Finals Week

Finals approach and the pressure increases as the study time available diminishes. Students begin cramming.

Late nights, and long hours and the all important books symbolize the pressure of finals week.

Finals week is like a reoccuring ad dream from which one wakes feeling shaken, apprehensive and a little nauseous. It is also an experience which the students tends to repress from his memory until approximately a week before the whole thing happens again. But probably the most significant of the feeling one has about finals week is a sense of injustice of the whole thing, and the question which immediately arises is why must it happen?

Finals week is one of sever physical, mental and even spiritual strain because, not only do the hours of cramming, lack of sleep and frantic emotional pressure stiffle any chance for creative thought, but gives the student a sense of supreme frustration. Is this what education really is, he asks. Is this what the learning experience must be? The frustration comes not from winning or losing a particular grade, but from looking back and saying, what did I really learn? For some, the sense of being cheated in the learning process

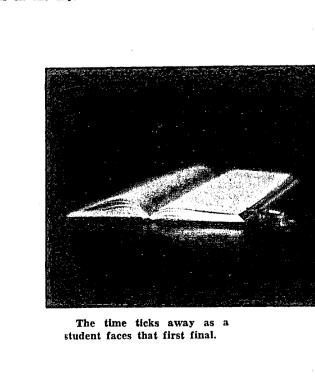

"Finals grades to me, means how well I can cram," says one University student. This sums up the general attitude toward the final grade as a measure of what has been learned during the course. This writer sees no alternatives to thee limited-time delemma except by allowing oneself only two courses a semester and devoting hours of study to review. Since this is financially impractical in the college situation, the student must resort to stuffing as much information into his mind as possible in a small amount of time. This seems unfair in the light that it measures only capacity to cram, and not the capacity to really understand and remember and use the information objectives of the course. The really tragic figure during finals is the student with two exams on the same day. For the whole time he is studying for one, he has this sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach he should be studying for the other. The student is really put into the pressure cooker when his prof, attempting to cover all his course material, overloads his students on the final. How tempting it is to throw up your hands and say, "to hell with it."

In our more scholarly moods, we say that grades are unimportant, what really counts is what one gains from the course. What can you gain from a course where most of the information is memorized and disappears soon after the week ends. Who says grades are unimportant in the first place. Grades dent respect among his peers; they open doors to positions of responsibility and aid in job security after graduation; they most of all, build ego. All of the measuring done through grades, especially final grades seems pseudo. Okay, what are the solutions? Trends nationally are away from the grade system aiming at other measures of knowledge. It Idaho, we can only ask for more preparation time, say giving three free days before the thundering onrush of that first final which now comes immediately after the last class with no break. Also, let each professor realize his responsibility to the student by not burying him under a mass of material during the last three weeks before finals. One student recommends elimination of finals, in favor of producing a research paper for courses which seems to him to be a much more meaningful learning experience. Of course, the responsibility and the desire for learning lies only with the student, but the tragic aspect of finals week is the "up the creek without a paddle" situation faced by all students no matter how studious they have been. "Hell is the only word adequate for finals week. The student can only cross his fingers, take a deep breath and grit his teeth. And after they (the finals) are over, he wonders what happened, as hee collapses in a stupor of nervous exhaustion. —J.L.A.

God willing, we shall this day meet that old enemy Who has given us so many a good beating.

Student Rights Bill Finally Appears

The last two weeks of school could be interesting. It looks as if the Student Rights Committee finally got off the ground and did something.

That's right, you remember the Student Rights Committee. They're the ones who made all the rumblings in March about the things they were going to do in April and finally ended up producing something in May. At least they did something, which is more than can be said about a lot of other

Apparently the delay occurred when certain members of the committee failed to produce. Subsequently, another crew took over the project and after fighting their way through numerous term papers, tests, etc., came up with a student bill of rights.

E-Board Presentation

This is supposed to be presented to E-Board Wednesday night. And here is where the fun begins.

The committee may try to get the bill through E-Board in only one or two meetings-and that is all that is left in the year. If it is as important as the committee thinks it is, then it seems that there should be some sort of presentation of the proposal to the student body. True, the University is not noted for its jacked-up student body, but the students should at least have a chance to see what is being done for or to them. If they don't pay any attention, then anything that follows is their own fault.

Not having had a chance to study the proposed bill of rights, we don't feel qualified to comment on its content. However, we do feel that the students should be aware of what is happening and feel free to comment if they wish.

Accomplish What?

The question that continually arises in our minds is, if a bill of rights is passed, just exactly what will it accomplish? Will it be one of these things that sound great on paper and does nothing in actuality? Just another document to clutter the books?

If it is sensible and taken seriously by the administration, then it could be beneficial. With the reorganization of the relationship between the faculty and the students there is a chance for more say in the running of the University.

One recent letter to Jason states that the University is run through a series of "understandings." This no doubt used to in true. Today it probably is somewhat, but the times are changing and students are getting the chance to ask questions and receive frank answers.

Depending on the content and intent of the bill of rights, this may be a way to break down a few more of these "understandings" and let the student in where he once feared to tread.

Maturing Student

It is good to find out how the University is operated and why things are done. It is a maturing process and there are members of the faculty who feel that students should be forced to mature much faster during their college years than they now do. The point is well taken.

Why should those who are student age, but not going to college, be forced to live as an adult while those sheltered within the ivory tower prolong their adolescence. If the administration forces the student to take more responsibility at an early age, then perhaps he will grow up faster.

Of course, the other side of the argument is that the student has no rights at all. When he comes to college he forfeits his personal rights to the University in return for a quality education. In other words, his only right is to a good education for which he has given up all else.

This seems a bit extreme to us to say the least, but again it has a point.

Involves Everyone

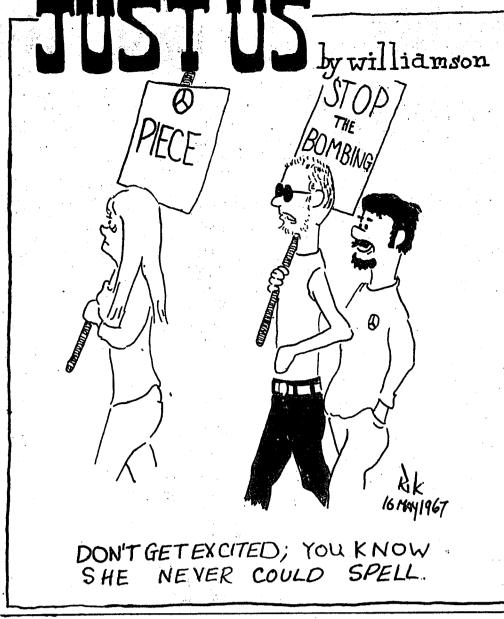

Regardless of your views of student rights, it will be well worth your while to follow this year's bill of rights. It doesn't involve just E-Board and the Student Rights Committee. It involves everyone on this

Red River Days

There is an old tradition at the Argonaut called Red River days. In fact it is so old that no one can recall the origin of the name. Anyway, yesterday was Red River Day and that means that this issue was put out by next year's staff.

Therefore, if it's a success, EO and Jason can sit back and say, "We brung 'em up right." If it isn't, well, we have no claim whatsoever to this issue—and for once our hands are clean.

If this Fleece comes out in print, it will no doubt mean that the issue was a success despite the trauma that goes into each and every issue of this paper.

Since finals are approaching, I guess I'll help out the less imaginative people by trying an annotated list of ways to waste time to avoid studying. For seniors, there is the endless job of filing credentials, interviewing, waiting for graduate schools to reply, and filing job applications. If one applies oneself industriously to the task, one can spend many fruitless hours filling out flawless questionnaires about one's place of birth (with county), infancy (with traumas), and other trivia. A senior can also spend the time necessary to travel to an interview in Spokane, and in Pendleton, and/or one in Twin Falls, not to mention the sidewalk-pounding to complete the depleted, college, worn wardrobe and build a junior-executive supply of suits, ties, flowered bermudas, and guerrachis.

If this fails to stimu-late the slothful, a senior or anyone else can risk trampling to listening to Hoggy and the Blossoms. It is endlessly .. more ...adventure-some to spend the time in Morts with the crowd than to spend the same amount of time listening to a private stereo.

.....Other activities vary from coffee-chugging con-tests in the SUB to sun bathing in the backyard, to pasture functions, to Clue, to bridge, to watching cloud or leg formations, provided one is not required to do so by a class.

Sun bathing is a capital example of peaceful rest. Reading in the sun will harm the eyes and restricts the number of provacative poses one can effect for whatever reason. The time that is spent recovering from sunburn is often too painful to permit constructive activ-

The most productive activity is maligning the University as a "tundra", a prison, a hole, a waste of time, and a mistake. New adjectives can be exchanged, new stories can be spun, and new injustices can be cited to prove the worthless Palouse potential. This activity is the modern University answer to contests in Renassance schools over the possibility of Adam and Eve having navals, the number of stars in the sky, and which is better: night or day. However, the appropriateness of the present dialogues is heightened by the students' proximity to the problem. This discussion is possible over dounuts, coffee, coke, beer, liquor, or other beverages. Ungarded individuals even discuss it over dormitory meals. These time-wasters are certain that the University won't improve even if they do something for it and exchange sloth for productivity.

Those less talented persons with limited vocabularies must content themselves with just watching walls, people ,streets, and other inanimate objects. They don't see the shuffle because they shuffle. They start at a person in a hurry picking up his feet because it jars the smooth tranquility. They don't see the harried, empty eyes because they, too, have them. However, a medal should be given to those tongueless wonders who sit in front of a panorama and fail to see anything. They are class "A" students of time wasting.

"The bill of student rights, which has been long discussed, was drafted last week in a series and the last sections deals with of a students right to due process of meetings," a spokesman for student disciplinary and counsel- of the law in student disciplinary the group said. According to him, the intent of the Student Bill of Rights is to guarantee to the students, in writing, certain rights which they can expect to have honored by the administration, the faculty, and the student government.

The Committee expects the document, which is entitled a "Statement of Student Liberties" to be passed by the E-Board in the form of a memorial to the Faculty Council. GT+383=NEW DART GTS.

That's what we did. Took a well-tested 383-cubic-inch 4-bbl. V8 and slipped it under the hood of Dart GT. The result: Dart GTS. A brand-new optional package of performance goodies featuring:

■ Dual exhausts. ■ Heavy-duty suspension. ■ Red Line wide-oval tires. ■ Disc brakes up front. Either four-speed manual or three-speed automatic transmission. - And a low moan from the lowrestriction air cleaner that your elders just won't understand and your girl friend will eventually get used to.

The GTS package is available on both Dart GT models, two-door hardtop and convertible. And with either GT, you start with such standard features as ■ All-vinyl upholstery. ■ Foam-padded seats. • Full carpeting.

Idaho Channel 12 Probes Used Cars

A legislator calls for public protection against "unscrupulous dealers" who would tamper with the actual mileage reading of a used car Wednesday, (May 17) at 6:30 p.m. when University of Idaho television presents "Used Cars: Wheels and Deals."

The program, to be seen on Channel 12, is a study of the $10 billion used car market, and is the latest monthly consumer series. "Your Dollar's Worth." Among those appearing on the program are John Foran, the California assemblyman who has proposed a bill banning odometer tampering; Pat Kanelos, lobbyist for Independent Automobile Dealers Association; flamboyant exdealer Earle "Mad Man" Muntz; used car dealers; and students in a consumer education course.

This student does not believe is genuinely concerned. He is seeks to change its character. He is active in promoting what he believes and in "practicing what he preaches." The society that before has been protested in quiet terms is now being protested by the activist and this is both a shock and a tribute to the society which allows social protest.

Drugs are a manifestation of the new generation of protesters. The drug releases the mind. The drug is a closer contact with reality. The drug is a method of discovery, a/manner of social protest, and the measure, in some cases, of belief. It is claimed to be better than alcohol because it does not dull the mind! it "expands" it.

The drug revolution is part of an overall expression of a generation and it will get worse or better depending upon your viewpoint at Idaho and on campuses throughout the United

Is the Almon-Asbury area blighted? "I'd prefer not to comment," said Marvin Kimberling, administrative assistant to the mayor.

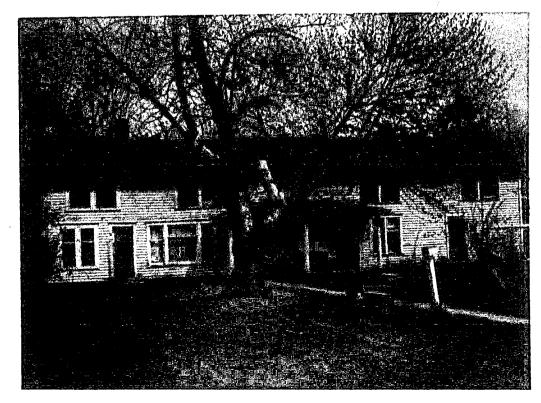

Symbol of Moscow's past, this towering structure once served as Moscow's hospital. It now houses University students who have been known to lose their patience.

"Everybody recognizes that some of Moscow's housing is less than what a lot of us would like to believe is desirable . . . Competition for housing will force them to be remodeled or torn down"—Marvin Kimberling.

Mark Greenwell To Attend Idaho

Paul Ostyn, athletic director for the University of Idaho, announced today that Marc Greenwell from Honolulu, Hawaii, would attend the University of Idaho next fall and has received a grant in aid.

Greenwell will graduate from Punahou high school in Honolulu, this spring and was one of the outstanding swimmers in high school competition in the nation last season.

Greenwell competed in the National AAU swimming championships in April at Dallas, Texas and was a standout in the individual medley and 200-yardbackstroke events.

In the backstroke, Greenwell has a top time of 2:07 and in the 200-yard medley he has the best time of 2:05.

Chet Hall, newly appointed swimming coach for the Vandals, said that Greenwell's times show that he is one of the finest swimmers ever to enroll at Idaho and could be one of the top mermen to represent the Unisersity during the next four

When you mention the possibility of a top-flight high school athlete coming to Idaho, the coaching staff is all ears, but when you mention their sports facilities they just turn pale.

I was glancing at the facilities of Idaho's athletic program the other day and it almost amazes me, whe I notice all that the Regents have done in support of

I noticed track coach, Doug MacFarlane looking kind of gloomy the other day after returning from a workout for his team. I at first thought that this was just the undercurrent from an unsuccessful season, but when I looked at the track, the anwer was clear. It was under about a foot of watere, but that didn't really matter because if it rains just once on the track it is just like running in quicksand. Besides, the Vandal trackmen had gone two weeks without the benefit of its limited use because it was too wet to run on. Speaking of wet, if you dived into the university's swimming pool, you would be lucky if you got wet, be cause it can't hold more than a coffee can full of water We have a top flight swimmer coming here from Hawaii next year and when he sees the pool, he is going to think that it is one of those portable pools they us for outdoor carnivals. Then of course you have to take into consideration the magnificient rotunda, we call our gymnasium. This beautiful structure must hold all of five thousand. When Wayne Anderson recruits, he doesn't dare mention his gymnasium or else they would call him a liar. If you told people back east about our gymnasium, they would call you a liar because they wouldn't believe such a place existed. Of course we could use our lighting system as a selling point since the gym has just been rewired.

Last, but not least, is the dynamic football stadium with its concrete bleachers, padded seats, ultra-modern press box and its Comiskey Park scoreboard.

The stadium is enhanced by its Astromedome-like turf. This field which suffers from malnutritions has harly experienced the color of green on its surface in a decade.

If you noticed on the football schedule next year we have only two home games. This is because we can't talk anyone into being fool enough to play us on our home pasture. I can imagine what Paul Ostyn goes through trying to get home contests for Idaho in any

Then there is the physical education department which has perhaps, the most well-planned curriculum, but they have to look in evry crack and cranny to find te equipment which the Regents promised them 10 years

Last of all is Mr. Parberry who is in charge of Intramurals. He has one of the best programs in the Northwest and almost has to stretch a regular day into 26 hours to allow for the use of inadequate facilities. Next time you complain about a coach doing his job or not winning, just take a look around and see what they have to offer a kid besides their own personal influence.
