

Priceless Story Timeless

'Master says, 'Yes I could make the table'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story, which dates back some thirty years, was taken from the files of the Industrial Education Department and is more nearly applicable to the industrial and technological era of today than it is of the time of origin. The philosophy of the article exemplifies the role of the producing labor force, generally, and that of the technician or skilled tradesman, specifically.)

I was one of a company of 150 students who had just closed their college life, some with honors, and not a few without. Before separating to go into the world and work, never to meet again, we joined in a final dinner. Surfellet with the dignified drivel of college, the students, in a spirit of mischief, cut out all such stuff, and, as a huge joke, invited one of the professors to speak who had never made an address in his life. The hitherto silent one accepted the invitation to the surprise of everyone. And he spoke thus: "Gentlemen," he began, "I have never made a speech in my life, and I don't intend to begin now. I have something to say, however, and in saying it, I will follow Luther's threefold rule: 'Stand up straightly, speak out boldly, and sit down quickly.'"

Famous Hall "We are in one of the famous banqueting halls of the world. Balshazzar's hall compared to this was a lodging on the third floor back. No such art existed in those days as we see around this room. No such viands graced his board. What was there was elegant for that day, but we live in another age, an age of art, art-craftsmanship, and luxury.

"From the four corners of the earth came the things on this table. From the lowest forms of day labor to the highest forms of art, we have around us samples of at least a hundred forms of human work.

"Take this tablecloth to begin with. It is of most exquisite workmanship. It involves weaving — to go further back — bleaching, smoothing, designing. It is a damask linen, beautiful, and most pleasing to the eye.

Ask Question I want to ask a question: Is there anyone here who knows from personal experience anything about the labor involved? Have any of you ever contributed any labor to the manufacturing of table linen? I am serious, gentlemen. If any of you have, I would like to say so. There was absolute silence. "I understand, then," he continued, "that the making of such a thing is beyond your ken."

"Let me draw your attention to the samples of pottery here. Surely the men and the women who produce such beautiful things are artists. What a joy it must be for a man to hold such a thing in his hand — complete — and say, 'I made it!'" Many forms of labor are involved here — digging the clay, carting, fashioning, painting, burning, baking, and finishing. If there is a man here who had ever touched this form of labor, let him answer. No one!

Most Exquisite "There are samples of the most exquisite, and I know, costly, cut glass. That also involved much labor and great art. It is a unique industry in itself. I will not detail the process; we see the result; but the various forms of labor involved are practically unknown to us. I would be rather surprised to find a man among you who had ever touched this industry at any angle."

In this way he went over the silver and dwelt rather lengthily on the subject of mining and the life of a miner. Nothing escaped his notice. He drew attention to the carpet and the rugs on the floor, to curtains and the drapery of the great windows, to the mural decoration, executed by the greatest living mural painter. There was a rich fresco around the room. He called attention to it. When he had gone over most of the things in the room, he turned again to the table.

Cut Flowers "There are cut flowers here," he said. "Most of you have spent some years in the study of botany, but I don't think any of you would undertake to give us a complete classification of what we see and enjoy on the table." There was a disposition to laugh, but he wiped the smile from every face around the table by quietly saying, "Perhaps you are to be congratulated that you are at an age when a sense of humor covers a multitude of sins, but personally, I cannot enjoy that which gives me pain."

"I am a representative university man, seriously asking myself and you whether the system we call education educates." The silence became oppressive. The men were thinking.

U-I, U.S. Voting Parallel?

The United States has the lowest percentage of non-voting citizens of any democratic nation in the world. In national elections approximately 60 per cent of the people vote. The situation is not too different at the U. of I. Here only 40 per cent of the students vote in class elections.

Nationally, where are the other 40 per cent? Approximately 6 million in the South don't vote. Five million can't meet the requirements. About 5 million are sick on election day. Another 2 million are traveling on election day and don't make provisions for voting ahead of time. Some 2 million are illiterate. A total of about 600,000 are in prison and an equal amount reside in Washington, D. C. Another 300,000 are in the armed forces. But that still leaves 15 to 16 million unexplained non-voters. Why they don't vote is one of the great questions of American elections.

Where are the other 60 per cent at the University? Some could be explained through the same reasons as those given for the national elections but others obviously can't.

Some students have probably misplaced their registration receipts and therefore can't obtain their identification card in time to vote. Others will be sick and many will probably be in the process of commuting and forget to vote. None are illiterate and hopefully none are in the city or county jail. Members of the armed forces at the University still have the opportunity to vote, but that still leaves about 3,000 non-voting students to explain.

On the national scale citizens hesitate to affiliate with a political party and 40 per cent are apathetic or for other reasons fail to vote. At the U of I the situation seems to parallel the national scene. Students here also hesitate to join one of the two political parties and more than half are apathetic enough or "for other reasons" fail to vote.

No answers have been provided on the national scale and perhaps the logical conclusion would be to wait until some come forth. But why wait? Surely students who are at the most intellectual part of their life and who will be members of the intelligentsia when they graduate are interested enough in their democratic heritage to vote in elections choosing their leaders.

The U of I student body has the opportunity to correct one of the defects of our democracy and at the same time that of voicing their opinions on the operations of their student government. Perhaps achieving a 100 per cent voting record is an unrealistic goal but even reaching the national statistics would be an improvement at Idaho. L. W. J.

A Visit From St. Nick?

Twas the night before Tuesday, and in each sorority, Not a coed was stirring, even with a senior key. The nylons were hung in the bathroom with care, To dry, so tomorrow no legs would be bare; The girls were nestled all snug in their beds, While visions of frat pins danced in their heads.

Back at my apartment, I had switched out the light, For my roommate and I had called it a night; When o'er by campus there arose such a clatter, I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter. Tore open the shutter and threw up the sash; Away to the window I flew like a flash, I stuck out my head, and what should come to my ears, But screams, and whoops and lusty cheers. So my roommate and I so lively yet slow, Jumped in the car and drove to Greek row, Where what to our wondering eyes should appear,

But scores of college men reinforced with beer More rapid than Lindgren the crowds they came And they whistled and shouted and called them by name;

"Now DG's! now TriDelt! now Pine and the Thetas!

To Pi Phi to A-Phi! to Hays and the Kappas! To the top of the house, to the top of the hall, Now dash away, dash away, dash away all! As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,

When they meet with an obstacle mount to the sky, So up the fire escapes the collegiates flew Opened the windows, then climbed in too. And then in a twinkling we could hear the coeds Screaming and yelling as they leaped from their beds. The "Vandals" jumped into the rooms with a bound And gathered "dainties" as they ran around. While the men were dressed from their head to their feet, The coed's habilite was hardly complete. With a bunch of cures on every head, They looked like they'd just climbed out of bed; But their eyes—how they twinkled; their dimples—how merry;

One's cheeks were like roses; one's nose like a cherry; Another's little mouth was drawn up like a bow, And they all had soft skin as white as the snow. Some were chubby and plump, some flat as a shelf; A boy couldn't help laughing in spite of himself. But a wink from their eyes; and a toss of their curls, Told the boys they had nothing to fear from these girls. The raiders spoke not a word, but went straight to work, Stole panties, etcetera; then turned with a jerk, For all of a sudden, on came the lights, And the poor college men were caught dead to rights. So they sprang out the windows, to the girls gave a whistle; And away they all flew like the down on a thistle; But we heard them exclaim, ere they ran out of sight: "Onto Pine Hall, we're not through yet tonight!"

Fink of the Week The third Fink of the Week award goes to that anonymous electrician who managed to get the university's power back on so quickly Monday night. I was climbing in a second story window when the lights came on.

Priceless Story

telling you at the beginning that I have never experienced the joy of fashioning articles with my own hands. Nor anything useful for that matter. Here we are, then, a group of men on whom a university has set its stamp. We produce nothing we eat; we could not even lead a hand in the making of anything we see around us; and truth compels me to venture the suggestion that, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the chief motive of a college education is to escape actual participation in just such work as gives, or ought to give, joy to the worker."

Time Keeper
"A time-keeper performs a useful function, so does a cash register, but the function of education is not to turn out time-keepers or cash registers. It has been truly said that, if ten Bachelors of Arts were wrecked in mid-ocean, they could not build a pontoon to save their lives! They would be equally helpless in any critical emergency where practical knowledge of the ordinary things around us was imperatively necessary. A statement of the problem is not a solution, but we do not gain much by stating that the system is to blame and we are not."

To Prepare
"Education is to prepare and equip for the duties and the responsibilities of life — not to turn out industrial and commercial bosses, gaffers, time-keepers and cash registers. I would hardly be justified to take up your time with the observations alone. So, in addition, I want to say this: Most of you are destined to be masters of men. You will organize and mobilize their labor; you will oversee it. "When you see men around you actually creating beautiful things with their hands, I would like you to remember that it was my opinion that actual labor in the arts and crafts and industries is an infinitely nobler contribution to the happiness of mankind than clipping coupons and living on the sweat of other men's brows. Not Today

"It will not come in our day, but the world will ultimately come to understand that the training of the mind is as necessary as the training of the body. Why should it be considered as an unthinkable thing that a blacksmith or a carpenter should need an education? Why should college men consider it degrading to handle tools and make useful and beautiful things? "Why should a university perpetuate such a revolt against nature as a system in which the man who does no useful work at all is considered a gentleman, while the creator of wealth and beautiful things is considered low caste?"

Highest Form
"I want to point out to you that the highest form of culture and refinement known to mankind was ultimately associated with tools and labor. In order to do that, I must present to you a picture, imaginative, but in accord with the facts of history and experience." He pushed his chair back, and stood a few feet from the table. His face betrayed deep emotion. His voice became wonderfully soft and irresistibly appealing. The college men had been interested; they were now spellbound. He raised his hand and went through the motions of drawing aside a curtain.

Weird Act
It was a weird act. The silence became oppressive. As if addressing an actual person of flesh and blood, he continued: "Master, may I ask you, as I asked these young men, whether there is anything in this room that you could make with your hands as other men make them?"

There was a pause, a brief moment or two, then, with the slow measured stride of an Oriental, he went to the end of the table, and took the tablecloth in his hand, and made bare the corner and the carved oak leg of the great table. In the position he looked into the faces of the men, and said: "The Master says, 'Yes, I could make the table — I am a carpenter.'"

U.S. College Tradition Seems To Disappear

By GENE MARAFFIO
Argonaut Staff Writer

Note: This is the first of three articles of the series entitled "College Tenor," by Gene Maraffio, Borah, Argonaut staff writer.

A fine old American tradition says college years are the best, most carefree years of our lives. And there used to be a fond old American dream of the chance of a college education for everyone.

I say that there used to be a dream because somewhere it seems our society has turned that dream into an unconditional requirement of success.

Little Hope

The result has been an emphasis on a college education as the only road to success. Anything short of an education leaves little hope for an individual to do well in life.

A result of the "college fall" philosophy of our society has been to create a whole new set of pressures on this generation of young people.

These pressures serve to point up an unfortunate contradiction to the idea that "college years are the best years of our life."

For many they may be; but evidence indicates that for a rapidly increasing number of students, college is not the best years of their lives. It is a time of fear, frustration, worry, confusion and failure.

Psychological Help
Evidence of emotional difficulties may be seen in statistics on students requiring psychological help sometime during their stay in college.

A recent poll of 600 college psychiatrists revealed that about 15 per cent of the students in their schools seek psychiatric help, while 30 per cent ought to.

In addition, it has been observed that suicide rates are generally higher among university students than in the general population of the same age group. Life magazine notes that suicide is the sixth most common cause of death among people of the same general age group. (Continued in next issue of Argonaut)

Death Takes Two Noted Educational Leaders; Former Idaho Regents Praised By Faculty

Within a few months, death has taken two of Idaho's educational leaders.

The passing October 18 of Mrs. Marguerite Allen Campbell, University of Idaho Regent from New Meadows, 1951-61, recalled the death July 28 of Judge William F. McNaughton, Regent from Coeur d'Alene, 1939-52.

"Too often when people reminisce on the greats of a university, they fail to include the regents or trustees," said University of Idaho President Ernest W. Hartung. "I did not have the privilege of knowing Mrs. Campbell or Judge McNaughton, but, from what I have learned about them, I believe they should very definitely be considered among the university's greats."

Financial Vice President Kenneth A. Dick commented:

"I have never known two more dedicated educational leaders. For two years, they have served together on the Board of Regents, and it was good to know they were there, especially in those trying, post-war years when we had the big bulge of returning GIs. They were pillars in the period of readjustment, and the University of Idaho is better today because of them."

Mrs. Campbell first came to know the University of Idaho as a freshman student in 1910. She became a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority the first year the national chapter was formed from the local Alpha Delta Pi.

As a student, Mrs. Campbell demonstrated her broad interests. She received a B.A. degree in liberal arts in 1914, with a good number of home economics courses to her credit. She considered it a special privilege as a Regent to give the dedicatory address for the Home Economics building in 1952.

memorated with the naming of Campbell Hall in the Wallace Residence Center after her. Her family asked that contributions to a University of Idaho scholarship fund in her name be sent in lieu of flowers for her funeral at New Meadows Thursday.

Judge McNaughton

Judge McNaughton began life in 1876 in Earling, Iowa. He was graduated from Woodbine (Iowa) Normal school in 1897, and received his law degree from the University of Nebraska in 1901. After practicing law in South Dakota, he moved to Coeur d'Alene in 1909, and began practicing there. He was appointed to the District Court in 1920, and, in 1930, he became a justice of the State Supreme Court. He resigned in 1932 to resume private practice, but in 1939 he was once more serving the public as a Regent and member of the State Board of Education.

The thoughtful, pipe-smoking judge was noted for his wit, and could always be counted on as a calming influence in tense situations. If a question for the board to settle involved legalities, all eyes turned to the judge. His wisdom matched his legal knowledge.

Like Mrs. Campbell, he expressed his sentiments in a dedicatory address — this one for the Music building in 1952. He said:

"Man does not live by bread alone. Music is food for the spirit. More persons must know and understand music."

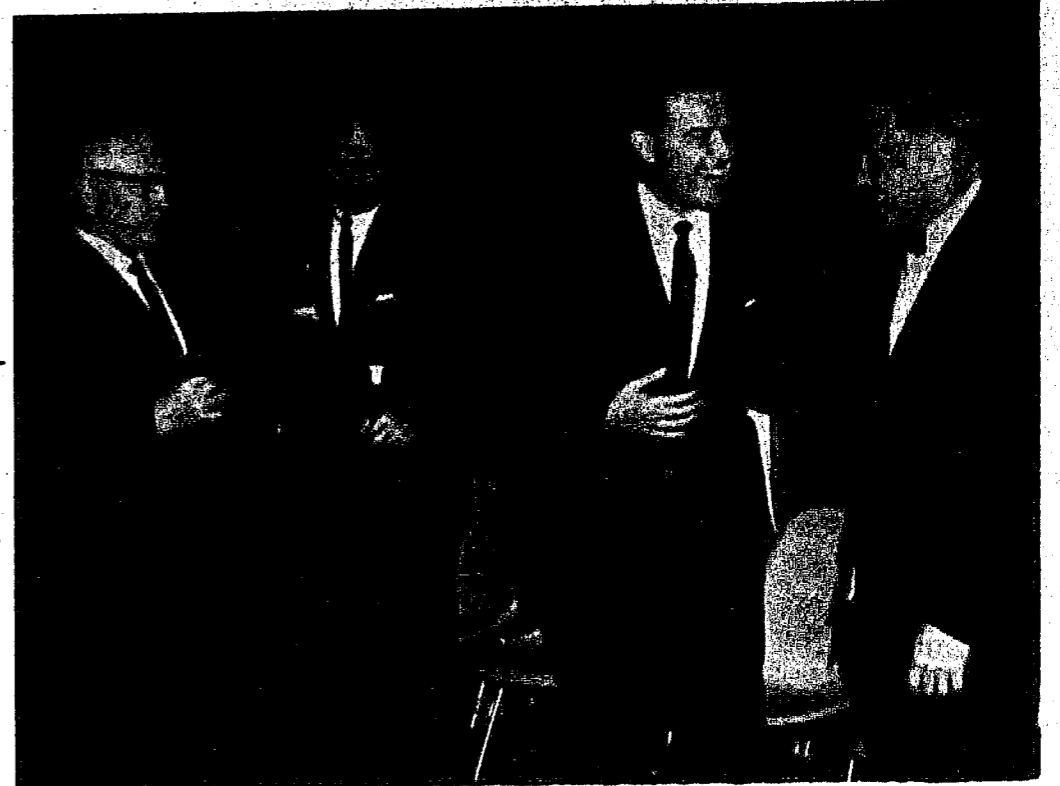

Mrs. Campbell

While she was a student, another great woman leader of the university—Permeal French—was dean of women. Mrs. Campbell, who had long admired the pioneer dean, spoke with feeling when she again gave a dedicatory address — this time for the Permeal French House in 1955:

"Dean French was like Mr. Chips of James Hilton's famous book, 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips.'

Her educational contributions have already been com-

Platforms

We, as students of the University of Idaho and members of the Cross Campus Alliance Party, do hereby set forth this platform to promote a stronger voice in campus affairs through the unity of all student elements at the University of Idaho. We propose to accomplish the following:

- (1) The class officers should become integrated with the following ASUI student government structure.
 - (a) The four class presidents should serve as ex-officio members of Executive board. Along with the present ex-officio members the GEM Editors, Argonaut Editors, Public Relations Director, KUOI Station Manager, and the AWS President.
 - (b) The class presidents should be invited to and take part in the following activities:
 - (1) Student Faculty Retreat
 - (2) Freshman Orientation
 - (3) Receptions
 - (4) W.S.U. Walk
 - (5) Homecoming Parade (when held)
- (2) The three major class functions, Holly Week Dance, Jr.-Sr. Prom, and Frosh Week Dance, should be closed nights.
- (3) The annual class officer-executive board dinner should be held within two weeks after elections rather than second semester as it was last year.
- (4) The class organizations should know how much money they have and have greater control of its expenditures.
 - (a) The cost of Homecoming Fireworks should not come from the Freshman class. This money normally taken from the Freshman class should be used to establish a Frosh section in the GEM.
 - (b) The cost of the class officer-E-Board dinner should come from E-Board funds and not from the classes.
- (5) The Borah Foundation, founded at Idaho, should be supported by dismissing classes for the lectures the same as public event speakers.
- (6) The senior class should make probes into the following situations, publish their findings, and take the appropriate actions:
 - (1) Seating arrangements and sale of tickets at W.S.U. and Boise football games.
 - (2) Unfinished $100 pledge program for graduates to establish academic scholarship program order to compete with other colleges.

In order to insure efficient class governments, the Campus Union Party relies upon the four basic principles upon which it was founded. These four principles, (1) an informed student body, (2) cross campus participation, (3) no block voting, and (4) qualified candidates, supported by the following platform, will help to make this next year the greatest ever for all classes at the University of Idaho. With all campus participation as a keynote, we propose the following platform, setting forth the goals of the Campus Union Party for the 1965-1966 school year.

- FRESHMEN:
 - Familiarity of freshmen with the school, through their elected representatives.
 - Revival of the high school recruitment program, interesting the outstanding qualified students in Idaho high school in the University by selecting representatives from each living group to work with high school counselors at both Christmas and Spring vacation.
 - Organization and unity within the class, with all-campus participation in the planning and execution of all events.
 - Stature the sophomores in Paradise Creek at the annual Tug-of-war.
 - Early participation of all freshmen in Frosh Week.
- SOPHOMORES:
 - Salvation for the Frosh when they are dunked in Paradise Creek at the Tug-of-war.
 - Plentiful funds for the Campus Chest, through new fund raising activities.
 - Participation of all sophomores in making this year's Holly Week a success; insurance of a closed night for the dance, extended hours for women, and a fashion show to be held in the evening, fostering better attendance throughout Holly Week.
 - Harmony in Vandal country, when the sophomores host the annual Idaho-W.S.U. exchange.
- JUNIORS:
 - Jubilant expression by all at the success of the Junior-Senior Prom; better entertainment, a closed night for the event, extended hours for co-eds attending the prom, and better advertisement on campus.
 - Red Cross blood drive a success, with more competition among living groups, extensive advertising, and an improved judging system.
 - Satisfaction expressed at completion of the class project, benefitting the class, school, and community.
- SENIORS:
 - Sponsor a worthwhile class project, to be decided upon later in the semester by the class.
 - Review plans and work extensively with the administration in planning and executing the Graduation exercises in June.
 - Successful Junior-Senior Prom, to be jointly sponsored with the Junior class, and planned with the cooperation of the Junior class officers.

ed to the visitation schedules of E-Board members. Lon Atchley gave a brief report of the Associated Student Governments Conference he attended last week at Purdue College. He said others attending were particularly impressed with the ASUI Student Handbook. A complete report will be submitted at the next E-Board meeting. Dianne Green, E-Board member, reported that the Student Government Review and Revision Board is now operating and invited E-Board members to visit. The committee is composed of 14 students and Dr. Sydney Duncombe, faculty advisor. The advisory committee will meet Nov. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Ee-da-hoo Room of the SUB.

parking on at least one side of this street." Lon Atchley, E-Board member motioned that the report be tabled but he failed to get a two-thirds majority and discussion continued. Judy Manville, E-Board member, suggested the problem be taken to the Traffic Safety Committee. Denny Dobbin agreed with Miss Manville, and added that it would be more functional to let the Traffic Safety Committee handle it. A motion to accept the report as submitted failed by a six to four vote.

Lettermen Profit

Ken Johnson reported that about $525 in profits was received from the Lettermen concert.

Dobbin suggested that an Entertainment Committee be written up for the ASUI regulations to provide more authority. Diane Green submitted a report asking that Jane Watts, Argonaut editor be given an ASUI blazer.

"With the exception of the ASUI president, the Argonaut editor meets and influences more people than any other voting or non-voting member of the board," she said in her report. "The Argonaut is the chief communications media of the ASUI and is the communication sent to every high school in the state."

Miss Green said she was working with Rafe Gibbs, publications director, and the Music Department.

Bob Aldridge, E-Board member questioned whether the Home Economics program is supported by ASUI funds.

It was stated that the funds were audited by the ASUI but the money belonged to the group.

Retreat Report

Ruth Ann Knapp reported on the Student-Faculty Retreat and asked for all members to submit their evaluations soon.

Miss Knapp said she would make some minor adjustments to allocate extra ASUI money from increased enrollment next month when an estimate is received from the business office.

Bob Aldridge proposed students be allowed to park on one side of Seventh Street between the SUB alley and Elm St.

"This street is sufficient for two lanes of cars and two lanes of parked cars," he said in his report. "I can see no reason why there should not be student

E-Board Interviews To Be Wednesday

More interviews for the student entertainment committee will be Oct. 27, in the Student Union Building, according to Ken Johnson, Executive Board member.

The committee will be organized to plan big name entertainment for the Idaho campus. It is to be set up as an E-Board committee. About ten students will be selected.

'Oklahoma' Costumes Considered Colorful

High top boots, leg-o-mutton sleeves, and ten-yard skirts are all important aspects of the costuming for the U-I drama department's production of "Oklahoma!"

The costumes committee, headed by Cary Ambrose, Phi Phi, is using all original costumes, most from stock, plus nine colorful new creations.

Most of the costumes used this year are dresses which have been used in previous productions, and have had to be re-done, according to Miss Ambrose.

Long Hours
The costume committee has been working three hours a day for the past four weeks readying the costumes for their deadline next Thursday.

The old-fashioned dresses have hooks and eyes instead of regular seam openings. These all have to be checked to be sure they are in workable condition, said Miss Ambrose.

Fine Detail
The lace and other decoration on the costumes is also fine detail. "Everything takes so much time," she said. "I had no idea how much work and time this would take when we started."

"I've seen so many hooks and eyes on these clothes, that I feel like I'm going to turn into one," she added. There have been up to 20 hooks on one dress seam, she said.

The men are contributing their own costumes, however. These are such things as cowboy hats, shirts, and levis. This saves a lot of work. There is one set of costumes for a dream ballet sequence, which had to be made especially she explained.
