Evaluation forms topic of council debate

Some doubt was expressed by Bruce Bray, faculty secretary at last Tuesday's Faculty Council meeting, as to whether his department had enough money to finance the processing of student evaluation forms at the end of the semester. Bray explained that the recent one per cent cutback in available funding for education had caused him to have to reduce expenditures somewhere.

It was suggested that the funds for the evaluations come from ASUI sources in the future. The concept was disapproved of, however, on grounds that traditionally the evaluations originated with the instructors desire to find out how he was performing as a teacher, not an action initiated by students.

"It bothers me," commented Mary Ruth Mann, ASUI president "because the overwhelming strength of the evaluation is that it has been taken as a responsibility of the university not the student."

Suggestion approved

A suggestion, which appeared to receive more approval as an alternate method of evaluation if the regular process could not be financed, was presented by professor Paul Brierker of Mathematics. He suggested that each department in the university be required to make its own evaluation in a self-devised form.

The suggestions main appeal was that it, according to Dierker, would cost less and provides the evaluations required.

The matter was referred to the Budget Liason committee for further investigation.

Senate bill ok'ed

A bill coming from the ASUI senate was approved by faculty council members in other action Tuesday. The bill supported giving student officers credit for work in the ASUI. The ASUI president if the bill is approved of by the regents, would receive three credits for holding the position while the vice-president and senators would receive six credits. The rationale behind the measure, according to the bill, was to allow student officers, who are required to be full time students, to participate in student government without being impeded by heavy academic work loads.

Those on the council who expressed support for the measure felt that students should be encouraged to participate in student government without being impeded by heavy academic work loads.

Those on the council who expressed support for the measure felt that students should be encouraged to participate in campus government and should not be discouraged from doing to because he is required to take too heavy of a work load to allow him time to spend in the ASUI.

Shreeve disagrees

Jean'ne Shreeve of the chemistry department disagreed, however, saying that "the purpose of students is to be students." She commented that the senate bill was "ridiculous and plain nonsense." The council, Professor Shreeve commented, should not support students who spend time "mousing around in student government."

An hour's time was spent discussing university reorganization. Spokesman from the Department of Journalism, Speech and Radio-TV were present to discuss the possibility of a School of Communication either within the existing College of Letters and Science or in the proposed College of Performing Arts.

Dr. Robert Coonrod, academic vice president, expressed concern that the present communications program was not taking advantage of national advances in the communication area. Coonrod commented that the communication field was fastly becoming an important branch of the behavioral science. If the programs were not coordinated to take advantage of these advances, Coonrod said, the university was not getting its money's worth from the communications fields.

Communications problem

The major problem of establishing a school of communication appeared to be, from council discussion, one of limited budget. A major concern of the council, to be discussed at future meetings, is the question of whether to put the proposed school of communications in Letters and Science or in a separate college.

Four non-credit courses set for intersession

Four short courses will be offered during intersession this year, John Pearson, president of the Graduate Students Association at the University of Idaho, announced today.

The non-credit, no grade courses will run from Jan. 3-15. Times will be announced in the future. A $5 fee per course will be charged to cover duplicating costs, he said.

The courses to be offered are a Calculus Refresher, to be taught by Dr. Chien Wai; Computer Programming, taught by Dr. Charles Nelson; Statistics, taught by Dr. Dale Everson; and Micro-teaching, taught by Dr. Terry Armstrong.

Registration for the courses is set for 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Dec. 2, 3, 6 and 7 in the Quarter of beef set as prize for raffle

The U of I Rodeo Club is having a drawing for a quarter of beef Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Ag. Science building.

Members of the club have been selling raffle tickets at $1 a piece for the past month to raise money for the annual spring rodeo.

Everyone is invited to attend.

SUB. Interested persons may also register by mail, Pearson said. They should indicate the course they wish to take, enclose the $5 fee and mail it to Dallas Bates, Department of Chemistry, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.

The courses are open to all interested persons: students, faculty and townspeople, Pearson said.

Student boycott

Dear Editor

In an attempt to stage an effective protest against the foreign policy of the United States, we propose a graduated boycott, of products.

The boycott will be primarily directed against food concerns supported by the 14 to 30 age group, eg. Gino's, MacDonalds, etc. Hopefully it will be extended into the clothing industry, to include a boycott of blue jeans, sandals, the entire gamut of wearing apparel that the "ESTABLISHMENT" manufacturers associate with this age group.

In directing a boycott against these concerns, we feel that a major upset of their economy, would be the expected and desirable result. Furthermore, these concerns support the military-industrial complex; their grievances would be considered more valid than ours. In being the cause of these grievances, our ends might be more easily attained. Those ends being — complete troop withdrawal, not only from Viet Nam, but from the other places on the globe, where the U.S. has military installations; the end of sending weapons as a part of foreign aid, and the release of the political prisoners in this country.

The following is a list of dates and foods and products to be boycotted.

April 2-8. . . .hamburgers and hot dogs
April 9-15. . . .hamburgers, hot dogs,

all soft drinks

April 16-22. . . .hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks, potato chips and pretzels.

April 23-29. . . .hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks, potato chips, pretzels, and french fries.

April 30-May 6. . . .Hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks, potato chips, pretzels, french fries, and ALL WINE(sorry. . .)

All throughout the month of April, the beginning of the boycott against the clothing manufacturers will be going on. Just tell everyone to stock up on the necessities, eg. jeans, boots, and jerseys before then. It might be appropriate to boycott sandals altogether. After all, we can all survive in sneakers or bare feet for the warm season anyway.

We are presumptuous, we realize, but we are appointing you, the chairman of the boycott in you state. Please work on it, by contacting the appropriate people to assist you. If you have no desire to participate please pass this along to someone who does. As soon as possible please acknowledge this letter.

How can this be?

Things that need explaining on the University of Idaho campus:

How it can rain in November and not snow.

How students can pay for buildings which are appropriated for use as offices by the faculty.

How student body officials can claim to represent students and then pass legislation so they only have to take six credits maximum and still be classed as a fulltime student.

How teachers can all plan to have tests on the Monday following Thanksgiving vacation.

How there can only be 16 days until finals start.

How anyone with a final on the last day of finals will ever get any Christmas shopping done. — RUGG

Reader shocked

Argonaut: I imagine my surprise when I, a burheaded, clean all-american college student, read my favorite school newspaper only to find a new guest columnist, Mr. Anton Mysterioso, trying to capture the essence of Bruce Leary with a writing style vaguely resembling John Foley attempting to write in Bruce Leary's writing style, under an assumed name.

Why I was shocked — clean down to my lilly white toenails for Leary, to my mind, has always been a man of impressive genius, poetic imagination and above all, a man of forthright honesty, moral integrity and classical grace.

Such deliberate slams against such a worthy individual cannot go unnoticed, so I'm taking this opportunity to publically cancel my subscription to this newspaper on the grounds that it is unamerican, aids and abets known communists, and is guilty of father-raping, back-biting, bestiality-mongering, riot-inciting, masturbation in the first degree. On top of this, my homosexual nanny says "it ain't right."

Patriotism is . . .

Survey answers vary

The National Anthem, Paul Revere, and the Fourth of July. Some citizens never consider patriotism more than those trite symbols.

With conservatives and radicals, loving the country or living in exile, and a new national contest on where to display the latest American flag patches (On the shirt of a policeman's uniform or covering a tear in the oldest blue jeans?), it is easy to take refuge in the old cliches.

Interviews with a random assortment of university students get a different reaction however. When asked to define patriotism, they hesitate and reflect. They reply slowly and thoughtfully, never resorting to trite phrases or textbook answers. Their responses are personal and sincere, as varied and as American as apple pie.

The stars and stripes, rockets, and the Constitution.

One sophomore girl, majoring in home-economics, adds something more.

"I'm a registered voter, I back my country, and I salute the flag," she says.

A male graduate student offers, "Beyond drafting, I believe in my country. Yes, I'm patriotic."

And a junior forestry major concludes, "I love my country, I love my state, and I love my freedoms. But I'm not satisfied with them."

George Washington

George Washington, red, white, and blue, and bumper stickers printed "America, love it or leave it."

"I don't believe that slogan fully," the graduate student replies. "There are times when things go wrong that you should try to change. It depends on the situation if it's patriotic or not."

A freshman physical education major agrees. "If you love your country, you love your country, right? If you can't get along with it, don't run off. Try and change it, you'll get more accomplished."

"I like 'America, love it or change it,' a lot better," the forestry major says. "I don't think leaving solves anything."

Liberty Bell

The Liberty Bell, Washington, D.C., and American flag decals.

A sophomore girl, majoring in psychology, says decals and patches are alright. "Wearing a flag on a denim jacket really doesn't bother me. It acknowledges the fact that we have a flag. Most people don't take it as degrading."

A sophomore in chemical engineering feels differently. "If it's made into a piece of clothing, it's a desecration," he contends. "It depends on the way it's worn, but they shouldn't make shirts out of the flag."

Another sophomore comments, "I thought they were great for a while because they did show you were for principles. But then one side grabbed it and now they're too symbolized."

And the graduate student observes, "Small flags could be a good thing. But I wonder how many people use it as a joke. Is it patriotic or are they laughing at it?"

American Way

The American Way, Old Glory, and the Pledge of Allegiance.

"A pledge of allegiance is needed in every country," the psychology major says. "Especially for kids, to instill in them the fact that they have a country to serve."

"Of course, the wording is sometimes wrong. 'One nation, under God' is infringing on rights and freedom, yet it doesn't have to be thought of in that way. The pledge is necessary."

"It's overused," according to the chemical engineering major. "It gets to the point where the pledge doesn't mean anything any more. It's a ritual, saying it just to be saying it."

Another student goes even farther. "I don't think it should be taught. It's not serving a purpose now, I think it could die out because it's not doing anything anyway."

CHORD workshop set for couples

The Center for Human and Organizational Research and Development (CHORD), in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education at the University, is offering a human relations workshop for married and unmarried "committed" couples Dec. 3-5. This personal growth experience will provide couples with an opportunity to improve their relationship skills, according to Dr. John Hipple, coordinator of the workshop.

The basis of the laboratory design will be the T-group. Supplementing the "here and now" experience of the T-group will be theory sessions, skill practice, and developmental exercises.

Dr. Hipple emphasized that this program is not intended as group psychotherapy nor is it a substitute for psychological treatment. It is designed to focus on the growth of the individual in self-understanding and in increased effectiveness when relating to others.

The workshop will be conducted on campus at a cost of $20 per couple. Applications may be obtained in the Psychology Department office.

Eligibility extends to all members of the University community—faculty, students, staff, and administrators. Hipple also stressed that the workshop is not exclusively for married couples, but is intended to include all committed couples — boyfriends, girlfriends, and fiancées, as well as husbands and wives.

THE AMERICAN FLAG, a symbol known to all, is displayed now-a-days in all sorts of ways. Is this a display of patriotism or disrespect?

Ensemble concert scheduled Thursday

Forty-two students in eight musical ensembles will perform in a student chamber ensemble concert at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Music Building Recital Hall.

"This program aims to represent the best of wind, string and vocal performance," noted David E. Seiler, assistant professor of music. "Chamber music playing and singing is the high point of a musical experience. The students had to audition for the concert so the level of quality should be high," he added.

A freshman woodwind quintet composed of Rilla J. Berg, flute; Thomas A. Snyder, French horn; Julia E. Kindall, oboe; and Deborah A. Stivers, clarinet, will play.

Performing J. J. Quantz' baroque "Trio Sonata in C Major" will be Deborah L. Whitman, flute; Jack E. McDowell, harpsichord; and Linda V. Seiler, oboe.

Performing three songs by Franz Schubert are Craig E. Davis, Barry J. Finnell, John W. Poulson, Gene S. Bennett, B. Scott MacAllister, Richard M. Wilson, Michael C. McCreery, and John E. Bangle.

A sophomore woodwind quintet composed of P. Kathleen Downer, clarinet; Janet L. Kofoed, oboe; Christine L. Cogswell, flute; Kristine E. Gwinn, bassoon; and Bonnie M. Lagg, French horn, will perform "Three Shanties" by Malcolm Arnold.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

are on sale today at the SUB Information Desk. A block of 100 tickets only, purchased by the ASUI for Idaho students, are being offered at the lowered price of $4.50, according to Tom Slayton.

The Monday evening performance in the Spokane Coliseum of the opera will feature the original concert presentation with soloists, chorus, rock band and full orchestra. The key roles of Jesus, Judas Iscariot, and Mary Magdalene will be played by Robert Corff, Patrick Jude, and Edie Walker, respectively.

"Basically, the idea of the whole opera is to have Christ seen through the eyes of Judas, with Christ as a man, not as a god," according to Andrew Lloyd Webber, who wrote the music.

Tickets will be on sale in the SUB as long as they last.

"Die Fledermaus" rehearsals underway

Rehearsals are currently underway for the University of Idaho Opera Workshop production of Richard Strauss' comic opera "Die Fledermaus," to be performed Dec. 3-4 at the Music Building Recital Hall.

The seven students to be seen in the lively production are: Donna Bratt as Rosalinda, Lora L. Kidd as Prince Orlovsky, Gretchen M. Hagen as Adele, John L. Paulson as Faulk, B. Scott MacAllister as Alfred, Bruce L. Nyman as Frank, and M. John E. Bangle as Einstein.

Charles W. Walton, associate professor of music, is directing the opera.

Vandals open season at home

By Tom Coggins

"It's real hard to evaluate the type of ball club we're going to have this year," said assistant basketball coach John Smith about the 1971-72 Vandal netters. "Our first five or six ball games will tell us what we can do best."

The Vandals will get their first chance to find out when they open their season Wednesday at 8:05 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium against Whitworth College.

A basically inexperienced team will face Whitworth as only two players have seen action. Don Beane, 6'2", 180 lbs., senior guard started in a few games last year and will undoubtedly be a starter this year. Also seeing action last year was Paul Hardt, a 6'7" 200 lb. junior forward who is an excellent shooter and has good baseline moves to compliment his accurate left hook. Doug Hanson, a 6'6" 200 lb. junior forward saw very limited action last year, but has a good shot and has looked impressive in practice this year. Coach Smith says Hanson is pushing for a starting position on this year's squad.

The Vandals also acquired two junior college transfers in Carlos Perkins, a 6' guard from Northern Oklahoma, and Chris Clark, a 6' guard from NIJC. Perkins is extremely quick and handles the ball well, always with an eye for the open man. The coaching staff says he is the quickest guard Idaho has seen since Jerry Skaife. "Clark is the smartest defensive player on the team," says coach Smith. "He is also a very able shooter."

Another probable starter for the Vandals is 6'6" sophomore forward, Steve Ton. He is considered the best rebounder the Vandals have and isn't afraid to mix it up on the boards.

Idaho is not as physically strong as they have been in past years. Their strongness is their weakness, along with their inexperience. What they are short in inside strength and rebounding, they make up in overall quickness, which might help in the Vandal pressure type defense and their fast break. But obviously, you have to get the ball before you can start the fast break.

"We have to have better rebounding power," stated assistant coach Smith, "it's one of our weakest points."

The Vandals are basically a man to man defensive ball club, but will use the zone if the situation calls for it. Since the Vandals are smaller than any club they will play this year, their offense will be a control type offense, waiting for the good shot and taking the necessary time to set it up.

Also vying for a starting position is Marty Siegwain, a 6'7" sophomore transfer from the University of Washington. Siegwain will not be eligible until after semester break, but will be a probable starter at either forward or center. He is a real threat with a jump shot and possesses good speed.

Mike Lukasavich, the tallest man on the team at 7'2", is a sophomore center. Head Coach Wayne Anderson has plans to red-shirt Lukasavich for the present, allowing him time to adapt to the Vandal style of play and to prolong his eligibility.

Other members of the 13 man varsity squad are Lindy Hinkelman, a 6' sophomore guard; Jerry Musselman, a 6'2" sophomore guard; Don Almquist, a 6' junior guard; Carl Robinson, a 6'3" junior transfer from Palo Verde; and Adrian Wegner, a 6'3" forward.

Whitworth, a consistently good ball club, has three returning players and some junior college transfers to aid their game.

A PAULIST DOESN'T WAIT TO BE ORDAINED
INVOLVED.

If you think that ordination is something like graduation—and the time in between is similar to marking time—then you couldn't be more mistaken.

The Paulists were founded with the belief that each man is a member of the community and he contributes his own thing. Each is an individual with his own talents and he is given the freedom to use them in his own way. But not later. Now.

For instance, during the novitiate, novices work in such diverse areas as hospitals, vocational rehabilitation centers and Universities. They serve as assistant chaplains, co-retreat masters, student teachers and psychiatric aides.

Paulist Seminarians create recreational programs, direct "Days of Recollection" for CCD students, direct film series, experiment with the use of media in the liturgy as a preaching tool, originate and edit the Paulist Free Press, coordinate Lenten lectures and organize Home Masses, to mention just a few.

When you commit yourself to the Paulists, it isn't a someday thing. It's now. Today.

For more information about the Paulists write to: Rev. Donald C. Campbell, C.S.P., Vocation Director, Room 300.

Soccer Club wins NISL

The University of Idaho Soccer Club secured the championship in the Northwest Intercollegiate Soccer League by slipping past the University of Montana, 2-1. Proving to be the Vandals only real competitors for the crown, Montana's first half score was less than sufficient to hold down the second half scoring by Idaho.

On a rain soaked soccer field at Gonzaga University, Nov. 20, the NISL title was on the line. Montana jumped out first and drew blood with 22 minutes left in the first half. Chris Krauss of the Grizzlies fired a quick shot into the Idaho net, catching the Vandals off guard and stunned. An excellent defensive game by both teams continued as the ball travelled from one end of the field to the other without reaching paydirt.

Idaho broke the second half open after 30 minutes of play. On a corner kick by Mufid Saqqa, Nicos Rossides controlled the ball long enough to head it to Yea-Shung Lin who drilled it past the Montana goalie. The score was tied 1-1.

Realizing that the game was not theirs yet, Montana fired up their offense again, but the Idaho defense held tight and stole the ball repeatedly. Sixteen minutes later, on a drive that started in their own territory, inside right forward, Jose Almeida took another corner kick from Saqqa and curved the ball perfectly into the net. No one touched the winning goal and the final score was 2-1 Idaho.

Consistent with the trend toward winning teams at Idaho this year, the Soccer Club, with but a handful of spectators and a terrific amount of determination, deserve the respect and congratulations of the student body.

THE SOUND OF WINTER . . . and the beauty, too, are portrayed in Warren Miller's annual 90-minute ski film screening at the SUB Ballroom on Dec. 5 at 7 and 9:15 p.m. Europe and Japan and people and fun, mostly, are what the film is all about. For the beauty of a moment in time and sound be sure to see it.

Public swimming at the Swim Center will be cancelled from 7-9 p.m. today due to athletic competition.
