

Adulthood at 18 dead

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — An omnibus bill which would grant majority rights to 18-year-olds "is dead for this session," Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, told the Ada County Democratic luncheon Wednesday.

The House refused to concur in that amendment and a conference committee is working to resolve the difference.

McDermott said "for all practical purposes the bill is dead for this session," adding that only piecemeal legislation can be passed concerning the 18-year-old adulthood issue.

Several bills extending the rights of adulthood in specific areas already have been passed during the current session.

Speakers discuss war issues

Dr. Walter Judd

The 26th annual Borah Symposium opened Tuesday afternoon with an introduction by Dr. Robert E. Hosack, Borah Committee chairman.

The first speaker of the afternoon Dr. Walter H. Judd, a former missionary to the Far East and a Congressman from 1942-62, cited the threat of communism as the basic threat to world peace.

The issue, he said, is not war or peace. It's war or subjugation. "Peace" can be gotten by giving in; there is "peace" in Cuba and Czechoslovakia, Judd added.

The most important factor is that both "sides" must want peace more than one or both wants something else said Judd. There has always been some man or some group who wanted something more than peace.

The Number one obstacle to peace in Vietnam came years ago, with the overeagerness for peace displayed by the U.S. he said.

This eagerness led to conciliation and a willingness to allow talk, not action, on the part of the U.S., said Judd.

Tran Van Dinh

If a lesson isn't learned in Vietnam, there's no time left to learn anything, former South Vietnamese Ambassador

Tran Van Dinh warned the large audience at Tuesday afternoon's Borah Symposium.

He added that, in three years, Thailand could be another trouble-spot.

Tran urged that the United States let international organizations handle all foreign aid, military and economic, and concentrate on its domestic issues.

"Politicize yourself before intervention elsewhere," Tran pleaded.

American intervention in a war of national liberation, Tran told the audience, must end in giving up or killing everybody.

Kenneth Kirkpatrick

"Until we end the automatic war there can be no peace in Indo-China."

Kenneth Kirkpatrick made the above statement at the Borah Symposium Tuesday, when speaking on the automatic battlefield and air war.

"Nixon is not winding down the war, he is only making it less visible by making it an automatic air war," said Kirkpatrick.

To substantiate this claim, he cited that more bombs have been dropped in Indo China than during all of World War II. He also pointed out that Laos was the most heavily bombed country in the world's history.

The most outstanding factor of automatic warfare, according to Kirkpatrick, is that the bombs dropped are anti-personal bombs.

Juanita Castro

Preventing communist imperialism from continuing its territorial progress and by helping to liberate what they have now enslaved is the only way to keep world peace, Juanita Castro told students in a high-pitched tirade, Tuesday during the Borah Symposium.

Castro, chose to exile from Cuba and fled to Mexico in 1964 where she denounced her brother and his communist government.

The sister of Cuba's communist dictator explained that she is in favor of democratic revolutions, with freedom and social justice.

She felt that as long as a nation continues a policy of dominating nations there can only be what she termed an "artificial peace."

She said, "When the United States and its allies recover what has been lost and do not permit new nations to fall under communism, world peace will have been assured and, consequently, a third world war will be prevented."

Dr. Charles Frankel

Dr. Charles Frankel, Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University, was one of the featured speakers at this weeks Borah Symposium.

Frankel discussed the role of ideology in international relations, concluding that no need existed to go to war over an ideological conflict. The speaker stated that the "Communist - anti-Communist" contest was a passing phenomena.

According to Frankel, the ideology in the United States has been strained with growing interconflict.

"We looked outside for an enemy or friend to help us, to give us guidance and a scape goat," he said. "It was easy to take our minds off trouble at home by looking at our trouble abroad."

If U.S. citizens were ever forced to live under Communism, the majority would find it no more than "obnoxious," according to Frankel.

"A real conflict exists between the United States and Russia," he said. "but ideological questions have unreasonably intensified the situation."

Idaho puts 23 "narcs" into service

The new state order putting into service 23 young, long haired, undercover drug agents has been verified by Tim Hart, the chief of university Campus Security.

The Idaho Bureau of Narcotics, under the guidance of Attorney General Tony Park, has recently increased the state police force by 23 extra narcotics agents — looking amazingly like freaky college students — who will work secretly at catching pushers at their trade

According to Hart, the new agents could be anywhere in the state although they may look for special locations like the Blue Mountain Rock Festival proposed for the spring.

Agents to notify

Agents are supposed to notify local law enforcement agencies and the Moscow Police would probably inform Campus Security, Hart said. He added that he would have no reservations about confirming an agent's presence if asked.

"I don't feel it's the agency's function to spy," Hart commented, "there are enough things going on above board."

On the local level, Hart said he employed students for patrolling and night surveillance. Unless there is an actual felony involved, the officers do not normally follow up on the traces of marijuana or inform the police of the smell of grass.

"I doubt that we'd ever go out and try to catch somebody participating in an illegal act in his private place," Hart said, "it would compromise our position as security."

With more money, Hart would like to see an increased student force — including women officers — so Campus Security would gain more authority and the police would take an advisory position.

Hart specified such campus complaints as theft and trespassing, but admitted drugs, especially "bad stuff coming in," was a problem.

Regents okay ASUI proposal to fund FPAC

Regents of the University of Idaho yesterday approved the ASUI package proposal to fund FPAC and also guaranteed sanctity of the $300,000 available for the multi-use undersurfacing in the stadium.

The $3.50 infirmary bond fee and the $3.00 student union development fee can now be temporarily diverted to the construction of phase I of the Performing Arts Center. Diversion is to be no more than $250,000 plus interest.

It was learned Monday that an additional $150,000 will now be needed above the $800,000 estimate given by architects to start construction. Development director Don Reid said new costs include site utilities fees, an addition of 59 seats to create a 400 capacity theater, and widening of the workshop.

Reid had thought the utilities costs were included in the $800,000 estimate, however he stressed that none of these new costs were part of the original architect's contract. He said possible package combinations of theatrical equipment which might be donated could bring costs back down to around the $800,000 estimate.

Because Spokane's Expo '74 will begin tying up contractors after this year and because of inflation costs, Reid expressed desire to begin construction this summer.

Borah symposium speakers

M. A. Rauf

The root of the Arab-Israeli situation is political conflict, said M. A. Rauf, guest speaker at the Wednesday morning session of the Borah Symposium.

"The European powers stirred the feelings of the minorities and encouraged the separation and creation of an alien state," he said, while giving a brief summary of the Middle East conflict.

Rauf, an authority on Moslem religion, feels that the unwillingness of major powers to apply pressure to stop the Israelis is one of the barriers to peace in the Middle East.

Samuel Segev

Referring to the theme of this years Borah Symposium, Samuel Segev, Israeli news correspondent said a major obstacle to peace was the refusal to see one's own faults.

Segev was referring to the speech made previously by Dr. M. A. Rauf for what he said were distortions of the truth and an effort to throw the responsibility for the Middle East conflict on other elements.

Segev said the conflict wasn't totally a religious or ideological one, but a combination of cultural, political, and spiritual elements.

Throughout his speech he stressed his belief that Egypt's former President Nasser had used the conflict as a tool to promote Arab unity.

General Carl von Horn

"The role of the United Nations is to serve as an instrument of settlement," according to General Carl Von Horn, a speaker at the Borah Symposium.

"To keep the UN in this role, however, the activities must be flexible. Every situation is different, so they must stay flexible."

He said that when missions are sent out, to avoid trouble, the objectives of the mission should be clearly stated. However, to accomplish the most from the mission, the activities should be fairly flexible.

He went on to say he did not see the UN becoming all it was hoped to be in the immediate future, or to do all it had hoped to do.

'Executive of the Day' set

Two vice presidents and six other executives of the Weyerhaeuser Company are on campus today for the annual naming of the "Executive of the Day" and to speak to classes in the university's business and forestry colleges.

John L. Aram, vice president of transportation and material for Weyerhaeuser, will receive a certificate honoring him as the 1972 Executive of the Day from the local chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, national business fraternity, at a noon luncheon in the Student Union Building.

Charles W. Bingham, vice president of Weyerhaeuser's wood products and timberlands division, was the keynote speaker at a banquet hosted by Weyerhaeuser Thursday evening for the faculties of the College of Business and Economics and the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. He spoke on a private view of public education for resource managers and presented Weyerhaeuser's new educational film, "To Touch the Sky."

In addition to Aram and Bingham, the other executives who will speak to classes and seminars in the business and forestry colleges Friday are: Allen E. Garrett, manager of forest land planning; George Kovich, wood products manufacturing manager; George M. Schofield, director of planning and analysis, transportation division; George R. Staebler, director of forestry research at Centralia, Wash.; Richard W. Stewart, wood products division manager; and Robert A. Wheeler, financial services manager, wood products division.

The schedule of speakers in the College of Business and Economics includes, at 8 a.m., Aram on organizational theory and structure, Ad 206, and Schofield and Wheeler on budgeting and cost systems, UCC 102; at 9 a.m., Stewart on long-range planning in product development and marketing, UCC108, and Wheeler on tax accounting, Ad. 206; at 10 a.m., Wheeler on budgeting systems and cost accounting, UCC 103, and Schofield on capital budgeting techniques, Ad. 317; at 11 a.m., Wheeler and Schofield on conflicts in accounting practices, Ad. 205A, and Kovich on operation and production problems, Ad. 216; and at 1 p.m., Stewart and Aram on marketing and promotion, Ad. 326 and 210, and Schofield on investment, Ad. 328.

The schedule of speakers in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences includes, at 8 a.m., Kovich on pollution control in room 10; at 9 a.m., Bingham on forest and land policy and the environment in room 209; at 10 a.m., Garrett on forest land planning in room 10; and at 11 a.m., Staebler on the internal operations of a private research system in room 10.

Anyone interested in any of the positions may fill out an application available in the ASUI Office or at the Information Desk in the SUB.

Applications must be in by 5:00 p.m. Thursday, March 9. Those applicants selected will be asked to appear for interviews on March 14 and March 16. Final selections will be made by Tuesday, March 21. The positions pay up to $50 per month. Additional information may be obtained by calling the ASUI Office at 885 6331.

Environmental week

"Idaho's Environment and You" is the topic of an open panel discussion Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Dipper, in conjunction with Environmental Week.

The panel will feature speakers from various sides in the pollution issue, and will be moderated by Dr. Al Wallace, Civil Engineering Dept., according to Jim Fursman, coordinator of the event.

Panel members include Al Eiguren, Idaho Air Pollution Control Commission, Boise; Mel Alsager, J. R. Simplot Co., Boise; Bob DeBorde, Potlatch Forests, Inc., Lewiston; Gene Baker, Bunker Hill, Kellogg; and Dean Jackson, Idaho Air Pollution Control Commission, Moscow.

Interdisciplinary studies

Interdisciplinary courses offered by the university at the present time allow students to initiate new courses involving two or more disciplines. Credit can be received in seminar under Interdisciplinary 200, 300 or 400. Independent study courses are Interdisciplinary 299, 399 and 499. Interdisciplinary 502 is directed study and Interdisciplinary 501 is a seminar.

Courses under these numbers are subject to approval by the UCC Committee on Interdisciplinary Studies each time they are offered. The committee works to help the initiators of such courses when requested to do so.

18 year old bill not dead yet

The Idaho legislature, by acting on an amendment which would set the drinking age at 19, has destroyed any possibility of action on the 18-year-old omnibus bill during this session.

Idaho youth may now vote in November as adults making adult decisions in a major election but by law they will not be considered legally capable of taking responsibility for their own action. An 18 year old may serve on a jury and vote for president of the United States but he still can not make complete claims to adulthood in Idaho.

One possibility exists that may yet lead to action by the legislature on the bill. The governor could put the omnibus legislation on the agenda for the special session. He will do so only if he deems it an important enough issue.

It appears that it is up to students and others between the ages of 18 and 21 and those who agree with the principle behind the omnibus bill to show their support and urge the governor to put it on the agenda. Politicians are sensitive to voting pressure.

The additional 50,000, now eligible voters, will have some effect if they become vocal about their attitudes. The dicotomy that exists between an 18-year-olds right to vote and his non-right to make personal decisions should be corrected by passage of the omnibus legislation.

Student remarks — Castro criticized

Editor, the Argonaut

Tuesday night I went to the Borah Symposium expecting a speech concerning Communism in the Americas, only to be presented with an act that was reminiscent of the Old West's traveling medicine shows. Sharing her brother's penchant for speeches characterized by rapid talking, overwrought rhetoric, and a distinct dearth of facts, Miss Castro proceeded to label any and all dissenters as "fellow communists travelers".

Even in the questions and answers period which followed her speech, she either evaded troublesome questions or conveniently lost them in the translation. Responding to one question, she stated that the United States should continue to supply arms and munitions to countries that wish to fight communism. I wonder if she includes such bastions of democracy as Greece, Spain and Pakistan on her list of heroic anti-communist countries. The use of statements like "the mentally ill Communist war-mongers" must have brought a smile to the face of John Foster Dulles in his grave, but have no place in what is supposed to be an intellectual discourse on War and Peace. Later in the evening Colonel Jordan said that he was appalled to see half-truths being passed as whole truths and partial explanations being presented as full explanations. I am at a loss to think of a more apt description of Miss Castro's speech. So to you, Miss Castro, I add my voice to the chorus shouting "mentiras".

Sincerely,
Duane Marti

Candidates in focus: McGovern

Editor's Note: In an attempt to inform the student body of the presidential candidates, a series of articles will be run covering the candidates, views and issues of the upcoming campaign and primaries.

Senator George McGovern, democrat from South Dakota has begun a vigorous campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. He announced his candidacy on Jan. 18, 1971, breaking traditional political precedents.

In a recent Gallup survey, based on test matches against President Nixon, McGovern made the most substantial gains of any candidate.

As to issues, McGovern has made concrete suggestions for solutions to the country's problems.

Along with denouncing the Viet Nam Policy, McGovern has affirmed his pledge to grant amnesty to those men who have gone to jail or underground or abroad to avoid serving in Viet Nam.

General amnesty

In a speech September 1971, McGovern said, "If I were President of the United States, I would declare a general amnesty for those young men who have chosen to go to jail or who have taken various other steps to avoid participation in this unjust and immoral war."

McGovern claims the renewed bombing of North Viet Nam is another demonstration of the failure of the Vietnamization policy.

"Death in an Asian village is no more acceptable if it comes from a soldier's bayonet or an American bomb," he said.

Attempting to unravel the bureaucracy of the Welfare program, McGovern proposed a new welfare program. His proposal would guarantee a family the minimum it needs to survive, while allowing room for outside earnings from regular employment.

Defense budget

McGovern has also asked for a defense budget cut of $33 billion over three years.

Such cutbacks would be in the form of scrapping the Safeguard ABM system, halting deployment of MIRV-style multiple warheads on U.S. Minuteman and Polaris ICBM's, cutting back overall U.S. military manpower for next year to just above 1.7 million and other various defense measures.

McGovern has proposed tax reforms that would give the average citizen a big break. Such reforms include ending the oil depletion allowance, increasing the tax rate on huge corporations and on millionaires, and placing an excess profits tax on windfall profits, resulting from wage and price controls.

McGovern has also called for a Federal Grand Jury investigation of the killings of the four students at Kent State in Ohio.

Politically speaking. . .

Recently the Idaho Student Lobby (ISL) released a memorandum on the consequences of lowering the adult status to 18. The ISL pointed out some important factors to remember in relation to the lowered adult status.

Insurance

Insurance companies consider one's voting registration address as their legal address. If a person registers to vote in his college town and doesn't reside there permanently, or if one lives in the same town as his parents, but registers under an address different from his parents (apartment or living group), his property is no longer covered by his parents property insurance.

Jury duty

The new jury bill which went into effect February 10 now makes 18-year-olds eligible for jury duty in the town where they are registered to vote.

A person could possibly get excused from serving by pleading hardship of being a full-time student.

Trusts

The language of a trust could also effect an 18-year-old. If the trust states it is effectable at adulthood and not the age of 21, a person could begin collecting on the trust. It is unlikely that an attorney or banker setting up the trust would make such a mistake, but its worth checking.

Life insurance

Life insurance policies for educational purposes state they are effective until the 22nd birthday, but it might be desirable for a person to confirm such status.

The ISL was notified that such programs as Aid to Dependent Children all run until a person reaches the age of 21.

All these matters are of utmost importance. It is vital that the 18-year-old populations realize the impact of lowering the adult status, so that they can make adequate adjustments.

Violations in ASUI elections

Complaints regarding campaign violations during the recent ASUI elections have been received by ASUI Att.

Gen. Hy Forgeron from Tom Slayton, ASUI vice-president. Those candidates cited for violations are as follows: Robert Scribner, Roy Eiguren, Mike Moore, Greg Casey, Mike Krieg, and Mel Fisher. Sen. Luther Brady was cited for a violation by CASE (Committee Against Student Exploitation).

Brady was cited for violating Article IV, Sec. 4, Clauses 6-7 of the ASUI Constitution. The other candidates are cited in violation of Clauses 1 and 5 of the Constitution.

Clause 1 designates which buildings are restricted from campaign signs and Clause 5 provides that all signs be removed before election day.

A hearing was set for 7 p.m. last night in the Appaloosa room.

UCC — who, what, why

Editor's note: This is the third article in a series explaining the function, powers and membership of the various faculty committees.

The University Curriculum Committee (UCC) is a branch of the Faculty Council. The UCC acts for the council on catalog changes of a curricular nature. These include changes in the general requirements and academic procedures. The UCC also functions as a coordinator among the various academic divisions of the university on curriculum matters.

The membership of the UCC consists of twelve members, 11 voting and one ex-officio member. Each college, except the College of Law, elects a faculty member by the nominating procedures of that particular college.

The Graduate Council nominates one faculty member who is also a member of the Graduate Council. Two upper-division undergraduates are elected by the ASUI.

The UCC elects one graduate student to also serve with them. The ex-officio officer is an academic vice president. Except for the ex-officio member, no member may serve on this committee for more than three consecutive years.

Human Sexuality

Course attracts 444 students

by Barb Mayne

What are the essential male/female attributes which are genuinely attractive?

This is just one of the questions which the Human Sexuality class (Psych. 200) will be discussing this semester, according to Dr. Willis Rees, instructor for the course.

The question was part of a list which was drawn up by several members of the class.

The class, which is being offered for the first time this semester, presently has an enrollment of 444. This makes it one of the most popular courses offered according to Rees. The course is open to anyone.

Many add

"The interesting thing about this course is that we've had almost as many add the course as were originally signed up for it," Rees said. "There were originally 266 signed up for the course. No other course has had that happen to it."

He said he originally had not expected as many students to enroll as did.

"We originally expected about 100-125 to enroll," he said. "Because of the large number in the class, and the way the class has continued to grow, we have had to change classrooms three times."

Now meeting

The class is now meeting in Ag. Science 106, which, according to Rees, still doesn't seat all the students. This room has a capacity of 397.

"Typically, we have enough absences each class to provide seats for everyone," he said.

Not high school level

Rees said he felt the reason so many had added the course late was because they had felt the course would be at a high school level and then had found out it wasn't.

"They found the class to be a frank and open discussion of all matters of human sexuality, including homosexuality, abnormal aspects and so on," he said. "They found out it was a college level course and we were not going to bury our heads in the sand."

Rees listed several reasons why he felt the class was so popular.

Curiosity

"One of the reasons is probably curiosity and interest in learning about a topic where most of their information has been gained so far through family and peer groups," he said.

"Also, the students are more interested in meaningful information. Thirty to forty years ago women were considered nonsensuous. This idea is changing drastically, so information is becoming more important.

Relevant

"Students frequently complain that their classes aren't relevant to everyday life," he said. "This isn't the case with this class. This also might be a factor."

One student, when asked why she had taken the course, said that she had been prompted by curiosity. Another said she had taken the course because she felt it would be worthwhile. Still another said he had taken it because he liked the teacher, wanted to learn more about sex and needed two more credits.

Rees said he was teaching the class primarily by lecture and question and answer. He lectures when there are no questions to answer, he said. The questions can either be asked in class, turned in anonymously in question boxes placed for that purpose, handed to the teacher either before or after class or mailed to the teacher.

All avenues

"We are trying to cover all possible avenues for the students to submit their questions," he commented.

"My aims are two-fold," he said. "The first aim is to educate the students in terms of sexual behavior, anatomy and physiology. I also personally feel that in this realm of our lives, knowledge can increase human happiness and marital adjustment. Therefore my second aim is to promote human happiness."

Only problem

He said about the only problem either he or the students has had in connection with the course was that some students are finding what they thought to be true and what is true at odds. He said he had discussed this with the class, and they had felt they could handle it.

The course will probably be offered again, Rees said, considering the popularity of it. He said they were thinking of making it a night course so people in the community and those who work during the day could also take it.

Not settled

He emphasized that nothing had definitely been settled yet, however, because "we want to wait and see what enrollments will be like. He also said there were some administrative and instructional problems to be solved still.

Rees emphasized that if there are students who feel they have problems which aren't for classroom discussion, they are free to come in and see him.

"The office is always open to counsel students. We in the department will attempt to do what we can to help," he said.

LOSE 20 POUNDS
IN TWO WEEKS!Famous U.S. Women Ski Team Diet

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team members go on the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right - 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food action and was devised by a famous Colorado physician especially for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while reducing. You keep "full" - no starvation - because the diet is designed that way! It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay at home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it! Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the scientific, proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, you owe it to yourself to try the U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet. That is, if you really do want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today. Tear this out as a reminder.

Send only $1.00 ($1.25 for Rush Service) - cash is O.K. - to: Ski Team Diet, P.O. Box 15493, Dept. ST, San Diego, Calif. 92115. Don't order unless you expect to lose 20 pounds in two weeks! Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do!

What's happening

by Mark Fritzier

Getting this issue's column off on a structural footing, tonight presents a great variety of talent and some conflicting time slots. Of course, most of you have heard of the Rare Earth concert tonight at WSU in Bohler Gym. Other than live rock concerts ought to be placed where most of them belong, along with the dinosaurs and other over-specialized, extinct creations, this one has the redeeming quality of being fairly cheap. I've heard that tickets are fast becoming scarce, as the most expensive one is only $3.50 (only is a bad word when even that much is too much).

I have rather strong feelings about rock concerts: one buys an incredibly expensive ticket to crowd oneself into uncomfortable seats; be elbowed and generally pushed around; subjected to rotten acoustics; all the wonderful squeals and moans of electronic feedback, as the band struggles for three-quarters of the concert to tame their p.a. system; the often arrogant attitude and behavior of the artists with regard to their audience; being seated behind a pillar or on folding chairs in some awkward spot, as the promoters are after every panting, paying fan they can shoehorn in; and generally being dissatisfied, frequently, when the bands sound second-rate because they can't reproduce "live" all the cute little electronic studio tricks that enhance the recordings we buy. Worst of all, one often gets the urgent call of nature during the second set and happens to be seated in the middle of a row surrounded by an immobile mass of humanity. Concentration on the performance is ruined by a more basic pressing need.

Rip-off trips

I will say, though, that live concerts sometimes succeed, in spite of themselves. That subtle but extremely exciting feeling of being present and all together when a group really happens to hit a creative mood is fantastic and can really carry you away. When it hits you in the guts, you know you've experienced something good.

My criticism is specifically directed at the "Super Bands" that price themselves out of reach with almost cynical disregard for the audiences that would love to see them and who made their fame and fortune possible in the first place. These groups and artists often seem to sky-rocket into great commercial rip-off trips. They've killed the concerts, as far as I'm concerned, as a form of expression of art for the public. To be fair, there are those who don't do this, but too few — too few.

Continuing with tonight and time conflicts, the Campus Chest Drive is sponsoring a dance in the SUB Dipper from 9:00 to midnight featuring Prime Rib for music. Admission is 50 cents for singles and 75 cents for couples. The money is going for a good cause.

Jazz festival week

Tonight also sees the kick-off of Jazz Festival Week on campus. The Second and Third Jazz Ensembles will be having a free concert in the SUB Ballroom beginning at 8:00 p.m. This is the first event in a series of activities that will promote the appreciation and performance of jazz on campus by our own resident student talent, which is considerable. Next week will see a Jazz Appreciation Night in the Music Building Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. his and the next one on Wednesday will focus on jazz history, improvisation, and other jazz subjects.

The final events of Jazz Week will see many high school bands coming to learn, perform, and compete in the final concert next Saturday night. At that time the UI Jazz Ensemble will also perform.

I witnessed this event last year in preference to a "name" rock concert at WSU and have been a fan of jazz thrust on this campus since. It was a marvelous experience to hear the talent and superb sounds that are being produced by high school jazz bands from around the area. The university jazz band was fantastic.

Finally, tonight, the SUB will be presenting at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. The Dazzled, a film about which I could find nothing other than it stars that noted actress, Raquel Welch. Admission is 50 cents and 75 cents and will be shown at the same times tomorrow night.

On the film side, I was thoroughly enthralled by the UI Film Society showing of The Thief of Bagdad last Monday night. Those who saw it were treated to a rare fantasy trip and marvelous action. The special effects were beyond compare with even today's cinematic techniques. (That flying carpet actually flew, I tell you!)

The Society will be offering another gem Monday evening, A Day at the Circus starring the Marx Brothers. They were unable to get A Night at the Opera as originally scheduled but were able to substitute this one, which should satisfy Marx Bros. addicts. I understand that the Society is still in financial stress, owing to slow sales of season tickets, and have cut the price for the rest of the season to $5.00 and $3.00. Believe me it's worth it.

A note now on a past event worth mentioning, after the fact. I have heard several rave comments regarding the concert performance of the Vandaleers with the Spokane Symphony in Spokane last Tuesday evening. Bob Serrano, who attended both the campus performance last Sunday and the Spokane showing, told me that they were superb. "Impressive... technically perfect... maintained rhythmic integrity... dynamic presentation... truly inspired... not just good or great but fantastic" were some of Serrano's comments. I heard others around here just as laudatory. I'm sorry I missed it and for those who went, it sounds as if you were really rewarded. I guess we have a right to be proud of the Vandaleers.

Set, costumes readied for Hamlet

Anyone looking in on the Ad. Building Auditorium these days will be treated to a glimpse of Hamlet's castle, which is being readied for the play's appearance March 8-11.

A play as great as Shakespeare's Hamlet obviously deserves a great set, which is what Director Forrest Sears and Designer George Croskey are creating. The set offers a much larger stage area than ever before and utilizes two side stages, right and left, two gigantic staircases, a throne platform upstage, battlements eight feet above the stage floor, where much of the outdoor action takes place, and a large forestage, jutting eight rows into the auditorium itself. These many stage areas provide flexibility. The play's action can be continuous from one stage area to another with no black-outs, as a true Elizabethan production would have been.

The various stage areas also provide an almost photographic feeling, allowing for close-ups on the forestage and medium and long-shots on the other stage areas. When viewed in its entirety, the Hamlet set reminds one of a prison, with its great battlements and barred doors. It serves to infer metaphorically that the court of Denmark and hence Denmark itself was a prison of sickness and gloom.

in the auditorium will be limited to 500 persons. No one in the audience will be more than thirty feet from the action on stage.

A huge costume crew of students and volunteer townspeople has been busy for three months making seventy all-new costumes from designs by George Croskey and executed by Ed Chavez. Much of the credit for this ambitious project goes to Mrs. Nora Tisdale who has coordinated the Moscow volunteer seamstresses, and Leeanne Barris, a U. of I. home economics major who has overseen much of the work itself.

Laura Richarz, a senior drama major, has been in charge of props for the play and has spent much time checking the historical accuracy of the 50-75 props needed.

Hamlet will be presented in the U. of I. Ad. Auditorium March 8-11 with curtain time at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the SUB information desk and are free to students upon showing an ASUI card.

The Vandal basketball team put a firm grip on the Big Sky Conference cellar this past Wednesday night with an 85-69 loss to Gonzaga University. This was the last game of the season for Idaho which finished 5-20 for the season.

Basketballers capture eighth in Big Sky

In their last game of the season, the Idaho Vandals were unable to handle a hot Gonzaga team and lost to the Bulldogs, 85-69, Wednesday in the Memorial Gymnasium before a small crowd of around 1,500 spectators.

The Gonzaga win put them in a tie for second place in the conference while Idaho remained in the cellar with an exciting 5-20 season record and only two conference wins.

Although Idaho pulled ahead for a short time early in the game, the Bulldogs roared to a 41-29 halftime lead on hot shooting from both the field and the free throw line, 55 percent and 83 percent respectively.

Gonzaga's Joe Clayton took over in the second half and connected for 14 of his eighteen total points to keep Gonzaga out in front to stay. Clayton shared high scoring honors with Idaho's Marty Siegwien who, also, had eighteen counters.

Idaho fans who attended the game were entertained at halftime by the Idaho Jazz as a preview to this weekend's jazz band activities.

Also at halftime, award winners were announced for the 1972 basketball season. The Ron White Award for Most Valuable Player was given to sophomore Steve Ton from Torrance, Calif. Don Almquist from Mullan Idaho, won the Jay Gano Award for Most Inspirational Player. The Oz Thompson Award for Sportsmanship and Leadership went to senior Adrian Wegner who is from American Falls, Idaho.

The final award to be presented was the Rich Fox Award which goes to the outstanding senior athlete in any of the four major sports with a grade point of over 3.0. This year, that award went to a Vandal trackster Jim Ferguson, from Post Falls who ended up with above a 3.2 accumulative grade.

Before the varsity game, the frosh showed that relief is on the way for the Idaho Vandals as they ended the year with an 11-7 win-loss record by defeating the Gonzaga frosh easily for the second time, 89-62. Dana LaFerriere, Jim Valentino and Mike Dunda were the high scorers for the frosh with 20, 16 and 14 points respectively.
