LAW SCHOOL ENROLLMENT HAS been growing by leaps and bounds but some of the congestion in the law library will be relieved with the construction of a new building.

Law school enrollment grows 96 per cent in two years

A 96 per cent increase has occurred in enrollment at the University of Idaho College of Law in the last two years, according to Albert R. Menard, Jr., dean of the law school.

Enrollment was 119 in 1969, 152 in 1970 and currently is 233.

Menard said he feels that the increase stems from a number of factors. "Many men and women are attracted by the need for legal solutions to the problems of pollution and the environment; population and land use; violence and disorder," he noted.

Other reasons he listed include the rapid rate of cutback of the armed forces, with veterans taking advantage of educational benefits; the surge in population (the G.I. post war baby boom) which took place in 1946 and 1947 and is now reaching the law school age brackets; the relative independence of the legal profession from dominance by a few large units, a fact which has considerable appeal at the present; and the relatively favorable legal employment pattern of the last few years.

"The problems created by the increased instructional load once again emphasize the necessity for rapid construction and occupancy of the new law building authorized for the main campus," Menard added.

The bids for the new law building are due to be opened Sept. 30.

Hartung requests referendum

"We have been thinking about it for three years and now we are going to go out and do it," ASUI President Mary Ruth Mann said when questioned about action taken on President Hartung's recent request for a student referendum on athletics.

The proposal was taken before the Senate on Wednesday night and was sent to the Senate Committees on Finance and Rules and Regulations. The Senate meeting tonight, presumably will act on the measure, calling for a $188 allocation from the "New Program" budget to cover the expenses of a coordinator, poll electioners, computer time to tabulate results, and ballots.

Tentative date for the referendum is October 27.

Proposed questions to be on the ballot include finding the priority level of respective sports, researching the level of participation in sports that is desired, asking whether students would be willing to support a higher level of participation in sports or maintain the current level of participation, and finding the importance of athletics as opposed to other university priorities.

"The main problem in obtaining meaningful results from the referendum will be getting out an adequate information program," Miss Mann said.

"However, the question of increasing student fees for athletics should be a hot enough issue to get people out to vote."

President Hartung, when questioned about the need for a referendum, said that the student body's opinions on athletics should be sampled before athletic spending priorities are set. He felt that the Board of Regents would also like to see a student referendum before changing athletic spending priorities.

He cited the two-platoon football system and increased travel expenses due to the federal excise tax on air travel as reasons for athletic department financial difficulty.

Hartung said that the presidents of the Big Sky Conference schools have made some recommendations to alleviate athletic funding problems. Included were: limiting the number of athletic scholarships available at conference schools, changing the financial aid structure in the scholarship program; reducing the size of traveling squads and asking the athletic directors to do some thinking about ways to reduce costs.

Although he said the new stadium should help the athletic program become more self-sustaining, Hartung did not look for the projected increase in gate receipts to change the amount of student fees paid for athletics. Ever-increasing costs would prevent this, he noted.

He emphasized that the increase in student fees made in 1969 went not only for the construction of the stadium, but also for the construction of an entire new athletic plant, including the swimming pool and golf course.

Swimming center open to public

The University of Idaho Swimming Center is now open for operation seven days-a-week, according to Ken Lewis, manager.

Student, faculty and staff families may swim on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights, while the general public can swim on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

Semester tickets are now on sale at the Business Office cashier window Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Namethe trophy

Need some money? Are you a loyal Vandal booster? Will you do anything for a buck? Well, here's a contest for you. The Boise Vandal Boosters and the Bronco Association are combining funds to buy a traveling trophy for the University of Idaho-Boise State football game. They need a name for their trophy and will pay some student $100 if he or she comes up with the one that appeals to them most.

All you have to do is think of a name put it with your name on a piece of paper and give it to Mary Ruth Mann or the SUU information desk. It will be dated and sent to Boise where a joint meeting of the two booster clubs will decide the winner. In the case of duplication the entry which has been dated the earliest will be considered. The deadline for entry is Saturday noon.

The trophy will be presented by the losing team to the winning team at the winning side's college.

Recycle center for Moscow

The Moscow recycling center, located behind Queen City Printing, is a completely nonprofit organization which combines volunteer labor and storage space for use in the recycling of newspaper, aluminum, glass, metal, and tin.

Larry Kirkland, a Moscow resident and a research technician for the U of I Water Resources Institute, initiated the project during the last week of June.

"I have been interested in the environment for a long time, and I chose the recycling center as a goal because I felt it had a pretty sure chance of surviving," said Kirkland.

The long range ideal of the center is to become economically self sufficient. At the present there is a great need for more warehouse space, a can smasher, a cardboard bailer, volunteer help and community backing, according to Kirkland.

Kirkland feels his participation in the center's activities will decrease somewhat because of his newly acquired position as administrative assistant in environmental research at WSU. He would like to see others take over the handling of various sub-projects as a possible solution to the problem.

A meeting for all students interested in volunteering their time or services for the center is being held Wednesday at noon in the SUB.

"We are not just looking for manual labor," said Kirkland. "The work will be divided into physical aspects, cerebral problems, telephoning and mailing."

Included among the things to be considered at the meeting are: a Latah County fair project; additional warehouse space; long distance transportation; new outlooks for disposing of papers; the organization of campus participation; political action; educational angles to be used by schools and outside groups and a look at what other cities are doing in the recycling of wastes.

"Cleaning up the environment is something we are going to have to do," Kirkland said. "The only question is whether we are at the forefront going into it or whether we want to wait and be dragged into it later by local, state and federal laws."

Beginning tomorrow the recycling center will be open every Wednesday from 1 to 5 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Moscow recycling center accepts newspapers, piled in 11 by 15 inch stacks (normal half sheet fold); all types of aluminum—beer cans, T.V. dinner trays, pie containers, tin foil, metal, etc.; all beer and pop containers, either glass or metal; and all tin (steel) and glass food or beverage containers. The containers should be reasonably clean.

The above items can be brought to the center in any convenient container, according to Kirkland. All caps and metal neck rings should be removed from the bottles and thrown in with the cans, he said. Where applicable, the cardboard from lids and all labels from cans should be removed. All steel cans should also be flattened. The easiest way to do this, he said, is to remove both ends and step on it. The label can then be torn or slit off.

MOSCOW'S NEW RECYCLING CENTER is located in the 700 block of South Main Street in downtown Moscow behind the Queen City Printers. They are open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Living in Old Hays Hall

It costs $60 a month these days to live in one room, furnished with a day bed, hot plate, and sink. You can share your shower with a neighbor and meet your friends in the community lounge. Despite the obvious drawbacks, though, the newly remodeled rooms in old Hays Hall seem to be working well, according to Robert Parton, housing director, as apartments for graduate and law students.

Students who live in the rooms, economically structured to serve one person, seem also to feel that the living quarters are adequate.

"I'm not disappointed in them" comments one law student. "I can be by myself. It's convenient, close to campus and self-contained."

The rectangular rooms are equipped with an all in one hot plate, sink, fridge and cabinet hooked up where plumbing is available. Lack of space around the sink has been the only complaint brought against the unit besides the lack of ovens.

The rooms are well lighted, according to a graduate student from MIT. He noted that he hadn't seen better lighting for graduate dormitories. The room is furnished with two lamps and an overhead light plus outlets throughout the room.

"There's no trouble with noise," say students living there. "All you have to do is close the doors and you can't hear anything." The mutual showers haven't seemed to cause any problems either. One law student attributes this to the limited number of tenants on the floors.

Hays hall is composed of three floors. The first two floors are men's quarters and the third floor has been given to women.

"That's somewhat of a reminder of the dormitory system," noted a student.

The set of apartments housing 63 students at present is not run by the rules and regulations of a regular dormitory.

"We're free to come and go," occupants say. "Many students just consider this a place to sleep at night and that's all."

An advisor is present, mainly to talk about fire drills and community improvements, according to the students interviewed. Greg Heitman is this year's advisor.

Phones and utilities are included in the $60 a month. Washing facilities are available.

Students living in the apartments have access to an adjacent parking lot and a room for bicycles is available in the basement.

Converting the Hays Hall dormitory was, according to reports last year, a move to bring competitive housing to the campus.

Asked if they felt the $60 was a fair price for one room the students interviewed thought it was, for their purposes.

"Possibly if you cut out the utilities and phone, the university could lower the rent but the student, then, would have to pay it anyway."

"It's comfortable, says one girl graduate student. She was in the process of moving from one room to another. She couldn't get the freezer door open without moving the bed. When she moved the bed she couldn't open the door."

Most of the complaints seem to come from the smaller rooms where the utilities had to be installed where plumbing was available. There was some concern about the safety of the fire escape but other than that complaints seem few in number.

"It serves my purpose as a law student," said one renter. "I think it suits the disciplined study of most graduate students who are no longer concerned about throwing big parties or entertaining much."

"Besides," concludes one tenant, "the janitor is nice."

Plans for converting old Forney Hall into similar units or housing for married students have been delayed because of lack of money, according to Parton.

LIVING IN A HAYS apartment may be cramped, but it's cozy according to the residents.

The Movie

An experiment in psycho-cybernetics

John Foley

The right wing of American politics has been screaming for years that the sexual revolution, much like the flouridation conspiracy, is a communist plot. This is true. Every American must remember that the commies are out to get us every way they can.

This is a story detailing the methods the International Communist Conspiracy is using to spread the sexual revolution on the University of Idaho campus. Read it carefully; they could be doing IT to you!

The players:

THE GIRL: Tall, slim, and built. When she moves she does it effortlessly, like a cat. However, it is evident from her appearance that there is something wrong with her-like she's blown in the head. She has a warped sense of right and wrong when it comes to sexual practices and cannot morally fit into the reality of today's Idaho.

THE BOYFRIEND: A typical Tower intramural jock or Ag. Science major.

THE COMMIE CONSPIRATORS: The two guys who are running the show at Idaho. They are older, in their 50's, and seem to be faculty members in every way.

THE PRIEST: A priest is a priest is a priest...

THE LOVERS: A lot of people who do what lovers always do. They are a representative cross-section (what-ever that is?) of the students at Idaho.

The movie

The movie opens with the camera dolly through trees. THE GIRL goes into a "sneaky" crouch as camera opens up. There are two LOVERS studying beside a tree. (They are not touching, just reading their books.) THE GIRL pulls a spray can from her purse and after checking the wind sprays some of the can's contents into the air. The camera slowly pulls in on the LOVERS who after a two second delay suddenly go into a sexual frenzy of kissing, grabbing and pulling at clothes. FADE INTO —

The credits should be run in an official looking block script over a series of short scenes of spray cans squirting their contents. There should be different types of spray products — hair spray, deodorant spray, shaving cream, cherry flavored vaginal spray, and mystery brand X spray. While this is running the sound track will be playing "Love Me or Let Me Be Lonely" by Lighthouse. FADE sound and scene into —

THE GIRL walking out of woods onto campus. By her walk she is obviously light-hearted. The camera dollies up to full profile and pans GIRL as she walks along sidewalk. As this shot is held, the scene DISSOLVES into exactly the same scene but on a television monitor. The camera pulls back from monitor until frame takes in entire control room.

COMMIE CONSPIRATOR NO. 1: "I guess that's enough control for today.

let's shut it down." The COMMIE CONSPIRATORS begin turning off all the monitors in the control room.

COMMIE CONSPIRATOR NO. 2: "You know, number 1, that girl is the best operative we've ever had. How did you recruit her for the job?"

COMMIE CONSPIRATOR NO. 1: (As the two men put on their coats and prepare to leave.) "God, I don't know. She just came in one day and said she was passing my building and dug the vibes, what ever that means. I really don't care how she got here, just as long as she keeps up the work. But you're right 2, she does a fine job. FADE to —

THE GIRL is at home in her sorority house getting ready for the date. She is on what is obviously stroke No. 759. She is wearing a cashmere sweater that matches her "cute" woolen skirt. She is also wearing bobby socks and white sneaker. (A typical sorority girl going on a date.) A "sister" comes to the door. "You have a caller at the front door."

THE GIRL: "Thanks, Clara Belle." THE GIRL goes down to lobby and meets THE BOYFRIEND. As she comes up to him he puts his hand on her arm.

THE GIRL (drawing away with a look of disgust): "Don't touch me. I told you never to touch me. If you must keep doing it I'll just have to quit seeing you."

THE BOYFRIEND: "I'm sorry. I really am sorry. Don't worry, it won't happen again. I really am sorry. (pauses) Are you ready to go?"

THE GIRL: "I suppose." FADE into — Montage series of the date. Mostly bowling and beer drinking. Nothing physical. Sound track runs "In My Room" by the Beachboys.

(To be continued in the next edition of the Idaho Argonaut. Next issue — the big sex scene at the end of the date.)

Old enough to vote or . . . just to die

Judging by the total of on-campus students registered to vote in the upcoming Moscow city elections, students are nothing but a bunch of hot air.

So far the number registered has been less than out-standing, little more than 1,000. That is just one-third of the total students living on-campus and one-sixth of the university enrollment.

Where are the rest?

It would be a pity if, after all the wonderful slogans, debates and rallies, the student vote was inconsequential. How can this idealistic generation ever hope to accomplish anything — through the system — if they don't vote.

And you can't vote if you don't register.

Registering is, however, a personal thing. You have to take a few minutes of your time to go down and do it.

So, because registering isn't handed to the student on a silver platter, perhaps he won't do it. Or perhaps he will make excuses.

Like — I'm not eligible because you have to live here so long. But that won't work. Because any student who has been paying a room deposit over the summer should be just as eligible to vote as a Moscow person who lives someplace else in the summer but keeps a house in town. (Like a professor, for example.)

And if this clerk won't let you register, let the Argonaut know. The American Civil Liberties Union is interested.

There are lots of other neat excuses a student can use if he really doesn't have the get-up-and-go to register.

But none of them are any good. And none of them will accomplish the things that voting could.

Please, somebody, prove to the older generation that we are old enough to vote, not just old enough to die.

Who mourns Boise?

This bit of comment is written with those in mind who are not mourning the loss of a football game at Boise and have no inclination to. It is not the death blow to athletics on the U of I campus, it's true — too many alumni exist off campus and too many jocks on for that. It may be a sign of hope, however. After all who loves a losing team?

Fees increased $13 this semester and the team still lost. Losing more, though, is the non-athletic part of the student body who paid the increase for so-called operating expenses and watch a good portion of their fees go to athletics none of them participate in.

Somewhere, it is certain, that the educational facilities of this supposedly educational institution could use the funds going to sports, especially considering the pressing need for the fee increase.

Mediocre football seems to cost as much as good football. Quality education, however, rings up a higher bill. The proposed referendum on athletics may reveal the academic community this university harbors and mediocre education may appear too great of a cost for good or bad football despite the alumni.

Possibly, if the Vandals lose enough games to convince the alumni that football at Idaho is not worth the advertising, these absentee voters for educational football will find something more in line with academics with which to entertain themselves.

Boise, then, may have been less of a defeat for a football team than a light in a tunnel for those interested in a valuable education. — FULLMER

Terrible, tricky timing

The super-logical minds of the ASUI hierarchy have struck (out) again:

After three years of pressure the ASUI senate has finally written a bill proposing a referendum on athletics. The senate will consider that bill — which is probably the most progressive piece of legislation they have debated yet — at their meeting tonight.

The referendum is the only fair way to find out once and for all if such enormous amounts of money should be channeled to sports, stadiums and the like.

So, you are probably asking, if the referendum is such a good deal, what's the problem?

Well, the wonderful planners have scheduled the referendum on Oct. 13, just three short days after Homecoming. (Raccoon coats, pennants, cheers.)

Why, why, why not have the vote by the student body at a more neutral time? Or — shades of BSC — could it be that this is the game that will decide if athletics should or should not be? — RUGG

The day Moscow finally got rid of liquor

There were no more bars in Moscow. Boards were nailed over wind beaten store fronts that used to serve beer. Even the Spruce, once a powerful hangout for political action in Moscow, had been closed — converted into an old age home. The four massive pool tables had been fitted with waterbeds.

All that remained of the downtown alcohol culture was an old fellow named Bill who slept on one of the waterbeds but who kept mumbling about the good old days and asking the old ladies where the action was.

In the distant hills could be seen the formidable brick walls of the University of Idaho. Once acclaimed by Playboy magazine (disgusting) as one of the best drinking schools in America, Idaho had gone Canada Dry.

Today was Idaho's annual Vestal Virgin Day, the one day of the year the freshman girls were shown the freshman boys and vice versa. There had been rumors that several freshmen boys had cheated and actually talked to girls during class time.

Meanwhile, at the university LDS Institute, that renowned second largest organization on campus, leader and crusader against all vices—drinking, drugs and blacks, the saints were looking disgusted.

Not only was the annual pagan rite going on, but there was still one place in town where liquor could be seen. Yes,

Imagine that. Liquor was displayed scandalously before even the smallest of children. Brazenly drunk. In a sense, possibly even worshipped.

No, it wasn't the Corner Club or the Elks.

Most vulgar

It was the most lewd and vulgar place in Moscow. Worse yet, it was located on campus. The St. Augustine's Catholic Center.

"What should we do?" roared an elder saint.

"It's outrageous!" shrieked another. And round and round the Institute they yelled until suddenly the brainstorm struck. The Pope.

"You mean Pius, or Paul?" hedged one, thinking that was like conspiring with the other side. "We should write him a letter to stop this wrongdoing?"

"Yeah! This is it!" they all shouted jubilantly. Except for one.

The eldest elder sipped his elderberry juice.

"You guys is crazy," he said. "Da pope's a wop, dig? Da wops got all da wine, dig? Da pope ain't gonna cut his own throat. Da pope's a drunken wop like all da rest. Dig?"

Everyone was quiet. His penetrating logic had once again struck. Hours passed in silence. Then the youngest elder, the one everyone else called "the little guy" screamed out.

At last a fool proof method had been found.

The next day was a normal day. There had only been one report of exposure during Vestal Virgin Day ceremonies, so all was well.

In front of the St. Augustine Center, a priest watered his flowerbed.

Suddenly.....the second largest organization on campus along with the police department showed up.

You've had it!

"You've had it, pervert!" screamed the little guy. "Filthy pervert!"

The police swarmed around the priest.

handcuffed him, put him against the wall ready for the firing squad.

"Your crimes are many," droned the police chief. "You've misused your position. You've corrupted little children by exhibiting wine during your religious services. You've been seen drinking wine."

"You've violated the Moscow City Housing Code by drinking wine on campus. You've never even applied for a license to drink wine. You've defamed the fame of the University of Idaho. Parents won't send their children to a school where they can see wine drunken."

He twitched his ears. "Actually we're letting you off easy. The last guy who applied for a beer license on campus, that weirdo at the Perch, we damned near argued him out of town."

Then he turned to the firing squad. "Ready?"

"Wait!" cried the priest. "Don't you see? The wine is part of my church's religious services. How would the one true Catholic Apostolic faith survive without the wine during mass?"

"I told you he was a pervert!" screamed the little guy.

The firing squad gunned the priest down, threw him in Paradise Creek to rot with the rest of the garbage in Moscow.

The eldest elder laughed as he sipped his elderberry juice/as he tacked a sign on the outside of St. Augustine's—Closed For Remodeling. Under New Management.

YOUR ASUI SENATE AT WORK—This is a typical scene in the senate offices. Note the flurry of activity as concerned students converse casually with their elected representatives. See the posting of office hours so students will know when to look in this busy office for the senators. We love our senators because they are so accessible.

The IUB or SUB??

Editor, the Argonaut:

It has come to our attention that we no longer have a Student Union Building — SUB. It has been bombed, burned or swallowed—merely cancelled. In its place we discover that we have an Idaho Union Building — the IUB?

We wonder if a new department has been created over the summer for the purpose of re-naming services and buildings around the University of Idaho campus. For instance, instead of the Counseling Center we now have a SAS — Student Advisory Service. And, the Ad Annex has now been dubbed the Controllers Office.

While we are not opposed to change and advancement on our campus, we question the validity of the advantages offered by these new titles. Not only are the new students confused, but the returning students are equally lost and bewildered.

Where shall this new "name-dropping" department strike next? Is our time-tested Argonaut to become the Paper for Idaho Students — PIS?

No stars in my eyes

Editor, Idaho Argonaut:

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on a recent editorial that appeared in your paper under the by-line of one Charlie Brown. The article mentioned did come across as an extremely effective satirical article, in relation to the education system, not just at this school, but at those all across the nation.

However, Mr. Brown obviously was referring to his own freshman class in many of his assertions, or, quite possibly, he was merely stereotyping many student beliefs on how a freshman class behaves upon entering a college.

I have met very few "starry eyed, idealistic" freshmen thus far in my experience at this school, and surely no more among the freshmen of this school than of any other class, or any other age group, for that matter. It's been said before by many young people, but I believe that it still holds true: The age, when people realize exactly how brutal and uncompromising society (e.g. the education system) can be, is being lowered constantly as media, including forms such as the Argonaut, reform their policies to meet the needs of the people.

In response to his point that "Choosing to remain yourself will get you the affectionate title of "Perverted Hippy Commie Pinko Fag" (translated, different), it could just as easily be pointed out that, with today's changing trends, if you wished to pattern yourself after a fraternity brother or sorority sister, you could be labeled as a "conservative, honky, straight greek."

Both labels are merely one group's attempt at putting down the other, and if you truly believe that what you do and think is your own business, such remarks should fail to impress you.

A great deal of the article by Brown deals merely with academic process at this and many other colleges, paraphrased into comical terms. Although Brown obviously has an adept touch with satire, I fail to see any solutions offered as to how to avoid this "game".

He makes a somewhat facetious remark about this being a "place of higher learning". Perhaps Charlie Brown should revert to spending a few weeks, even a few days, at any one of the high schools across the nation, and he might see that, in comparison to any one of these, it is indeed a place of higher education. It is indeed, no matter how decrepit or useless, the highest place of education in this land, short of life itself.

Finally, I would like to say that, while being an excellent barb at the University system, Brown's article does little more than prepare others minds for the game, which in essence, is furthering the game, not winning it.

Thanks,
Pat Erickson

Communism vs. death

Editor, the Argonaut:

In response to Allen Dobey's editorial in the Argonaut dated September 10:

Mr. Dobey's speculative warning to all of the real or potential communist sympathizers that they will be the first to get screwed by a complete totalitarian regime because of their protests, (or, as Al put it, their "squealing like a pig caught under a fence") brings me to two conclusions.

1) That those who protest actually are the most concerned about totalitarianism and the repression it brings, therefore making them the biggest threat to that dictatorship, and

2) that if the people most aligned in thought to communism will be the first to go, then Mr. Dobey and friends, being the most opposed to communism, will be the last. Interesting.

Since I didn't put forth the second idea seriously, let us consider the first.

I'm afraid that the phrase "new left" has as many mysteriously derived connotations as the Old Testament. For a great number of people, new left means a conglomeration of people ranging from hippies to whores. It is The Threat, and, since not so very long ago The Threat was communism, The New Left equals Communism equals The Threat.

The assumption is that since the kids aren't articulate about what they intend to replace democracy with (also assuming that's what they are trying to destroy), their protest the repression evident in America, we must be condoning the repression evident in the communist bloc nations.

But let us suppose for a moment that, even though there are admitted commies in the Movement, there are a great number of people, "new left" people, that actually recognize and are combating repression whether it comes wrapped as fascism or communism, and that right along with their concern for their own freedom, is the concern for everybody's freedom, including the freedom not to be obliterated in a thermo-nuclear war, as the world war in National Review's question would almost certainly be.

It would be particularly galling to think that we, along with the rest of the life on the planet, were annihilated by a two-hundred year old, arrogant, self-righteous political structure on one side, and a fifty-year old, arrogant, self-righteous political structure on the other, with a few dozen other incubator nations, also arrogant and self-righteous thrown in for spice.

Speaking personally, Al, I wouldn't welcome communism with open arms if this hypothetical confrontation were to take place, but the alternative (even if it were only a small possibility that The End could actually become reality) is much more grim and much more permanent.

Misbehavior at Boise

Editor, the Argonaut:

I think it's about time someone spoke out about the conduct (or lack of conduct) that was in evidence at the Idaho-Boise State game.

Unfortunately, the brunt of the blame falls on the shoulders of Idaho students as this is where most of the problem came from. This is not to say that Boise State students were not at fault as well, however.

Certainly I can see throwing rolls of toilet tissue around, and the cat-calls to a degree, but let's not get out of hand. It seems to me that the profanities and obscenities that were used were entirely uncalled for. If people want to be "grossed out" they can go elsewhere. The bottle throwing was absolutely disgusting.

As a member of the band, apparently some nut thought I would make a good target, and I got hit with a piece of flying glass. If students cannot control their emotions any better than this, I really can't say what will happen to the world, since we are supposed to be "tomorrow's leaders."

The frosting on the cake, though, was the desecration of our country's flag. To most of the people in the stands, the fact that the flag got lowered during the game was not viewed as an accident. If people don't have enough integrity to respect our flag, they might at least be a little more discreet in showing their disrespect.

The childish behavior on the part of both colleges was disgraceful, and I really think we'd better watch ourselves in the future. If this was some people's idea of fun, I'd certainly hate to see them when they weren't acting in the spirit of fun!"

Sincerely,
Connie McLaughlin, Member

Let's share the pool!

Dear Editor:

After trying to swim in the university swimming pool for two nights, we found that the only time students can swim is after public and family priority. They informed us that students have a whole 27 hours to swim a week, but these hours tend to be at inconvenient times for most students.

We have no objections to public and family swim times, however, we would like to be able to share our facilities with them. Perhaps, one solution could be limiting the use of the shallow pool to just families and children for certain hours, while allowing everyone, public and students, to use the deep pool.

Making the pool accessible for more hours for students and public, would further the use of the money we have invested in our pool.

Thank you,
Concerned Students

No solutions found for U of I parking problems

"The ultimate solution to the campus parking problem," said Dean Vettrus, chairman of the campus Traffic Committee, "would be to move all the cars off campus to parking lots on the campus fringe. Of course it would mean walking for all of us, but we can use the exercise."

More immediate proposals to solve the problem of not enough parking spaces have included provisions for fees to be paid by those who wanted to park cars on campus. The money would be accumulated and then used to build additional parking lots.

According to Vettrus, the Traffic Committee submitted two such proposals to the Faculty Council, who to this date have not enacted either one.

Three fees

The first proposal included three basic fees — a $10 fee for students, a $20 fee for staff, and a third fee of $30 which would reserve a parking space for anyone who wanted to pay extra. The first two categories would only provide for parking on campus with no guarantee of having a space.

1,099 students register to vote

"Register now for the 1972 Revolution. Register to vote. Vote for Peace," reads a poster encouraging registration of the new 18-21 year-old voting population.

So far the University of Idaho with 1,099 registered is holding the lead for voter registration among Idaho's schools of higher learning. According to ASUI President, Mary Ruth Mann, the relatively low number may be due to the fact that much of the student body is over 21 and have already registered. The average age of U of I students is 22.

"Also, many of the younger kids I talked to when we went out and peddled the registration cards in the lines had already registered at home," said Miss Mann.

Good voter results

Voter registration was held on campuses across the state during school registrations. The drive, coordinated by Ron Stevens for the Secretary of State's office, yielded some promising results. Boise State College and Idaho State had excellent turn-outs, according to Stevens, because the average age of their students ranges from 18 to 20.

Though the results of the original drive aren't all in the Secretary's office has plans for another drive in October or November. It will be connected with a voter information program to inform students of their rights and obligations as voters.

High School drive

Also included in future plans is a high school registration drive to go into the high schools throughout the state to gather more voters among 18-year-olds.

The second proposal submitted to the Faculty Council was similar to the first, with the major difference being the removal of the reserve parking fee provision.

"Just because the Council has not enacted the proposals now does not mean they intend to reject them. There is definitely a problem and it needs to be dealt with," Vettrus pointed out.

U of I well to be fixed

A well specialist from Wyoming and an oil derrick from Montana will arrive next week to begin a special rescue mission to recover damaged well equipment and restore the university water supply.

The pump and 400 horsepower motor broke and jammed in the well shaft Aug. 6, according to George Gagon, physical plant director for the University of Idaho. The university has been depending on city facilities for its entire water supply since that time.

"The fault was definitely mechanical, poor iron casting or something — we have no idea what," Gagon said.

Efforts unsuccessful

All repair efforts and attempts to rescue the remains of the pump and motor have proven unsuccessful. Repairmen have struggled with broken tools, further destruction to the equipment, and a water derrick which proved too weak to hoist what's left of the 5,000 pound assemblage.

New rescue efforts will begin next week with the shipment of a large oil derrick from Montana and the arrival of a specialist who has been designing a special recovery tool.

Gagon estimates the work in well no. 3 will cost $15,000, not including the new pump and motor now awaiting installation. Financing would come from insurance and the maintenance budget, Gagon said.

The Moscow bars ...

"There's nothing better to do"

By Doris Urbahn

It's Friday night in Moscow and despite the Boise State-Idaho game the local bars are busy. Students, other university-related people, and townspeople drift in for some beer, some talk, some food or to play pool or the pinball machines. For most, it's a search for some action, something to do, someone to talk to.

"I enjoy Mort's. Everybody's really friendly. I go to Rats once and awhile too"..."I like beer"..."It's where everybody else is." These are just a sampling of the reasons patrons at Mort's gave for being there. Some shoot pool while others watch. People sit on or below the newly carpeted railed-in elevated sections. The juke box is on low and the conversations ebb and flow across the room.

Mort's features beer...no food, no live entertainment. Both are being considered by owner Bill Stokes who says there will be food when he decides what kind, and entertainment whenever he finds a folk group cheap enough that he won't have to apply a cover charge.

"College kids over 20 can't get turned on by teeny-bopper dances on campus. They go down to get something to eat, to drink, to get out of their dull environment. They come looking for excitement; which there generally isn't," said one young man speaking of bar going in general.

Personal atmosphere

Each bar he said, has an atmosphere all its own. As he sees it, Mort's is more conversational, Rathaus is "straight" kids and WSU students, and the Alley, once the "only good-looking bar in town" is now too quiet. He didn't classify the others but said that for many people the choice of bars depends on whether they like the managers and if it's the place their friends go to.

The Alley is quiet. Here the juke box is on loud enough to be heard but people can carry on a conversation without shouting. The red and white ceiling lights flash softly and the little noises from the pinball machines can be heard in the background. Two guys shoot pool at the solitary table while the other patrons, most of them male, sit around rapping.

"To play the pins"..."To have fun"..."The good burgers"..."and "I'm here 'cause I've got too much studying to do to go to Boise" were the reasons given by four young bar-hopping university males for being at The Alley. Another said he enjoyed The Alley because it has a lounge-like atmosphere and is more "personal." In his opinion, Rathskeller's is a place to lose one's identity in a mob, at the Spruce one needs a beard and the right kind of clothes. A member of his group at the table said the Corner Club is "the only sophisticated bar," meaning, she said, that there you meet real people and that at the other bars "people are very much alike."

Improvements have and are being made at the Alley. There's air conditioners, a popcorn machine, a hot dog fryer, a floating golden Budweiser eagle over the fireplace (ya gotta see it) and, some new drinks. These are the Shanty (beer and 7-Up), B and C (beer and Coke), Red (beer and tomato juice) and The Graveyard, a concoction of beer, coke, 7-Up and tomato juice. "It's for the stout-hearted," said Alley owner Jim DeVaney.

Taverns short customers

At the Rathaus, Mark and Roland are sending rock and jazz vibrations around the room. The drum and piano have everyone following or moving with the heavy rhythm. A small group is celebrating a twentieth birthday with coke, pizza and beer. Unlike the average twentieth-birthday-at-the-bars celebration, this birthday girl was drinking a coke. Guys down for a few beers as well as older couples were noticeable. Here the pinball machines weren't getting a lot of use and the crowd around the pool tables was small. But, then again, all the taverns were short of customers because of the game. As one student put it, "All the jocks and sports nuts who are usually down at the bars are in Boise. There won't be much action around town tonight."

The Rathaus is filled with the odors of pizza and beer. The dark wood tables and walls, the dark corners, and the subtle red lights give a feeling of closeness as people sit and talk, the cue ball hits its mark and the musicians tune up for another number.

People watching

Although some have no favorites, most people have one bar which they think is their kind of place. To one college man, The Spruce is more sociable. "Everybody's talking, singing; in some of the others it's kind of quiet. I came down here because I was thirsty and wanted to see if any action's going, any people around. I come down three or four times a week, here and at Mort's." A typical remark from a typical bar-goer? Not exactly...the guy doesn't drink beer.

There are lots of singles at the Spruce tonight, mostly men. They sit at the bar, play the pinball machines, shoot pool and, like other singles at other bars, get absorbed either in their beer and the conversation or spend their time checking the horizon for singles of the opposite sex. The Spruce is well-lighted so people watching is easy.

Three women from WSU huddle around a small table. They're in Pullman a week before registration and are just waiting for school to start. They say they're hitting them all (the bars) because "there's nothing better to do." They picked the Moscow bars because of two of the trio can't legally drink in Washington. According to the one 21-year-old in the group, Rathskeller's is the best. The Rathskeller, reportedly a favorite for many WSU students, is best because "it's big and you can dance and meet a lot of people."

Atmosphere important

At the Spruce, the newest features are the new covers on the pool tables. (regulation size, in case you care). The tops are now purple, blue, green and red. The only difficulty reported is an occasional problem in finding the No. 4 ball on the purple table. New tables and chairs have been installed. Nice if you dig plastic.

Like most of the other bars, the place is pretty quiet; no one is tanked (or whatever) yet; later in the evening here or somewhere else, maybe in several places, enough beer will be downed to result in some loud discussions.

As for the Rathskeller, it's basically the same scene. There's one difference. A rock group is up on the stage putting out sounds big enough to go right through you. Here are the pool and pinball players, but here also are more couples. Some are grooving out on the dance floor while others sit and try to talk above the throb of the drum and organ. The place has been remodeled. Rug-covered dividers cut the room making it more personal. It's noisy; everybody's talking. The band throbs into action and the barmaids circulate.

Vandals trampled by speeding horses 42-14

By Tom Coggins

"How did they know that play?" and "Where did that blue shirted end go to?" seemed to be the major questions passing through the minds of the Vandals as they suffered a miserable upset at the hands of the Boise Broncos Saturday night, 42-14. Before 16,123 fans at Bronco stadium, the Idaho Vandals were easily defeated and held almost motionless.

Following an exchange of punts in the first quarter, runningback Robert Lee Williams put the Vandals on the scoreboard with a 60-yard scoring pass to Jay Curcio as he slipped past the Boise secondary for the TD. With 9:45 to go in the half, Vandal kicker Ricardo Castillo booted the extra point to make it 14-7, in favor of the Broncos.

The Vandals second and final score came in the fourth quarter when Tom Ponciano, taking over for sophomore quarterback Bruce Cole, unloaded a 60-yard bomb to Darrell Burchfield, ex-Borah prepster, and kicker Castillo added number 14.

Vandal hopeful Fred Riley was stopped time and time again as the Bronco front line seemed to know every move the runningback was going to make. Idaho was held to a meager 16 yards in the first half, and 27 in the second for a total of 43 net yards. In passing the Vandals picked up 217 yards for a net total of 250. BSC threw for 297 and rolled up 125 on the ground for a total of 422.

If there could possibly be such a thing, the outstanding player for the Idaho squad was Robert Williams, who along with Ponciano completed a touchdown pass.

Scoring for the Broncos was fast and heavy. In the first quarter with 5:42 to go, senior quarterback Eric Guthrie hit sophomore end Don Hutt for 30-yards on the outside and the Boise player went in untouched from the 15. Guthrie tacked on the extra point to make it 7-0.

After a pass interference play on Idaho early in the second quarter, the Broncos had a first down at mid-field. Seconds later, Guthrie found Al Marshal for a 45-yard TD. The point was added by Guthrie, leaving it 14-0. After the Vandal score, the Broncos pushed Idaho back 79 yards in nine plays and Ross Wright took it over from the three. The point after was good again by Guthrie. That made the score 21-7.

After a Bruce Cole pass was intercepted, the Broncos landed on the Vandal 20. On the next play Guthrie fumbled into the arms of Idaho's Steve Barker, but the Vandals were again forced into a punting situation. Punter Steve Hunter tried running and the Broncos brought him down at the Idaho 37.

Guthrie then hit Wright from 14-yards out of the paydirt and the score was 28-7 with the extra point by Guthrie.

In the second half, the Broncos again wasted no time. With 9:34 left to play in the third quarter, Ray Rodriguez picked off Bruce Cole's pass at the 13 for another score. That made it 35-7 Broncos.

In the fourth quarter Marshal ran back a Vandal punt 41-yards to the Idaho 22. Second string quarterback Art Berry then threw 16-yards to Rod Stearns at the four. Dan Dixon rolled in from the one to make it 42-7.

The Vandals were taken unaware by the keying defense and the aerial attack of the Broncos. The variety of plays that the silver and Gold used, which was very limited, seemed to go nowhere. The middle of the line was filled practically every play, and the offensive line just couldn't seem to open any holes. Idaho's defensive secondary was caught standing flat footed as the Bronco speed and maneuvering proved a little too much.

SO WHAT IS THERE TO wave your hands about? Vandal weak safety, Bob Miller (34) looks on as the Bronco's build their 42-14 win.

THE EMOTIONAL IMPACT of losing in competition... Vandal fans, for a few, lost a lot more than a football game.

Duplicate bridge tournament set

There will be a weekly duplicate bridge tournament every Sunday afternoon in the Burning Stake Coffee House at the Campus Christian Center. This tournament is not sanctioned by the American Bridge Congress so points will not be given out to the winners.

The tournament will begin at 2:00 p.m. It is requested that those interested in playing sign up on the chart which is on the wall of the coffee house.

Kicker Castillo returns

"Pancho" is back and all is serene on the Idaho campus. Ricardo "Pancho" Castillo, Idaho's talented placekicker, returned to the campus, registered for the fall semester and Don Robbins, head football coach, breathed a little easier today.

Castillo, who has set all of Idaho's placekicking records and was the Vandals leading-scorer last season with 50 points, has to battle revolutionaries, weather, red-tape and the airlines each year as he leaves his home in Guatemala City, Guatemala heading for Moscow.

This year Castillo reported that it took him more than a month to get a visa and the trip from his dad's ranch to the airport at times was scary, but he was glad to be back and ready for action. Castillo said that he had played a lot of soccer this past summer and that he felt that he was in good condition.

"But being in condition for me is still a little different from the kind of condition that Coach Robbins wants me in for the season," Pancho said smiling.

Castillo is regarded as one of the nation's top placekickers and has excellent accuracy on field goals in the 45-yard range and is deadly on PATs. Castillo has missed only two conversions in two years of kicing with 49 out of 51 attempts. He also holds the Idaho record of 15 field goals for a career mark and his nine field goals of last year is a single season mark.

Council rules on sport events

G. A. Lincoln, Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness said today that the Cost of Living Council had issued a ruling on prices to be charged for sporting events.

According to a recent Council decision, all advance ticket sales for sporting events and similar activities occurring during the freeze are subject to the restrictions of the freeze. Prices for these tickets are not to exceed rates charged for each category of tickets during the base period, which in the case of sports events, could extend back to the past season (e.g., for this year's college football tickets, the base period would be last season's ticket prices).

This ruling applies to all types of sporting events for which an admission fee is charged and includes all professional, amateur, college and high school games. Where advance tickets have already been sold at increased rates, the organization sponsoring the event must refund or otherwise compensate the patrons for the amount of the price increase.

Women's swimming scheduled

A swimming test which women students may take to waive the University of Idaho swimming requirement is slated for Sept. 14 at the new university pool.

The test, at 6 p.m., will be repeated Sept. 21, again at 6 p.m.

The university requires that women be able to pass a beginning level swimming test, possess a Red Cross card certifying beginners or better swimming ability or take the test.

Women students may present their Red Cross cards at the time of the test and be exempted from the class, according to a physical education department spokesman.

The test requires a student to jump into deep water, tread water for 30 seconds, swim a stroke the length of the pool, turn without touching the pool and then float on either a prone position or on the back for 30 seconds. The applicant then swims the rest of the way back down the pool using a different stroke.

The test is continuous and does not give applicants a chance to rest between exercises, the spokesman said.

Interviews begin for committees

Interviews for ASUI and Student-Faculty Committee positions will begin tonight at 7 and continue Wednesday and Thursday nights on the third floor of the SUB.

Elizabeth Ware, ASUI personnel director, said the open positions are year-long jobs that require truly interested workers. "The success of many ASUI undertakings depends upon the members of the committees," she said.

"We could have a much better turnout than we've had in the past," Miss Ware noted. "All students are eligible to apply, although some previous experience is needed with a few faculty committees and some positions are designated for members of a certain class."

According to Miss Ware, freshmen are encouraged to participate. There is a larger percentage of Greeks because things are given publicity in a Greek house and the people's attitude toward work is different, Miss Ware felt. "I think freshmen in dorms should be told the same thing—it's a good way to meet people and take an interest in the campus."

Miss Ware mentioned that freshmen may be more interested in Student Services committees which include Parents' Weekend, the Blood Drive, SUB films and other areas where less experience is required. Interviews for these committees will be held at the same time in the Appaloosa Room of the SUB.

Miss Ware noted that interviews for all committees will be accepted during the three evenings, not specifically on the assigned dates listed with the following descriptions.

To discharge the Faculty's legal responsibility to establish rules and regulations governing the conduct of students on the campus and at authorized U of I activities. Rules and regulations enacted by the committee must conform to established standards of due process.

4. Commencement Committee which plans and directs commencement needs two juniors and two seniors.

5. Fine Arts Committee needs two students—A. To promote appreciation of the fine arts. B. To recommend ways and means of encouraging and accomplishing cultural growth throughout the University and the community. C. To acquire arts objects.

Woolson takes position

Charles J. Woolson, a graduate student at the University of Idaho is the new residence halls coordinator.

Woolson is a graduate of Michigan State and Michigan Northwood College. While at Michigan Northwood College, Woolson was Director of Housing, Student Activities, and Motor Vehicles as well as a student counselor.

The past coordinator, Bob Cameron, resigned the post to take a position with the Drug Squad which has recently received a federal grant to continue its operation.

Woolson directs twenty advisors and assistant advisors and is also a referral service in which he directs various problems to other related departments.

"I think the students are basically responsible for their own environment and therefore I have no authority, as such, over them," said Woolson.

Woolson believes that to become an effective coordinator he must be accepted by his advisory staff and by the students.

"My effectiveness at this position depends upon an evolutionary period that will decide whether a trust has been established between myself, my advisors, and the students," said Woolson.

Woolson believes time will be the factor that will decide his direction as coordinator.

Test dates announced for future teachers

College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examinations on any of four test dates announced yesterday by Education Testing Service, a nonprofit, educational organization which prepares and administers this testing program.

Dates for the testing of prospective teachers are: November 13, 1971, and January 29, April 8, and July 15, 1972. The tests will be given at nearly 500 locations throughout the United States, ETS said.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one factor in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers. Some colleges also require all seniors preparing to teach to take the examinations. The school systems and state departments of education which use the examination results are listed in an NTE leaflet entitled "Score Users" which may be obtained by writing to ETS.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations which measure their professional preparation and general educational background and a Teaching Area Examination which measures their mastery of the subject on which dates they should be taken.

The Bulletin of Information for Candidates contains a list of test centers, and information about the examinations, as well as a Registration Form. Copies may be obtained from college placement officers, school personnel departments, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Education Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

HEAD OF KNOWLEDGE

By Popular Demand We Repeat THE "mini-lesson"

FREE

You may double your present reading speed in just one hour at a free demonstration of this astonishing educational breakthrough. You will learn how it is possible to read an average novel in an hour. The average Reading Dynamics graduate reads a novel in less than an hour and studies 8 to 10 times faster than an average reader with a greater degree of comprehension. During the presentation you will be given—without charge—a one-hour actual lesson in Reading Dynamics. By the time the hour's instruction is over, you may be reading twice as fast as when the hour started. When you can do that in an hour, just think what you can do after our 8-weeks course!

GIFT OF MASKS — G. Ellis Burcaw, left, director of the University of Idaho Museum, examines some of the masks which arrived recently from Mr. and Mrs. A. Harvey Schreter, Baltimore, Md. as a permanent loan to the museum. With him is Richard Lane, a new assistant professor of anthropology, who will be teaching courses dealing with African culture. The collection of approximately 30 masks and figurines from the Niger River Valley, Nigeria, is currently being uncrated and will be ready for display in a few weeks.

Student scholarships ended

This fall, for the first time in more than twenty years, there will be no Woodrow Wilson Fellowship competition.

In announcing that the fellowship program would be temporarily suspended, H. Ronald Rouse, National Director of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, said, "Funds currently available to the Foundation for first year graduate fellowships are being used to support over 200 Fellows during the 1971-72 academic year. Prospects for securing new funds are uncertain."

During the coming year, trustees and officers of the Foundation in cooperation with representatives of the academic world, will design a new fellowship program taking into account recent developments in graduate education and in the teaching profession, and seek funds for this new program."

Fellowships in reserve

A total of 213 Woodrow Wilson Fellows will be supported this year at 69 graduate schools. Fellowships are being held in reserve for 25 others who have had to postpone graduate study because of military or alternative service.

Other foundation programs will be continued during 1971-72 and 1972-73. These include the Dissertation Fellowships, the Martin Luther King, Jr. Fellowships and the Graduate Information and Counseling Service for Black Veterans, the Teaching and Administrative Internships, and the National Humanities Series. To support its programs, the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation receives grants from other foundations and contributions from individuals, including over 2,000 former Woodrow Wilson Fellows.

Others suffer

The Wilson Fellowships are only one of a number of programs throughout the country which have suffered from the recent decline in fellowship support, Mr. Rouse said. The U.S. government, which in 1967 supported nearly 11,000 fellowships for beginning graduate students, has reduced or eliminated several programs.

It will provide only about 1,500 new fellowships for 1972-73. At the same time many state governments have similarly reduced the amount of support they provide, and a number of programs financed by corporations and private foundations have been discontinued.

As a result of rapid growth of graduate schools, more Ph.D.'s have been produced this year than can be placed, Mr. Rouse added. The economic recession and the recent wave of anti-academic sentiment across the country have combined to reduce drastically the amount of money available for college faculty salaries. As a result of these two factors the demand for college teachers has dropped just at the time when the supply is increasing.

New bar slated for opening here

Moscow will soon have a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde's tavern. Construction will start within 30 days, according to Pepper Smock, Coeur d'Alene.

Smock and his brother Jon have a franchise to build the new facility which will be in what is now the Thrifty 5 and 10 store in downtown Moscow.

Plans are still being drawn up, Smock said, but the tavern will be similar to the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde taverns in Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene. There may be room for dancing, he said. Neither the cost nor the size of the facility has been determined yet, he added.

January opening

An opening in early January or by second semester is anticipated, said Smock. This, he said, is allowing for a 90-day construction period.

"We would like to bring to Moscow what will best suit the needs of the people. We're going to try to have the kind of place people want us to have. Where we see a need, we'll try to fill it," Smock said.

Commission protests early college opening

The Idaho Wheat Commission, in a letter to President Hartung, has protested the early starting date for the university. The commission claims the earlier date robbed wheat farmers of harvest labor by forcing students to come back to school.

The commission stated that an extreme labor shortage existed across the state for all agricultural labor. It also claimed that no information had been sent to students letting them know that late registration was permissible.

"The early starting date," says the commission, "has denied college students earnings which could be very useful to those students in furthering their education. It has caused hard feelings between agricultural interests, who have depended upon student help in the past, and the officials of the University and the Board of Regents who depend to a great extent on tax revenues received from agricultural interests."

Labor shortage, according to the letter, has been added to problems caused by the railroad strike and the West Coast dock strike. The commission urges the university and the Board of Regents to reconsider an early starting date for next year.

Mary Ruth Mann requests, in conjunction with the commission's complaint, that students who feel they were pressured to come back to school before their jobs were through because of the early starting date should let her know.
