

Hartung stresses

Additional funding necessary for U of I

by Libby Matthews

"I don't think people realize how desperately bad off we are," said President Hartung in an interview concerning his testimony for higher education at the Boise legislature January 5.

Regents and the Board of Education presented a lump sum of $32,275,104 for education to the Appropriations and Finance Committee. President Hartung, along with the presidents of sister institutions, were resource people for the committee. Each president highlighted the budget concerns of his respective institution.

In his testimony Hartung stressed the absolute necessity for more money for higher education. To support his case he cited facts and figures as to our present financial state.

The legislature has been considering the possibility of enacting a continuation budget. This form of budgeting allows for a constant sum every year.

Growing slowly

There is a common feeling that the university is growing slowly so her need for money is not very great, according to Hartung.

Although the U of I has had a jagged growth, the university has grown 35 per cent over the last seven years. This increase corresponds with the national average of 5 per cent a year. The funds allotted for higher education have increased, but the rate of increase is below the rate of growth.

"The University has tried to its best ability to preserve the education process," said Hartung.

Hartung explained to the legislature the areas where the University suffered to insure its academic excellence. He cited that library funding is at the same level as it was for 1969.

"The appropriations for the library have not kept pace with the growth of the student body, the increase in book prices or salaries for help," said Hartung. "Already the university has 50 per cent less money to spend on capital outlay (typewriters, furniture, etc.) than it did back in 1969."

The salary increases have not kept up with the cost of living increase at the national level. The salary situation is worse than it was three years ago, according to the President.

Delayed projects

The University has had to delay maintenance projects and put the funds for these projects into academic areas.

"We can't go any further on delaying maintenance," said Hartung. "We have to get the money to shovel and salt walks and fix roofs, or the safety of the students is endangered. Unless we have a significant increase (14 per cent) in the budget, the money won't be available at the maintenance level."

"I can't let the buildings fall down. If the legislature doesn't give us the money, I either have to ask those who are using University funds or cut back on programs. Already we have cut one or two courses in industrial education," he added.

Hartung continued to say that Letters and Science will be hurt the hardest in the long run. Professional men (lawyers, engineers, etc.) support their individual schools.

"Letters and Science blends into the background in a budget squeeze because they don't have an organized public to fall back on. As long as there are adequate funds, the administration can assure this area enough money, but in a squeeze L and S is affected greater than other educational areas," he said.

Citizen effort

The citizen effort in support of higher education ranks in the top ten nationally, but Idaho doesn't have the tax base to create the money for higher education. If the public institutions don't get enough money from the taxes then they have to solicit private individuals for support, Hartung explained.

"It is hard to raise money from private sources for public schools because the people believe the public schools are already receiving enough money," said Hartung.

Expressing his personal opinion, the president remarked, "Having lived in other states, the Idaho people aren't taxed as highly as people in other states in relation to a total tax picture. The state has to face up to a revision of the tax program."

On the whole, Hartung found the legislators to be very sympathetic to his plea. What the legislators have to deal with is finding the much needed money.

"It is no longer true that if we don't get the needed appropriations, things won't happen," said Hartung. "We are too close to the border on accreditation in some areas to handle any cutbacks. This time something will definitely happen."

$108,266 damage caused by flood; plans made to tear down prefabs

by Rod B. Gramer

In terms of dollars, the consequences of the flood that hit the university have totaled up to about $108,266, according to Frank McCreary, director of university relations.

In breaking down the figure, damage estimated at $61,500 was accounted to the prefabricated houses in Park Village.

"The prefabs are going to be torn down as soon as we can find a place to put up other housing," says McCreary. "These houses were obsolete years ago. They are fire hazards, the walls are thin, and the wiring is bad."

Many of the students don't want the university to tear the prefabs down, especially those with children and those who have to attend school after this semester.

As one Park Village resident put it, "Where are we going to live cheaper and as conveniently close to school as we do now?"

"We have privacy here and nice neighbors," said another woman.

Many of the married students have been looking for new accommodations but in most instances the housing has been less adequate and more expensive.

"I am very upset, the flood wasn't as bad as having to move. The rent is low in Park Village and we have two more years at school," said one student.

The Hart family is among those who are dismayed.

"I wish the university could just let the prefabs go and let those families who live here stay until they finish school," said Ms. Hart.

Hart says he took a survey in the Village and discovered there would only be four families left in Park Village, that the university would have to find places for by the time he left.

"The university is probably afraid for us to live here. If anything happened they would be held libel, because the houses are substandard," said Hart.

"This is exactly it," said McCreary.

"We have already stated that those houses are substandard, if anything was to happen to the people living there the university could be held libel."

McCreary feels that there is a chance that the federal government will declare parts of Idaho affected by the flood, a disaster area.

"If we get federal funds we could build new homes for the married students in South Hills. The rent would remain comparatively low, and perhaps a park would be built there for the children," said the director.

Without the funds, Park Village residents will have to find new homes.

"A solution would be to convert old Hays Hall into married student apartments," suggested McCreary.

"The whole thing depends on funding. If we have the money, we can build new places, but if not, we'll have to find other places," said McCreary.

Earth Scope

BOISE AP — A bill which would prevent cigarette, cigar or pipe smoking at meetings or public hearings of any state, county or local government agency has been prepared for introduction in the Idaho Legislature this week.

ANCHORAGE AP — Attorneys have been ordered not to discuss the case of three Soviet fishing fleet officers charged with violating the U.S. 12-mile fisheries zone. The news blackout followed speculation of a possible out-of-court settlement.

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan AP — Diplomats in Rawalpindi believe an avalanche of nations will recognize Bangladesh now that Pakistan has quit the British Commonwealth. Australia and New Zealand have led the way.

WASHINGTON AP — President Nixon's administration has no real plans to seek additional taxes despite deficits that led to a record request for increasing the national borrowing limit, two top fiscal spokesmen said yesterday.

COEUR D'ALENE AP — At least three persons were injured in an explosion of undetermined origin at the presto log plant section of Potlatch Forests, Inc., yesterday.

BOISE AP — Rep. John Edwards, R-Council and legislative sponsor of a plan to provide 100 per cent state funding of the basic public school program, is speaker for this week's Idaho Press Club luncheon.

LONDON AP — Bernadette Devlin assaulted Home Secretary Reginald Maudling in the House of Commons, punching and scratching him and pulling his hair. The incident occurred as Maudling was making a statement on the killing of 13 Northern Ireland civilians by British soldiers.

Funding debated in House

BOISE, Idaho AP — Some political by-play erupted on the floor of the Idaho House today when Rep. Robert Haakenson, D-Coeur d'Alene, charged that the Republican majority appeared to be "coming up with promises instead of dollars" in funding education.

Haakenson is a member of the House Subcommittee on Educational Funding, which is drafting a plan for 100 per cent state financing of a basic educational program.

He said it appeared that tax measures needed to finance the state funding would not gain needed Republican support. But Rep. Terry Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, countered that Gov. Cecil D. Andrus' proposed budget "left little or nothing" for education.

Crapo said Andrus was asking for a 19 per cent increase in the budget but public schools would receive a net gain of only $3 million.

"I think education is entitled to its share of the increase, too," Crapo said.

Big Name dead

"There is no such thing as Big Name Entertainment," said Randy Luce, head of the SUB dance committee.

Luce cited the lack of a budget as the main reason for the non-existent entertainment. "Groups would have to play without a (monetary) guarantee, and not many are willing to work under those conditions," Luce stated.

Normally money is budgeted for Big Name Entertainment through the ASUI. "This year no money was budgeted because of the losses of last year, and the senate didn't want to take money from the general reserve," said Luce.

Referendum results

According to Luce, students last spring in a referendum expressed a desire to continue big name entertainment. Ignoring this, the senate chose to withdraw funds for the program.

In planning for the future, Luce said, "We are trying to work out a program to study Big Name Entertainment. We want to establish what our limits are, set up a program, and present it to the senate this spring."

So far, the only band that has been brought in by the committee has been Flash Cadillac and the Continental Kids. Plans for a western week the last of February are now being drawn up, however. According to Luce, the week

KUOI asks funds for AP teletype

KUOI needs $600 to bring better news to the University of Idaho campus. The $600 would buy an AP teletype which Larry Doss, manager of KUOI, feels would give reporters more time to cover local news and give a broader coverage of national news. A bill requesting the funds is before the ASUI Finance Committee.

KUOI now has just one news program a day at 12:30 p.m. With the use of an AP teletype there could be three news programs a day at 12:30, 6, and 9 p.m., Doss said. The 10 minute programs would include national regional and local news. Headlines and special news bulletins would be featured at 10 minutes before and 20 minutes after the hour.

Nutrition service starts tomorrow

Nightline Nutrition, a new service of the Nightline Crisis Clinic goes into operation tomorrow.

Between 2:30 p.m. and 2:30 a.m. you can call 882-0230 with any questions you have regarding nutrition.

There has been a lot of controversy recently over such things as whether or not Vitamin C will prevent colds, whether Vitamin E keeps a person young or if organically grown food is better.

Some advocate eating hardly anything at all.

Kathy Williams, a dietetics senior and a Nightline volunteer came up with the idea for a Nightline nutritional service.

"When people know you're in dietetics and nutrition they have all sorts of questions" she said. "On campus, every dietetics major gets queries every day."

Ms. Shirley Newcomb, associate professor of home economics is supervising the program.

"I feel professional dietitians have a responsibility to the community," she said. "Good nutrition is vital. We have a real contribution to make and we can help people".

All questions are welcome, from how drugs affect nutritional status to advice on planning good, cheap nourishing meals.

will include western entertainment at the SUB, a presentation by the Calgary Stampede, and a dance at the SUB featuring western bands.

Like Flash Cadillac

"The week will be something along the Flash Cadillac line," said Luce. "It's just something different to do."

Plans are being made to bring the rock group Cheyenne to the university on Feb. 4, according to Luce. This Northwest group has two records out, one titled "Love and Hate." The group will also be releasing two new records next month.

Negotiations are also being made with an agent in the hopes of bringing either John Denver or Sha-Na-Na to the campus this spring, said Luce.

Classes shortened Thursday for Indian affairs speaker

Vine Deloria, author of the best-selling book "Custer Died for Your Sins" and defender of the legal rights of American Indians, will speak at 11 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 3, at the Student Union Ballroom.

Classes will be shortened Thursday morning to release students and faculty at 10:50 a.m. for the public events committee program. The morning schedule will go as follows for this Thursday only: first period, 8 a.m. to 8:35 a.m.; second period, 8:45 a.m. to 9:20 a.m.; third period, 9:30 a.m. to 10:05 a.m.; fourth period, 10:15 a.m. to 10:50 a.m.

Deloria will discuss the rationale and results of the U.S. government's termination policy in Indian affairs, a policy aimed at phasing out the special relationship between the Federal government and Indian tribes.

Deloria is presently an instructor of ethnic studies at Western Washington State College, Bellingham, and has established a law firm at Washington, D.C.

He is the author of two books, "We Talk, You Listen" and "Custer Died for Your Sins," dealing with the external forces on Indian people and their affairs. In addition, he edited a book entitled "In Utmost Good Faith," which examines legal rulings related to Indian affairs.

Deloria is a Sioux Indian and has dedicated most of his career to Indian law. He has served as executive secretary of the National Council of American Indians and as a staff associate for United Scholarship Services at Denver, which administers scholarships for native American students. He has received the Anisfield-Wolfe Award in Race Relations for his work in Indian affairs.

Ludlow announces candidacy

Charging that Rep. Orval Hansen is a "rubberstamp" for Nixon's policies, Willis Ludlow, activist campus minister at Idaho State University has announced his candidacy for the 2nd Congressional District position.

Ludlow, hoping to win the Democratic nomination in August, is serious in his campaign according to Stan Thomas, of the Campus Christian Center.

"Willis feels strongly that Idaho people should have the chance to vote for the type of leadership which he represents," said Thomas, a personal friend.

In addition to activities as an ecumenical minister, Ludlow has written for the Intermountain Observer in the field of civil rights, and has tested the limits of press freedom by submitting to arrest for that publication. Recently, he has demonstrated in protest of the renewal of bombing in Southeast Asia by the Nixon Administration.

Editorial Opinion

If the war should end. . .

If the war in Viet Nam ever ends and optimistically it will soon, the president elected in 1972 will have to confront some 75,000 deserters and draft dodgers scattered in exile throughout the globe; many of whom want to come home.

As it is now those who come home must face court martial or up to three years imprisonment. Some will probably come back despite the penalty. Home and family exist in the United States and for some the jail sentence may be less punishment than permanent exile from home. Others, completely shucking the system, may never come back to a social structure which forced them to leave in the first place.

The problem arises with those who want to come back but because they feel the sentence is undeserved or too great; will not. The government could ignore them and let them come back at will; dolling out lashes as the sheep come back to the fold.

However the paradox between social thinking and social action would be too great to ignore. With most of the population now opposing the war on moral grounds the dodgers and deserters can hardly be condemned for what has been termed "premature morality."

But what of those who had to serve and those who died? A war without glory like Viet Nam is sadder than most; even the purple hearted finds no ticker tape parades when he comes home. The deep-gutted patriotic rationale that makes soldiers heroes instead of compulsory criminals seems transparent and fallible rationale when a nation begins discussing morality. The wounded and dead young men seem to have died and suffered, to some, even more senselessly when those who refused to fight and rejected patriotic values are welcomed home without repudiation.

Yet it appears to be a case of misplaced blame. If we seek to penalize those who recognized a useless war or recognized the irrationality of war in an age of supposed sophistication in thinking we are looking for a scapegoat. Someone must take the blame for the thousands dead but those who died cannot be vindicated by punishing those who would not kill or die because of personal values before the majority made morality acceptable.

If we punish those who would not serve we are, in essence, saying they should have died too no matter how senseless we agree the war is or has become.

The ultimate guilt does not lie with those who criticized the system by leaving it but in the system itself. Many of those who did serve in Viet Nam no doubt felt it justified service and their glory can be their own. Others who served have no real justification besides the unavoidable (legally) draft.

The solution then, besides the end to wars, is a military service which takes only those who want to serve and amnesty now for those whose values were slow in being accepted.

An editorial poesy

by Bob Scribner

Twiddle-dee-dee, oh lonesome me.
What is there to do that's free?
Students come, and students go
And every inch they move, costs, you know.

I came here with limited means.
Cost ignorant of making the scenes:
Twenty-five cents here, fifty for that,
But a dollar's where it's at.
All required for necessities of life
(i.e. poverty and strife).
Poor students come to get some learnin',
But instead, get a burnin'!
For entertainment and social needs
They can only afford the weeds;
The weeds of society: TV, doesn't cost
But, in essence, is intelligently lost.
We must then turn to the pillars of the campus

But even here we find prices which bleed us.
Nothing it has to bring a little joy
Is reasonably priced: book, lecture, game or toy. . .
So what is there to do, except leave some day.
Soon, perhaps, if the costs of living don't allay.

Whither Democracy.

Anyone who has watched the ASUI enateover a period of time or has participated as a member of that body has noticed that new senates and new senators take awhile to orient to their new positions. Three weeks is not enough time for any senator especially a new one to even pretend to be effective. It is not even long enough for him or her to sort through the senates revised Roberts Rules of Order.

Yet as soon as Jane Anderson resigned petitions emerged calling for a new election despite the fact that a general senate election is to be held in March. The main reason Alan Dobe and others are circulating the petitions appears to be to insure democracy in the ASUI. One can't very well attack that. However, considering the relative weakness of a new senator the short time left and the $300 approximately of student fees which would have to go for the cost of the premature election (see Dobe's complaint against misuse of funds) one wonders about a motive based purely on principle.

In all, the request for an election now when the senator elected would have very little power and less voice because of his lack of background seems to add to the ineffective image the senate is often attributed anyway.

Food service unsatisfactory

editor's note — Mr. Hilzer's complaint is being looked into by Al Merkle.

Dear Editor:

As graduate students living in the dormitory system, we are daily confronted with unsatisfactory and aggravating living conditions which tend to impair both our health and academic pursuits. Four specific deficiencies are listed below in the order of gravity of the problem:

1. FOOD

The Wallace Complex food service is unsatisfactory. Specifically, the evening meals turned out by this dining hall are both unappetizing and undernourishing. To demonstrate this point, we would like to invite you to be our guest on any night in which one of the below listed meats is served as the main course:

- 1) braised cube steak
- 2) swiss steak
- 3) ground or grilled chuck steak
- 4) breaded veal cutlets
- 5) veal turnovers
- 6) fish

The best that can be said of any of these preparations is that they are tasteless; the worst, that they are nauseating. Generally, grease is used by the cooks to a sickening extent in preparation of both meats and potatoes. If such items are actually eaten, indigestion is the certain result.

It is our opinion that reform of the present University operated meal service to the point where satisfactory meals would be routinely produced is highly unlikely. We would favor introduction into Wallace of a privately operated food service. However, we would certainly be appreciative of any corrective measures whatsoever which you might be able to implement.

2. WAITING LINES FOR MEALS

Due to poor planning and general incompetence of the cafeteria staff, it is not unusual to spend 1/2 hour waiting in line to get into the cafeteria.

This situation appears to have been brought about by the closure of the small cafeteria on the west side of the complex, and its conversion into a snack bar. Since the snack bar doesn't operate during meal hours, we see no reason why this room should not be used as a cafeteria during the heaviest serving hours. This would shorten the time spent waiting in line considerably, a fact which anyone who ate in Wallace last year when the small cafeteria was open can verify.

3. GRADUATE DORM

Shoup Hall supposedly is a graduate dorm. Only graduate students or those over the age of 21 should be living here. The reasons for this policy are obvious; serious students both need and prefer co-residents of like inclination. Serious study cannot be accomplished in the typical undergraduate, madhouse dormitory.

This year the housing authority has been very lax in enforcing the original policies which made Shoup a desirable hall, and has placed many young men, below the age of 21 in the hall who appear to have little interest in academic pursuits. The atmosphere has accordingly grossly deteriorated to the point that the accomplishment of any study in the hall is a major feat.

We would like to see the age limits again enforced by the housing office.

4. SOUND TRUCKS

Blaring sound trucks carrying inane and unwelcome messages are both a nuisance and a shameful abuse of free speech.

We would like to see them banned from the campus. Any functions they may fulfill can be sufficiently met by the campus newspaper.

Thanks for any assistance you may be able to give us. The invitation for "dinner" is on the level. If you care to risk it, please contact me at 885-6064, Shoup Hall Room 218, and I will check the menu for the appropriate date.

Yours truly,
John J. Hilzer

Nixon's strategy

Nicandri Looks at Viet Nam

Richard Nixon is a master tactician. Stylistically he is one of the most proficient and graceful presidents the United States has had in the twentieth century. The content of his politics has always left much to be desired amongst considerable elements in the population, but as a manipulator of events, he has few diplomatic peers in our history.

If nothing else, Nixon has disproven the Newtonian adaption of "force" theories to politics; i.e., that mankind is pushed and led by broad, deterministic movements, uncontrollable by man, either individually or collectively. Richard Nixon has made history in the most literal sense; what happens has been his choice, in almost total disregard (unfortunately sometimes) of the popular currents of domestic and international thought.

Private peace proposals

Nixon's private (made public) peace proposals are certainly more comprehensive than the usual fare — protecting the Thieu regime (which in itself makes more sense than the old Johnson rhetoric of saving democracy for the apparently beleaguered Jeffersonian Liberals of Southeast Asia). There are some interesting tidbits in the new plan. The resignation of Thieu one month before an election is an innovation, although one wonders whether Thieu's power in Vietnam grows out of the legalistic rubric of Constitutionalism as head of state, or his control of the army. The proposition that the Vietcong be included in the electoral process should not be a surprising concession. The United States could not have intervened for ten years in order to secure self-determination for the South Vietnamese and then limit the participation. The results of such an election could be disconcerting for the American government. Thieu still has to accede to this point, or the whole discussion would be moot.

The ironic aspect of Nixon's avowal of the troop withdrawal deadline clause is the fact that this proposal bears a striking resemblance to the Hatfield-McGovern Resolution of 1970, which the President dutifully rejected in public while Kissinger was suggesting the same in Paris privately. Two other aspects of the Nixon plan are not as progressive as they appear at first glance. 1. United States would pull out all troops, but Nixon is doing that anyway. 2. The POW's would be returned within six months of the deadline. The communists never had anything to gain and still don't, by releasing the prisoners before American participation in the war ended. Defining "American participation" is the new problem. For example, Nixon did not rule out reemployment of air support from Thailand or aircraft carriers in the latest plan. The Communists may hesitate on the prisoner issue even after all American troops are gone unless reins are put on the U.S. Airforce as well. Thus, unless Nixon makes a firm commitment to forsake the war effort completely we are unlikely to see any prisoner release.

Rebuilding southeast Asia

Finally, the President proposes to help rebuild Southeast Asia by supplying reconstruction money. This policy is in the very finest American tradition of "conscience money" which has followed American plunder and aggression thru the acquisition of the Florida Mexican Cession, and the Panama Canal Zone. It should also be pointed out, that the rehabilitation of North Vietnam (as with Germany and Japan) might indeed that area to the American economy. . . . What concessions might American business get in return for a $2½ billion loan from the North Vietnamese? Nixon could save the taxpayers money and the Vietnamese misery, if he ended the war rather than indulging in humanistic charades.

Nixon's recent oratory is not bereft of domestic ramifications. Throughout his administration he has effectively quieted his critics through several maneuvers: troop cuts; creating diversions (China summit); fogging the issue with rhetoric ("Vietnamization," "winding down the war," using the POW's as emotional and diplomatic pawns); or appealing for national unity (the Great Silent Majority speech). Last week's address was another coup. By acknowledging Kissinger's private talks of two years length, we find that the President has been pursuing many avenues his liberal critics in the Senate have been suggesting. Nixon has been much more adept at defusing the Vietnam War as an issue than the anti-war movement has been at ending the same.

For the second time in six months the Democratic aspirants for the Presidency have had their scaffolding demolished. Criticism of the President regarding his latest proposals could be disastrous for anyone left of Henry Jackson. The American people as a whole are not ready to believe their government deliberately deceives the citizenry. If Muskie, McGovern or Kennedy doubt the President's righteousness now, after he has made a play for national patriotism, those Democrats will hurt their own creditability with the public, not Nixon's.

As for Hanoi and the NLF, it seems hard to believe that after 30 years of struggle they should submit now, especially in light of U.S. withdrawal. Their probable course is to assume a low profile, regroup, wait out American withdrawal, then after such a reprieve renew the attack when a rupture appears in the Thieu hegemony. Since it is highly unlikely that any rescalation with troops by an American President would be tolerated by public opinion, the war will be restored to the stage of 1964-65 — when the Communists were on the verge of victory.

Hanoi has two good reasons for refusing to negotiate a settlement with the United States. 1. Withdrawal of American troops cannot help but return the Communists to a position of military superiority. 2. Previous ventures into negotiation — the French settlement in 1945 and the Geneva Convention of 1954 — both ended in Western perfidy. Having been cheated twice of their military accomplishments, it is unlikely the Communists will agree to any negotiated terms, Nixon's or whoever, unless they hold an irreversible military superiority.

Dobey Criticizes ASUI

Remember that old doctrine of in loco parentis, under which university administrations acted "in place of the parent" in running the students' affairs, while the students had nothing to say about it? Well, they did away with that idea a long time ago. Right? Through the elected representatives of the ASUI, all students now have a voice in the running of their own affairs. Right?

The absurdity of this last statement will be apparent to every student who reads it. Considering that the purpose of the ASUI is to give the students an effective voice, it is reasonable to ask, "What went wrong?"

Whatever may be wrong with the ASUI, it is not a lack of funds. Those who run the ASUI administer annually close to a quarter of a million dollars of your money. With the cooperation of the Administration, the ASUI forcibly collects $28.50 from each student every year ($14.25 at each semester's registration), which provides most of the ASUI budget. The compulsory nature of this fee is indicative of the conviction of those who run the ASUI that they know better how to spend your money than you yourself.

ASUI officials are invariably elected by only a tiny minority of the students. Senators are not elected from their respective living groups or departments; they are all elected at large. Once elected, they are assigned, in a rather haphazard manner, to represent different living groups. The task of representing large numbers of people whom the senator does not know would be extremely difficult even for a conscientious person, and most senators do not make a very distinguished attempt at it.

As far as I have been able to determine, my own living group, including about 60 students, does not even have a senator assigned to represent it. No doubt this state of affairs arises from an oversight rather than a deliberate attempt to deny 60 students a voice. However, this situation is symptomatic of the lackadaisical attitude of the ASUI power toward representing the students.

Considering that most of the funds for the ASUI operations come out of our pockets, it is reasonable for us to ask what the power structure of the ASUI is doing with our money. Contrary to popular belief, the ASUI is not responsible for maintaining the SUB. Funds for the SUB come from a separate budget. The same is true of the recreation budget which goes to support various recreational activities. What, then, are we getting for our quarter of a million dollars?

Darned little. When looking at the ASUI's 52-page budget, one gets the impression that the ASUI power structure has more money than it knows what to do with.

To take an outstanding example, a huge chunk ($55,000) of our money goes for supporting the golf course. It is true that the ASUI received $30,000 in revenue from the golf course. However, this $30,000 is not returned to the students, but is simply dropped into a bottomless pit known as the ASUI budget. Thus, the actual cost to the students is still $55,000 per year. That's about $9.00 apiece, assuming that you don't want to use the golf course. If you actually want to use it, it will cost you more.

Perhaps we should look at the bright side, however, and realize that if the ASUI did not receive that $30,000 from the golf course, Mary Ruth Mann and friends would probably take the money out of our pockets with the help of the Administration. Thus, in a sense we do get some benefit from the golf course, although still not enough to cover the $55,000.

In view of the way the ASUI power structure wastes the students' money without doing much to serve them, one might wonder why the students do not march resolutely to the polls, throw the rascals out, and elect officials who would see that the funds were spend more in the students' interest. To the contrary, we find that most students do not vote in ASUI elections, and few students bother to run for office. Those who do run are usually undistinguished and seem to be motivated by one or both of the following: (1) having a desire to spend other people's money, and (2) being encouraged by friends in the power structure who would like to have them in the Senate. Both these factors help to produce a more cliquish and isolated ASUI.

The reason for student apathy toward the ASUI is easy to understand. Many students feel, quite justifiably, that the ASUI is not effective and will not do much to affect their personal welfare. They therefore do not concern themselves much with the ASUI.

Thus, we are caught in a vicious circle. The ineffectiveness of the ASUI promotes student apathy toward the organization. The apathy of the students results in few students voting in elections and lackluster candidates running for office. This situation in turn ensures that the ASUI power structure will be more cliquish, isolated, and ineffective.

Tenure explained

Tenure is a much talked of, but little understood policy of the university.

Tenure is a condition of presumed continuous employment for the faculty member. Tenure is only given after a probationary period has expired and can be terminated only for adequate cause, except in the case of retirement or under special circumstances because of financial exigencies.

Although tenure itself is not automatic, it is mandatory that a decision as to tenure of a faculty member is made after a certain period of time. The period of time before tenure is considered depends on the academic rank of the faculty member. Professors during their third year, associate professors during their fourth year and assistant professors during their fifth year of employment must be considered for tenure.

The rank (professor, etc.) of a faculty member depends on his qualifications and the openings for this type of appointment. Only in special incidences can tenure be conferred before completion of the normal probationary period. Although the university has this option, it has not made it a practice to utilize the option, according to Bruce Bray, faculty secretary.

Year-to-year

A member of the non-tenured faculty is appointed on a year-to-year basis. The chairmen of this department must submit an evaluation of each non-tenured faculty member to the dean. This evaluation, along with the opinion of higher administrators will be used as one basis for recommendation for reappointment or non-reappointment. The responsibility of proving an individual's merit rests with the individual before tenure is granted.

Any conduct by a faculty member detrimental to the University such as criminality or unprofessional conduct; failure to obey the section 33-3776 of the Idaho code, which deals with campus disorders; failure to meet his faculty responsibilities and duties all constitute reasons for not granting tenure.

Blossom asks removal of marijuana penalties

An initiative that would remove all criminal penalties for possession of marijuana was filed by a group called "BLOSSOM" in Olympia, Wash. last month.

BLOSSOM, (Basic Liberation of Smokers and Sympathizers of Marijuana) consists of 15 chapters throughout Washington that are working to obtain over 100,000 signatures of registered voters by July of this year.

The aim of the initiative is not to promote the use of marijuana, for it states that advertising the drug would constitute a misdemeanor.

A primary goal of the measure asks for the mandatory parole of all convicted marijuana offenders now serving sentences.

According to a release by the Associated Press, Stephen Wilcox, co-chairman of the group said, "Education of the public will be one of our main concerns. Present legal and medical information leads to the inescapable conclusion that putting our youths in jails for marijuana is far more harmful than the actual use."

Sponsors said if prosecution is no longer required for marijuana usage, authorities can spend their time concentrating on the true hard drug problem.

"Presently BLOSSOM is trying to raise $15,000 to cover costs of printing initiatives, advertising and distributing material throughout the state," said Wilcox, a resident of Olympia.

BLOSSOM patches and t-shirts are being sold to raise the necessary funds.

The method for evaluating those eligible for tenure involves several steps. First, the department chairmen and candidate for tenure fill out evaluation forms and present supportive material. Then each member of the tenure faculty of a department fills out an evaluation of the candidate with specific information.

The evaluation form covers such areas as the candidate's contribution to his department, university program, etc. After completing these forms, they are returned to the chairman and then to the dean of the college. The dean, with assistance of a college committee (if the college decides on such a committee) adds their recommendation and forwards the total file to the President.

The Regents, with the recommendation of the President then takes action on the promotion to permanent tenure status.

Grievance procedures

A candidate who doesn't receive tenure may initiate grievance procedures through the Faculty Affairs Committee. The procedure usually deals only with the university's failure to meet the designated dates for termination of employment.

The calendar for notification as to non-reappointment varies with the amount of time spent on the faculty. It can be no later than March 1 for the first academic year of service or 3 months in advance of termination during an academic year.

Notification of non-reappointment during the second year of employment can be decided on no later than Dec. 15, or 6 months before the termination during an academic year. After two years or more of service a faculty member must be given at least twelve months' notice of his non-renewed contract.

Policy change required for alcohol on campus

Changing the university policy on alcohol to be consistent with the city and state laws will have to be the first step toward allowing beer and liquor on campus, according to a recent study conducted by the ASUI Attorney-General's office.

"I see no legal problems if the university policy toward individual consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus is changed consistently with the laws of the city of Moscow and the State of Idaho," explained Lucinda Weiss, a second year Idaho law student, who conducted the study. Ms. Weiss added, however, that she saw no possibility of licensed sale of liquor, other than beer, by the university.

The report was divided into two main areas: the allowance of consumption of alcohol on the University of Idaho campus, and the sale of alcoholic beverages in university facilities. The Moscow City Code, Title V deals primarily with licensing, and Title VI deals with Police Regulation and General Offenses.

Concerning individual consumption in dormitories, fraternities and sorority houses, and other campus living groups, so long as self-regulation yields compliance with all state laws and municipal ordinances, there is no specific prohibition of the consumption of alcohol on the campus.

Section 6-9-1 of the Moscow City Code seems to prohibit consumption on any school grounds or in school buildings including those of the University. Section 5-13-11, however, prohibiting sales near school grounds, specifically uses the word "university". It was therefore felt that "university" was purposely excluded from Section 6-9-1.

Another problem that arose in the study was Section 5-14-1 of the City Code which governs the issuance of liquor licenses, as opposed to beer licenses, that would prohibit the university from obtaining a liquor license.

The sale of beer in the present university stadium is prohibited by Section 5-13-3 or the City Code, prohibiting sales except in buildings with four walls and a roof. Sales in Memorial Gymnasium during basketball games, while satisfying the section requirement, might be ill-advised, according to Ms. Weiss because of the cramped quarters and the problem of refuse and liquid spilled or thrown onto the playing floor with the resulting threats of personal injury and university liability.

In addition to this the selling or serving of beer in the IUB or Memorial Gymnasium brings up a point covered in Section 6-1-46 of the City Code which prohibits open containers of beer or liquor in "public places." The city and police might well consider these two locations to be "public places" within the meaning of the ordinance," said Ms. Weiss.

Section 5-13-11 would be most likely a flat prohibition of the sale of beer or any other liquor on the campus at the present time. It specifically applies to the university. The code prohibits "any spiritous liquor of any type be sold within three hundred feet of the yards or ground of any church, school or university, public or private..."

Housing committee requests views on living conditions

To discover what the students feel about their housing is a major goal of the Committee on Housing Regulations. According to Ron Ball, chairman of the committee, questionnaires are now being distributed among students living in university residential housing and off campus. These questionnaires will then be compared and discussed by the committee to see if any improvements can be made for university dorm living.

The on-campus student questionnaires involve such items as food, both quality and service, and the arrangement of rooms. Opinions were called for on coed living and also on apartment dormitories in which there would be individual cooking and sanitary facilities.

The housing committee is composed of six university students who feel they are well aware of dorm living. It's job is to advise the ASUI President on matters concerning housing such as structural and regulatory conditions. After the committee submits its recommendations to the president, they can either be discussed and acted upon by the senate or dropped, whichever the president sees fit to do.

General Faculty action approves new degree and minority statement

The General Faculty approved a degree of Bachelor of General Studies at their Thursday meeting. The motion that passed read "effective with the 1972-73 academic year, add general studies as an authorized major leading to the degree of General Studies.

General university requirements for the baccalaureate degree apply except that B.G.S. students are required to earn a minimum of forty-eight credits in courses number 300 and above, and not more than forty credits in any one subject field may be counted in the 128 credits required for the degree.

Robert W. Jones explained the purpose of the B.G.S. degree to the meeting.

"This B.G.S. degree is for the student who sees something that isn't in any existing university program and wants to put his own program together," said Robert W. Jones, Geology.

The faculty also accepted a general statement on the university's stand on minority groups. This statement will help guide the Juntura Committee in its responsibilities and dealings with governmental agencies and foundations.

Fear was expressed by some of the faculty that the sentence was too vague and made it look like there is a separate standard for certain students.

Frank Seaman asked the faculty for a moral commitment from the University to help those who are disadvantaged. He compared this sentence to the one on the inside of the Administration building referring to the goal of the University. Both are general moral commitments and not specific courses of action.

The faculty approved the statement which reads "The general policy of the University of Idaho, as it relates to minority cultures or educationally disadvantaged segments of our nation's citizenry, is to create a campus environment that will allow for their recognition by the faculty and general student body in a way that will afford these students a better opportunity to compete and attain an education in keeping with their individual ability and concern."

The faculty affirmed granting classics professor, Austin M. Lashbrook a Professor Emeritus of Foreign Language.

Reflections on transcendental meditation

By Stella Byrd

What is it that makes a person tick? What makes a person want to get up in the morning? Could it be wanting to go to school or to go to his job, or is one simply bored with sleeping? How would it be to get up in the morning feeling completely wonderful, relaxed, and comfortable? Very few people get up with this attitude, having to face the every day humdrum life that looks you in the eye.

Wouldn't it be nice to rid yourself of all your worries and clear your head out for a change? To live each day to its full capacity and be able to use one's full potential in thought and action — to experience increased happiness and success in one's activity of daily life can be reached simply by transcendental meditation.

"Transcendental meditation is a natural technique which allows the conscious mind to experience increasingly more subtle states of thought until the source of thought, the unlimited reservoir of energy and creative intelligence, is reached. This simple practice expands the capacity of the conscious mind and a man is able to use his full potential in all fields of thought and action," according to the Students International Meditation Society.

It is natural for every man to want to develop his potential and evolve his life. This development is easy and becomes automatic when one knows how to make contact with the source of thought. This basic source, which is one's own Self or Being, is transcendental in nature, unchanging and absolute, as distinguished from one's field of activity which is of relative and changing nature.

Anyone can begin to practice skill in action by devoting a few minutes in the morning and evening to transcendental meditation. The process is effortless, requiring no particular ability on the part of the meditator other than the natural ability to think. During meditation he automatically experiences more subtle states of thought until his mind gains the state of Being.

Individual teaching

Every person is different and has led his own individual life; therefore each person must be taught individually by a trained teacher of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. This enables one to learn meditation the right way so he can use it to its full capacity.

The teaching of transcendental meditation is as ancient as mankind. The technique was brought to the Western world about thirteen years ago by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi who started teaching transcendental meditation then and since has taught millions to meditate. Since then, the Students' International Meditation Society has formed a national program for meditators throughout the United States.

Residence teaching available

As a valuable part of instruction, SIMS makes available to meditators frequent residence courses which provide the opportunity for extended periods of meditation, advanced lectures and leadership training.

Some colleges and universities are adopting credit courses in the science of Being or the science of creative intelligence, helpful to everyone regardless of their field of study. Each course has its theoretical and practical aspect — lectures to gain knowledge and practice to gain sustained benefits in daily life.

Anaconda Country. Become part of it.

A lot has happened since Anaconda began mining copper in Butte, Montana in 1895. Today our operations extend across the country, including Canada and Mexico. And we're still growing.

Just last year, over 280,000 tons of copper came out of our North American mines. That's 42% more than the year before. And in the U.S. alone, we have enough proven and potential copper reserves to meet estimated needs for the next 65 years.

We also make aluminum. In fact, when our big new aluminum reduction plant in Sebree, Kentucky is completed in 1973, we'll be the fourth largest producer of aluminum in the U.S. And we produce zinc, lead, molybdenum, gold, and silver, too. But that's not all.

Over half of our activities involve fabricating metal into everyday and not so everyday products. Aluminum foil for packaging. Electric power cable. Wiring for space craft. And our manufacturing plants cover the territory.

Our widespread, diverse activities have produced the need for talented individuals of many learning backgrounds. People like yourself whose prime interests are in:

Had any good rushes lately??

By Kathy Brainard

1971 Rush Joke of the Year:

- Q. Hey, baby, wanna race?
- A. No, thanks. I'm already Russian.

Dear Ex-Rushee:

Here it is! The quiz you have been waiting for. Now is the time for nostalgia. Dig out those wonderful memories of rush and let's analyze what you learned during those fun-filled, fantastic, frivolous days! Bet you can hardly wait!

Remember — your integrity is at stake! Do not rush (ha, ha, get it? ha, ha!) thru this quiz. Answer honestly and to the best of your ability.

Happy reminiscing!!!!!!

1. The best type of footwear for rush week is:

- A. thongs
- B. Hush Puppies
- C. Dr. Scholl's sandals
- D. three pairs of new shoes that are 1/2 size too small

2. If you hear a bell ring during a rush party, it means:

- A. you are in love
- B. the house members are fairies
- C. it's time for another nifty song
- D. you have just been dinged

3. A good line to start a conversation at a rush party is:

- A. Caught anyone in the bulrushes lately?
- B. Do you know the mating call of a bulrush?

- C. Smoked any good grass lately?
- D. Nice day for a party, isn't it?

4. At a rush party, when asked what your name is, you should:

- A. LIE
- B. give you name in this order: first, last, and middle initial

C. give the name of your favorite literary figure, such as Scarlett O'Hara, Dondi, Raquel Welch, or Spiro, becuz then they think that you are an intellectual

D. say a different name every day, just in case they remember that they have already dinged you.

5. When asked where you are from, you should:

- A. LIE
- B. give you full address in this order: street, city, state, and zip

C. say a different town (and/or state and/or country) every day so that they will think you are well-traveled and exotic

D. say you are from California becuz they will really dig it.

6. When asked what your major is, you should:

- A. LIE
- B. give your rank and serial number
- C. say "Ursa" (same minor)

- D. you get all wet

16. An exchange is:

- A. something that used to be your change but isn't now
- B. a fair barter

C. a forerunner to compulsory computer dating

D. a handy way to match people according to height

17. Your over-all impression of rush was:

- A. a bummer
- B. a learning experience
- C. downright exciting
- D. pretty wonderful

What an enjoyable stroll down memory land that was! Now tally up your answers and see how well you did...

IF YOU ANSWERED 13 OR MORE QUESTIONS WITH "D":

You are a full-fledged pledge. You could probably fly to Greece immediately and mingle with the natives with little or no difficulty. You will prove to be a great asset to your house. You have all the traits that are looked for in a pledge: sincerity, warmth, savoir-faire, class, and pride. Chances are 90 to 1 that you will graduate in four years with honors and also be able to keep up that fun-packed social life of a Greek, including cheering at games, wearing crew-neck sweaters and/or knee sox, and drinking keg beer.

IF YOU ANSWERED 9-12 QUESTIONS WITH "D":

You are a half-assed pledge, but you're one who is willing to learn to respect the members. You generally slop through your housework and homework, but you will probably be able to make it through at least 3 years of college. And naturally they will be the best years of your life.

FROSH COUNCIL SMOKER

OPEN TO ALL FRESHMEN TO TALK TO FROSH COUNCIL

THURS. FEB. 3, 7:30 SUB DIPPER

Perhaps even the last. You may even "blossom" in a year or two and become a house officer.

IF YOU ANSWERED 5-9 OF THE QUESTIONS WITH "D":

You definitely have independent tendencies. It is doubtful that you will make your grades and so will probably be out of the house within a year — and out of college soon after that. You tend to have long hair and say what you think. You also tend to be nice only to people that you can stand and have very little respect for any of the members.

IF YOU ANSWERED LESS THAN 5 OF THE QUESTIONS WITH "D":

You God damned independent, what are you doing in a house?? You will probably drop out of college at semester and revert back to being the scum of the earth. You probably are pushing dope in your house right now, writing radical notes and putting them on the bulletin boards, and in general starting an underground movement right before your housemother's very bifocals. You are known for such character flaws as honesty, supporting freedom of speech, smiling only when you feel like it, and you probably have never been on a blind date in your life. A born loser.

What's happening

by Mark Fritzer

The social event of the season dazzled Moscow society last Saturday night with a gala "invitation-only" private party, launched by our town's latest drinking establishment to celebrate its grand opening.

The event was definitely a "must" for all the "in" men and women-about-town, and a scene at which anyone who is anyone really had to be seen or have his or her social reputation cast in grave shadow.

Socialite after shimmering socialite was seen to make her or his grand entrance to stand enthralled by the opulent grandeur of the "uptown" atmosphere. (Unfortunately, one elderly couple made the entrance only to leave immediately, with the parting comment about "All these hippies...").

This reporter has rarely seen or experienced such an exciting time since the Troy Winter Cotillion or the grand opening of the Uniontown Slaughter House and Day Care Center.

The food received unanimous approval as "excellent" and the "cook-your-own-steak" system was deemed "superior". (One comment overheard: "There are likely to be a lot of people more unhappy with the way their steak ends up this way than if they had a chef prepare it"). Despite this one note of wet-blanketism, the idea was roundly accepted as a method of serving steak.

Film series offers cinema masterpieces

A series of twelve internationally famous, award winning movies will be shown this semester each Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theatre. The series begins Feb. 21 with D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East".

Season tickets for the entire series for couples is $6.00 and $4.00 for singles. Tickets are available at the SUB information Desk.

Other movies in the series include Peter Seller's "The Wrong Box"; W. C. Field's "Poppu"; the Marx Brothers in "Night of the Opera"; Ingmar Berman's "Shame"; Douglas Fairbanks in "Thief of Bagdad"; the science fiction classic "Things to Come" and many other quality films.

Before each feature presentation, an award winning short subject will be shown.

Further information can be obtained from a brochure available at the SUB Information Desk.

The establishment employs the new "soft wall" concept of carpeting but unfortunately stopped short of the rest rooms. The tavern-lounge also experiments with varieties of seating arrangements from the standard chairs-around-table to hanging tables and sunken-pit tables. The sunken pits were enthusiastically received by all those athletically inclined or who didn't have their sandwiches placed next to them when someone wanted to leave.

The bustling waitresses were cunningly attired in "hot pants" which was a fashion roundly endorsed by many of the sunken pit fans. (One girl was concerned that there were no waiters in hot pants).

A good time was had by all, as this reporter can attest. This is a place in which one must be seen in the coming season of exciting Moscow social whirls.

Summer musical theatre seeks personnel

Applications and resumes are now being accepted from singers, actors, dancers, musicians, and technicians who are interested in becoming members of the Carrousel Players of the Coeur d'Alene Summer Theatre, Robert E. Moe, general manager of the theatre company announced recently.

"There are positions to be filled in every area of production," Moe said.

Anyone interested should send an application or letter of inquiry to the general manager at: 26866 Calle Maria; Capistrano Beach, California 92624. Mr. Moe will send by return mail specifics concerning the musical repertory theatre that operates in Coeur d'Alene from mid-June through Labor Day.

Moe, an alum of the University of Idaho, received his B.S. in 1961 and his M.(Ed.) in 1965.

Four musicals—"Music Man," "Mame," "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" and "Your Own Thing"—are tentatively scheduled for production this season.

Sixteen full-time company members who perform in at least three of the four shows as well as do technical work and other related theatre chores receive room and board and a small salary for their services. Associates and apprentices, who may or may not receive room and board, but no salary, are also signed.

Says Moe: "This is the eighth year for repertory musical summer theatre in Coeur d'Alene.

"Company members, other than the technical staff and musicians, must be able to sing and be very versatile. Those chosen to be Carrousel Players will not only have the opportunity to participate in a first-rate repertory musical theatre for three months but will also have the opportunity to work with a talented staff while enjoying the benefits of the beautiful North Idaho resort.

Black athletes tell their side of the story

by Daniel Yake

A few weeks ago there was a news release in the local papers about two black athletes quitting the University of Idaho basketball team. The reports read that the athletes, Carl Robinson and Carlos Perkins, did not feel that the Vandal basketball team was playing the way that these athletes felt was best for them. In talking with both Carlos Perkins and Carl Robinson it turned out that style of play was only a small part of the entire picture. The following is their story.

Analysis and Opinion

Concerning the dispute over the style of play, it turns out that both Carl and Carlos are junior college transfers. This means that each has but two years of university eligibility left. Both Robinson and Perkins have been exposed to a wide-open, fast, running style of play for all of their days in organized basketball. On the other hand, head basketball coach Wayne Anderson employs the slower-paced controlled sort of game. It might also be added at this time that Anderson's record using this type has not been highly impressive, 64-64 win-loss up to this season.

Here it can be seen that a problem arises from a conflict in playing styles. With only two years of college basketball left, Carl Robinson felt that the adjustment from his basketball style could only hurt his ability. He said that he tried to change but it only resulted in poor performance. Carlos Perkins was the leading scorer on the Idaho team up until the time of his departure. Coach Anderson himself had told Perkins that he could be one of the best guards in the conference. What has disturbed Carlos the most is that he was told by the coach not to handle the ball and to quell his fast-breaking abilities, which Perkins considers his best attributes. He was instead told to shoot from a certain position and as a result his shooting average dropped, to about the team average.

Throughout the interview it was seen that most responses were aimed at coach Anderson himself. Perkins and Robinson feel Anderson's philosophy revolves around the idea of 'play my way, win my way; or not at all.' Hurt could be seen in Carl Robinson's eyes as he expressed that Anderson had no concern or affection for his players. Robinson also said that through Anderson's opinion, few people could ever do right. What bothered both men the most was that coach Anderson never would establish a responsive communication with his players, he always remained aloof.

The ex-players also cited prejudice as a reason for quitting. As a matter of fact, three freshman basketball players left the U of I last year because of the same reason, prejudice against the black athlete. During the conversation Robinson also kept mentioning the phrase "If only he would treat people as individuals." This aspect of individualism is what appeared to disturb both men most. When asked what plans he had for the future, Carl Robinson looked up and said, "They say that I should get my degree and go from there but it's hard to sit back and watch somebody play the game you always played."

WRA elections today

Today there will be a run-off election for three WRA offices. The one officer that was elected Thursday is Pat Neal of Campbell Hall, the new Public Relations Chairman.

Jean Nelson, Pi Phi, and Sue Wilson, Hays, are the two candidates for president. The two vying for secretary-treasurer are Bobbie Downend, Alpha Phi, and Vicki Mallea, French. Karen Davidson, Carter, and Nancy Nyenhuis, Steel, are running for the position of recording secretary. Those women eligible to vote are urged to voice your opinion today!

The schedule for the Women's Extramural Basketball Team has been released. In the months to follow, the team will travel to Bozeman, Montana, NIC in Coeur d'Alene, EWSC in Cheney, and WSU.

U of I wrestling team splits weekend matches

The Idaho Vandal wrestling squad, now 1-2 for the season, split matches over the weekend at LaGrande, Oregon as they walloped the College of Idaho 45-3 and lost a close match to Eastern Oregon College, 24-19.

Three forfeits to Idaho by the College of Idaho team enabled Idaho to easily defeat them last Saturday. Ochoa, Vandemeer, and Jones at 118, 142, and 158 respectively all won by forfeits over their opponents.

Kjos, at 134, Hank Boomer at 167, and Killsgaard, wrestling heavyweight, all scored pins over their opponents, also.

In the 126 pound class, Idaho's Harrington dominated Ray Marshall, his opponent, for a 7-0 decision.

Schulte and Laqua in the 177 and 190 weight classes, also scored decision matches over their opponents by the scores of 4-2 and 6-2.

The only points for the College of Idaho were scored by Gary Harwood who decisioned Mark Rupert in the 150 lb. class, 12-3.

In their match with Eastern Oregon, Idaho was unable to pull ahead at the end despite two forfeits to the Vandals.

Harrington and Vandemeer, both in the lighter weight classes, added 12 points to their team's total as they won their matches by forfeit. However, Idaho ended up giving back those twelve points as Jones and Killsgaard both were pinned in their individual matches.

Two of Idaho's veteran wrestlers, Rudy Ochoa and Hank Boomer, wrestling at 118 and 167, both dropped their matches by decisions. Dave Robinson of EOC won over Ochoa, 10-0, while Boomer lost to Delashmatt, 5-1. Also losing by decision was Laqua, 5-4. Idaho's Jere Schulte won a decision over Mike Moorhead, 8-5, and Mark Rupert came back to whip EOC's Stockdale, 14-7. Kjos tied with Larry Miller, 4-4.
