The Report of the Johnson Project

This is right side up - the entire rest of the newspaper has been printed up side down.

The Talisman Project, headquartered at 625 Ash in Moscow, is one of twenty experimental college-based programs funded by the Office of Education in Washington, D.C. The project, operating out of a house rented from the University, serves a variety of functions from that of an organizational center to a library to an escape place. Since the project is a multitude of people, ideas and feelings, attempts to classify fail. Perhaps the best expression defining the project is included in the preface to the original funding proposal: "While the project is designed as a drug education program, it is our hope that it will develop into a people program."

The stated philosophies of the project are as follows:

1. Drug use and abuse are not substance problems, but people problems.
2. American society is a drug-oriented society.
3. Drug use and abuse are not limited to an exclusive group of society.
4. There is a difference between drug use and abuse.
5. Answers to the abuse of drugs are individual; there is not one easy all-inclusive solution.
6. There is no such thing as a drug expert.
7. Information about drugs should not be an end in itself.

While all of these philosophies are drug oriented, the Talisman Project attempts to be much broader than just a drug related project.

The philosophies are interpreted in the broadest sense by the project workers, who believe society might solve the drug problem, but lose the people in the process. It is the project's expressed purpose to avoid this in its operation. In other words, people, their needs, their fears and their loves are the concerns of Talisman House.

Operationally the Project attempts to be as open and flexible as possible; that is, no membership, no dues, no merit badges. An individual becomes actively involved in the project because he wants this involvement, not because he has satisfied certain project requirements.

This concept of self-initiated involvement is one of the more difficult aspects for the project to develop. People who are new to the project are frustrated by the lack of imposed direction. As a group of people, we have been taught what, when, where and how to do things. The concept of doing things because we want to or because we are interested or because it is worthwhile has not been developed, particularly by educational institutions. When something like the Talisman Project comes into existence and attempts to operate on a non-structured level, most people are initially confused by it.

For people actively involved in the project, this unstructured nature creates the continual problem of attempting to define to interested people what the project is as well as developing methods by which people can become involved. The greatest fear expressed by project workers is that this unstructured operational method appeals mostly to those who have had experiences with it and as such may develop into a small circle of individuals and exclude others.

Another concept used by the Talisman Project is best labeled a reverse bureaucracy. Instead of the usual organization structure akin to a pyramid, the project has chosen to reverse this structure. Its operational system is one in which all active or interested individuals make decisions concerning such matters as, how project money is spent, who will be employed and into what areas the project will develop. It may surprise some to find out that the University Administration has supported, almost without exception, this autonomous structure. However, the possibility of this autonomous structure continuing is directly dependent upon the amount of federal funds the project can secure in the future. The underlying decision to reverse the normal bureaucracy was made in hopes that this process would allow new ideas and new people to enter the project.

So what has been the result of this to date? The most obvious is a physical structure open 24 hours a day, open to people of all ages. It is a place to read, talk, sit by yourself, a place to call or come to if you're hassled by something. It is a free place for visitors to our community to stay for a couple of nights.

More important than the physical structure is the fact that the project is a meeting place for people, people who do things in hope of helping others, people who don't do anything that's specific or apparent, but who are always there to add just that little something extra, people who love to get new things going. In other words, people of all sorts, interests and personalities.

The outcome of their combined energy has been projects and activities which include: the Free University, Drug Education Classes in Physical Education and Education, In Service Training programs, workshops, individual help, psychoman drug analysis, drug crisis intervention, speaker's bureau, library, dark room, information of all kinds, retreats and parties.

Finally the project is a possible source of funds to help individuals or groups bring into existence their own projects. Money is considered, by most people in the project, as that necessary commodity and often missing ingredient for the development of a really good activity. Although many individuals would argue that money is the least important aspect of the project, it is in reality another adjunct of the project. It is in this area that individuals least familiar with the project have difficulty understanding it. What organization exists to fund other organizations? The Talisman House does just that in a limited manner through a mini-grant program. Although funds are restricted in this area, the project makes small grants (up to $100.00) to people or organizations in need of such assistance. Areas granted in the past have included recreation equipment for a child cooperative center, a special part of the fall's new student orientation, several psychology projects, a plane ticket for stranded 14 year old, books for special reading classes, feed for horses used in the Free University horse-back riding class, the stage for last spring's Bl Mountain II. In addition to money, the project has provided many people with materials from various sources.

The Talisman Project, then, is a place for individuals to get together, to combine their efforts for the betterment of the University, the community and the state. The future of the project is fairly stable until July, 1973; after that, it is uncertain. So if you are a person who wants to get involved in things, if you have a project, check the Talisman House out. Together this next year we might get some fantastic things going.

Busted bikes

Bike-riding...it's ecological, healthful, and fun. As bicycling's popularity rises, so do incidences involving bicycles, riders and automobiles and their drivers.

The use of bicycles for everything from recreation to school transportation has tripled since last year. Bicycle accidents have risen 500 percent. Half of these accidents involved adult riders and nearly all bike-car accidents were the fault of the bike riders involved.

City Police Chief Clark Hudson reported that a bicycle safety awareness program is starting in Moscow. Visual aid programs on bicycle safety are being presented to area grade schools this week. The police and recreation departments are co-operating in an effort to reduce the number of accidents and thefts concerning bicycles.

Bike riders must obey traffic laws and be defensive riders. Bicycles always come out second best in an accident with a motor vehicle.

So far in 1972, 71 bicycles have been stolen. Half of these bikes were stolen from campus and only about half have been recovered. The other half?? Who knows... They've most likely been painted purple and sold at half price to W.S.U. students.

52 of the 71 bikes stolen were ten-speeds and only 28 had recorded serial numbers. There is a city registration for bicycles to help in recovery of stolen bikes, but many of the stolen bikes are being hi-jacked by racketeers and taken to parts unknown. A state registration might help recover bikes taken away from this area, but at present there is none in existence.

Always lock your bike!!! Lock it to something solid, but avoid using parking meters because bikes can be lifted right over the top of meters. Cheap locks can be cut easily and the combinations are usually not too hard to figure out. Buy a good lock and use it... you'll save cash and frustration! L

Organic bullshit

Organic! This has become the big thing and it seems more desirable to score organic mescaline, psilocybin or THC, than LSD. This might be a shock to some, but "organic" dope just doesn't exist. Yet I always hear tales of "Lone Strangers" who sell to "sophisticated" users. BULLSHIT! What one is sure to find is garbage acid mixed with PCP or some appropriate looking substance and sold as almost anything.

LSD is a relatively simple and cheap substance to manufacture and difficult to purify, as head texts relate. PCP, an animal tranquilizer banned for human use due to its adverse effects, is often available for very little cost. Strychnine in acid is a rarity, but an excessive dose of impure LSD may produce symptoms similar to those of strychnine poisoning. LSD is usually cut and graded at the lab and then marketed that drug which is in greatest demand.

Mescaline can only be bought on the street in peyote buttons. Pure mescaline exists only for those who wish to extract their own, a long and expensive process. In actuality, what is sold on the street as "good mesca line" usually when analysed turns out to be LSD mixed with speed or PCP.

It is impossible to overdose on real mescaline. The body will absorb only so much, then vomits up the rest. LSD will evoke no such reaction.

I have yet to read an analysis of any chemical sold that contains psilocybin. For the most part what exists is a weak LSD-PCP mixture. The same is true about THC, what is sold is commonly PCP.

Although most local dealers don't try to rip anyone off, they usually don't always know the composition of the substance themselves. It's the "pig" dealers who have no reservations about selling shit for a nice profit.

PLEASE, inform your brothers of any rip-offs and bad dope that's around. A call to Nightline or the Talisman House would always be welcome and the information can be passed along and posted. V

The year was 1937 and the man was Henry J. Anslinger, a former alcohol prohibitionist who later became head of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics... Good old Henry was responsible for a good part of the unfounded public statements claiming that pot smoking caused crime, violence, assassination, insanity, release of anti-social inhibitions, mental deterioration and numerous other onerous activities.

The hearings held on the Marijuana Tax Act in 1937 offered no medical, scientific or sociological evidence, nor was any even sought. No alternatives to criminalization were considered. Anslinger offered more anecdotal "evidence" in a similar hearing in the Senate claiming pot caused murder, rape and insanity. Thus in 1937 the Marijuana Tax Act passed which in turn resulted in a rash of state laws that were, in many cases, even more hastily ill conceived... a new prohibition. (By the way, the MTA was proven unconstitutional by a vote of 8-0, May 19, 1969).

There are studies that have been made on marijuana, especially studies probing the so-called "dangers" of pot. After reading these studies one can see the absurdities in Anslinger's propaganda and can see a rational and sane approach to understanding marijuana.

As long ago as 1894 the Indian Hemp and Drug Commission found no connection between marijuana use and "social and moral evils" such as crime, violence or bad character. It even stated that occasional and moderate use may be beneficial.

In 1925 the notably conservative U.S. Army undertook a study on marijuana use in the Panama Canal Zone. They concluded that Panama weed was not habit forming and that delinquencies due to marijuana use were negligible in number when compared to those resulting from alcoholic consumption.

The 1944 La Guardia Report was conducted in New York City. They failed to find a connection between the use of pot and crime. They stated that marijuana is not addictive and does not lead to the use of narcotics. They debunked the idea that pot smoking had catastrophic effects.

Other studies have found similar results. There have been several commissions initiated at governmental expense plus several private studies. The more recent have gone in depth and have taken the moral, medical, sociological and psychological aspects of marijuana into consideration. The latest reports have found no basis for the archaic laws against pot and have suggested a repeal of this new prohibition. Commissions that have called for reform of marijuana laws:

1968 - Wooten Report, Britain.

1971 - National Institute of Mental Health, U.S.A.

1963 - President Kennedy's Advisory Commission on Narcotics and Drug Abuse.

1967 - President Johnson's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice.

10th Staff Report of National Commission on Causes and Prevention of Violence (Presidential Commission, U.S.A.)

National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

National Commission on Reform of Federal Criminal Laws (Congressional study group U.S.A.)

Commissions calling for the repeal of marijuana prohibition:

Two committees of the American Bar Association.

1971 - San Francisco Committee on Crime.

1970 - LeDain Commission Report (Canada).

1972 - President Nixon's National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse.

Now is the time to put away our puritan ethics and look at the marijuana phenomenon in a sane and rational light. The harm done by criminalization of marijuana far outweighs the benefits to society. The same harm done by criminalization exceeds that of pot smoking by an extreme margin.

It is time to liberate marijuana to get amnesty for former pot offenders and keep our brothers and sisters from going to jail for the simple act of smoking pot.

MIKE FACKENTHALL

Recently, some members of the Covered Wagon were present at the Rodeway Inn in Boise to support the United Farm Workers Union. The farmworkers were protesting and picketing a press conference, held by Earl Butz, United States Secretary of Agriculture. Butz has continuously and mercilessly attacked farm workers, insisting that their non-violent, secondary boycott is "un-American" and illegal.

Contrary to Butz's statement, the National Relations Board, after an attempted contradiction, agreed last May that the workers were free to carry out the lettuce boycott. In 1970, the California Supreme Court ruled that the boycott was a perfectly legal means of applying economic pressure.

On several occasions Butz, his associates, and the Farm Bureau, have degraded and dehumanized migrant farm workers, making clear that they are opposed to workers and small farmers. Mr. Nixon and the Republican Party along with the Farm Bureau have supported federal and state legislation, which would deny farm workers the right to strike, boycott, or peacefully picket. Obviously, the administration, is determined to keep the laborer of the field from determining his own future.

Along with receiving the lowest conceivable wages, filthy sanitary facilities, inhumane man hours worked by the entire family and the prejudice they encounter, the farm workers have been denied their voice in the American process, which they, more than anyone else, deserve.

But the farm workers are fighting back, and I support the farm workers in their continual struggle. Headed by Cesar Chavez, the United Farm Workers Union is trying to prevent what has happened to numerous minority working groups in the past. They need your support!

Well, it looks like it's time to take a peek at the King's Gambit. In offering this gambit, White seemingly gives away his King's Bishop's Pawn in return for development of the center, development of his major pieces, doubling of Black's pawns on the King's Bishop file, and general blowing of Black's mind. Black, of course, can either accept or decline the gambit. The following game was played in 1899, between S. Nimzovich and Neumann.

S. Nimzovich, by the way, was the father of Aron Nimzovich, the all-around chess master who single-handedly revolutionized the chess world and kicked off the so-called Hypermodern School of Chess. Aron was a big star in his day, and was often heard to complain about the "chess groupies," or chess-frauleins, who devotedly pursue the European chess masters around the circuit with the intention of mating them. In his declining years, Aron became so disgusted by the attentions of these celebrity-crazed females that he adopted the disguise of a Catholic priest, and scurried through the streets and alleys of Munich, muttering "Zugzwang, zugzwang." His mind eventually snapped, and his tragic death was the result of a severe trampling he received from a herd of Danish Elk that he was attempting to teach chess in the Munich Zoo.

In his youth, Aron Nimzovich often visited the jails and prisons of Imperial Germany, giving simultaneous exhibitions and teaching the prisoners his system of chess play. He hated jails, and often commented upon the stupidity and inhumanity of the German penal system. "Any society," he declared, "that enforces unjust laws by imprisonment and degradation deserves to fall from within. And, that is surely what will happen to this soft, top-heavy, bureaucratic society of ours, for our prisons and institutions are rapidly becoming training grounds for a militant army of the people. A revolutionary army that will react with hatred and real violence towards every action of the state, and will spark a revolution in our own lifetime. An army that will show no pity towards the oppressor, and which knows that there is nothing to lose and everything to gain by a people's revolution."

Nimzovich was not a revolutionary figure himself, but rather an intelligent, compassionate, chess-playing bon vivant. He lived for chess, and identified every human emotion with the elements of chess play. His game was brilliant and eccentric, and his motto was "Thou shalt not shilly shally!" To him, the only crimes in life were blunders at chess that occur because of improper understanding of the correct chess system, and which could be rectified by proper strategy in the endgame. He may have been crazy, but at least he was good and crazy.

EVENTS

Students for McGovern will hold a dance Friday evening in the SUB ballroom. Shaddrack will be the featured group.

Anyone interested in helping the Republican Party canvass Moscow is asked to be at the Republican headquarters at 9 a.m. Saturday. The canvassing will only last until noon.

A speed-chess tournament will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Blue Room of the SUB. Entry fee is 25 cents.

A Sierra Club outing is planned for Sunday to East and West Dennis (northeast of Potlatch). Jerry Connor will lead a hike of about eight miles round trip. The group will leave from Modernway parking lot at 8:45 a.m. Participants should bring lunch and drinking water and should dress warmly if the weather is cool.

Christian Fellowship will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Campus Christian Center instead of the usual 6 p.m. time.

Monday, Oct. 9:

There will be a free cooking school for four days beginning Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Hawthorne Village recreation room. Subjects will include bread and breakfast on Monday, vitamins, minerals, vegetables and salads on Tuesday, protein entrees on Wednesday and dessert, fruits, and nuts on Thursday.

There will be an ASUI Senate meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Wallace Complex conference room 2.

Residence Halls Association will have a meeting with food service officials Thursday at noon in the Wallace Complex snack bar. Discussion will include menu suggestions and improving the University food service. Gault and Wallace cafeteria meal tickets will be honored at the northeast line of the Complex for those attending the meeting. Anyone eating in either cafeteria is welcome to attend.

Oh boy...some more top notch entertainment! Here come the Grassroots! Make way for the herdes of groupies and masses of tripped out concert goers! Man the ticket booths! Can we handle it, I mean do you really think the U of I campus can take another "top notch big name group". It's not as if the Stones were coming but remember the Stylistics, Glen Yarobourough? What a turn over!

You think the Grassroots will blow your mind? Wait until you hear the ASUI bitch about loosing money again. You know it will cost in the neighborhood of 6 grand to pull this gig off.

Will the ASUI loose money again? I can't say for sure, but it seems if the concert drew out of town people it might be a success, but who is going to travel 90 miles, 30 miles or even two blocks to see the Grassroots get into their top 40 sounds?

For the same price the ASUI is getting ripped off for the Grassroots they could have brought Paul Buttersfield Blues Band and the Youngbloods or Taj Mahal and the Youngbloods. There are a lot of other possibilities too, much cheaper than the GR's.

So why? Who do they plan to suck in for the concert? Beats me!

-Seymour Doules

I am not sure how Mark Fritzler would define his term "many thoughtful people" (see Sept. 26 issue, page 8) but I might consider myself among that group, and I happen to like playing the role of a wife and mother in the "fulfillment of age-old tradition." I have spent a few years rattling around in the world, traveling, and teaching school. But now that I am just a student's wife who likes to get her finger into community affairs, I like my "role", and resent Mark's attempt to belittle me for feeling that way. Why not provide a little entertainment for the kiddies since the SUB seems to be doing a pretty good job running a "year-long series of popular films" for adults. In addition it is for an annual scholarship for one of these girls that the proceeds of these childrens' films go.

Respectfully submitted,
Nancy Heward

Ed's note — This letter was hand delivered to the Argonaut by a man.

The people we meet, the things we do seem so insignificant at times, but all shape all there is to come.

At times, not often, there are those-the ones called individuals that surpass or stand out from the rest either by some characteristic that only they possess or by some small bit of honesty they impart in a world made up of deceit.

At times also the privilege of knowing and associating with individuals make the many things that seek to tear down easier to be tolerated.

In a small bit of laughter shared it serves to make over many of the debts spent on those who are uncaring.

A small two words, thank you, but are said with a great amount of feeling to the concerned people of the Talisman Project.

Name Withheld Upon Request

Joy and movement for George. A McGovern benefit dance will be held tonight from 9:00 to 12:00 in the SUB ballroom featuring Shadrack, a local boogie-blues group. There will be no admission charge, but donations will be accepted at the door.

Anyone interested in working for McGovern and the Democratic Party can call Democratic headquarters at 882-3777. It is located on the second floor just off Main street at 108 E. Second.

The world of education and enlightenment must recognize an obligation to Bobby Fischer for his use of psycho-chess.

For he is showing us a prevue of 21st Century enlightenment which will bring a more accurate recognition of the nature of people and their behavior. To supplant the 19th Century guesses which may or may not have a substantial basis.

Our brains operate on three levels. There is the cerebral cortex level of motor and sensory responses, which provide the integration for habitual behavior.

Then there is the thalamic region level, which provides the integration for emotional responses such as those in anger, fear, hurt, humor, sex, appetite, etc.

Finally there is the cerebral medulla level (described by Penfield) wherein occurs the computer-like integration necessary for the game of chess.

We know that if we have an electrical 3-way circuit, the more we make use of one of the circuits the less current there is available for the others.

During hypnotism we slowly increase the activity of "the mind," gradually diminishing the activity of the thalamic region, and then of the motor and sensory region. The hypnotized person is left in a trance, experiencing dreams.

During emotional stresses the activity of the thalamic region increases greatly, leaving less capacity for the operation of habit or rationally determined behavior. Thus annoying Spassky will lessen the intellectual capacity of his mind.

A person not subjected to his reasonable share of duties and emotional stresses may live completely in his mind, creating a dream-like world which may turn him into a schizophrenic.

Persons who are forced into a Hitler-like program of habits may become zombies, with no feelings or thinking.

Fischer is not the only person exploiting knowledge on this subject. But he has headlined it in a manner to demonstrate that even the most brilliant of us are susceptible to natural human influences.

We do not wish to detract from Fischer's chess ability, but to point out that even in the apparently calm game of chess there is more life involved than just participation in a sport.

Yours truly,
David Koretz

U of I chapter of Phi Sigma will have its first meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the SUB. Dr. Gustafson from WSU will speak on the early history of inland empire animals.

From a lean beginning as a drug crisis service located in Wallace Complex two years ago, Talisman House emerged. After one year of functioning, the most prevalent comments heard in relation to this project were hardly epigrammatic, "The Talisman House, what's that?" or "The Talisman House, isn't that one of the fraternities?"

I am constantly amused by friends that choose to introduce me as "head of Talisman House". The response to such an eminent tag is a politely bewildered "oh ??? yes" followed by sufficient pause for divine revelation. Unfortunately, the only light that usually occurs is emitted by the opening of the john door by someone whose purpose is more apparent than mine.

Meanwhile, I keep wondering "just how did all this happen?" Not being among the spiritually enlightened, my answer is directly attributable to my paranoia of the news media, inherent in succinct philosophy that "things never seem to come out as they were conceived".

Consequently when given an opportunity to put out one issue of the Argonaut, I, with the project's backing, eagerly accepted. I am told by commiserate souls that one way to solve paranoid feelings is to do something constructively active with them. Therefore, if you notice an appreciable depreciable difference in this issue, it is because the entire Argonaut is an "en masse" public attempt by the Talisman project to resolve the "Talisman House? What's that" syndrome.

The format employed in collecting articles for this issue has been Socratic, ie various people were asked to submit articles, photos, etc. Some submissions relate to the project while others do not. Consider it part of the Talisman project's inherent mystique and read this issue to cipher those that do and those that do not. For everyone who struggles through this issue, answers are available at 625 Ash. Come in and see how well you did.

remember the article.

It is a rarity to find anyone you can talk to in the Arg offices. It seems everyone, except an overworked artist or an adman, disappears and makes the "scene" (the office) around 2 p.m. It seems ridiculous to have to make a half dozen trips just to see if a little article will ever appear in the paper. It not only seems ridiculous but it IS ridiculous!

I found out about the Talisman House issue and finally I figure I can get it in print, so I truck on down to the Arg office again, this time to pick up my article. I felt I was becoming familiar to the Arg staff.

Looking up from her cookie crumbs, the young Ms. at the central desk looked at me as if I were a complete stranger. I explained the whole trip to her (the third time in two weeks) and she asked me to wait for Bill, the editor.

After a half hour of reading the Lewiston Morning Tribune and watching a staff member throw darts at McGovern, I asked Ms. Cookie-eater when Bill would be around. She told me he had come in about twenty minutes before. Gosh, forgotten again...

Well, I went in to Bill's office and asked for my article. After a bit of rustling around he told me it was lost.

LOST! LOST!!!

Why couldn't they have told me long ago? Why did they lose my article? How could they lose my article?

Why don't you get your shit together, Argonaut???

Business

Hip capitalism sweeps Moscow

There are several new businesses which have opened their doors in Moscow as of late and the ones described below represent just a few. They're presented here for your edification only.

Moscow Lizard Records and Wind, Sand, and Stars Book Store — This business as many of you know, is not new in the sense that it just started, but it is newly located at 615 West 6th (beside the Tri-Delt house). Formerly located at 308 West 6th and The Northwest Passage Trading Post, the store is run by Tom Carroll and Daus Peterson. They describe their merchandise as "upper crust stuff". Besides records and books they carry incense and feature Bear, the bear dog, the original "T-Bone", and art prints. Open from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. daily. A most unique operation in the world of business.

Factory Sound Center features "the largest selection of factory stereo sound equipment around" with over 4000 eight track and cassette tapes. Located at 610 South Main, the shop is managed by Mack and Inga and is one of 12 stores on the West Coast with stores now opening in Idaho and Montana. ("No, man, that's not on the tape, that's the fire engine coming out of the station across the street.") Besides tapes and component units for cars and home, the store sells Water beds, matches, posters, air furniture (something to try the matches out on), and incense.

Last, but not least in this listing, is The Hoagie Shop — while it doesn't exist yet, it will open sometime during the week of September 10th. The owner and general manager is Al Deskiewicz formerly of Philadelphia, but now a Moscowite. The Assistant Manager is Steve Patterson. The shop will feature Italian food and "East coast style sandwiches". (I remember one time in D.C. we went into this sandwich shop and man... Oh well, that's another story). Besides food, the Shop will feature the U's favorite beverage - beer, accented with bread sticks. The atmosphere will be red checked table cloths with lighting by Chianti. Plans call for free sandwich delivery on campus and their hours are from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 a.m. ▶

Theatre

Enter madmen

Entrance not for Everybody
No....this would not be the theatre where one goes to formally view another time, some other place, the scene of an exchange somehow not a part of one's familiar reality, that which represents no illusion, nor aims solely for idle entertainment.

And perhaps most importantly, this theatre requires a bit of your soul.

Madmens theatre houses another breed of supporters, also. Its actors are not a base substance upon which alien artifacts are pasted, powdered and painted; assuming part and parcel, pimple and prance the mere physical characteristics of a being, and showing little of its driving force.

Whereas the mad actor absorbs himself with the process of exposing the soul, intertwining it with other souls and all their combined love from a common birth.

A pretentious theatre?

Only in that it is a theatrical experience in which a 'situation' is created.

Hardly pretentious when the experience is the result of an actor who, through the disciplining of his own energies, is able to reveal emotions not wholly common to him alone. The actor is naught but a catalytic agent; and through this attempt at an inner awareness of the interrelationships of life attempts to produce those moments of sincere communication.

Communication subtly phrased, must, I admit, seem wholly entertaining. But, unlike the short-lived effects of an entertainment produced with elaborate plasticity of costuming, sets, and physical properties, the Madmens Theatre has no special bounds for presentation, no curtains to separate your familiar reality from the mad.

This theatre exists wherever souls are present.

Its aim is towards a moment where the combined energies of 'author,' 'actor' and 'audience' are one — totally abandoning mask, pretence, and fear in a universal commitment to the reality of the moment.

A very subtle moment, the designed blend of emotion and flesh, mind and spirit that the mad so strive to reveal. ▶

What's goin' down

Unless you're a cinema freak, there's not a whole hell of a lot going on this weekend. But for film aficionados, the Moscow-Pullman theaters are offering a better than average variety of shows — something for virtually everybody. Playing at the Kenworthy through Saturday is "Frenzy," Alfred Hitchcock's latest thriller-chiller, reviewed nationally as being several cuts above his last couple of films. Have read elsewhere that "Frenzy" will allay the fears of Hitchcock fans that the old master might be slipping. With an R rating, sounds good.

The Nuart is featuring "Slaughterhouse Five", a fairly faithful adaptation of the Kurt Vonnegut novel by the same title. It revolves around the disjointed experiences in the lifetime of Billy Pilgrim, a man who has "come unstuck in time." The film presents Billy's history in the same kaliedoscopic style that Vonnegut employed in the novel. Like Billy, the picture's sequence of events has come unstuck in time. One moment Vonnegut's hero may be in World War Two Germany, the next in the geodesic dome that shelters himself and blue-movie queen Montana Wildhack on the planet Traftamadore. Though it may not possess the power of the original novel, "Slaughterhouse Five" is an impressive film. Rated R and showing through Saturday.

At the Pullman theaters, we have two shows that have recently played at Moscow: "Cabaret", at the Cordova, and X-rated, animated "Fritz the Cat" at the Audian. If you missed either or both of them when they were here, or if you'd just like to pick up again on a couple of good shows, this weekend may be your last chance for awhile. Liza Minnelli establishes herself as a formidably talented actress in "Cabaret", and "Fritz" is the comic, feature-length cartoon with sex, violence, dope and a message.

Skin-flick buffs have a tripleheader this weekend at the Varsity Drive-In: "Love Machine," "San Francisco Cowboy," and "Marina". XXX, as usual.

If you have access to a TV, and nothing more enterprising to do, NBC's Saturday Night-at-the-Movies will be featuring Goldie Hawn, Walter Matthau and Ingrid Bergmann in "Cactus Flower," a critically acclaimed comedy that passed through the theaters here about a year ago. For those folks who like to cry a lot and those curious individuals who have a high tolerance to schmaltz, ABC is presenting "Love Story" Sunday night. Chances are that slouching around, reading back issues of the National Lampoon or Playboy would be a hell of a lot more entertaining. ▶

"Hi. Where ya from?"

If you've been asking new acquaintances this traditional question and been getting some untraditional responses like "Maine" or "Florida" or "Hawaii," you've probably been talking to an exchange student. According to Corky Bush, U. of I. Coordinator of the National Student Exchange Program, there are 22 exchange students attending the U. of I. this semester. These students are here from Illinois State University, Ohio University, and the Universities of Massachusetts, Hawaii, Maine at Fort Kent, Fouth Florida at Tempa, and Wisconsin at Green Bay.

In addition, 18 Idaho students are currently exchange students at Paterson State College (N.J.) and the University of Alabama, as well as the above schools.

According to Ms. Bush, the purpose of the NSE program is to encourage students to diversify their educational and social experiences. "Although not limited to them, the NSE program is designed especially for Idaho students who have spent all or most of their lives in Idaho. The program provides them the opportunity to travel, to meet people from different backgrounds, and to see, first hand, cultural and social patterns they've only read about," she said.

An extra bonus of the program, which makes NSE superior to hitchhiking or working as a way to get out of Idaho, is the fact that a student doesn't have to interrupt his education. Since out-of-state tuition is waived and his credits guaranteed to transfer back, an exchange student can not only continue his education but also is able to take specialized courses that might otherwise be unavailable to him.

Currently there are 20 state universities participating in the program; in addition to the 9 already mentioned, the program includes Morgan State and Towson State Colleges (Md.), Grambling College, Oregon and Montana State Universities, and the Universities of Oregon, Montana, and Nevada at Reno. Over the summer, the following schools joined the NSE: West Chester State College (Pa.), Rutgers University (N.J.), and Evergreen State (Wa.); and negotiations are currently underway with several others.

According to Ms. Bush, the NSE program is open to U. of I. students who have a 2.5 grade point average and who will be sophomores, juniors, or first semester seniors during their period of exchange. Students interested in obtaining more detailed information about the program should see Ms. Bush in her office in the Satellite SUB.

There are still some openings for students interested in exchanging next semester; applications for second semester exchanges are due by October 20. Students intending to exchange during 73-74 should submit applications before March 1.

Maybe soon someone from Maine or Florida or Hawaii will say, "Hi. Where ya from?" And you'll say, "Idaho." ▽

Nightline wants to talk to you

Have a problem? Have a question? Just need to hear a friendly voice for a change? Then call 882-0320. These seven numbers represent a caring, helping service called Nightline.

Nightline is Moscow's university and community crisis and information service. Open every day from 2:30 p.m. to 2:30 a.m., the person you talk to is one of a group of university and community volunteers who are trained to listen, NOT JUDGE, and hold the calls they receive strictly confidential. This gives you a chance to talk about anything you want with a concerned listener.

Nightline also provides: rumor research (this does not mean personal gossip); a nutritional service, for answering specific questions about foods and health; and answering any reasonable question a caller may have. If the answer cannot be provided immediately, it will be researched until a satisfactory one can be given.

If you are interested in volunteering for Nightline, simply call 882-0320. Whoever answers your call will be able to provide additional information.

Remember: Nightline is concerned people wanting to make Moscow a nicer place to live. Nightline will listen to any kind of problem or concern. Nightline is a little bit of everything... with a lot of love. ▽

Food trip

Now that the pressure of having no money in an inflationary economy is really beginning to loom ominously as winter comes around, here's a cheap, tasty tip — Noodles — Not just any noodles but quick cooking, ten to twenty-five cent noodles — There are about eight different brands of these noodles to be found in Rosauers, Safeways and Modernway — One package is enough to stuff a person with above average capacity or fill to perfection two normal stomachs — Directions for cooking the noodles come on the back of each package, however, when I cook these little gems I prefer to follow my own directions because I don't like noodles that are swimming in a watery nutriment-robbing "sauce"— If you like your noodles like I do, put just a touch over 1 cup of water on to boil and while it's trying to boil chop some good vegetables (green pepper, green onions, squash (zucchini or yellow crookneck), mushrooms, parsley, etc.) and beat an egg to add to the noodles if you feel like egg— The water has reached a rolling boil! Put in the noodles and the flavor packet if you like (I usually don't like) and cook as directed on noodle package adding your various vegetables and herbs just before the noodles are done— A good thing, to add to these noodles or other treats that can use them, is chopped olives— They are very inexpensive, go along way, and taste just as good as they would if you went to all the trouble to chop them yourself— Noodles for me always have cayenne, brewer's yeast, kelp and parsley in them— Hope yours are as good as mine— Eat with love— ▽

Although for some, physical education is not in the least attractive or appealing, and it is not understood why, it is a necessary requirement for graduation, for Dr. Leon Green it is not only a profession, but a way of life. "Physical education puts the whole man together. The outcome of physical education is good health. It helps a person develop skills for leisure, and it also helps in the managing of self intellect and emotions," said Dr. Green.

Leon, as he is known by most people, has been head of the Physical Education department for the last 20 years, and his association with the U of I extends even further back than that. He started out as an undergraduate here 38 years ago. While he was an undergrad, he played football and was co-captain of the team. After he graduated in 1937 with degrees in Social Science and P.E., he taught in the Burley public schools for three years before returning to the U. of I. as the first full time male physical educator hired by the University.

One of the first things Leon did, was to develop an acceptable major in Physical Education and Health. A few years later he developed a major in recreation. Even more important than these was the fact that "the University is a community centered college, and I saw the need for leisure time activities to be developed for the students." So, in view of this fact, he and others in the P.E. department started to organize and upgrade the intramural program, open the available facilities for more student use, and saw the need to not only develop the existing facilities, but to develop more facilities.

Besides working for and developing the P.E. department, Leon is involved with educating students, and also educating himself. With regards to students, he feels that they "are better informed, more inquisitive and better equipped with knowledge than they were a few years ago.

In respects to teaching, Leon said that some classes are so large that the lecture system is necessary to impart knowledge. In other classes which are smaller there is the opportunity to interrogate and question that knowledge in small groups. In classes such as these the teacher is there to provide an atmosphere so that students can interact. This is accomplished by having a cross section of students and of dimensions and by making it known to the students that there is "impression without expression." For Leon, one of the great joys of teaching is to watch a student "hook into something and really get involved in it." One of the things Leon asks himself in regards to students he has known is "Did I touch them when they passed through here?"

With the philosophy that the acquisition of knowledge is one thing and making it work is another, Leon has spent his life developing the "whole man." To accomplish this he spends time indulging in his greatest hobby which is reading books dealing with philosophy, psychology, and anthropology. In turn, he acquires and imparts knowledge to those people he comes into contact with. ✓

More than you expect for less than you expected.

Garrard

PIONEER

Stereo systems in the $400 price range, while not unpleasant to listen to, have not as a rule provided that last bit of musical accuracy for those who take their listening very seriously. Our $439 Advent-Pioneer-Garrard-ADC stereo system has changed all that, as many of our customers who own it will testify.

The smaller Advent loudspeakers are a startling speaker bargain, of which highly-respected Stereo Review Magazine said, "Any preconceived ideas you may have about the limitations of sub-compact speaker systems will, we think, be shattered." The Pioneer SX525 AM-FM stereo receiver provides sufficient power (over 42 RMS watts of it) to handle the most tortuous musical passages in the average living room, and its sensitive tuner will capture your favorite radio stations with clarity. The Garrard SL55B cartridge and diamond stylus will treat your records gently and add no unpleasant sounds of its own.

Together, these remarkable components cost just $439 — a saving of $80 over their usual individual prices. If you've thought that a stereo system in this price range couldn't provide quite enough sonic satisfaction, we invite you to visit Stereocraft and learn otherwise.

Self trippin' with your jock

About 11:00 a.m. every week-day morning I start thinking about finishing whatever I'm doing and getting myself started towards the university gym. If the weather is warm, I might skip my workout and eat a lunch in the arboretum instead. Otherwise, I'm on my way for my daily fix of high energy release.

The locker room is always a pleasant trip. The place stinks like shit as is only fitting for a place so heavily stereo-typed (clean smelling locker rooms must have identity crises). It always blows my mind to see the spectrum of people getting ready for noon recreation. The professors and older staff members are amazing. I use to play a game of guessing their ages, but I've given up completely. I know Doc Green, head of the men's P.E. Dept., is older than my dad, yet every day he jogs through the whole noon hour. That's really far-out.

Others I see while I'm dressing in the locker room include a group of navy regulars getting ready to pass some odd-ball fitness test, grad students and faculty of the math dept. dressing for their usual full-court ball game in the women's gym, volleyball regulars and weight lifters, chemistry grad students giving each other shit while getting ready for handball or paddleball and law students bitching about everything. It's a security trip becoming familiar with all these things and feeling comfortable in the middle of all these -mediocre jocks and body trippers.

Part of the security is that everybody is doing a common thing, in one way or another we are voluntarily working our bodies harder than society or economics require. The specific "why's" vary, but for the one that we all would rather be active than passive.

After an adequate amount of socializing, I move up to the main floor of the gym to loosen up and get ready for an hour or more of full-court basketball. If the P.E. classes are inside that day, I'll have to wait along with 20 or more other players. The contrast between the noon-time folk and the P.E. classes is interesting. The members of the P.E. class appear to us as participants of a Russian forced work camp. No one is there because they want to be, and they all just barely give signs of living. It resembles a recreation period for catatonics. The first real energy is shown when the teacher gives up and lets them go for a shower.

Then I bounce out to warm up, take some bad shots and size up the competition. I tend to play with the same people, a few strangers may float in or out. After a new face plays for awhile he becomes known and usually accepted (basketball players are snobs just like sororities, only we use sportsmanship and skill as criteria rather than good looks and role-playing ability).

Catnip, oregano or a bad grade of marijuana can be sprayed with PCP and passed off as super-week, with no one the wiser.

A game will start and from there further description is close to impossible. The thing is fun. There are plenty of good plays, plenty of foul ups and to my thinking a little too much aggression. Hard feelings and good feelings are sure to be produced. It's visual anarchy to watch and looks nothing like a Vandal basketball game (we run, the Vandals don't).

U of I Sports Car Club will have an autocross, Sunday at 10 a.m. on the Perimeter Drive. All sports car owners are welcome.

Sports

After a good hard game I'll be ragged to my ass. But a good shower and maybe a nap later will put me back on top of my world. After working-out regularly, I usually feel good. I feel in great contact with my whole body.

I don't really understand why I work-out so hard. I feel that my body forces me to use it.

Just because my muscles exist, they demand to be stretched, my heart demands to be worked and my brain demands to think. I suppose they must go thru a self-actualization process just like the whole body does. Anyway, my body usually tells me what's right and I do it, no questions asked.

This article started out dealing with all the many beautiful activities people use in Moscow to express their bodies. I soon found I was only able to write a little on how I feel and what I do. But still I'd like to thank all of the bicyclists, dancers, swimmers, joggers, walkers, etc., for being themselves.

by Tom Carroll

U of I Sports Car Club will have a meeting Wednesday at 7:30 in the SUB. Video tape of the last autocross will be shown at the meeting.

Roundball, foot style

The University of Idaho Soccer Club will open its new season this Saturday in the Idaho Stadium. Game time is 1:30 for the team that conquered all they surveyed, just about, last year. The opponent, Montana, should have a hard time of it playing on the artificial turf, however, the Vandal 'ballers have been working out on the funny stuff for the last few weeks.

So, come to the match and have a good time, however, be nice or the University Facilities Use Committee won't like you.

The men who will fly the world's largest aircraft, the C-5 Galaxy, are earning their commissions today through Air Force ROTC.

If you want to fly some of the world's finest aircraft, why not start today. Students with two years of university study remaining (graduate or undergraduate) are eligible for the program. You may earn your private pilots license while still at the U. of I. and receive tax free subsistence in the amount of approximately $2,000.00 for two years.

If interested - you may apply for the Air Force ROTC Two Year Program now. Call 885-6219 for details.

Living a clean American life in 1981 will take twice as much muscle.

Living the clean life will be possible only if America cleans up. Air, water and countryside. It's a big job - much of it to be done with electric muscle. We're hearing much about recycling these days. Old cans into new cans, glass into new glass, paper into tomorrow's newspaper. None of this can happen without electricity. Many more cleanup jobs must be done requiring massive amounts of electric muscle.

The experts figure this country will need twice as much electricity by 1981. There's no time to waste. We can't produce this extra oomph with two miraculous gulps of spinach! It has to be planned and built for.

We'll continue working to do this. But we need your understanding today to meet tomorrow's needs.

Today, in Moscow, Dr. Vern Mamillary announced that he has discovered the cause of many of the social ills which have plagued our society for generations. Dr. Mamillary, noted and only physiologist, has determined that alcoholism and drug addiction are both caused by drinking milk.
 Supporting his conclusion, the professor cited his exhaustive study of the world's arrested population in which he learned that 99.44 percent of the person's convicted of drug or alcohol offenses had drunk milk as children. The remaining .56 percent were not available for comment.
 "It became obvious to me that I was on to something when I learned that 2 out of 5 heroin addicts had begun with marijuana. Then I discovered that 3 out of 5 marijuana addicts had smoked cigarettes before taking up the habit," he reminisced.
 And he subsequently learned, 4 out of 5 cigarette smokers had drunk soft drinks and 5 out of 5 soft drinkers had begun-cut their teeth, so to speak-on MILK. The same sad story was true of alcoholics, except that drunks often short circuited the cycle and jumped directly from soft drinks to beer, without the intermediate step at cigarettes.
 Modestly, the bespeckled professor commented on his achievements. "This is surely science's finest hour - we can now begin the great work of mopping up our social ills. Let there be no more crying after spilled milk." When asked if he planned to champion the cause to eradicate milk drinking in children, Dr. Mamillary winked regretfully, "No. There is still work to be done. My next great project shall be to determine how breast feeding vs. bottle feeding affect the drug addiction/alcoholism rate."
 We commend Dr. Mamillary in his work.

Students vote too
 Students can vote, too! Since local, state and national elections are coming up, the Talisman House is sponsoring a voter registration drive. Talisman feels that it is important for the individual to express his or her personal concern in relation to the selection of the public officials who have a hand in our lives.
 Students who aren't able to vote through their regular precinct Talisman House is offering a voter registration service. In addition to the registration service, their precinct information office, students can register with the two precincts at the Talisman House.
 Registration at the T-House facilities will begin the first week of October and continue through the twenty-seventh, the final day of precinct registration.
 That day, November 27, students will have to appear at the County Clerk's Office for their precinct.
 If students are unable to attend their precinct registration, they may vote by mail. All the districts are precincts. The rest of the district is in the precinct. The rest of the district is in the precinct.
 The notaries, Rod Davis and Rip
 Bahhara, working through Talisman House, will be available to notarize documents, as well as for voter registration.

will again sponsor a stated by John Hipple, counselor, and Mike graduate student. The personal growth group that operates on the open concept:
 individuals when they want, as long as they want, work on whatever concern they have, bring a friend, become involved verbally or non-verbally at a level that is comfortable for them and be as active or passive as they desire.
 The basic goal of the group is to assist the participating individual to increase his/her potential and to increase interpersonal communication on a human level.
 A group approach provides the environment in which a person can become more sensitive to his/her needs, more aware of the needs of others, and gain insight into personal impact.
 Anyone interested in participating in the group as a means of working toward personal growth is welcome to attend. The group will begin on Monday, October 2.
