'Good Old Days' Are Here, Celebrate by Falling Asleep

It is always a temptation, when faced with the prospect of Homecoming, to offer up some lovely little gems of sticky goo for all those darling moms and dads, alumni, etc., that filter to the campus anticipating that "big game," parade, cocktail party, which seems to typify the ageless spectacle of Homecoming.

Blah, Blah, Blah

This is the time for old friends who struggled through the academe at Idaho sometime during the past 50 years, to talk about the "good old days." Blah, blah, blah, we know the routine. "Back when I went to school there was a Depression" or "I was here during the war, when there were no men." And that's the problem, the good old days which were so grand 30 or 20 years ago, are with us in this hallowed institution, today. Why? Because a lot of people that liked the status quo in the 1940's and 50's, have managed to beat back all pressure for change and have kept their treasured way of doing things clear through to Homecoming, 1967. How, exciting!

44 B.C.

Too many individuals on the University campus, both in the administration and faculty are happy with their private little set ups, and a little afraid that someone besides their students might find out that they haven't progressed in their field since 44 B.C. Not that they really care. They come to class everyday or to their desk, fake a lot of reading lecture notes that haven't been re-written in 20 years or watch over a few secretaries.

We students, with eyes wide in wonderment, say, "So this is what college is like, so this is what real learning means." It doesn't take long to get the picture, as a prof stands at the lectern with a smug smile on his face and dares his students to approach anything from a new premise. And everyone is so happy. Except those individuals among the administration and faculty, and students who do not like the status quo, and do not like to act like a bunch of zombies walking foggy-eyed from one cloudy class to another. And this brings us to another frustration.

Exceptions

The sad thing about leveling generalized criticism, is that those individuals who are continually re-evaluating their teaching material and techniques, go unrecognized. There are some outstanding people among the administration and faculty who are more than just performing in the capacity of their job. The students give them an enthusiastic thank you. But these individuals, too often are thwarted in attempts for more expedient and appropriate learning pro-

Footnotes

A Heck of A Lot

Our thanks, this issue goes to Jim Withereil, cartoonist-in-residence. Jim, who has entertained the Idaho campus through his pen and ink medium during previous years, will be leaving the University area today. Best wishes to you Jim and thanks a heck of a lot.

Thanks goes too to Chris Smith, our 200-year-old political writer and "John Corlett" of the Arg, for his fine job in deciphering that mass of garbage called CUP party class office nominations, which appears on pages four and five of this issue. Anyone who can do that job could easily age 200 years. But we know Chris. Just because you are a dirty old man, doesn't really mean you are going on your third century.

grams at Idaho. Yes Virginia, "politics" exists other places besides in government. College faculties and administrations are notorious for their back scratching, power plays and manipulations within the administrative structure. More than once, a progressive faculty member has been zapped by those that are only too happy to keep things just the way they are, while they wait around for another few years to retirement. And that is the crux.

Smug Ducks

Everybody is out for more money, not relating it to anything but tenure. Shouldn't the prestige and experience of 20 years of teaching, force an individual to maintain a "good image" so to speak. Seldom do they try. And is there anyone around to see that they try? No. A University professor or administrator could expire right in the middle of a lecture and no one would ever check up on him to see how his lectures were being received by his students. The University faculty member and administrator is the worst existing abuser of freedom.

According to current educational research, the most effective teaching methods involve the student, challenging him to think effectively on his own. It seems that faculty in the College of Education are the worst offenders when preaching the very goals they profess to advocate. The problem is not primarily one of conservatism, but more of just plain apathy, more chronic than exists among the students. Apathy in this case is a dangerous and sad thing because the apathetic ignore the entire problem; can remain unconcerned; can sit at his desk and shed challenges for improvement like a smug duck. There are too many smug ducks quacking their way through the academic year.

Big Business

Government funds are making education "big business." There is too much money available to education these days, which does not justify some of the attitudes on this campus. Idaho could be getting twice the funds in research and grants, if those various individuals we have been speaking of, would get motivated.

Unlike Wine

In hearing about "the good old days," sometimes, to the Idaho student, it seems as though today we are watching a home movie re-run, of 1940 vintage. Those were all good years, but let's keep them in our memories, not in today's reality. Unlike wine, outmoded structures do not improve with age. The world we live in today, is not the world of 1940 and the University must be willing to compensate for change by changing itself. Counting the years between Homecoming 1947 and Homecoming 1967, how much change, adjustment and improvement has there been?

Just Barely

Contrary to popular belief Wizard, Jason does not bare gifts, only people and just barely.

Moonlighters, Beware Buckshot May Fly

Last year's Student's Rights Bill and the traditional student cry of "Why won't they treat us like adults," seems to be finally taking effect. This week the Moscow police department issued a rather startling announcement telling students that it was about time that the warnings ceased and the prosecuting started.

The proclamation covered such subjects as "pre-function" campfires being lit in undesignated areas. These include such places as private property around the Moscow area. Such campfires, according to police, may not be lit unless permission from the land owner is obtained and a fire permit is issued. Failure to follow this procedure is a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail or a $300 fine. Everyone at the scene of the fire is subject to arrest whether he or she lighted the fire. This also includes such persons that are found at the scene of the fire drinking under age. Why not drink in the dark!

The police have already investigated 24 of these fires in the wooded and country areas nearby. They report that every fire had its quota of University of Idaho students in attendance. Idaho students would not do a thing like that, would they?

It seems that these fires have been lit by TRESPASSERS. Persons who do not obtain the permission of the owner are considered trespassers. We wonder how buckshot in the seat of a few pants would feel!

It seems that within the last week over 16 mailboxes have been removed, damaged or molested in the area near Moscow. The police report that University students have been involved in all solved cases. Is this an example of the adult behavior expected from the Student's Rights generation?

Defacing, shooting, removing or in any way tampering with a mailbox is a Federal offense punishable by up to 15 years in jail or a $10,000 fine. Who could afford a fine like this one?

Had a car wreck lately? It seems that a number of motor-vehicle accidents have been happening around this area and have not been reported to the proper authorities. Whenever an accident causes $50 or more damages to any kind of property or whenever any personal injury occurs, immediate notice must be given to the police. In the end it would prove to be a better deal to report such accidents than get sued to the hilt.

Hunting licenses are in! Poaching is out.

The proclamation also includes a statement that reads thus:

"As many as 30 cars have been parked in county roads on any one night. They are often not clear of the roadway and are usually unlighted."

What!? "They constitute a serious hazard to occupants as well as other vehicles passing by. Such "PARKING" is unlawful."

Hopefully Nez Perce Drive will be deserted, but as long as the time meters are filled, new campus parking lots may be the big attraction for "moonlighters."—G.E.

T. H. E. Column Marty Peterson

Since we are now in the midst of Homecoming activities, I suppose that I should make a few appropriate comments concerning the alumniees (according to the Governor it is alumies).

Many people are returning to the campus for the first time in several years. These people will undoubtedly notice a great many changes on campus. The first thing you will probably notice is the rubble that is the remains of the LDS House. This occurred when members of the LDS intramural football team accused the members of the Gault Hall team of cheating. Live and learn, group.

The campus building program has added a great deal to the campus. Let me point out a few of the things that it has added. The new physical science building added a large pile of bricks to the landscape when one of its walls began to cave-in. The new University Classroom Center added several new tree stumps to the campus and for the last two years everyone has eagerly been awaiting them to sprout leaves. Seriously, though, all of the returning "alumniees" have probably never seen the campus looking better. The grass always looks greener from the other side of the fence.

While we are dwelling on building programs, let's take a look at what the Federal government has been doing to beautify our country. Last week Lady Bird told Lyndon to get his face lifted. That's good for a start.

One of the more recent additions to the Federal governments building program has been the Rayburn House Office Building in Washington, D.C. When the original bids were let for this building, the total cost was to come to $64 million. It seems that someone forgot to take into account the rate at which the cost of living has been going-up. Anyway, five years later the cost has risen to $124 million.

The Rayburn Building has been making headlines in all of the architecture trade journals. Noted architects have even started calling it by affectionate names. These names include "Edifice Rex," "Forest Lawn, East," and "The Seventh Blunder of the World."

However, not all of the praise has been in name calling. One critic of modern architecture was heard to remark "Only Mussolini could have built something like this." There have also been similar comment from this country's art critics. One art critic remarked that the Rayburn Building is the greatest example of bolshevik modern in the Country.

While the government gloats over their grand achievements in beautification, there has also been some headway made by private citizens. Last spring I was one of many who received letters asking for a donation to install a statue of President Johnson in the Hall of Fame in Washington, D.C. Here is a reprint of the letter.

"Dear Mr. Peterson: I have the distinct honor of being a member of the Committee to raise $50,000 to use for the purpose of purchasing a statue of Lyndon B. Johnson for the Hall of Fame in Washington, D.C.

The Committee is in quite a quandry about selecting a proper location for the statue. It was thought not wise to place it beside that of George Washington, who never told a lie, not beside Franklin Roosevelt who never told the truth; since Lyndon could never tell the difference.

After careful consideration, I think it would be wise to place it beside that of Christopher Columbus, the greatest New Dealer of them all!!!! He started out not knowing where he was going; upon arriving did not know where he was; and when he returned he did not know where he had been. And he did it all on borrowed money.

The inscription on the statue shall read "Pledged to Lyndon B. Johnson, for the National Debt for which he stands, one Man exp-dable, with socialism and taxes for all."

Moses once said to the people of Israel, "Take up your shovels, mount your asses or camels, I will lead you to the promised land." Nearly 6,000 years later Roosevelt said, "Lay down your shovels, sit on your asses, light up a camel, this is the promised land." Now Johnson is stealing your shovels, kicking your asses, raising the price of Camels, and taking-over the promised land.

If you are one of those who had any money left after paying your taxes, I shall expect a generous contribution from you for this worthwhile project.

Yours in indebtedness, The Committee"

Weekend's Festivities To Feature Brubeck, Norman Luboff Choir

Two world famous musical groups will appear on the University campus as part of this weekend's homecoming activities. Scheduled to appear Saturday night is the Dave Brubeck Quartet. Sunday afternoon the appearance of the Norman Luboff Choir will conclude the weekend's activities.

Norman Luboff and the celebrated Norman Luboff Choir will appear at Memorial Gym, Sunday, Oct. 8 under the auspices of the Moscow Community Concert Association breaking another record in a consistently record-breaking career.

Since they first began touring in "five" concert performances in the Fall of 1963 (with a relatively modest debut schedule of 63 concerts), they have averaged more than 100 performances per concert season—a total approached by no other professional touring attraction of this kind.

It all began with records of a different sort. The popularity of this dynamic conductor-arranger-composer and his group was initially achieved through the many splendid recordings, on both the RCA Victor and Columbia labels, for which the group was originally created. The nucleus of the recording choir consists of 25-30 virtuoso professional singers (more added if and as called for by the music at hand) with an amazing repertoire that quite literally runs the gamut from Bach to the Blues.

Ranging from such "choral spectaculars" as "76 Trombones," arranged in the inimitable Luboff style, to an album of classical masterpieces, all of the Choir's 30-odd discs have the distinction of being best-sellers. The reason, to anyone who has heard any of them, is obvious: The enormous and mutually complementary gifts of Mr. Luboff himself, as a choral director of precision, elegance and verve, and an arranger of originality and solid musicianship, are clearly displayed throughout each of them.

Born in Chicago in 1917, Luboff studied piano and voice as a boy, but it was not until college that he gave any serious thought to making music his profession. After attending the University of Chicago and Central College, however, his decision was made and he enrolled for graduate study in orchestration and composition under the noted composer, Leo Sowerby.

Mr. Luboff's professional career had a three-pronged beginning; he taught theory, he began to make commercial arrangements and orchestrations, and—because it was relatively the easiest way to make a start in his chosen field—he employed his trained baritone to fine advantage as a "pops" singer.

Soon the young man was appearing regularly on various Chicago radio programs, in local theatres, and on recordings. He gradually became equally sought after as an arranger, and this talent was utilized by such shows as the Chicago Theatre of the Air, Show Boat, Plantation Party, and others.

In addition, Luboff arrangements were heard regularly on such important television programs as The Telephone Hour, The Dinah Shore Show, The Ford Star Jubilee, and The Jerry Lewis Show; and still others were created especially for a star-studded roster of artists and music directors, including Jo Stafford, Frankie Laine, Doris Day, Harry Belafonte, Rosemary Clooney, Guy Mitchell, Johnny Ray, Vic Damone, Paul Weston, and Percy Faith.

It was during this Hollywood period that the Norman Luboff Choir came into existence as a recording entity.

Along with the Norman Luboff Choir, the fantastic sounds of the Dave Brubeck Quartet return to the University of Idaho campus this Saturday night. Brubeck's concert will be part of the Homecoming activities. It will also be a sort of homecoming for Brubeck, who has performed previously at both the U of I and at WSU.

Brubeck organized his group fifteen years ago and called it the Dave Brubeck Octet. This group later disbanded and Brubeck, along with another of the members of the Octet, Paul Desmond, formed the now famous Dave Brubeck Quartet.

The rise of the group to being leaders in the jazz field came quickly. By 1954 Brubeck's picture has appeared on the cover of Time Magazine. During the next two years he was voted the "Jazz Personality of the Year." Since this time the group has been at the top of the polls every year. During the last five years the group has come in at the top of the Playboy Jazz Poll every year. The Playboy Poll is the largest jazz poll in the world.

Other honors which have been bestowed upon the group have been a CBS-TV documentary on their music and guest appearances on many national television shows. Two weeks ago Brubeck was the featured artist on "Jazz Casual" on KUID-TV.

Besides Brubeck the group consists of Paul Desmond, from the old Dave Brubeck Octet, Joe Morello and Gene Wright.

Desmond and Brubeck met while they were serving in the Army. After the War ended they got together in San Francisco and worked various jobs together in the Bay Area. Desmond's alto sax and Brubeck's piano have blended together into a style which is recognized as one of the finest jazz sounds in the business.

Drummer Joe Morello has risen to the top of the list of jazz musicians also. Morello started out as a youthful violin player, but switched over to the drums when he was sixteen. Morello is a great admirer of Gene Krupa and Buddy Rich. Prior to joining with Brubeck he played with the Johnny Smith Quintet, Stan Kenton and the Marion-Mo-Partland Trio. He joined Brubeck in 1956. Morello's drum solos have become a trademark of the group.

The latest member of the group is bass player Gene Wright. Wright joined the group three years ago just as they were departing on a State Department tour of the Middle East. Wright's easy going manner made him a popular member of the group. Before joining the Brubeck group he played with Cal Tjader and Red Norvo's groups.

The Quartet has succeeded in creating a sound which has taken the jazz world by storm. They specialize in compositions which are written in a variety of beats. Prior to their formation, most jazz was written in 4-4 time. Brubeck's compositions have been written in times that had never before been attempted at a commercial level.

Some of the group's greatest songs have been "Take Five," "Blue Rondo Ala Turk," "Unsquare Dance," and "Raggy Waltz." They have also had four record breaking albums. These are "Time Out," "Time Further Out," "Way Out in Space," and "Dave Brubeck at Carnegie Hall."

Tickets to the concert are still available at the SUB, Haddock and Laughlin, and the CUB at WSU. Reserve tickets are $2.75, main floor $2.25, and balcony $1.75. The concert will be from 8-10 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium.

Freshman Class President is a job entailing organization, coordination, and publicity. An all-out effort needs to be put forth to keep our decaying class offices alive. I want to put forth that effort. I propose initiating a system whereby our class would have a representative in each living group to aid in supporting class spirit and activities. I would also urge initiation of a districting system for our King and Queen election during Frosh Week. In essence, this would cut total time for the event in half and give students more study time for approaching mid-term exams. I would also urge initiation of a districting system for our King and Queen election during Frosh Week. In essence, this would cut total time for the event in half and give students more study time for approaching mid-term exams.

Frankly, I believe that the Freshman class is too little concerned about what is happening on this campus, especially in the area of governmental administration. One possibility might be to hold an all class meeting in the fall presided over by the frosh officers of the preceding year, for the purpose of educating the class about politics before the elections. If elected, I would work to my fullest ability to make this the best Freshman class this University has ever seen.

To avoid this communications gap we Freshmen must work to initiate new programs that involve the whole class. Our most useful tool in bridging the communications gap will be the class Extended Board. The Freshman Extended Board should be a forum for freshman communication.

As Freshmen we should start now to promote campus unity and fight campus sectionalism. To accomplish these aims we must have a sincere expression of enthusiasm on the part of the class officers.

It is most important that every member of the Freshman Class has the opportunity to become involved in campus activities and events. Conscientious efforts to make the class aware of these affairs would strengthen our role on campus. I would like to see a realization of this idea in our Freshman Class.

I will lead the Extended Board meetings and establish committees useful to this year's Freshmen as well as next year's Freshmen. This is extremely important because incoming Freshmen are usually uninformed of their responsibilities. Also, I consider it my duty to aid the Vice President in making Frosh Week the most successful event of the year.

The question of class officers has arisen many times in the past. Last year there was a movement to abolish these offices. I feel that class officers are necessary for the unity and management of class functions. Class affairs should be run by members of the respective classes to maintain more personal contact and keep class spirit at a high level.

Class officers are a very essential part of student government. They are ex-officio members of E-Board and should use this power to promote the well-being of their class. I would do this to insure that our Holly Week is a great success.

I feel student government is an indispensable part of campus activities. Therefore, I wish to familiarize myself more in the procedures of the University of Idaho activities structure through an affiliation in Freshman class officers.

Because of my previous activities, I feel I am able to work for the Freshman class enthusiastically.

As Vice President I would assume all duties delegated to me by the President. The Vice President's most important job is the general chairmanship of Frosh Week and as chairman I believe that total Freshman participation should be encouraged so that all may have a chance to voice their opinions.

I feel that the recent faculty ruling on attendance is detrimental to the attitude of the student body because it will tend to make the students rebellious toward the faculty and the administration. Student-Faculty relations could stand improving but this move will only make the gap between the two wider.

Above all, any class officer should be open minded and strive for class unity. Also, distinctive ideas through efficient organization can be a vital force in making the Freshman Class unparalleled in class activities, such as Frosh Week.

Class officers function as more than a tradition and figurehead on the U of I campus as some people have contended. I feel they are an important appendage of our student government structure and serve a definite role in promoting the ASUL. Why change a system that has been efficient in the past for one that has not been proven better? The Senior Class has assigned duties to perform and is also in a position to formulate new ideas and present new legislation to help maintain an efficient and smoothly functioning student government.

Because of my previous exposure to the operations of the ASUL, I consider myself competent enough and aware enough of campus issues to provide the senior class with responsible and representative leadership.

With 6,000 students, one is certainly not enough. At registration time the whole area is jam packed, and supplies often run out. The competition will go up and prices down, followed by a larger selection. These are only general reasons, as the bookstore topic can go on for hours.

Having been active in numerous organizations in high school, I know the importance of active student government. I have already noticed the political orientation on this campus. Class officers must play a bigger part in campus wide activity. Thus, I would push for more responsibility delegated to class officers.

I am very much sold on student government. It's the kind of activity that teaches you more about yourself and other people than a text book ever could.

Being new to the University of Idaho, I feel that what the Freshman class needs is organization. In order to oversee the various projects that must be done by the Freshman class, the officers must have leadership ability, creativity, and desire.

What makes a freshman class great? I feel it is the fresh, new ideas and general enthusiasm we bring with us. By sharing these qualities with the rest of the campus, we can do our part in building and strengthening the university.

Accounting Club Forms, John DePew, President

John De Pew is the newly elected president of Accounting Club. Assisting De Pew will be Ted Pursley, vice-president and Paige Kampa, secretary.

The first meeting will be held Monday, October 9, 1967, at 8:00 p.m. at the SUB. Students should consult the bulletin board at the SUB for the proper room.

The Club has scheduled three speakers from national accounting firms for October. The first will be Mr. John Costello from Arthur Young and Company. Mr. Costello is a former University of Idaho graduate and was recently promoted to Manager.

Topics to be discussed are "Accounting at the National Level as Compared with Other Levels as Well as With Other Industries." Other representatives will be from Haskins and Sells, and Price Waterhouse and Company.

The purpose of the Accounting Club is to better acquaint the students with the accounting profession and the opportunities available in accounting. During the school year it is anticipated that guest speakers will consist of representatives from national, regional and local accounting firms, as well as governmental and industrial organizations looking for accounting graduates.

In the last three months indicating his willingness to visit the Idaho campus and acquaint the firm with Idaho students, De Pew said.

"This is the only opportunity that most students have to acquaint themselves with the accounting profession."

All students interested in accounting as a profession, as well as accounting majors, are cordially invited to join the Club by attending this next meeting, he added.

Student Class officer elections will be held Wednesday, Oct. 18, instead of Tuesday, Oct. 17, according to Jim England, ASUI vice-president.

"All names for the ballot must be turned in by 9 p.m. Oct. 9," England urged. If names are not in by Oct. 9, they will not appear on the ballot," England continued.

In order to meet the deadlines for submission of recommendations to the state and regional committees on campus scholarships, the campus committee is asking that all applications for Rhodes, Fulbright, and Marshall scholarships be completed and in the Humanities Office, UCC 213-214, by Friday, October 13. The committee expects to conduct interviews of candidates on Monday and Tuesday, October 16 and 17.

New 'Impact' Magazine To Publish Student Work

The need for individual expression and desire to be heard in the fields of literary and political matters by University of Idaho students, has led to the organization of a new and needed magazine, "Impact."

The concept of a monthly magazine, which would publish any kind of written material on campus, is not a new one, but the actual presence of "Impact" allows this concept to become a reality, according to Steve Cook, Editor.

"Impact," free from sponsorship in any form, can and will publish any type of free verse, poetry, short story, political papers and well-written pornography, Cook added.

"Impact," with monthly campus distribution, will be the long-needed voice of Idaho students allowing their opinions expressed in literary form to be published and read by all.

The student, when submitting his material, is asked to leave it at the Information Booth at the SUB. Any material submitted to "Impact" will not be altered, but will be returned to the donor at his request. No monetary reward is given for printed material in "Impact."

Since student submittal is the only source of material for the monthly magazine, the act must be a continual one, Cook stated. In order to allow enough time for editorial processes on the Oct. 30 issue, material submitted after Oct. 12 will not be printed in the first issue.

However, since the submittal process is a continual one, material received after Oct. 12 will be considered for the November issue.

Cook urges everyone to "make yourself aware of the need for 'Impact' and become familiar with it through the various forms of advertising material on campus."

"Impact" is your magazine, your outlet of individual expression, your chance to be heard. Take advantage of "Impact"—you are "Impact."

Honorary Taps Former Frosh

New members of the Alpha Lambda Delta honorary were formally pledged Thursday evening. The new pledges are Judy Colton, off campus; Marsha Bermeoso, Gamma Phi; Virginia Williams and Barbara Hardy, DG's; Sandra Haddock, Forney; and Gai Polley, Steel House.

Tentative plans are now underway for the chapter initiation scheduled for November. Activities for this semester include a tea, shortly after mid-term for all freshman girls with a 3.5 grade average.

Other Alpha Lam officers for this year include: Janis Harper, Gamma Phi, vice-president; Phyllis Unzicker, Alpha Phi, secretary; Susie Johnson, Alpha Phi, treasurer, and Eda English, Tri Delta, historian.

Solid Connection.

It just makes good sense for the graduate engineer or scientist, contemplating the direction of his professional career, to make sure that he has all the information he needs about every company he is considering—that he has total input information—before he makes a connection. If you're good. If you're really good. If you have learned to use the knowledge you have acquired as a starting point from which to launch new ideas, you probably know already that your talents are in demand. There is always a seller's market for intellect. But there can be more to your future than buy and sell. Satisfaction is a commodity that cannot be exchanged. When you are considering where you will start in the complex world of aerospace, while you are gathering input information, we urge you to investigate the opportunity for a satisfying career here at the Pomona division of General Dynamics. Here are five reasons why it would be a wise move for you now: 1. You will work side-by-side with nationally recognized engineers and scientists who are pioneering advanced concepts in missilery. Your reputation will be balanced by association. 2. Your compensation and fringe benefits will be on a par with the top in the industry. 3. You will pursue your profession in an area where living is pleasurable year 'round—one of the top vacation areas in the nation. Beaches, mountains, desert, a great city nearby, universities and colleges for advanced study, an atmosphere of growth and achievement. 4. Your ability will be applied to creating universally important products of engineering imagination. 5. Here at the nation's largest facility for development and manufacture of tactical guided missiles, your talents will be evaluated, recognized and rewarded.
