Black Culture Week

Blacks discuss relations with white majority on campus

Editor's note: The Black Student Union's Black Cultural Week began Sunday with a soul food dinner and featured an open house last night at the BSU Center. It continues through the end of this week with a Borah Theater movie tonight, free basketball Wednesday, poetry reading Thursday, and a fashion show Friday night. It ends Saturday with a 9 p.m. Stylistics Concert in the Memorial Gym. Ticket prices are $2 for students with ID cards and $3 for adults, on sale in the Student Union during the week or at the door Saturday night.

Three blacks were interviewed by Rod Gramer, Argonaut reporter, concerning the week's activities.

When was the last time you ate black eyed peas and chitlins, or read a novel by Richard Wright? Have you ever studied W.E.B. De Bois or read the messages of Malcolm X?

Some people may say 'so what' and pass these questions off with a shrug of the shoulder.

But all of these things are part of black culture and are important to Black Americans in this country and also to the blacks at the University of Idaho.

Whites, "just don't understand"

Some blacks feel that whites should learn to understand black culture in order to help relations between the two races. One of these is Robert Williams a BSU member.

"The people here in Moscow aren't necessarily prejudice they just don't understand," noted Williams. "The awareness of black culture is necessary here in Moscow and at the university. If the white community can understand they may begin to know what makes them prejudice and discriminate."

"Whites can get something out of this week, but how much? What can you get out of soul food except the knowledge that blacks are good cooks."

Williams feels that after the whites understand black culture they may be able to distinguish between those who didn't understand and those who are truly prejudice.

"Like taking me back home"

"I think this week will have many purposes," says Carl Robinson, another BSU member.

"Everything that is happening this week has a special meaning for me. It's like taking me back home. It's been a long time since I ate soul food."

Bernard Rembert says there is little hope that the black and white man will live as brothers; at least not in his life time. For him the ability of whites to understand black culture makes little difference.

Carl Robinson tends to agree with Rembert.

"Whites can get something out of this week, but how much? What can you get out of soul food except the knowledge that blacks are good cooks," he says.

According to Robinson whites are afraid of black culture. "Whites up here just don't want to mix. They're prejudice because they don't understand," he says.

"They don't want to find the truth about blacks so they tend to be prejudice," he said.

Whites don't want to learn

The black man discovered things about the white man, because he went to his schools and the white values were forced upon him. But, according to Robinson, the whites don't want to learn about the blacks.

It seems that the whites may be starting to care about black culture, because the black people are gaining power.

"I used to be bused to an all black school in Texas," says Robinson. "Everyday we would pass an all white school. Now it is the 'in thing' to be for integration."

"This state is run by the older generation; its 15 or 20 years behind the times. The parents here are narrow minded, they teach their kids this place is the greatest on earth; even free from drugs. Its about time they faced up to reality."

"The whites care now because they are afraid of the blacks," he added. According to some of the members of the BSU the blacks want to make it on their own. Black culture is effective and the blacks are capable, they say. All the black community needs now, they maintain, is co-operation, not help, from the whites.

Idaho - a lost cause

As far as Idaho is concerned Robinson considers it a lost cause. "This state is run by the older generation, it's 15 to 20 years behind the times. The parents here are narrow minded, they teach their kids this place is the greatest place on earth; even free from drugs. It's about time they face up to reality," he said.

Being black here at Idaho is like being black anywhere else according to Robinson.

"There are many places we won't go here, because we don't want to, Robinson added. There is little black culture here except what we can generate. We like to do certain things so we do it together."

Robinson thinks 80 per cent of the people at the university are prejudice, 15 per cent don't understand and the rest don't care.

The coach was prejudice, that's the reason I quit the basketball team," he says.

"Whites try to treat you better because you're black"

Jerry Hall says the problem of prejudice is taking on another face. "Sometimes whites here try to treat you better just because you black, I don't really like it, I want them to be sincere," he noted.

"We can tell when whites are prejudice or false, because we have had white culture pounded on us. But whites can't tell about blacks," Robinson adds.

Suppose I suppress and torture you for no reason at all what would you do?" Whites can't understand Blacks being prejudice," commented Robinson.

Some of the BSU members feel prejudice is a real thing in Idaho.

There are 35 black people at the University, but that figure includes foreign blacks. Of all the domestic black students only four are on academic scholarships, and all of these are girls.

Trying to keep the athletes happy

Robinson says it's interesting that they are all girls. He feels even though the girls are qualified for scholarships, that they are just tokens for the black athletes.

"They recruit these girls for the black athletes, because the university is trying to keep the athletes happy."

He says the university needs a certain amount of black students to keep federal aid coming in. If the black athletes are unhappy and leave the institution would lose the funds.

"The girls are just here to keep the athletes here," Robinson added.

He indicated not too many blacks want to go to the University of Idaho anyway.

Jerry Hall says that when he goes home and a black asks about Idaho he tells him not to come here.

"Something wrong"

"There must be something wrong," says Hall. Washington State and Idaho are only eight miles apart but there are many more blacks there."

Discrimination may not be limited to the student body only. The faculty at Idaho is more scarce of black people than the student body. There is only one black teacher among the whole university faculty.

"This is suppose to be a institution of learning," says Robinson. We're suppose to learn more about people, that's what college is all about."

Some feel that without black professors the students are missing some of the knowledge they could gain.

"The main thing would be the intermixing of ideas and the discussion," said Hall.

Too many times when black teachers are hired they are placed in departments like sociology. According to Robinson black professors should be placed in all fields not just "doodling" in the social sciences. "Blacks should teach everything, even math if they are qualified," he added.

"Not to keyed on interracial dating"

Some people feel the rising influence of black culture is changing the blacks attitude towards interracial dating also.

"I'm not too keyed up on the idea of interracial dating because of where I'm from," Hall said. "Back east blacks frown upon interracial dating but things are looser on the west coast. In the east you can date white girls if it will benefit you; the blacks don't care you're still in their corner. Back there the blacks live close together so there are plenty of girls, but out on the west coast blacks aren't concentrated in one place so sometimes it's hard to date black girls, then you date white girls, but my first choice is always black girls," noted Hall.

"... my first choice is always black girls."

"I couldn't talk to a white like I do to a black, I would have to relate to her differently," said Hall.

"There is a language barrier sometimes, because I use terms from my culture," said Robinson.

Once in a while Hall said he will say something to a white girl then he will have to rephrase what he said so she will understand what he said.

"When she starts to understand you, and you have a relationship going, you can be yourself," said Hall.

Idaho not like the rest

Idaho though is not like the rest of the west, according to Hall, interracial dating is frowned upon by the whites. There isn't a great deal of interracial dating here," he said.

"Everything we have said boils down to one thing, if your black you have to work twice as hard," concluded Robinson.

Blood drive starts today

A competition between living groups and a goal of 500 pints are attractions of the campus blood drive being held today and tomorrow.

Open for voluntary blood donors at the SUB Ballroom from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., the blood drive sponsors competition by recording living group members. Linda Frei, chairman of the drive, advised people to attend early in the day.

Qualifications for giving blood include weight of at least 110 lbs., age between 18 and 65, not having given blood for at least eight weeks, no health histories of jaundice, malaria, heart disease and diabetes requiring medication, or mononucleosis within the last six months.

Most allergies are allowed although a waiting period of 24 hours to two weeks follows some immunizations and vaccinations and a waiting period of six months is required after a pregnancy.

Comm Board choices listed

Pending approval of the ASUI senate, Ric Glaub, a junior at the U of I, will be named as next semester's Argonaut editor. Glaub, a journalism major, was chosen Sunday afternoon by Communications Board at hearings which nominated four persons to head various media positions.

Linda Martiny, a senior in interior design, was chosen head of the graphics art area. Craig Evans was nominated for the head photographer's position. Evans is a junior in agricultural economics.

Jackie Hadenfeldt, a junior in journalism, was nominated as the board's choice for Gem editor. Earlier in the week Comm Board selected John Foley, a junior in Radio-TV, as calendar editor.

The board's nominations are subject to final approval by the senate within two weeks.

All media heads except the Argonaut editor will assume their duties in June. The Argonaut editor will serve for one semester beginning next semester.

The Traffic Committee has requested cooperation from students and staff members in observing the signs and traffic regulations in lot 29 east of the SUB and lot 18 north of the SUB. The committee reports people have been observed parking against the flow of traffic, directly under "No Parking" signs and over the sidewalk and in the area between the sidewalk and the street. Strict enforcement of the traffic regulations on these lots will begin tomorrow.

Lesotho ambassador here until Thursday

A tour of the Rush farm and an all-campus seminar are part of the items on today's agenda for His Excellency Mthusi T. Mashologu, ambassador to the United States from the Kingdom of Lesotho. These are part of the things he will be seeing and doing on his three-day trip to Idaho.

The ambassador will arrive in Spokane at 12:49 p.m. today and, after a press conference there, will journey to Coeur d'Alene where he will be officially greeted, according to Bob Serrano, coordinator for the event.

At 4:30 p.m. today, the ambassador will be greeted by Mayor Merk and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce at Friendship Square. The public is urged to be present at this meeting.

SUB Dinner

A tour and coffee at the Rush farm at 5 p.m. will follow. There will then be dinner at the SUB, where the ambassador will meet with ASUI officials, Serrano said.

An academic seminar on Lesotho, which is open to the public, is then scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Cataldo Room. The ambassador and his wife will then meet with members of the International Students and the Black Student Union.

Wednesday, His Excellency will tour Dworshak Dam and the State Fish Hatchery. That evening, there will be a formal reception off-campus from 6-7 p.m.; a university reception in the SUB from 7:10-8 p.m. and then a banquet for the two visitors at 8 p.m. in the SUB.

Receptions Open

"The receptions are open to everybody," Serrano said, "and invitations have been sent out to all areas in the university."

Wednesday, while the ambassador is touring the dam site, Mrs. Mashologu will tour the museum, McDonald Elementary School, and campus and university buildings. There will also be a tea in her honor at 701 Nez Perce Drive from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Thursday, the visitors will breakfast at the SUB at 7:30-8:45 a.m. before departing for Spokane to catch a plane back to Washington D.C.

Like Idaho

"We are aware the itinerary doesn't do lots of things it should," Serrano said, "but we think it represents as broad as presentation as possible and still gives a fair representation."

He said the organizers had felt obliged to show the ambassador the makeup of Idaho to the greatest extent possible.

"One thing he is probably not aware of is that, judging from pictures of his country, his country is a lot like Idaho," Serrano said.

Lesotho, formerly known as Basutoland, is an 11,716 square mile kingdom in the eastern region of Southern Africa. It gained its freedom from the United Kingdom Oct. 4, 1966.

Former Ambassador

His Excellency was educated at Lesotho High School in Maseru, the capital of Lesotho; the University College of Fort Hare in South Africa; the University College of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in Rhodesia; Queens University in Belfast and the London School of Economics. He is a former ambassador to the United Nations and has been an ambassador to the United States since April 1969. He is also High Commissioner to Canada.

"We think having the ambassador here is helping build an awareness of black men and a black nation, which goes along with the Black Cultural Week also," Serrano said.

The visit is being sponsored by the ASUI Programs Board, Freshman Council and the Campus Service Organizations. The ambassador's transportation is being paid through Issues and Forums funds.

Cooperative Child Care Center operating

Dear Sir:

After successfully operating our Cooperative Child Care center for seven months, we would like to offer the benefit of our group's experience to others.

We have been able to achieve our three goals with a minimum of expense. (1) We have provided parents with free time during the day. (2) We have provided growth and learning experiences in a group atmosphere for our children. (3) We have furthered our own knowledge of child development and group interaction.

Part of our success can be attributed to the flexibility all of us have had to develop to solve our problems. We now feel ourselves to be in a position to offer our help to others interested in starting a similar operation.

In our opinion, the coop is an example of what groups can do to meet needs not fulfilled by the community — without much money, without government funds and without waiting for social institutions to provide them. Moscow rates a low priority on government waiting lists even though the city definitely needs more low-

UCLA cagers to join UI team?

There are rumors going around campus that several of the UCLA varsity basketball players are transferring the U. of I. It seems as if Bill Walton and the gang are going to try to boost the 1971-72 Vandal basketball record. These same rumors also speculate that under the mentorship of Coach Wayne Anderson the Vandals can expect no better than a 3rd place finish in the Big Sky.

Park village matter not dropped

The last issue of the Argonaut carries a story about the Juntura Committee which contained two important errors. The first concerned our action about the Park Village Housing. Inquiry by two members

Editorial

Though it may be for fear of sounding too backwoods and a little uncultured, a word or two should be said about the students in relation to the visit of the Honorable Mashologu from Lesotho. We all know it's unusual for an ambassador to make an official visit to Idaho, of all places, and we're all impressed by some aspect of the trip. It is the hope, however, of the Argonaut staff and editor, that the ambassador will not be shielded from the students who are paying to bring him here.

Formality is traditionally one of those uncomfortable aspects of international politics but it seems despite tradition that the ambassador should be given a full view of the university. After all, he surely didn't agree to come to Idaho so he could receive our variation of international protocol.

It is hoped that the Ambassador from Lesotho will be afforded a few informal moments to talk to plain old students about plain old Idaho without the formal trimmings.

A suggestive note

Argonaut-

Why doesn't the school paper talk about sports such as swimming and skiing? If there's a sports editor why isn't there a sport section or page?

From the Ad building suggestion box.

Editor's note: To date the argonaut has published five or six sports features and news stories on skiing and several on swimming. This semester it has been Argonaut policy to devote more attention to sports such as swimming and skiing rather than just football and basketball. Students showed an increased interest in this area in their responses to last fall's athletic referendum.

of the Committee revealed that after the Board of Regents had given authorization to tear down Park Village Housing, the flood conditions caused the area to be declared a disaster area, and funds became available to replace the wiring which had been rendered unuseable (because hazardous) by the flood. An appeal to the Administration to reverse its decision in light of the new facts (financial aid in renovating the units) was rejected by Vice President Richardson. The Committee decided this route of appeal for reconsideration was hopeless, and therefore decided to appeal to President Hartung. Our appeal for reconsideration was favorably received and President Hartung has arranged for an independent investigation of Park Village Housing. The matter has very definitely not been dropped by Juntura Committee, as the Argonaut said.

Second, the discussion of a policy recommendation relative to Afro-American Studies, the Argonaut did not include the information that a proposal to faculty council to urge the administration to hire more minority faculty and more women was considered. However, it was decided that this general request was inappropriate in the context of a recommendation on Afro-American Studies, and such recommendations to the Council would be forthcoming in the form of separate recommendations.

Black guest speaker seeks "human rights"

by Libby Matthews

The most amazing aspect of Rosetta McCrackin, professor of sociology at Seattle Central Community College, is her humanitarianism. She is black but does not speak to blacks about "identity crisis" nor does she speak to whites about the "guilt" they should have. Instead she meets all on an equal plane and speaks of human needs and human rights.

McCrackin, speaking to several classes during Black Culture Week, is primarily concerned with getting people to think. Her main contention is that schools don't always educate students to think but instead program them into believing what the educators want them to believe. "We as people, have to go out and read several books to get the truth. The truth is there if we go and look for it," she said.

As an example of how we are uneducated McCrackin used Garrett Morgan. Morgan was the black man who invented stop signs. Stop signs are very much related to automobiles but we learn of Ford but not of Morgan in our history classes.

According to McCrackin, if we begin to educate ourselves into the truth about American history, there would be no need for black culture week or any other culture week.

"We are in culture and helping culture year around. We (blacks) should be given credit year around," she said.

McCrackin expressed support of busing because "it is all we can do right now for there is no alternative." She suggested that the blacks might have schools on Saturday or Sunday to help them find and keep their black identity.

Speaking on the political scene, McCrackin said Shirley Chisholm, a black woman, running for the presidency, doesn't have a chance but "someone has to start."

McCrackin expressed a dislike for Nixon but said "Nixon in a way was the best thing for the blacks because he made us realize the need for a united front."

In Seattle McCrackin is conducting a class in political awareness that is trying to insure that blacks have delegates in both parties. Hopefully, these delegates will have enough power to tell and not ask for certain things from the two political parties.

McCrackin concluded by saying "If people start thinking they will realize we all came from the common black ancestor in the cradle of civilization, Africa, and we all have human needs and all should have human rights."

Democratic district caucus

April 17 at 8:00 p.m. in the Latah County Courthouse the Latah Democrats will hold their district 5 legislative caucus. This caucus will select delegates to the State convention and vote for their choice for the democratic presidential nomination.

The Democratic party has enacted new procedures to govern these caucus. All people of voting age who sign a pledge of their party affiliation are eligible to vote and participate in the caucus.

ASUI Attorney General's Office

The Attorney General's Office is divided into three sub-divisions, each having its own staff, organization, and function. The subdivisions are Consumer Affairs Division, Student Legal Services and Justice and Administrative Division.

The Consumer Affairs Division is actually an extension of the State Attorney General's office. It acts as the regional office for consumer protection and is not limited to student use. Its area of responsibility is all of Northern Idaho. Although it is placed under the supervision and control of the ASUI Attorney General, it is also answerable to the State Attorney General's office in Boise. Its purpose and function, speaking generally, is to educate the consumer as to his legal rights and remedies.

investigate and handle claims of consumers as to fraud or other illegal activity by a merchant, and, if necessary, to initiate legal action against such merchants. John Thornton is the head of this division.

The purpose and function of the Student Legal Services Division is to make available to the student legal advice and service with special emphasis on the legal problems that are peculiar to the student. This type of service and advice covers very broad areas from draft counseling to advising the student on how to get his dog out of the dog pound. At present, this service is limited to students, and all that can be given is advice. However, in the future there are plans for making this an effective form of legal aid where the student may actually obtain legal representation. Dave Savage is the head of this division.

The purpose and function of the Justice and Administration Division is to act as the judicial portion of student government. One of the specific functions of this division is to carry out the judicial relationship and organization between the University and the student or student body. All judicial matters, particularly of a disciplinary nature will be handled by this division. Rick Cole serves as head of this division.

Black Cultural Week

Style show set for Friday

A fashion-talent show featuring U of I blacks displaying the new look in campus dress for spring will be Friday night's event during Black Cultural Week.

The show will be at 7:30 p.m. in St. Augustine's Center. Eight male and female models will display clothing from four local stores.

Three part Program

The show, said Gwen Stewart, its coordinator, will be given in three parts. These will be sportswear, evening wear, and lounging and hostess attire. Clothing will be provided by Creighton's, David's, Robans, and Gregson's. A few of the models will be wearing togas and dishikies provided from their own wardrobes.

Talent presentations will be given between the three sections, said Stewart. Not all of the talent has been lined up yet, she said, but presentations will include a vocal solo by Debbie Williams, a dance presentation by four BSU sisters, the reading of a poem written by Jay Wheeler and the singing of the Black National Anthem.

Nightclub Atmosphere

Those attending the show are asked to not wear grubby attire. The atmosphere, said Stewart, will be similar to that of a nightclub. She suggested that men wear ties and that women wear dresses or pantsuits.

A record hop will follow the show. Loren Dantzler and Jerry Hall will be disc jockeys for the hop which will include soul as well as other contemporary songs.

Admission for the event is fifty cents.

Part of the activities planned for Black culture week is a black fashion and talent show scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday at St. Augustines center.

Teacher-judging program formed

PRINCETON, N.J. — A new program that allows students to evaluate the performance of their teachers has been developed by Educational Testing Service (ETS).

Besides allowing students a chance to express their views anonymously about courses and teachers, it also gives instructors an objective way to monitor their own performance and progress.

Improving instruction

Called the Student Instructional Report (SIR), the program is an effort to improve instruction based on responses to an ETS-designed questionnaire supplied to students by the colleges themselves.

The questionnaire was developed by ETS researchers with the aid of college faculty members and students. It is composed of questions about specific teaching practices and more general topics including such queries as:

- Did the instructor encourage students to think for themselves?
- Were the course objectives made clear?
- How much effort did students put into the course?
- Were students informed of how they would be evaluated?

Expected grades

The ETS questionnaire also includes questions about a student's reasons for taking the course and the grade he expects to receive. In addition, an instructor is free to include questions of his own to learn more about factors unique to his particular class. The questionnaire results are reported for each class as a group, not for individual students.

Faculty creates a committee; hears budget outlook, cutbacks

The general faculty listened to budget cutbacks and approved the formation of a new standing committee, the Academic Hearing Board at its Monday meeting.

The function of this board will be to hear appeals from students on academic matters including eligibility for advanced placement, maintenance of objectivity and fairness in assignments.

In a budget outlook report he gave at the end of the meeting, President Hartung stated "It is the worst I have seen in my experience here. And I don't see any tremendous hope for improvement for next year."

Due to the lack of funds, Hartung announced the deletion of the University Office of Planning and the University Office of Institutional Research.

He also reported a personnel cutback in the Alumnae Office, Public Relations Office and in employment of administrative secretaries.

He said "We plan to try and hold the line. We are thinking about holding enrollments or dropping them back. We will not fill any new positions or vacancies except in special incidences. We have done everything we can to protect the academic integrity."

A PAULIST DOESN'T WAIT TO BE ORDAINED TO GET INVOLVED.

If you think that ordination is something like graduation—and the time in between is similar to marking time—then you couldn't be more mistaken.

The Paulists were founded with the belief that each man is a member of the community and he contributes his own thing. Each is an individual with his own talents and he is given the freedom to use them in his own way. But not later. Now.

For instance, during the novitiate, novices work in such diverse areas as hospitals, vocational rehabilitation centers and Universities. They serve as assistant chaplains, co-retreat masters, student teachers and psychiatric aides.

Paulist Seminary create recreational programs, direct "Days of Recollection" for CCD students, direct film series, experiment with the use of media in the liturgy as a preaching tool, originate and edit the Paulist Free Press, coordinate Lenten lectures and organize Home Masses, to mention just a few.

When you commit yourself to the Paulists, it isn't a someday thing. It's now. Today.

For more information about the Paulists, write to: Rev. Donald C. Campbell, C.S.P., Vocation Director, Room 300.

Big Don brings out the boys

Coach Don Robbins announced that the Idaho Vandals would hold their spring drills April 4-29 with the spring football game to be played at Adams Field, Clarkston, Wash., on the evening of April 29th. The game will be co-sponsored by the Lewis-Clark Boys Club and the Idaho Athletic Department.

Robbins said that he expected more than 60 candidates to report for the spring drills. However, he will be short four players, including two starters, who are playing baseball. The baseball players are Steve Hunter, all-American candidate for safety and the nations 10th leading punter last year, and Rick Simmons, all-star defensive end, both starters last year; Alan Head, who started some games as a wide receiver, and Mike Clemmens, a defensive back.

Ralph Sletager, starting linebacker, will also miss spring drills as he is recovering from a broken leg, suffered in an automobile accident.

Robbins was cautiously optimistic about the Vandal team as he lost only three offensive starters and three defensive from last year's championship team. "We have lost some players in Ron Linehan, Bill Cady, Andy Kupp, Steve Barker, Rich Kushlan, Jack Goddard, Tom Jarman and Fred Riley. At this time it looks like the toughest spot to fill will be Barker's position at nose-guard," Robbins said.

The Vandals will have Rick Seefried, qb; Bernie Rembert, rb; Randy Peterson, rb; and Jerry Hall, fl, returning in the offensive backfield which will also be bolstered by the return of quarterback Bucky Bruns, who was red-shirted last year.

Up front will be veterans Ken Muhlbeier at center, Dave Crnich at guard, Larry Warren and Larry Bosma at tackles and Dave Burchfield at tight end. In addition, there will be letterman like Tom Doud, de; Fred Morscheck, lb; Alan Vance, de; Lloyd Grimsrud, dt; Bob Van Duyn, of; Jim Welch, te; and Mark Busch, dt. All of these players saw plenty of action and many started at one time during the season. Jay Curcio and Kevin Ault, as wide receivers, are other veterans who saw plenty of action last year.

Defensively the Vandals will have Rick Simmons as defensive end; Mike Newell at defensive tackle; Randy Marquess, All-American candidate at linebacker; and Rod Maynard, Kelly Courage, Randy Hall, Ross Nelson, and Hunter in the defensive backfield along with Clements.

The Vandals have seven junior college transfers who should also be making strong bids for starting positions. They include Randy Ammerman from Yakima Valley Junior College, rb; Darrell Dotson, Columbia Basin College, lb; Kevin Wolske, Treasure Valley, dt; Craig Pritchard, Spokane Falls, og; Jerry Sinclair, Treasure Valley, ot; Scott Manson, Columbia Basin, ng; and Joe Feehan, Diablo Valley, de.

Sinclair and Pritchard are the newest junior college transfers to enter Idaho and Robbins feels that they could be making a strong bid for starting positions.

Robbins also is pleased with several of the freshman who will be joining the varsity for spring drills. "These fine athletes show that they have plenty of talent and if some don't make the grade as starters in their first year, I feel they will be pushing for positions and will give the team some good depth at several positions," Robbins said.

Some of the freshman who are making bids for the varsity include Brian Jacobsen, dt; Rich Brown, rb; Ross Goddard, gb, brother of graduating co-captain Jack; Kirk Dennis, wide receiver; Carl Rana, og; Ben Everson, de; Jerry Secrest, ot; Curt Parsons, db; Jim Riordan, ng; Dave Hershey, dt; Nick Nead, te; Dick Baranco, rb; and Jim Ranier, db. Steve Tanner, incoming sophomore from Bonners Ferry, is expected to make a bid for a specialist position with his side-winding place kicking.

Robbins also added that he was highly pleased with the job the staff had done with the off-season weight problem and the new members Tom Roth, who will handle the defensive secondary, and George Dyer, who will coach the defensive line, have added much to the program. Ray Fulton will be the defensive coordinator and Bob Thompson the offensive coordinator. Don Matthews will be the offensive line coach and Ed Troxel, who is head track coach, will join the staff in the fall, working with the freshman and offensive backs.

The scene was an abandoned sporting goods warehouse. The time as usual, was midnight. Suddenly, the warehouse sprung to life with the roar of a super-charged automobile rushing through electricly-controlled doors. The sound subsided as the engine was shut off. From behind the wheel jumped a massive figure. He was dressed in a dazzling suit of gold sweat pants and pitted out T-shirt. Springing to his side was a small boy wearing a bad case of acne. Yes folks, it was the dynamic duo, the marvelous mungoes, the Vandal viruses, none other than SUPER JOCK and his boy blunder Jim Trunks.

In real life Super Jock was actually Alphons O'Reilly, a meek undercover agent for Hane's Underwear. Jim on the other hand was a folk singer that had come straight out of Wedlock, Iowa to be born free again as a crime fighter and righter of wrongs. They had met each other at an Athletes Need Action party and from that point on decided to become the saviors of the little people.

"This better be important Supe!" Jim remarked, "I'd just finished a small snack (three gallons of milk, six hamburgers, two pies and a noisy parrot) and was getting ready for bed."

"I hat to break it to ya' this way kid, but I'm sure that you'd like to know exactly what's been going on." Super Jock replied. "Their's been some foul play out at the old football stadium. With all the activities planned for there in the next few weeks we've got to solve the crime quickly or millions of fans will kill themselves if they can't see their favorite team in action."

"What are we going to do," Jim sniffled, choked with emotion.

"I just don't know," Jock weeped. "What's going on here? What danger lerkns in the future. Tune in next week as Super Jock and Jimmy try to crack the case of the stolen base."

Protein seekers, unite!

Reprinted from "The Peak," Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, B.C.

by The Chilko Kid

Aliment freaks out there, hark: you have reason to rejoice. If you are concerned about ecological limits-food shortages there is a double reason to rejoice. If you are a cook open to new ideas, triple reason. If you are all of the above and a lover of good books too you will be glad to hear of an alimentary book containing information with integrity.

Diet For A Small Planet has been out in the United States for about six months now.

Here is a book without the usual one-shot half-baked hare brain scheme to slim your waist, sharpen your wits and straighten your teeth. This is a book with enough honesty to say on the first page that "the concepts in this book are no final solution." But as it says on the same page "they represent a giant step in the right direction."

So what does the book say? Ms. Lappe has a fairly simple message, basically.

You need a certain amount of protein, and it must come with a full complement of the essential amino acids. OK. But production of protein can be very expensive and wasteful process. In fact it is. But there are several ways we could lower the cost of protein production and waste less of it. You can get a complete protein dinner without participating in these luxurious (read selfish-imperialist) methods.

What is selfish, luxurious or imperialistic about eating meat (meat is the most expensive type of protein production)? You will recall that cattle have about a ten percent efficiency ratio in terms of total food put in and total food obtained. Well the protein part of this ratio is even worse, on the order of 5 percent of protein eaten by cows is returned to people. Now cows and other grazers use up about one-half of the world's agricultural lands. Admittedly, some of this land is not suitable for anything but grazing, but large amounts of it are. When vegetables are grown, more protein per acre can be obtained — cereals produce five times more, legumes 10 times more, and for an outlandish but true example, spinach can produce twenty-six times more protein than cattle per acre.

Besides the land used up by livestock which could produce more protein, they eat huge amounts of grains grown on the remainder of the land. The one billion people developed countries use about the same amount of grains for feed as the remaining two billion people use as food.

And then what do you, as consumer, get for your high priced meat? Since cattle are near the top of the food chain, you get the accumulated toxins of all the pesticides and herbicides they ate. They take 95 percent of the protein, but they pass on most of the poisons. In meat, fish and poultry the average dose of DDT and related compounds is .228 parts per million, and in cereals and grains it is .008 parts per million.

Diet For A Small Planet makes the case in a more complete and maybe coherent case. But it makes another point. The complete protein is lacking in individual plants. But if they are eaten in combinations that provide a complete set of aminos, dinners every bit as nutritious as meat, or better, can be had. They are also cheaper and less poisonous. So Ms. Lappe has been kind enough to provide her readers with lists of complementing foods and recipes.

Music events on campus

John Ford's Comic Opera Theatre production of the "Barber of Seville" will be the next Community Concert presentation at 7 p.m. Sunday, April 16, in the university's Memorial Gymnasium. Please note the time of the production is 7 p.m. instead of the usual 8 p.m.

Karen J. Gunther senior music major will give her senior clarinet recital at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Music Building Recital Hall.

Music on her program ranges from Mozart's "Divertimento No. 1" for two clarinets and bassoon to a Hindemith "Sonata," Works by Debussy and Stravinsky are also included.

Darrel C. Dyer, a graduate assistant in music, will give a senior saxophone recital at 8 p.m. tonight at the Music Building Recital Hall.

Three contemporary works written especially for French saxophone virtuoso Marcel Mule will be included on his program. Also included are a sonata for alto saxophone and piano written by Paul Creston, composer in residence at Central Washington State University, and a saxophone quartet by Jean Francaix.

Soprano Ruby A. Renzema, senior voice major and a recent semi-finalist in the Metropolitan Opera auditions, will offer her senior recital at 8 p.m. tonight, at the Music Building Recital Hall.

Major works on her program are "nuit d'Ete" by Berloiz, selected German arias by Handel and "Hermit Songs" by the contemporary composer Samuel Barber.

A recital of 20th century chamber music, directed by graduate student James P. Harrer, Moscow, will be given at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Music Building Recital Hall.

Two of the four works on the program were also written by Harrer, a music composition major. The pieces are "Music for a Great American Painting," which introduces pre-recorded tape material with the instruments, and "Interaction IV," which is completely improvisation.

As in his fall recital, Harrer will offer brief explanations before the performance of each piece.

What's happening

Life's little miseries

Life can be tough enough as it is, most of the time. But there are those little things that can really push one over the edge. What I mean, is those little defeats and irritations that a person can suffer daily that take the shine right off the apple. The really irritating thing is that they are usually so small that we don't have the time to work up a good healthy hate for them. We can't hate them outright, but we have to hate them in retrospect. It's like thinking of the really snappy come-back about an hour after some jerk put you down.

It's time to expose these nasty little defeats. I've assembled a partial list, after diligent research into the problem, and now print them for your information. To be forewarned is to be for-armed.

— Those nifty little individual packets of catsup, mustard, and mayonnaise. Either you don't tear off enough or too much and end up licking it off your fingers, wiping it off your shirt, and facing the problem of disposal of the bloody little carcasses, often in an ashtray.

— Sitting down at a table after someone has filled an ashtray with gooey remains of the above.

— At drive-ins, they never bring you enough of the little monsters to even paste down a postage stamp and they want 2 cents for any extras.

— Putting your last dime in the coke machine and watching the thing piss your drink down the drain when the cup doesn't drop.

— Running out of cigarettes at 3:00 a.m. in the morning.

— Running out of matches at 3:00 a.m. in the morning.

— Having to bum a cigarette from a stingy acquaintance and discovering that they smoke Bel-Airs.

— Asking for a cigarette from a righteous, "I just gave them up" former chain smoker.

— After four days of seeing deans, etc., discovering that you need one more signature.

— Trying to get anything out of the Payroll Office.

— Standing in line in the rain for two hours to see the really great movie, getting within five people of the box-office, and having the manager announce that they're filled up.

— Pulling the tab off a tab-top can — without opening it.

— Lacerating your hand on a non-twist top bottle after several boozy hours of twist-offs.

— Filling up at a U-Serve gas station and driving off leaving your gas cap on the pump.

— Tea bags in ashtrays.

— Finding the only empty table in the SUB during the lunch rush and trying to find a place to put the tray full of dead salads and other garbage left by the previous occupant (s).

— Challenging and losing five games in a row on the pool table to the same opponent (s) and when you finally win the sixth game, having them say, "Gee, thanks for the games", and leave.

— Having the class you're always late for on the top floor of any campus building.

— Sitting in a theatre and wondering which someone near you stepped in the doggy dirt.

— Discovering that it was you.

— Discovering too late that there was only one sheet of toilet paper in the dispenser.

— Shampooing with Ben-Gay.

— Brushing your teeth with Bryl-Kreem.

— Sleeping on your ear wrong.

— Breaking your neck getting out of the tub to answer the phone only to hear the "click" on the other end when you pick it up.

— Having "gas" in church, the theatre, at the quiet dinner party, etc.

— Sitting next to someone who has the above.

— Dropping your comb, hairbrush, toothbrush, the shampoo, etc., in the toilet.

— Trying to correct a typing error in a term paper after having taken the sheet out of the machine and, upon re-inserting, not being able to line the damn letters up.

And it goes on. The list is by no means exhaustive, but you get the point. If any of you have any addition or corrections, send 'em on to me and we'll further our research.
