Voter registration on campus this week

Register to vote. Students have power. Students have been hearing those words ever since the 26th Amendment to the Constitution was passed. Yet only 15 per cent of those eligible have officially been added to the voting population according to Roy Eiguren, ASUI Senator and statewide student voter registration chairman.

There are about 90,000 potential voters in the State of Idaho who can have a great influence on the next election and change the total electoral picture in the State.

A massive information campaign will be conducted on eight campuses throughout the State this week.

Mike Mitchell, U of I coordinator for the drive, will be working with the Freshman Advisory Board to distribute information about voter rights and responsibilities on this campus. Members of the Board will speak at campus living groups this week, with actual registration taking place on Thursday and Friday.

Registration cards will be passed out at noon Thursday and Friday in living groups on campus. In addition, a registration table will be available in the main lobby of the SUB on both days for those who live off campus.

The National Movement for Student Vote has provided assistance to the Idaho campaign. National interest has been indicated by major media who feel that Idaho could provide a valuable indication of actual student attitude about the right to vote according to Eiguren.

Cooperation for the statewide drive has been extended by the Governor's office, Secretary of State, League of Women Voters, and both Democratic and Republican State chairmen.

Freeze over paymayclimb

Thanks to an easing of controls on the nation's economy, the University of Idaho will be attempting to equalize "all the places where our people kind of got hooked when the first phase went into effect," said a business office official yesterday.

"We'll try to do that unless we're prohibited by law," according to Gene Slade, business manager.

"Our major attempt will be to get rid of inequities where phase one affected people on step schedules and those who started the academic year after Aug. 14," he said.

Personnel affected by the step schedule changes are workers in the infirmary and cafeterias, Slade explained. He said students help wasn't affected by phase one of the President's wage-price freeze since they were considered new workers.

Spruce receives wine license

Attention all wine lovers. . . Gallo, Pink Chablais, Boones Farm, Lancers. . . and many other brands are now not only available at the liquor store, or your local grocery, but at the Spruce Tavern.

Beginning last Tuesday, November 2, the Spruce began their licensed sale of bottled wine to all those 21 years of age and older.

Not easy process

"Getting a wine license for a tavern in this town is not an easy process," commented Guy W. Devaney, owner and manager of the Spruce.

"It's amazing how grocery stores can get a wine license without any problems, but the city treated us like we were criminals," said Devaney.

He said, "the county and state gave us no trouble at all concerning our request for a wine license, however, the city held us up for an entire month before finally issuing a license."

Sold "to go"

According to Devaney, the wine is sold only in fifths to those of legal age, it is not served.

"I will sell wine in larger size bottles if my customers demand it," said Devaney.

He said, "Twenty year olds are always welcome, of course, we still sell beer on tap."

When asked if business had increased since wine has been sold, Frank Urizar, a Spruce bartender said, "It's really hard to say, we haven't advertised too much yet, it's a new thing."

The lion can wait, time is his

The Idaho student, upon receiving a campus parking violation, is confronted with two alternatives. He may either 1) pay the ticket without questioning the authority of the officer involved and the circumstances surrounding the ticket or 2) request a hearing upon the summons in question and is later notified when he is to appear in court. Appearing in the closed traffic court, one feels similar to a Christian in the arena. He knows the decision was made, but why he isn't allowed the right to rebuttal only the lion knows.

When the Christian arrives at the arena, he signs his name on the door, next to a number which tells him when his turn will come. The instructions include where he is to wait until he is to make his appearance. While waiting for the Roman maiden to lead him into the arena, he ponders the happenings behind that closed door. In most other states, that door is open to all who would want to watch and absorb the processes of justice. Not this Rome. Even if the State has an Open Meeting Law, this arena is closed.

The Romans cite expediency as the logical reasoning behind that closed door. Is there logic in sending 200 Christians per week to one arena? Is there logic in a Roman enforcement agency that won't accept the responsibility of arresting the Christian for his wrong. Withholding his sheepskin loincloth is irrelevant to the wrong, but somehow the power is there. If you can create your own Rome, if you can create your own Roman enforcement agency and its laws, it can be logically reasoned that you can create that closed door arena, no matter what the State says.

But, back to the arena.

The time has come, the maiden and the Romans are waiting. That closed door has opened and closed again behind you. The arena is filled, but you are alone. Your eyes scan the filled arena and you see the Romans. You also see some Christians in Roman clothing. Not ordinary Christians, but hand picked Christians who hold heirarchical positions closely associated with the Romans. Your name and number is read off by a Roman sitting at the head of the arena. He introduces himself as the Roman chairman.

Out of the corner of your eye you see the moustached enforcement officer and his legion officials. You swallow nervously.

The Roman chairman asks if you have anything to say. You plead your defense as the eyes of justice burn holes in your face and then in their timepieces. When you have finished, a gavel of silence brings the Romans eyes to the chairman again. He cites a Roman law from a Roman book, you, as a Christian paid for. He glances around the arena. The gavel of silence is again heard. What do they think? Do they like your toga? Would they speak if more Christians were in the arena? What would Socrates say?

The chairman smiles and hope surges through you and your loincloth. You have been temporarily pardoned. The lions must wait. The chairman asks you to leave the arena and tells you the Romans will notify you about their decision.

As you open that closed door to leave the arena, you spot the curled reaction of a lip and moustache. The lion can wait; time is his.—COG-

One more time

You wouldn't believe it by looking at this pile of junk left on a SUB cafeteria table, but somebody is ripping off with a whole pile of cafeteria mugs and other apartment-useable items. And it is costing the student body money. For instance, 30 cases of large mugs at $13 a case, thousands of ashtrays and innumerable sets of silverware. Come on, gang, bring back the stuff so the management will quit complaining about how the students are "just cheating themselves."

What ever happened to porch swings?

All the Idaho is gone out of romance. Contrary to popular belief, the Idaho Argonaut is a strong believer in romance and romanticism. But anyone who has been looking around will notice that there is a distinct lack of the romantic spirit (although certainly not of spirits) at the University of Idaho.

As a service to its readers, the Argonaut will try to investigate this hideous plot, this horrendous state of affairs — or more correctly, this lack of affairs.

It used to be that the young men came a courting. With them they brought the requirements for cour. g i.e. a box of chocolates and a bouquet of flowers. There were some ingenious Idaho sorts, or course, who would substitute a sack of potatoes for the chocolates but they never really got very far.

Now this doesn't mean that the women folks had nothing to do. Why buying gingham skirts and convincing daddy or the sorority and dorm to build a porch swing wasn't the easiest task in the world, you know.

But times change and Theophilus Tower was built without a single porch swing, ecology nuts protect the wildflower growths from over-amerous, would-be pickers and females complaining that chocolate is bad for the complexion. (And potatoes are bad for the figure.)

Consider for a moment how this lack of romance is affecting you in your day to day and night to night activities.

Getting more specific: today has anyone whispered sweet nothings in your ear? invited you to an orgy in the lounge of the Wallace Complex? wrote a sonnet to your eyebrow? did you write any sonnets to a sweet young thing's eyebrows?

If you are lacking in any of these activities then you may consider yourself deprived of your proper portion of love and affection, under the doctrine of equal opportunity as expressed by the Supreme Court in Brown v. Topeka School Board.

Of course, the normal red-blooded American Idaho student won't be complaining to the Supreme Court more than once every couple of months so there should be some more practical solutions.

We suggest striving for romance as a duo thing. Get together and get it together. Then, the next time they sing that theme song, we'll all know that romance does lay in her name.

The trial of Vincent Vandal

It was a typical day in Contracts: we were deciding when was a contract not a contract? And I was paying close attention like I always do. Suddenly a swoon came upon me and I reeled and gasped and the room seemed to be spinning. A moment later the sensation passed, and I found myself in a courtroom.

One side of it was lit brilliantly, as if by a million searchlights, and my heart gave a wild surge of awe and joy as the counsel for the defendant, a Mr. Gabriel, stood up and walked slowly and majestically to the bench. The other side of the room, to which my eyes were pulled slowly and unwillingly, was a vast gloom, lit now and then by flickers of red.

Out of it now slinked a huge shadowy form, the counsel for the plaintiff, one Sleazemouth. He too walked slowly to the bench, and a silence fell over the courtroom. I received an eerie sensation of weightlessness, like all eternity was opened up in front of me.

For the first time I was aware of the defendant, Vincent Vandal, sitting with his back to me. He was about my size and build, and he had a University of Idaho sweatshirt on. In the dead silence I heard the judge speak:

"The case of Hell v. Vincent Vandal is now opened. It will be reported in First Circuit of Limbo Reports, 456 Lim 60, and alternately in 577 Book of Life 8822. Will the counsel for the defendant present his case please."

After thanking the MOST LEARNED GATEKEEPER WITH THE KEYS TO HEAVEN AND HELL, the counsel for the defense had the floor and his opponent melted away into the shadows. Gabriel was reasonable, compelling, brilliant, and penetrating in turns as he attempted to defeat the action pending. He first explained that it was an action in Contracts about an alleged option statement.

It appeared the defendant Vincent had promised to "get out of this class with an A or go straight to Hell," and since the defendant had subsequently succumbed in a little fracas at the Ratskellar, the plaintiff claims obligatory performance of the promise and seeks an injunction to this effect.

"The first thing about this so-called contract," Gabriel pointed out, "is that it lacks consideration. Any reasonable man or devil or angel knows that such contracts have to be executed in the light of the full moon at midnight and sealed with blood. There is no way we can stretch the common law definitions to fit the circumstances of the case at hand.

"Secondly, the promise was unilateral (one-sided) and therefore open only for a reasonable time. From past experience with promises of this type, it has been shown that they only stay in the consciousness of the promisor about three and a half seconds, so I feel that to hold the defendant liable for such promise clear until his demise some six hours later is to stretch the time limit beyond reason.

"Such a contract if recognized, would be against public policy, and therefore void," Gabriel went on.

"Here we have a young man (pointing at Vincent and me) whom plaintiff wants to condemn for an eternity, and what has he done wrong? I offer this dossier as evidence to the moral superiority of my client," he continued, "and in there it demonstrates his dedication to learning, his earnest respect and fond love for his parents, and his honest desire to spread friendliness and kindness among his fellows. I rest my case."

It seemed to me that Gave had done all right, and yet I couldn't help thinking that maybe I could have presented a little more convincing case for the defendant. He and I were getting a little mixed up and it was hard to keep our thoughts separate, and yet I could really feel for Vincent. He was a pretty nice guy.

Sleazemouth worked his way to the front, and a gloom came over me. He didn't waste any time.

"My most learned (cough, wheeze) opponent has appealed to common sense and what looks reasonable to our poor and limited minds," he started off, "but I bring more compelling authority. We shall take his points one by one:

"Consideration was present. You see, when a soul binds himself in that fashion, he derives immense satisfaction from it. Since he thinks he obviously won't (sic) go to Hell, he promises to himself that he will get an A. And such promises have been upheld in this court many times; Heaven v. John Doe (action on a promise to turn over a new leaf), Hell v. Barbara Doll (action to maintain my figure and complexion,) and many others.

Sleazemouth ventured a horrible gloating look at me, and my heart quailed. My University of Idaho sweatshirt was very hot, and Vincent Vandal was nowhere to be seen.

"Now, about one-sided contracts," Sleazemouth went on, and a reasonable time. This court has repeatedly held that it is impossible to set a definite length in a matter of this type. Thus in Joe Doaks v. Hell (action on a promise to go to Hell to avoid kissing his wife) it was held that a reasonable time extended to the second week of a prolonged family disturbance, whereas in Ex-Parte Junior (Promise to do a good turn once a day for the rest of natural lifetime), the reasonable time was extended until Junior put the cat in the dryer, some three months hence from date of promise. So in the instant case, I hold that a reasonable time encompasses at least the end of the semester, and I am sure the court will find this to be so.

"Now about this dossier," Sleazemouth whispered, "this is the most damning (court pardon the term) evidence of the lot. His dedication to learning is evidenced by his attendance — three classes in the last month; his ambition — to be a ski bum; and his intellectual honesty — he likes to take the same class from two different teachers so he can tell one what the other said.

"His dedication to his parents is most touchingly evident," the oily voice went on, "when he refrains from inviting them to his apartment on weekends because he knows they would be shocked. And his honest desire to spread friendliness and kindness among his fellows is at its best at two in the morning six days a week. There was even a time when he stayed overnight at the Spruce to avoid throwing up in his room-mate's car. All in all, a most moral dossier."

The plaintiff's counsel rested his case and the awful silence fell. I was hot and cold all over and I couldn't help feeling that the res ipsa loquitur code pleading rule of the quasi-contractual negative pregnant jurisprudential question might have been brought up, but it was too late for that now.

THE MOST LEARNED GATEKEEPER WITH THE KEYS TO HEAVEN AND HELL was motioning to me to come forward for sentencing and I struggled to my feet and tried to move, but it seemed as though the room was spinning and all I could move was my arm...

The class was all looking at me strangely and I foolishly tried to stop my wildly waving arm, but it was too late. The instructor said, "yes, Mr. Hay?" and looked at me curiously.

I looked at him and suddenly blurted out with feeling, "Thank God you're not Sleazemouth!"

Students organizing nationally for convention representation

More than 100 student body presidents and the Association of Student Governments joined this week in calling for an Emergency Conference for New Voters to organize students as voting delegates to the national party nominating convention in 1972.

The conference is set for Dec. 3, 4 and 5 at Loyola University at Chicago.

"The events of the past month clearly indicate that neither of the two major political parties welcome the young, left-leaning voters — as fully-enfranchised enforcement of the McGovern Commission reforms at the Democratic convention in Miami.

On the Republican side, pressure from higher echelon Republican officials to thwart Congressman Pete McCloskey's (R-Cal) challenge to President Nixon in the primaries has caused serious financial problems for McCloskey's campaign, and could essentially eliminate him as an alternative Republican candidate, Draper contends.

"It is imperative that the 25 million 18-24 year olds in this country are aware of the mockery that both Democratic and Republican party officials are making of the reform movements in the parties," continued Draper.

"Young people must sense the urgency of this meeting of the student community and the absolute necessity of mobilizing very quickly to combat those forces who would seek to isolate us from the regular party procedures. We must remember that there are great numbers of people in both parties who would prefer to wind up at their conventions with 3000 students outside chanting instead of 300 students inside voting. We do not intend to give them that satisfaction," he concluded.

The Emergency Conference for New Voters is the last national gathering of students before the delegate selection process begins, which in some states is as early as February. The conference at Loyola will include a number of workshops, seminars, and panels to discuss voter registration and political organization.

A series of national speakers, to be announced at a later date, will address the students at the Chicago conference concerning the issues confronting them in this election year.

Political analysis

participants in the parties," said Duane Draper, President of ASG and Chairman of the steering committee for the Emergency Conference.

"These events create a crisis situation for the millions of young people who wish to effect constructive change through existing institutions. Unless we begin the task immediately of organizing students within the party processes, we will find ourselves totally excluded from the delegate selections and the Presidential nominating procedures, thus effectively disenfranchised despite the 26th amendment."

The events Draper referred to were the Democratic Committee's selection of Patricia Harris as temporary chairman of the credentials committee over Sen. Harold Hughes (D-Iowa). Draper alleges Hughes a liberal, had been viewed by many as the key to Recipients are Stacie R. Churchman, a freshman child development major from Shoshone, and Ellen M. Seveland, a sophomore home economics education major from Kamiah.

Bobcats bow to dynamic Vandals-8 straight

By John Foley

The Vandal's 40 to 2 win over the hapless Montana State Bobcats coupled with the big Idaho State win over Boise State shot Idaho into its first solo possession of the Big Sky Conference championship in history.

The championship is only one of the honors the Vandals have won in this, their best season ever. It is well known that the Vandals have now won eight consecutive games, an all time best. The Idaho defense, popularly known as "The Wild Bunch" has given the Vandals their most exciting action in history, even going so far as holding the Montana State Bobcats to minus 1 yard total offense in the first half of last Saturday's game. This style of defense, coupled with the offense which includes Frank Doctor, Fred Riley and Jack Goddard, amongst others, has given the University of Idaho its best team in history.

Saturday's game was a perfect example of what the Vandals, surely living up to their name, can do. As has been mentioned, the Bobcats were held to minus 1 yard in the first half of action, and MSU did not get a first down until well into the third period. Montana State finished the game with a total of 92 yards and only 2 points which came on a safety when Vandal third string quarterback Bruce Cole was tackled in his own end zone.

There were many defensive highlights of the game. Defensive back Rod Maynard intercepted two passes and carried them 42 yards. This effort won him the Vandal Award for the week. Ron Linehan was the defensive award winner for doing what he has always done, making a lot of hard tackles. Linehan's defensive line was virtually impenetrable all afternoon long. Bill Cady, a defensive lineman, had fourteen tackles and recovered a fumble. Defensive end Tom Jarman scored a touchdown on a blocked punt. Rick Simmons, who blocked that punt, also put in a fine game and was among those who were singled out by the coaching staff for their fine performances.

However, even with all this fine defensive action, it is this reporter's belief that the defensive high light of the day was performed by a player who is completely unknown for his defensive work. Well into the second half, Idaho kicking specialist Ricardo Castillo tackled the Bobcat return man after the Bobcat had broken through the majority of the Vandal kickoff team. Ricardo's clean tackle should have garnered him some kind of award. As it was Castillo set a new all-time Vandal record by kicking his 10th and 11th field goals of the year.

The Idaho offense was also impressive. A lot of the offensive excitement came from second and third string players who entered the game after the Vandals had run away with the scoring. Bernie Rembert, the man who plays behind Fred Riley and winner of the offensive award, had touchdown runs of 20 and 54 yards as he led the Idaho rushing statistics with a total of 92 yards. Frank Doctor, the Vandal's starting fullback, performed as usual as he smashed Bobcats out of his way or pulled them along with him. Doctor consistently got three or four yards more than he perhaps should have. His powerful second and third efforts made the difference many times. Frank is leading all Idaho runners on the season with a net total of 734 yards on 153 carries for a 4.8 yard per carry average.

Fred Riley, perhaps Idaho's best known ball carrier, did not play much of the game but did score one touchdown and several impressive runs. Relatively unknown halfback Malcom Smith played much of the second half and also scored a touchdown while turning in an impressive performance. This is a definite indication of the team depth the Vandals have had so little of in the past but are certainly enjoying now.

Regular starting quarterback Rick Seefried saw little action as Tom Ponciano did much of the early work at that position. However, the passing was sharp and there when it was needed. One interesting thing about the quarterbacking came late in the fourth quarter when the third string quarterback, sophomore Bruce Cole, overthrew his receiver 70 yards away. Flanker J. Hall was racing full speed across the Bobcat 30 when the ball went by 5 yards over his head and landed about 10 yards in front of him. Cole was standing on his own goal line. It has been suggested that Bruce's arm be cast in bronze as inspiration for future musclemen!

It might be said that the only real problem the Vandal's had during the game was with the officiating, but the Vandals for some reason, have been having that problem all year long, and have been able to overcome it dramatically.

So, there you have it, what has so far been the cap to the best Vandal for the best Vandal season ever. So far this year the Vandals have scored a total of 214 points with 1472 yards passing and 1692 yards rushing, a total offensive on the season of 3164 yards. Idaho's opponents have only put together 2587 yards in offense, thanks going, in a large part, to the "Wild Bunch." Idaho's defense has stopped the "Texas Y" offense four times this season while ending Montana's 24

Committee makes plans for women

Seminars for undergraduate women, high school visitations and workshops for high school counselors are among the projects currently being planned by an ad hoc committee on women's programs at the University of Idaho.

The committee was appointed in May of 1971 by university President Ernest W. Hartung who charged the members to "consider matters relating to the recruitment of women, retention of women students, development of career counseling and special opportunities for such students at the university."

The concern of the Student Counseling Center and Student Advisory Services over the withdrawal rate of women was an important factor in the appointment of the committee. It was found that over a four year period, the total number of women in a class decreases by 51 per cent while the total number of men decreases only three per cent. This is due not only to the fact that more women withdraw but also that fewer women than men re-enter or transfer into the university.

Survey of women

In April, Dr. John L. Hipple, a student counselor, and A. Jean Hill, dean of women, conducted a survey of women withdrawing from the university and found that conflict with self in terms of goals, feelings and interests were very significant causes for withdrawal. Immediate marriage plans were of minor importance, though most of the women returning the questionnaires said they expected marriage and children to be part of their future plans.

"The report clearly indicated the need to encourage women students to make use of academic personnel in their departments as well as the service agencies available to them here on campus such as the Placement Office, Student Advisory Services and so on. It also seemed to indicate that special programs were needed to bring women to the University of Idaho and to make the college process more meaningful and satisfying for women," noted Hill, who is serving as chairman of the committee on women.

"One example of the recognition of the need was the appointment of Dr. Mary R. Prescott to the previously all-male staff of the Student Counseling Center," she noted.

Faculty more aware

"Helping faculty members become more aware of the special needs of women students is a third major aim of the committee. In addition, we still have many questions to resolve. For example, should the committee serve as a grievance board? That is a very important function but it could take up all of our time," Hill said.

The committee is currently seeking funding for several of the proposed programs such as visits by women faculty, staff and students to high schools around the state to speak to women students and their parents about alternatives for women. A workshop is definitely being planned for high school counselors who play a major role in providing women with information on education and career possibilities. A brochure for high school women, describing the opportunities for women in each of the eight colleges at the University of Idaho, is currently being prepared.

A number of surveys will be conducted during the year to determine the extent of discrimination in education and careers as seen by students, faculty and employers.

Student-alum dinner held

The first student-alumni dinner of the year was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Alsager this past Sunday evening. The dinner sponsored by the Student Alumni Relations Board was attended by six university students picked by the board.

Students who participated included Steve Youngblood, Jana McGee, Liz Ware, Don Huddleston, Rosemary Reigger, and Ron Harris. Two other alumni couples attending the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Dick Slade, and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Petersen.

Topics of discussion centered around the future plans of athletics at the University and the newly arranged schedule for the University. Recollections of the exciting trips on the long gone student trains kept the group chuckling. Memories of Riddenbaugh Hall and living group pranks also aroused the interest of the students.

The dinner helped both students and the alumni to more fully realize each other's position on campus and in the community. The dinner bettered the student-alumni relations and it was felt that future such dinners would be beneficial.

Anyone interested in attending the dinners and meeting past alumni are encouraged to call the Alumni Director at 885-6154.

game winning streak and beating Weber while they were leading the nation's small colleges in rushing. West Texas State and Montana State were the other two luckless teams that tried to run the wishbone through the Vandals.

Head coach Don Robbins has become the top percentage winning coach in Idaho history, according to Idaho's sports information director Bob Maker. Robbins had 12 wins against 9 losses for .570 win mark. He has eclipsed the old record set by John Griffith in 1902-06 and 1910-14 of .560 on a 28-22 record. However, it must be remembered the Griffith's teams were playing such squads as Coeur d'Alene High School and Moscow High.
