson, Des Moines, Portland, Seattle, and Salt Lake City.

Need Contacts

Concerning his personal reaction to public relations, Hartley said that contacts make the job.

"Besides Idaho, I have contacts in Oregon, Washington, Montana, and Utah, that I call for information, as well as they'll call me," he said. "In news everyone must help each other."

He said that in his field, he has met all kinds of people. Some were professional newspapermen, like him-self, and some were "PR" oriented. The trend, now, in colleges is toward making public relations a separate major field of study.

"There's only one draw-back to just a straight 'PR' takes. man and that's not being able to talk 'backshop' to other journalists," he said.

"Personally, I have never had any 'PR' training ex-cept a little of Radio-TV. Guess, you might say that I had to learn the hard way.

"The 'PR' man must be able, in writing experiences, to work with the various media, meet the public, and be

1. Joint Chamber-Executive Board meetings approximately every two months to work out situations of mutual concern. 2. Forming a student committee next fall to start planning for Loyalty Day (scheduled Saturday). 3. The Moscow Chamber should participate more in the University's Homecoming Activities. 4. The Chamber should continue to participate in the Student-Faculty Retreat, which benefits considerably.

Miss Green moved that Denny Dobbin, off campus, check with the Student Off-Campus Housing Committee on the Board of Regents' decision and report next week.

Don't Drop

"This isn't something that can just be dropped," she said. "We should look into the Regents' decision and find out suggestions to improve the Executive Board proposal."

The Regents turned down the E-Board proposal to form a committee for investigating off-campus housing at meetings April 9 and 10.

"This should be done right away rather than waiting," said Miss Green.

In other action the Executive Board: -approved a visitations schedule.

-moved to buy silver or gray blazers for E-Board members.

---signed a letter to be sent to new University President Ernest Hartung.

-accepted a March of Dimes Certificate of Appreciation to the University for this year's Campus Chest donation.

Office Hours

-adopted office hours for Board members. The purpose of the visitations program is to provide a means of personal contact from E-Board to the student body, according to a report submitted by Dobbin,

Friday, April 30, 1965

The visits will also be used to inform students of ASUI executive activities and to provide a feedback of the student body's ideas and desires to E-Board, said the report.

Dobbin recommended each living group be visited at least twice next year. Visitations

McCann asked Board members to visit each living group on their list by the end of the school year.

The new ASUI president said each E-Board meeting should be followed by a general discussion period for members to offer new ideas and suggestions.

Don Fry, Delta Sig, suggested the Board make a detailed study of the past financial record and operations of the Bookstore.

Because students expressed much concern during the election campaign, Executive Board should investigate the situation, he said.

Fry was appointed to make the study. PR Committee

Morfitt suggested forming a committee sometime in the near future to act as "public relations director" for the students and to inform them of new changes in the Bookstore.

McCann asked that any action taken wait until Fry's report was submitted.

Bob Aldridge, Theta Chi, said many students had questioned him about the quarter system. He asked what the E-Board could do.

Dr. Arthur Gittens, Board adviser, briefly outlined the quarter system, tri-semester system, and modified versions.

Tom's father deserts his familv and leaves to his wife Amanda, the task of holding the family together. Amanda, who is unhappy often resorts to dreaming of the happier days of her youth when she entertained gentleman callers, Chavez said. The exchange of lines between Jim O'Connor, the gentleman caller and Laura Wingfield shows a tremendous depth to Jim's character, and Jim's easy going character is effective in setting off Laura's character according to Chavez.

A childhood illness left Laura crippled and as a result she withdraws until she is like a piece of her glass collection, too fragile to move from the shelf. According to Chavez, Williams' later plays represent a tremendous change of pace from "The Glass Menagerie" which is a sentimental play and not sordid like "Streetcar."

"This play is particularly good for an arena production and will be a good experience for those who have never viewed one, according to Miss Jean Collette, chairman of dramatics.

precipitated "freedom riots" at the University of California at Berkeley for the use of an allegedly obscene fourletter word, returned to San Jose State campus March 29 with a "clean bill of health" from the San Jose Police Department. Their problem was that the journalism students who wanted to sell it did not have a proper permit to sell it on Seventh Street. The student, Steve Starr, 20, imported 600 of the magazines and all sold in less than two hours, with the first 80-100 selling in less than ten minutes.

FAD-California has initiated another fad to rdd to the list of surfing, hair bleaching, and skateboards-the male "hairstyling" craze, according to the Spartan Daily, San Jose State's newspaper. At $8 a "do," the guys' hair results in looking very sleek and non-greasy. Apparently the high schoolers are more fond of it than the older males.

NEED POLICE-The Oregon Daily Emerald reports that more campus police are needed than two for their 10,000 students. "Reports of would-be attackers chasing coeds across campus as well as roaming the streets around sorority houses are prevalent and always have been." They also state that "a city of 10,000 with a police force of two would be a farce."

This is in contrast to the University of Idaho's four campus policemen for approximately 5200 students, or one policeman per 1300 students.

ALL-NIGHT HOURS-University of Oregon women were allowed to stay out all night Friday, April 23, to attend an allnight protest meeting planned by the Student-Faculty Committee to Stop the War in Viet Nam. The University explained its policy to the students in a question and answer type statement. The Student Conduct Code was changed so that it read that girls may sign out for "University-recognized" as well as "University-sponsored" functions.

Those girls who did not attend the function after they had signed out for it were treated as though they had disobeyed the provision of providing false information and failing to observe closing hours.

MUSTANG GIVEN-Blood drives differ from campus to campus, but the University of Arizona had a unique prize given to a donor whose name was drawn out of a hat: a 1965 Mustang, donated by a local Hertz-Rent-A-Car. The car was given for the weekend, with plaques and certificates awarded various campus organizations for participation in the blood drive.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO, MOSCOW, IDAHO

Friday, April 30, 1965

Reporters Dave Schmirler Helen Radsliff, Roger Anderson, Jeanne Lyon, Ray Givens, Margaret Reed, Lis Taylor, Helen Black, Gene Maraffio, Bill Roper, Valerie South, Julie Anderson, John Milliner, John Litton, Mary Rose Weber, Scootch Harper

When the legislature approved the University's appropriation, it was not before charges and countercharges that the old battle of sectionalism was flaring, up again.

With this in mind, former Jason Jim Herndon and F asked President-designate Hartung for some of his views on cooperation between Idaho's two major universities, when he was here earlier this week.

In an interview when he visited the University in March, Dr. Hartung stressed students' need for an education in depth in one field. When the added aspect of the two Universities competing to provide these depth programs and professional schools was thrown in, Hartung enlightened us further on his educational philosophy. "I would not send my son to Idaho State to study pharmacy if they had a bad chemistry department," he said. "Similarly, I would not send my son to Idaho to study forestry if the chemistry department were not good here.'

Where Duplication Is Needed

Duplication of educational offerings at the two Universities is often a sore point in debates between both 'sections."

Hartung made it clear that it is petty to argue about some forms of duplication. Just as strong chemistry departments are vital to either pharmacy or forestry-or agriculture — duplication in basic studies can not be avoided.

However, Hartung stressed the need for cooperation in further development of professional schools in order to avoid duplication at the two universities.

While duplications in professional schools at the two universities would be a waste, some duplication in graduate programs is a must, Hartung pointed out.

In order to get highly qualified people to teach to undergraduates, you must have some graduate students for them to work with in the research projects and as laboratory assistants, etc. In most cases this duplication need go no further than master's programs, however, he said.

An End In Sight

During the last few years, sectionalism divisions in disputes between the two universities have been less pronounced than they were before. Under Hartung, perhaps the distasteful divisions between ISU and its supporters and the University and ours can finally be resolved. Then we can start cooperating towards a fuller education program with the available monies in our of at least one right.

Twenty-Eight, Twenty-Nine...

For today's Argonaut, Jason No. 76, has been pretty much on vacation. Except for this column and some of the preliminary work, the staff, led by Associate Editor Jane Watts, has put this edition to press without the help of the old boy. Monday, Managing Editor Leo Jeffres will try his hand at bossing the Tuesday edition crew.

This brings to mind that another year is just about

Think Before You Lift

And how is your police record? It has come to the Argonaut's attention that certain activities on a person's record simply don't look very good. Five students have been arrested for shoplifting during the past two weeks in local stores. The fine for shoplifting varies from $35 to $300 and/or six months in jail, depending upon a person's past record.

Shoplifting, in many cases, does not seem to be a matter of necessity. One student had over $80 with him when he was caught taking a small item. This obviously does not make one any less liable to be arrested.

Another local problem is that of using false identification to enter a liquor establishment or buy beer. In this case all a student has to do is misrepresent his age when entering a bar. It is not necessary to even order something to drink.

The fine for use of false ID is five days in jail and a $75 fine from the local police court. Last weekend an 18-year-old freshman girl from WSU was sentenced to the Latah County Jail for three days for using false identification. The Latah County Jail, by the way, is not a place where one would want to versity, does he lose his rights of priacy and private property? University police seem to think so

The Idaho "plant protection"

officers have been handing out tickets to students who have parked their cars without decals on private property. This property is not owned by the University or the public as streets and alleys are. A student who does not have a decal on his window is subject to a $5 fine by the "plant protection" officers.

That's not the problem. But do University police have the right to come on private property to give the tickets? Doesn't a student have his right to privacy and private property while attending school at Idaho? University student campus traffic and parking regulations say: "A decal is issued to each student driving a vehicle on the campus or in Moscow. This decal must be placed, immediately after receipt, in the lower right hand corner of the rear window in accordance with instructions on the back of the decal.

Where in this regulation do University police receive the power to hand out tickets anywhere without respecting private property. They have given tickets in the private parking lot between the Campus Christian Center and the Phi Delt house, and the Beta's private driveway.

Michael Decker Collapses During Spring Practice Drills Last Wednesday Afternoon

Vandal grid hopeful, Michael Decker was reported in critical condition late last night in Spokane's Deaconess Hospital following an emergency operation for removal of a posterior blood clot on the brain.

The 23-year-old Grangeville youth collapsed on the practice field Wednesday after n o o n. about 4:30 following calisthentics and running drills. He was rushed to Spokane by ambulance after University medical officials failed to revive him.

Suffered Head Injury Spokane hospital officials reported that Decker had suffered a head injury, but Idaho coaches say that the first term frosh halfback had not been involved in any rigid contact prior to prayers." his collapsing.

University team physician, Packey Boyle, said that when he examined Decker he appeared to be suffering from heat prostration.

"However," he said, "after neither I nor infirmary physicians couldn't revive him with cold packs, it was decided that he should be transported to Spokane for additional treatment."

Just prior to collapsing Decker complained to Vandal assistant Gary Jacobsen that he felt dizzy. Jacobsen sent the young gridder to the sidelines. He collapsed before he reached them.

VOYAGE TO THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL

As everyone knows, thirteen-twelfths of the earth's surface is water. Thus we can see how important it is to know and understand our oceans. Toward this end American colleges last year embarked on a program to increase enrollment in oceanography. I am pleased to report that results were nothing short of spectacular: In one single semester the number of students majoring in oceanography rose by 100%-from one student to two!

But more oceanographers are still needed, and so today this column, normally a vehicle for slapdash jocularity, will instead devote itself to a brief course in oceanography. In view of the solemnity of the subject matter, my sponsors, the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade Co., makers of Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades which give you more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other brand you can name—if, by chance, you don't agree, the makers of Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades will buy you a pack of whatever brand you think is better-my sponsors, I say, the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade Co. will today, because of the solemnity of this column, forego their usual commercial message.

We begin our study of oceans with that ever-popular favorite, the Pacific. Largest of all oceans, the Pacific was discovered by
