Russell wins ASUI Senate special election

Voter turnout light

Steve Russell was elected yesterday to the vacant senate position left by the resignation of Chris Smith four weeks ago.

With a total of 212 votes, the new senator defeated three other candidates, Wes Wilhite with 134 votes, Rand Lewis with 60 votes, and Tom Hill with 189 votes.

Russell will begin his duties tonight at the weekly senate meeting. His term of office, along with other ASUI positions, will end with new elections in March.

Voting totaled 617 in the one-position race yesterday as 8.9 per cent of the student body bothered to cast ballots. There were 22 write-ins.

With polling booths at six locations, expenses for the one day election amounted to $200 according to Pharis Stanger, election chairman.

The vacant senate position could have been filled by appointment by the ASUI president. However, constitutional rules state that an election must be held if requested by 10 per cent of the student body, a total set at 670 students by the ASUI offices.

Petitions with approximately 1000 names were submitted to hold Monday's costly election. So where did all the voters go?

Blasts to continue

Amchitka test causes minor effects

By BILL STOCKTON
AP Science Writer

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — A government spokesman says the only initial adverse effects from the Amchitka underground nuclear blast were minor ones. Scientists now look forward to the use of underground blasts elsewhere to tap new sources of natural gas.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said they were pleased with the results of the Amchitka explosion and plan no further nuclear tests on this bleak Aleutian island between the Bering Sea and Pacific Ocean.

It is conceivable, AEC officials say, that a new test of the use of nuclear explosions in the production of natural gas could come as early as late next year near the small mountain community of Rio Blanco, Colo.

Hundreds of similar explosions could follow beneath the hills of Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Utah.

AEC officials also expect that this peaceful use of atomic energy will meet with many of the same protests that met Saturday's Cannikin explosion here, a test of a warhead for the Spartan antiballistic missile.

The AEC said that post-detonation examination of the island has discovered only minimal environmental damage.

The only casualties discovered thus far, the AEC said, were an injured sea otter, several dead birds, a destroyed nesting area and a small freshwater lake.

The otter, the birds and the nesting area — of either bald eagles or peregrine falcons — were apparent victims of massive rock slides touched off by the United States' most powerful underground explosion.

The small lake near ground zero drained away when the nearly 5-megaton blast ripped a crack in the lake bed, the AEC said.

Henry Vermillion, an AEC public affairs officer, stressed that the AEC's findings were incomplete. He said the search for more subtle environmental damage — which the AEC hopes it won't find — will continue for at least a year.

Environmentalists, who fought a losing battle against the test all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, contended there was a possibility the explosion would touch off natural disasters and inflict severe damage to the environment and wildlife.

The blast gave birth to an earthquake which registered 7 on the Richter scale, but it was felt no further away than an island some 200 miles distant. No seismic sea waves developed. And the AEC said scores of monitoring devices on the finger shaped island showed no trace of radioactivity.

Charlie Brown benefit game

A benefit basketball game for Charlie Brown, a recent U of I student who was critically injured in a motorcycle accident, will follow the Montana State game this weekend in Memorial Gymnasium.

The game will be between the Vandal Varsity team and the Vandal Babes. The cost is 50 cents per person. All proceeds will go to the medical and legal relief fund for Brown.

Alumni misunderstood, says Johnston

By Al Owen

After people leave the campus and acquire the title of alumni, does their thinking tend to become stagnated? Administrators, alumni, and students all seem to have different opinions on this.

As an example, a luncheon and dinner were recently given, highlighted by a meeting of most of the Alumni Relations Board with invited guests.

Tom Slayton, ASUI vice president, was one of those invited. According to him, the opening topic was a sharp attack on the format of the Argonaut and criticism of the negative feelings many students held toward football.

"I couldn't help but feel we were being talked down to," said Slayton, "and the whole meeting seemed useless because of the way it began. When it adjourned there prevailed a definite air of polarization."

Preoccupation in athletics
"I am quite disappointed," said Mary Ruth Mann, ASUI president, "by the Board's preoccupation in athletics." She added, "While it is the objective of these people to protect the institution they represent and make it look good to the rest of the Pacific Northwest; they but censure and criticize some of the integral parts of the University that are able to make it strong."

Also at the meeting was Janet Rugg, editor of the Argonaut, who said that what was printed in the paper was chosen in light of newsworthiness.

According to Slayton, her editorial policy was criticized on grounds that the whole paper was slanted and was representative of gutter language.

"But that's the way people speak nowadays," said Miss Rugg.

Reflects thought
"The actions of the Board reflect the way people thought and acted two or three decades ago," Slayton said.

Dick Johnston, director of the Board, feels, on the other hand, that there is a great misunderstanding by many U of I students as to how the alumni feels toward them.

"They generalize," he said, "and seem to consider the alums as just old folk. The fact is, the board members are very much in tune with the opinions and feelings of the majority of the campus communities. They are sympathetic to the problems of the University and try to be aware of changes in thinking."

Cross-section of profession
The executive board is made up of 16 people from a cross-section of professions in Idaho, Utah, Washington, California. Miss Mann is also on the board.

Miss Mann said she feels that the board is actually a good representation of the Pacific Northwest's opinions of U of I.

Student recruitment

"One positive and significant change is student recruitment in the University Relations Program," she said.

Miss Mann said she was enthusiastic about the broader scope of ideas that she expects will come from the board director for next year, Carl Berry in San Francisco. She said such a metropolitan influence can be profitable to the institution in many ways.

Ready-formed bond

One reason for this, Miss Mann feels, is because the greeks have a ready-formed bond that keeps them tied to the institution through their living groups. Their house corresponds with them and a national magazine keeps them informed.

"An independent has to rely on his own initiative to come back and become involved," she explained.

Study undertaken

At present a study is being undertaken to find a means to involve more independent students in campus activities, Johnston said.

"It is hoped that by this venture they will remain interested in the school after leaving," he said.

Slayton noted that during World War II the independents were a very strong force on the campus.

SUB artist in residence

Bob Serrano fields one-man art show

"Moscow, San Francisco and Other Inventions," a collection of 50 paintings by Robert E. Serrano, program director at the UI SUB is on display at the Bronco Student Center at Boise State College throughout the month of November.

The show, primarily watercolors with some mixed media and oils, is the inaugural show at the new art gallery at Boise State. It is also Serrano's first one-man show in Idaho. From Dec. 1 through Christmas, the paintings will be on display at the State Capitol Building, Boise. The show then goes to the University of Idaho SUB before going to galleries in Washington and California.

The paintings include examples of Serrano's best work over the past 10 years.

"Probably the best picture in the show — and the best of the 10 years — is 'Toonerville Tilt,' a water color that shows the motion of the San Francisco cablecars," Serrano said.

In addition to paintings of the Moscow and San Francisco areas, there are a number of paintings of battleships and ferry boats. Serrano, who describes himself as a naval history buff, has traveled around the country to paint and photograph the old ships such as the USS Maryland and the USS California.

Besides his work planning innovative programs for the SUB, Serrano is a professional free lance commercial artist. He began painting in 1957, studying with watercolor artist Nels Oback at San Jose State College in California for five years. From 1960-67 he was art director for the Santa Clara Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in California, arriving at Idaho in 1968.

Sports car club presents film

"The Ringmasters", a film featuring some of the world's best competition drivers, will be presented at the regular meeting of the University of Idaho Sports Car Club in the SUB at 7:30 p.m., tomorrow evening.

The film is a collection of different sequences showing such famous drivers as Hill, Clarke, and Gurney driving Formula-One racing cars on the Nurembergring, a track in Nuremberg, Germany, noted for its 14.8 mile per lap structure.

Following the film, the Club members will be making a trophy presentation to the winners of the last autocross. Events upcoming for November and December will be discussed.

All interested persons are invited to view the film and participate in the meeting.

Fan mail, rave reviews and closing notices

To the Editor:

In the last issue of the Argonaut it was reported that the Senate passed the anti-war resolution unanimously. To set the record straight, three of us — Todd Eberhard, Holly Aldridge, and myself — abstained. I am not necessarily in favor of the war but I don't intend to discuss my political opinion or that of any of the other senators. I abstained for reasons other than those of a political nature.

I feel that the Senate should be only an ASUI functionary. It has the power to appoint and the power to enact policies governing the ASUI and it controls the funds and property of the ASUI — this should be all. To take it upon itself to make a statement of national affairs is not within its proper province. It is not only outside its proper sphere of influence but is vain and deleterious.

The Senate has enough to do within the sphere of on-campus and local student affairs without involving itself in matters better handled by referendum, petition or other forms of opinion taking. I hope that better consideration is taken of such matters before the Senate repeats this poor performance.

Steve Seale
ASUI Senator

To the Editor:

In his recent series of articles for this paper on "wilderness", Chuck Hay presented a few good ideas, along with a goodly number of highly subjective and illogical ones. Just a few examples:

— miners are supposed to extract ore from millions of tons of solid rock in relative silence, with no environmental disruption, and "with no rock piles";

— loggers also must harvest millions of board feet of lumber "in a way that is quiet and pleasing to the eye or not log at all" (just like picking daisies, right?);

— on the basis of these articles, the only value of wilderness aside from commercial exploitations is as a place for masses of people to trot through;

— it is implied that all conservation organizations are largely a bunch of "romantic, illogical" "little old ladies in tennis shoes" whose concepts are of "extremely limited value";

— perhaps the topper is the idea that we should not get concerned over current issues because this will rapidly destroy our concern for future issues!!! How's that for logic? (Of course, for "concerned" you substitute here the word "emotional" if you want to smear the other side. You know how it is: if you disagree with him, he's an emotionalist-extremist-fanatic; if you agree; it's "Harken unto the words of irrefutable truth!")

The point is this. There are almost no documented or documentable data in these articles, or for that matter, in the majority of such articles, whatever view they represent. There is great need for unbiased facts and information upon which people can base their own opinions. The growing problems we face will never be solved without factual knowledge and understanding.

There are far too many self-appointed experts vigorously attempting to convert the world to their viewpoints while offering precious little concrete documentation as to why "my way" is best. The result is growing public confusion rather than awareness of the truly important issues involved (witness the recent row over Amchitka)

It doesn't really matter what you think, Chuck — or what I think, or what the Sierra Club or American Smelting & Refining thinks or desires. We must intelligently examine the reasons behind all these opinions, which means we must insist that these people support their views by giving us facts, not fancy rhetoric and propaganda spiels.

Jack Conners

To the Editor:

Mr. Eckroat's column on atomic testing was a cogent essay and I agree with his conclusions; yet his narrative of the events of 1945 strays from the truth.

According to Eckroat, the atomic bomb was "used on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan. . . to terminate the war in an unprecedentedly sudden manner."

According to historian Gar Alperowitz, author of several books and articles on America's "Atomic Diplomacy," after April 1945, the U.S. could have ended the war with Japan anytime he felt so inclined. Alperowitz states that Japanese pursued several sources that Spring to end the war. American policymakers after Franklin Roosevelt's death, however, struck upon using the new weapon as a means to pressure the Russians out of the concessions Roosevelt had made to them at Yalta the previous February concerning Eastern Europe. The bomb was not yet a reality at the time of Yalta.

The revisionist history continues: The U.S. delayed ending the war with Japan to preserve a target so as to impress the Russians with the bomb's power. The holding of the Potsdam conference was rescheduled at the request of the Americans so that the test at Alamogordo would coincide with final deliberations between Truman and Stalin over the fate of Europe. At Potjam the Russians agreed to enter the war against Japan on August 8. The first bomb was dropped on Hiroshima August 6 to end the war in a "sudden manner"; not to defeat the Japanese, but to forestall Russian advances on the Asian mainland.

Alperowitz documentation is impeccable. He includes statements by Generals Marshall and Eisenhower to the effect that the bomb was not necessary to bring about Japan's surrender. It's no wonder that according to Eckroat "no nation. . . could afford to be without an atomic arsenal." Surely the Russian quest for atomic power was stimulated by U.S. bravado and attempts to renege on wartime agreements. The Cold War and its accompanying arms race was on, but the U.S., via Hiroshima (its inhabitants the victims not of genocide but of brutal power politics) fired the first shot.

Why I shouldn't write a column for this issue

Bruce Leary

Well hell, I haven't typed a column in so long my index fingers are stiff. This sort of nonsense or other creeping disease can't go on forever, so I think I'll just sit back and type a column.

Now lemme see, what goes into a Leary column. . . a scathing expose on University of Idaho bureaucratic incompetency? No. That's too easy. An article on the horrors of something or other? That might be something. But you people aren't horrified these days. Too complacent for the good thrill of horror.

There's got to be something worth writing about. Naw. The plain truth is there's nothing to write about here.

And you wanna know why? Because you people are boring.

Now that's the sort of statement that could get me into a lotta trouble around here. Telling the people that they are so boring that I don't wanna write a column about them.

Think of it. The late night place to be is studying. In the library. The groovy people are the Navy ROTC students who smoke dope. Ye gads, you can't tell the good people from the people who are "show" people.

The place is so middle-class, it's got no culture. If you hang a can of sardines from the ceiling, you're funky. If you wear a hat, you're daring. If you do both, you're artistic. If you can cook a hamburger, you're a genius. You'll have no problem getting a degree.

If you smile occasionally, you can become a student politician. Providing that is, that you can't cook your hamburgers, hang a sardine can or wear a hat. . . except when it is advantageous.

This place is the last chance for the Idaho "chick" who wants to nail down her MRS. After here, there's only hicksville to the old pawing farmer who slobbers when he talks. So they marry a young funky student who has too many inhibitions to become an old slobbering pawing farmer, but who has dreams about it all the time.

The explains the Idaho guy.

Out-of-state people are generally losers who couldn't make it in their own state. I'm always being concerned by Californians who are trying to be cool when they've already burnt out, dropped out, lost it all over their own state. Idaho is their Foreign Legion, their hope to change their past identity.

The future of Moscow, the university and the boring people? More of the same.

There is to Idaho's credit, one

Performing Arts Center which never got a fund to go anyplace. A new football stadium, athletic complex: score one for the Vandal Boosters. More of the same masses, not individuals.

A nationwide feeling exists that Idaho is one of the last frontiers in America, but the people who make up this university could hardly be called pioneers. They are crushed by their classes. They lack the motivation to create any individual enterprise. And if something new is offered them, they rail against it as though it were an evil devouring beast that had come to destroy their comfort.

It is difficult to imagine such senility among college age people. The least our student fees could provide should be a shovel for the Moscow "men of the future" to bury themselves before the stink of their stagnation reaches the rest of the state.

DAIRY PRODUCTS WILL SOON BE SOLD HERE in the basement of the Satellite SUB. The facility, which hopefully will facilitate the purchase of dairy products by students, should be open for the start of second semester.

Dairy bar moves

If you like cheese with your French bread and wine, or if you crave ice cream, you're in luck. The dairy bar is being moved from the Dairy Science Building to the basement of the Satellite SUB to provide more service for students.

According to Dean Vettrus SUB manager, the move is being made to allow more hours for the sale of the dairy

SUB parking motions pass

At a Student Union Board meeting, motions were passed which involved installing a better lighting system in the SUB parking lot across from Deakin St. and making two crosswalks from the parking lot to the SUB.

Robie Russell, ASUI Senator, said that the issue arose because people have complained of cars not seeing them when they cross the street.

Dean Vettrus, Student Union Director, said "The issue will go the Traffic Commission for study. I personally would like to see these things done and will try to direct the Commission towards these ends."

No money
Vettrus said "as of now, there is no money available for the project. Besides, we can't do it until spring anyway; the snow and damp weather prevent it. It will get done however, and action should be initiated immediately."

"We will study whether the crosswalks will be a safety factor. The basic problem is in how students treat crosswalks," Vettrus said.

Robie Russell said that the SUB parking lot is far too crowded. He said, "The problem is with people who leave their cars in the lot all day. The Moscow Police Department is going to start giving tickets to people who park their cars either on the sidewalk or in non-designated places. These people create a real hazard by obstructing other cars."

Tow cars away
Russell said that there is no parking in the SUB lot from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. except for Student Union employees with special stickers on their car. He suggested that cars be towed away if they violate any of these parking rules. He pointed out that this method of enforcement is being used on college campuses in other states.

products. Vettrus indicated that because the Dairy Science people are more involved in the production, the hours open for the selling had been restricted.

Total operation of the Dairy Bar will be transferred to the SUB staff according to Dr. John Montoure, head of the Food Science Department.

"We will supply ice cream, cottage cheese, and variety of cheeses, but the SUB will control the price," said Montoure.

Vettrus said that the products will be bought whole-sale from Dairy Science and sold retail to the students.

"Hopefully, the prices will remain the same," Vettrus said.

The construction involved in the move was planned by the SUB staff and is being done by the Physical Plant. If plans continue on schedule, the bar will be open to serve at the beginning of spring semester.

Mock UN slated for Sunday

SST controversy, nuclear and biological warfare, and the China question are among the topics to be discussed at the annual Mock United Nations meeting this Sunday from 2-5 p.m. at the SUB.

All living groups are urged to participate by choosing a country or countries they wish to represent. The only requirements are that two or three persons represent a single country and that participants have knowledge of their nations position.

The goal of the session is to enable students to learn the procedures and position of the United Nations in today's world.

For other information students can contact Dennis Davis at 882-9965 or Taunja Sloviaczek at 885-7474.

Skiers prepare for Banff trip

The New Vandal Ski Club will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB.

Deposits and reservations for persons going on the Banff ski trip will be taken. A film "The Mohieus Flip" will also be shown. All interested persons are urged to attend.

STEREO WAREHOUSE SPECIAL

The RTR 200 speaker system definitely makes the stereo system shown here the best you can buy for $247. Unlike the speakers most retail stores or mail order houses offer in a system in this price range, Stereo Warehouse has offered a speaker system that really gets it on: The RTR 200 speaker system has a tremendous bass response — without breakup, even at high volume levels. It features an 8" rolled-edge woofer, with nearly a four pound magnet structure. A wide-dispersion tweeter produces clean, crisp highs. This large, oiled walnut bookshelf speaker system will handle up to 40 watts R.M.S. It's an efficient speaker with outstanding fidelity for its regular price of $69.95 each. To match these speakers we have selected the popular Pioneer SX440 AM/FM stereo receiver. an extremely sensitive FM tuner section — this is the best receiver on the market for $169.95. To play your records, the Garrard 40B automatic changer can't be beat to go along with this system. It features a low-mass tone arm, and will stack up to 8 records. The Garrard comes complete with base, and a very good magnetic cartridge. The Garrard changer package retails for $74.95. All components come in factory-sealed cartons. Connecting cables and speaker wire included. We even pay all shipping costs to California, Oregon, and Washington. Evidence insufficient to remove Rugg

The Communications Board ruled Thursday against a petition for the removal of Argonaut editor Janet Rugg filed by students Allen Dobe and Ann McDonald.

"We felt that the evidence presented at the meeting was not sufficient to call for the removal of Miss Rugg," said board chairman Greg Heitman.

Heitman noted that the board would be drafting new recommendations for the Argonaut editor but that there is no consensus on them at this time.

Miss Rugg said that the ruling showed a "reasonable assessment of the situation" and that she feels comfortable with decisions she has made as editor.

The special meeting of Comm Board, which member Rick Glaub compared to a Lincoln-Douglas debate, considered a student grievance against Miss Rugg for "unethical and discriminatory editorial policy and failing to fill her responsibility to the majority of students."

Dobe said her priorities were "narrow and ideologically based" and showed "blatant, intentional disregard for the students."

In supporting his argument he noted the Argonaut's refusal to run pictures of the homecoming court in deference to a photo of packaged chicken. He cited a communications statute that calls for "accurate, complete reporting of all student events."

The refusal of the Argonaut to cover the Idaho Valkyries, organized student tours and YAF activities while concentrating on feature stories about "gonorrhea, dirty books and adultery (unmarried student couples)," Dobe claimed, were further evidence of this.

He also questioned Miss Rugg's editorial discretion in running a classified ad from a married man looking for "dates, etc." and Bruce Leary's satire of

"The right to free speech does not give the right to print garbage," he said.

Dobe presented a poll of 462 living group students taken by YAF members which showed 59 per cent opposing and 29 per cent approving of the way the Argonaut is run this year.

Speaking for Miss Rugg, law student Ted Creason said the real issue was whether she had upheld the board's "reasonable standards of journalism."

He pointed out that it would be unreasonable for the Argonaut to cover all student interests, that etcetera is not necessarily an obscene world, and that garbage is in the eye of the beholder.

"Articles like the one on gonorrhea," he said "are certainly a legitimate topic of student interest."

Miss Rugg presented two other college newspapers which offered less coverage of homecoming activities than did the Argonaut. She also questioned the validity of Dobe's poll when he had no knowledge of testing methods.

In response to an allegation of editorial bias against YAF leader Roger Koopman by a "discrediting preface" to his letter to the editor, Miss Rugg claimed that it was written just prior to the paper's deadline and not by her.

The result of the meeting will probably mean a reassessment of the Argonaut's editorial policy by Comm Board.

Vandals kick ass !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

By Crunch Ruffle

The University of Idaho Vandals did it again. Utilizing a strong ground game, some pinpoint passing and a bit of ingenious thinking on the part of head coach Don Robbins, the Vandals cut down the Weber Wildcats, insured at least second place in the Big Sky Conference, won their seventh game in a row and scared the hell out of their worshipping fans.

With 55 seconds to go in the contest, and the Vandals down 20-17 and crippled quarterback Rick Seefried just sent into the game, it looked like certain defeat for the valiant Vandals.

Vandal 'baller Dumbrowski

But head coach Robbins and All-American candidate Jack Goddard weren't to be denied. Teaming up with

Opinion and analysis

Seefried and All-American halfback candidate Fred Riley, the play went something like this:

— NCAA Coach of the Year candidate Robbins' brain sent the play to Seefried.

— Seefried's arm threw a pass to the waiting hands of Goddard.

— Goddard's waiting hands received the pass, his back took a solid hit from a Weber State defender, somehow his feet keep his leg bone connected to his thigh bone (etc) as his hands pitched the ball to Fred Riley.

— Riley's legs went to work, outrunning the opposition and truckin' for all they were worth, finding paydirt in Weber's end zone giving the Vandals their seventh win and their fans cardiac arrests.

"Who'd a thunk it," said elated Lewiston Tribune sports editor Sam Bachrach in a state of post-game elation.

"Oink, oink," shouted three lovely U of I cheerleaders in unison during a post-game celebration in one of Ogden's nicer motels.

"We were highly pleased with the win. It was a complete team victory..." said Robbins, "It was most certainly the greatest thrill of my coaching career and I am sure that Vandal fans will long remember this big victory." Besides being a great coach, a likeable person and a bon vivant, Robbins is also quite articulate, a nice change from the usual burly, barely understandable speech patterns of most head coaches.

The Vandal coaching staff, will show films of the victory Thursday evening at 7:30 in the Agriculture Science auditorium. The films, run on a motion picture projector-depict, in living color, all the action that took place in Weber last weekend. By utilizing this latest invention, the coaches are actually able to permanently freeze the images of our great Vandal footballers for all time on a series of still pictures which, when run rapidly before a very hot light, simulate real human movements (up until a month or so ago even the real Vandal football team couldn't do that).

Next week the Vandals come home to their new, partially completed, highly controversial, almost bordering on hazardous football stadium. Besides affording an opportunity to see the heroic Vandals in action the game will provide those "sidewalk superintendents" out there in sports land a chance to check on the progress of the construction.

Coach Robbins feels that the Bobcats, who proved themselves in a 21-21 tie with Weber, will be rough, tough and ready. The Vandals must not have any letdown if they hope to keep their winning streak alive.

This week the Bobcats will bring the Veer-T to Moscow with their talented quarterback, Zoonie McLean. McLean is their leading scorer with six touchdowns while his ace running back, Gary Michael, has ground out 468 yards for a 4.7 average for eight games. In addition, the Bobcats will have Randy Martinson, a 235-pound defensive end, back for full duty after nursing an injury for two games.

Tim Allen, the flankerback, has great speed and is a constant threat to break a long passing play for the touchdown.

Ted "Butch" Crashcup
Argonaut Guest Sports Editor

The Vandal Coaching staff, particularly Don Robbins, deserve considerable credit for the fine job they have done with the Vandal football team this year. And let's not forget the fans, the boosters, the students, the Vandal Football Radio Network—most notably Gordie Law who's inciteful comments during the game always lend an air of comedy to otherwise dreary situations.

But there's one individual no-one seems to be remembering now that the Vandals are on top of the sports heap (as it were).

That person is the one who probably made all this possible—Y. C. McNeese. McNeese, or Y.C. (depending on how well you knew him and/or who you were) is a dirty word around Vandal football circles. He shouldn't be.

A slight memory jog will remind even the most forgetful reader of the bygone days of the McNeese era when bullshit was king and Y. C. was presiding over the locker rooms by virtue of his unchallenged ability to out bullshit anyone within the sound of his Texan drawl.

It was Y.C.'s gift-of-gab that got us the greatest Vandal football team of this century. It was his cool demeanor, go-getter approach and gangbusters salesmanship that convinced Fred Riley, Frank Doctor, Rick Seefried, and a host of other great footballers to come to our campus. If it hadn't been for old Y.C. many of our players could have been balling on almost any other major University campus in this country.

And for that we owe him a big thank-you. A bunch of us Vandal boosters who still remember Y. C. and think fondly of him every time we see a bullwhip were getting together at the Elks the other night over some Moscow Mules and we figured out a solution to this whole silly problem:

Y. C. got us the great team we now have—right? Y.C. has since been dishonored and forgotten by the bigshots in the athletic department—right? We have a new stadium—right? And that stadium needs a name—right? (You guessed it) Let's name the football stadium, "The Y.C. McNeese Memorial Stadium."

A beautiful compromise—right? And so fitting too—naming a great big four and a half million dollar boondoggle after a coach who formed the greatest Vandal football team in history out of a pile of bullshit.

Herbie is the latest in interior decor

I've got the perfect Christmas gift for that relative or friend that has everything — Herbie.

A 16 pound, two and one-half foot high King Vulture with a six-foot wing span — that's Herbie.

"Herbie is a South American King Vulture," said Guy DeVaney, owner and operator of the Fish and Things pet store. "He's the third largest predatory bird in the world next to the Andian and California Condors."

"He's very useful," DeVaney said, "You could use him for a decoration in a large, empty room. And he'd make a wonderful pet. He's gentle, tame and quite intelligent."

He said that it's Herbie's gay colors that make him a good decoration.

"He's buff and his black tipped wings, orange, red, yellow head can brighten up the drabest room."

De Vaney said that Herbie would be a safe pet for almost anyone.

"Herbie's a bluffer. He likes to scare people," DeVaney said, "But underneath it all he's a real chicken — a rabbit scares him to death."

Herbie would be no problem to control.

"He obeys voice commands now," DeVaney said. "When I exercise him I tell him to get into his pen and he does."

Herbie's pen is a wooden cage about eight feet high and five feet wide. A large glass window makes up the front of the cage.

Herbie usually contemplates the world from his perch — a wooden stick about three and one-half feet from the floor — when he is not out of his cage exercising. And that's quite often.

"Herbie can open his cage any time he wants," DeVaney said. "He learned how by watching me. Like I said, he's intelligent."

He said that whenever the vulture wants to stretch his wings he just opens the latch and take a stroll.

"Herb likes to walk up and down the runway in back of the pens and give the pets a scare," DeVaney said. "But he never hurts anything — never. And when you think he's exercised enough, tell him to go home. There's no problem."

DeVaney explained that vultures don't like to fly much, mostly because their bodies aren't made for flight.

"Vultures would rather walk short distances than fly," DeVaney said. "It's like the pictures you see of vultures sitting all day long in dead trees. They like to sit."

Besides making a good pet and decoration, and being no problem to exercise Herbie's economical, and is not a picky eater.

"I feed Herb by hand," DeVaney said. "He eats about a pound of hamburger in 30 seconds."

The pet store owner said that Herbie eats about seven to eight pounds of meat a week, or "Feed him anything that's dead."

DeVaney bought Herbie for "oodles of money" from the Colorado State Zoo.

"They ordered four King Vultures but found out that they had enough money to buy only three," DeVaney said, "So I was very lucky to get Herb."

You can buy Herbie for only $250.00

"He'd sure make someone a fine Christmas gift, but I'd sure miss him," DeVaney said, "He sure does brighten up the place."

The Humane Society ghost

There are gobs of guppies, mounds of mice, and pounds of puppies in a pet shop downtown.

In a small 12"X6'X18" aquarium there are around 75 black moor fish.

A small cage about two feet long and one and one-half feet wide contains about 50 baby mice — many clustered together in the corners.

An Elkhound puppy mopes in the corner of his cramped cage.

What does the Humane Society think about these conditions?

They don't. There is no Humane society here in Moscow.

According to Doctor Henry Zimet, a local veterinarian, the nearest Humane society is in Lewiston.

"Moscow doesn't have a Humane society," Dr. Zimet said. "The nearest chapter is in Lewiston — and I don't believe that they come to Moscow very often."

Dr. Zimet explained that the Humane society is not a governmental agency and therefore cannot enforce laws, but they do set sanitary standards.

A member of the Latah County Health Unit said, "There was a law about 10 years ago that required that pet shops license their birds to insure that they weren't carrying any diseases."

The Health Unit worker said that he doubted that the law was still in effect.

"Occasionally I check turtles in shops to make sure they are in good health and disease free," the Health Unit worker said, "but I haven't checked that in about two years."

With such active Health Unit workers and the nearest Humane society in Lewiston, the cage with the two rabbits at the pet shop may soon contain 14.

Louie's isa good food!

Picture and story by Skupe MacLoskuy

Louie Damelli's, fine cuisine, recently opened for business in the Moscow Shopping Center, in the building once occupied by Fern's Cafe and later by Little Leroy's. Louie is open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. eight days a week.

If you dig good food, Louie's has got it and in vast quantities. "No one ever leaves Louie's hungry," says Louie. It's all homecooked food, plenty of it and dirt cheap prices. The menu has three main divisions; sandwiches, pizzas, and dinners. Sandwiches are Italian and American (no hamburger) and served on Nancy's rye bread or Ed's hard rolls.

Pizza's are all hand-tossed by Steve Barenko, rumored to be the best pizza cooker this side of the Arctic Circle.

Pizza's have been upgraded and prices lowered. "There's more meat in the pizza and more change in your pocket" says Steve.

Dinners are different each night and hand-cooked by Louie himself. They are mostly Italian but Louie says he isn't bigoted and will serve any food as long as it's Italian. For variety, Japanese food is also served whenever Space Captain Nagashima can return to Earth long enough to get his culinary act together.

The atmosphere in Louie's place is always warm and friendly. The food is real and so are the people that prepare and serve it. The crew is always willing to sit down and talk to the customers about the grits or the weather or the price of livin' or nothin' at all. That's what's really nice about Louie Damelli's.

MOSCOW'S HUMANE SOCIETY IS somewhat ineffectual, since it doesn't even exist. A Health Unit worker used to check turtles in pet stores to make sure they were healthy, but he quit two years ago.
