Election coverage on campus -- use it

There will be complete media coverage of the national, state, and local elections tonight, as KUID-T.V. and KUOI, take to the air and an Election Central will be established in the SUB ballroom to post the returns and keep the public up-to-date.

KUID-TV will feature Dr. Robert Blank, a public opinion and voting behavior specialist and Lindy High, a former UPI news service correspondent, analyzing the significance of the returns in respect to the state and nation.

High, who is familiar with the Idaho Legislature after cocovering it for almost three years, will speculate on how those likely to be elected will effect future decisions of the Legislature. Blank will attempt to put all of Idaho's returns in national perspective, and explain how this year's elections will effect the future political scene in the United States.

"When the viewers get tired of watching Cronkite, Chancellor, and Reasoner give election returns... they can turn us on and find out the up-to-date-returns from local and statewide races—the races that are important to them," according to Michael Berriochoa, host of the KUID election coverage tonight.

Mike Kirk, the program producer, said that High and Blank are both qualified professionals who will add a special part to the election coverage which will start at 9 p.m. with a 10 minute report, then continue at 10 to stay on the air and report until the final returns are in.

In the SUB ballroom, an Election Central will be established with KUOI and all national TV networks as well as KUID aired according to Diane Plastino, the coordinator.

The SUB ballroom will be divided into three sections. On the stage will be a board where all the latest national, state, and local returns will be posted.

Up-to-the-minute Returns

For the up-to-the-minute returns, there will be a hook-up to the computer center reporting returns from all Idaho counties.

Also for out-of-state students, reports will be made on returns from Oregon, Washington, Montana, Utah, Wyoming and other key states.

The two Senate hopefuls, James McClure and Bud Davis, are expected to be present for interviews in the ballroom, according to Diane Plastino.

To the right of the stage will be a connection to all the national TV networks and also to KUID.

Also KUOI will air from the ballroom and keep all the radio listeners informed on the returns.

ASUI Caravan

The ASUI which, under the direction of Mike D'Antario, has been working to register students and make them aware of where to vote, will have a car caravan taking students to the polls at the First Federal Savings Bank from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Two cars will leave from the front of Wallace complex, one from Upham Hall and one from the front of the south side of the Tower.

All sororities and fraternities will vote at the SUB and Independents will vote at First Federal Savings.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. for students to vote.

Nixon, Davis, Symms predicted winners

Richard Nixon, William E. "Bud" Davis and Steve Symms will be the winners according to predictions by three members of the University of Idaho Political Science department.

Predictions by Doctors Boyd Martin, Alwyn Rouyer, and Robert Blank unanimously predicted victory by Nixon and Symms. Martin disagreed with Blank and Rouyer on the outcome of the Idaho Senate race, predicting a narrow McClure victory.

Martin, Rouyer and Blank all agreed that information on the Idaho elections was very speculative because there have been no reliable state-wide polls released to the public.

Martin predicted Nixon would win 57 per cent of the two party vote nationwide. He believes that McGovern will be helped by the inability of the Nixon administration to settle the Vietnam war.

Massachusetts and Washington D.C. are the only electoral votes that McGovern will get for sure, according to Martin. He looks to Wisconsin, New York, California, Illinois and Michigan for an early indication of the trends on election eve.

In the Idaho Senate race, Martin believes that Democrat Davis has increased his vote total because of McClure's record on conservation and press revelations of the amount of out-of-state money which has gone into the McClure campaign. He thinks that McClure will win, however, by a slim margin, no more than 52 per cent of the two-party vote.

Early returns from Ada County, where Davis will have to equal the percentage gained by Cecil Andrus in the 1970 gubernatorial race; returns from the 10 northern Idaho counties where Davis must gain the usual strong Democratic margin; and returns from Canyon where Davis must cut into the normal Republican margin are the areas Martin said will indicate the election night trends.

Martin believes that Republican Symms will win by not less than 53 per cent in the Idaho First District Congressional race. Martin thinks Symms has taken and held the initiative in the race as a result of his aggressive campaign.

Symms' personality and mannerisms may be the key to the race, according to Martin, because they may cause the voters to forgive Symms for changing his positions while other candidates are not forgiven for changes.

Alwyn Rouyer predicts Nixon will win the Presidential election. Rouyer believes that Nixon will get 55-56 per cent. McGovern will get 42-43 per cent and American Independent party candidate John Schmitz will get 1 per cent.

Rouyer doesn't believe McGovern can carry more than five states: Massachusetts, West Virginia, South Dakota and the District of Columbia. Other possible states for McGovern are Wisconsin, California, Michigan, and Washington.

Rouyer thinks New York state will provide the indicator for the Presidential race on election day. If New York goes for McGovern then he might have a chance for the election, otherwise Nixon will win handily.

Democrat Bud Davis will win the Idaho Senate Race "by a hair," because he has been able to pin his opponent, Republican James A. McClure as anti-conservation, according to Rouyer.

Rouyer theorizes that Davis must win Southeast Idaho and get the usual Democratic margin from Idaho's 10 northern counties. He predicts that Davis will lose Boise valley.

Although Rouyer sees the possibility that Symms could have peaked too early in the Idaho First District Congressional race, he predicts a narrow Symms victory on election day. Rouyer predicted that early returns out of the Boise Valley could give an indication into the election night results. Ed Williams must cut into the normally strong Republican vote from that area and carry the 10 northern counties strongly if he is to overcome Symms' lead, he said.

Robert Blank believes that Nixon will win by 12-15 per cent of the popular vote nationwide. He sees the breakdown as Nixon, 56 per cent; McGovern, 43 per cent; and Schmitz, 1 per cent.

Blank notes that Nixon's support is thin and turnout on election day could affect the election results. He predicts that McGovern will get about 70 to 80 electoral votes from Massachusetts and the E District of Columbia, with other possible votes coming from New York, Wisconsin, West Virginia and California.

Blank believes that New York will provide the best trend indicator for election night returns. If McGovern wins New York, Blank thinks the Democrat could pull an upset in the race, but a strong showing by Nixon would mean an early end to the contest.

Blank thinks the Davis-McClure race is a toss-up with voter turnout on election day as the determining factor. He predicts Davis will carry the state if he wins or draws in Ada County. In any case, Blank believes the Senate race will be within 2 percentage points.

Although Blank believes that Ed Williams has been catching up with Symms during the closing weeks of the campaign, he predicts Symms will win the race. Williams has been hurt by his low key campaign, while Symms has been hurt by his tendency to make snap statements, according to Blank.

Voting

Today is election day but many people still have to be convinced, urged and pleaded with to even go to the polls. With all the money tied up in campaigns an unbelievable sum obviously goes to not simply promoting a candidate but begging the electorate to vote—not who to vote for or what to vote for—but simply to vote.

By now even the word "vote" sounds tired and overused and simply bounces off people.

In an affluent society which was presumably built by leaders elected in the same manner in which leaders will be put in office today only a portion of this "democratic system" will go to the polls and cast their votes. Why do Americans have to be convinced to vote? Do they feel they don't have any control on the government? Maybe some think it doesn't make any difference who they vote for—"They're all politicians anyway." Or is it they're just too busy being affluent?

The people seem to have taken a Democratic Society for granted. True—all this has been said before and rings with triteness, but only because the situation has become stagnant. About half the people in the United States will not find the time or interest today to vote. Many of those that do go to the polls will be relatively uninformed anyway.

It amazes me people have to actually be convinced, even coerced, into exercising this freedom of choosing the leaders of this country. Perhaps many don't know what to do with this power they have in their possession or don't regard it as power at all—simply more political BS.

Whatever the excuse someone gives for not voting, his imagination must be excellent, his rationale selfishly secure and his desire to improve our present situation zero.

Go to the polls today and mark your ballots. If you honestly can't think of a reason to go here are a few that should appeal to you anti-voters. "It will be good exercise. You might get a date. It's a good excuse not to study. It's a power trip. You can poke holes in a real computer card."

Unfortunately people are continually going to have to be convinced to vote, even using these ideas. Hopefully some day this argument will disappear, but until then proponents of voting are still stuck with overused slogans and sayings. If you don't vote it's your own fault.

Attendance figures

Throughout the past few weeks we have heard charges that McClure represented the first district slightly more than half the time last year. His Democratic opponent for the U.S. Senate, Bud Davis, has stated that McClure was a part-time congressman, for he was present only 58 percent of the time.

McClure and Davis have disagreed over the implication of the record. To satisfy myself, I checked the Congressional Quarterly Almanac concerning voting participation for the past few years. I compared Congressman McClure's voting record with those of Senators Franch Church, Ted Kennedy, George McGovern, and Eugene McCarthy.

The readers can check these figures for themselves. However, to be fair to all, one must remember: "Absences: Failure to vote often may be traced to conflicting duties or illness." (CQ Almanac).

McClure:	58%	83%	89%	82%
Church:	81%	76%	91%	54%
Kennedy:	83%	70%	83%	39%
McGovern:	52%	84%	89%	62%
McCarthy:		32%	61%	05%

It appears to me that if Davis is going to call McClure a part-time congressman, that he will also have to call Church, Kennedy, McGovern, and McCarthy part-time senators due to their voting records. The above information shows they had voting records below that of McClure.

Kenneth Wrenn

Snow cares about us

The letter by Gina Formosa in the last Argonaut requires some comment.

The tenor of the letter was a criticism of Representative Harold Snow, Assistant Majority Leader, implying that he is not receptive to the needs of the University or Latah County.

The argument Ms. Formosa picked for her sole line of defense was a poor one, in fact probably the only one that can be found.

The University has such high regard for Representative Snow they felt it fitting to name Snow Hall in honor of him.

The mere fact that Harold Snow is the only Republican legislator north of the Salmon River indicates that the majority of the public, both Democrats and Republicans are satisfied with Harold's leadership.

The fact that Harold was the floor manager for the House Joint Resolution to ratify the 18-year old vote, the 26th Amendment, should dispell any doubt that Harold Snow is out of touch with the interests of youth or his constituency.

Harold Snow cares about us and the University.

It has been brought to my attention by approximately 229 male law students that women as well as men have, in recent years, flunked out of the University of Idaho College of Law. I hereby wish to correct a contrary statement which appeared in the Argonaut on October 31, 1972.

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor on all topics. If the editor believes that all sides of a particular topic have been presented to Argonaut readers then no further letters will be printed on that topic.

The Argonaut will attempt to print all letters, however, preference will be given to short letters. Letters of unusual length (more than two typed pages) will not be printed except under unusual circumstances.

All letters to the editor must be typed and double spaced. No letters in verse form will be accepted.

Moscow needs representation in State Legislature

Football is said to be symbolic of many parts of American life. One good example of this is the rivalry between the U of I Vandals and the Boise State Broncos. The rivalry goes beyond the gridiron to such vital areas as legislative appropriations.

The U of I has been threatened ever since the college in Boise was made a four year insitution, disregarding the recommendation of the Stanford Research Institute. Their study of education was commissioned by the legislature the year before.

This shows the power of the Boise legislators. Boise has 10 state representatives and 5 state senators, all on the Republican side, the majority side. Meanwhile Moscow only has Assistant Majority Leader Harold Snow on the majority side of the legislature, and as he says, "It gets harder every year to get high appropriations for the University."

We need more representation on the majority side of the legislature than Representative Snow.

Another aspect of the rivalry is that Boise has no legislators connected with Boise State College, with very little possibility of getting any in the election. Thus when Boise legislators lobby for their college, there is no question about their motives.

Meanwhile, at Moscow, two college-connected candidates are running on the Democratic ticket. Their efforts on behalf of the University will be hampered by their connection, since higher appropriations might benefit the very people asking for them in the legislature. All the Democratic candidates will be hampered by the fact that they are not in the majority caucus, (the Republican caucus) which organizes the legislature and sets most appropriations.

But District Five and the University of Idaho are fortunate in having three outstanding candidates for the State Legislature on the Republican ticket, who are not connected with the University, and can therefore lobby effectively for the Institution.

Bob Weisel and Assistant Majority Leader Harold Snow will do an excellent job in the House of Representatives, as will Jim Newsome in the State Senate. To stop Boise State in the Republican caucus we need the entire Republican team. And we can only hope the football team does as well.

Sincerely,
David Warnick

Needs experience

The campaign of Democrat Ed Williams for U.S. Congress has become quite interesting. Have he and Bud Davis had a falling out? The reason I ask is that Williams' campaign commercials states that the position of U.S. Representative is so important that only a man with legislature experience should have the position. However, Davis, in his bid for U.S. Senate, has absolutely no experience as a legislator.

Is Williams trying to tell us that the position of U.S. Representative is more important than that of U.S. Senator? I have never heard of a U.S. Senator giving up his seat to run for U.S. Representative.

If the offices in Congress are so complex as Williams is trying to say, then we have no choice but to vote for Jim McClure for U.S. Senator. He has experience in the state legislature in Boise as well as six years of experience in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Mr. Williams, I will take your advice and vote for Jim McClure for U.S. Senator.

Tom Hill

Frank Church won the last election for U.S. Senator using the slogan: "He's his own man, that's why he's Idaho's!"

This is in sharp contrast to Paul Kaus, candidate for state representative, who is running as Governor Andrus' man. Kaus keeps talking about what a great governor Andrus is. It is nice that he is so concerned about the Governor, but I am far more concerned about Latah County and the University of Idaho. What is he going to do about these?

Andrus stated that he will not ask the next legislature for any tax increases. The University of Idaho is in need for higher appropriations. Taxes may have to be raised in order to make this possible. Can Kaus propose this if it differs with Andrus?

If Kaus is the Governor's man and if the Governor is for something that might not be in the best interest of District 5, how will Kaus vote? He keeps telling me that he is the Governor's man. Therefore, he would have to vote with the Governor. If so, it would be a vote against Latah County and the University of Idaho.

I don't want someone else's man. I want a candidate who has the guts to be his own man. I am sure that two of the remaining candidates have the guts to do what they feel is right for the people of our county and the University of Idaho.

Frank Church is his own man, too bad Kaus can't be.

Honest Kaus

A misrepresentation of the facts or a misunderstanding of the political system seems to be the hall-mark of candidate Paul Kaus.

Kaus touring Gault and Wallace cafeterias told students that Steve Symms, a candidate for the Federal Congress, "is for charging tuition at the University" and that "Representative Harold Snow supports Symms." Kaus then concluded "I can not see how a man can support a candidate without supporting his platform."

Is this a valid method of campaigning is the question? Is this dishonest?

First, Steve Symms is running for Congress and whether or not he is for or against tuition, Symms can do nothing about this strictly State matter.

Second, as readers of the Argonaut know, State Representative Harold Snow opposes in-state tuition and is the only candidate running in District 5 with legislative and leadership experience. Snow is in a good position to try to stop it.

Kaus, should be able to see the error of his ways in terms of his running mate Norma Dobler. Mrs. Dobler supports abortion with certain controls whereas Paul Kaus is opposed to abortion for moral reasons. Now, Mr. Kaus does your vision of the American political system permit you to perceive how it is possible to support a candidate without supporting her platform?

Kaus' student chairman, Dan Butler, also has the same malady. Butler wrote in the Argonaut, October 20: "Harold Snow has stated he supports Steve Symms. Symms position on tuition is painfully clear. Mr. Snow has also stated that he is opposed to tuition. Can Snow serve two masters?"

The difficulty with both Kaus and his graduate student chairman is that they both seem to think that in order to support a candidate one has to be, on every issue, behind them 1000 percent. This simply is not true.

Now, perhaps Kaus owes Harold Snow an apology for misrepresenting Snow's position with the fallacy of guilt by association.

It seems to me the other alternative may be that both Butler and Kaus need a freshman course in government, hopefully not on-the-job training.

Sincerely
Glenn Miles

A sea of contradictions

After researching the candidates for State Representative, I came to the disturbing conclusion that Paul Kaus is caught in a sea of contradictions.

First, he has continually run on the theme that he is the Governor's man, and yet he doesn't agree with the Governor. He stated last spring that the New Criminal Code should have been given a chance, while the Governor allowed the repeal of the new Criminal Code.

Kaus says he is in favor of "no-fault" insurance, yet he said, "I think the client should still have the right to sue the company if he doesn't like the settlement." "No-fault" insurance eliminates the practice of suing.

He is against the "regressive" property tax on land, but favors a tax on the value of a car, which presumably would also be regressive.

He is running as a Democrat. And the state Democratic platform states that women should have the right to control their own reproductive systems. Yet he adamantly opposes any change in Idaho's abortion laws, even to allow abortion in the case of rape.

Mr. Kaus is not the type of representative we deserve. We should have competence, rather than contradiction.

Sincerely,
David Warnick

George McGovern

As we move into the final days of the present presidential campaign, we can probably expect to witness the same sharpening of political rhetoric and blurring of the issues that have characterized so many of our elections in the past. As always, there is the danger that in the welter of charge and counter-charge a number of key issues will be neglected.

While many of us would disagree as to the matter of chief importance before the electorate this fall, there is one issue — that of Education — about which we are all deeply concerned. As teachers and researchers, our lives are directly affected by presidential decisions in this area. More importantly, however, as educators, we have a responsibility to consult the general welfare of the community in a matter that involves so vital a segment of our national life.

In February of 1968, candidate Richard Nixon insisted that "the one area we can't short-change is education...when you cut expenditures for education, what you are doing is short-changing the American future." Yet when Mr. Nixon took office in 1969 one of his first actions was to cut the fiscal budget recommendation for education by 10 percent. His new budget called for no money for school libraries or textbooks, no money for instructional equipment, and no money for guidance or testing. He asked for only 15 percent of the authorized amount for handicapped children, 25 percent of the authorization for bilingual children, and 39 percent of the authorization for educationally-deprived children. Funds for the construction of new facilities for higher education were cut by 61 percent.

When Congress acted to restore over $1 billion in education money for HEW, Mr. Nixon made a dramatic appearance on television to veto the appropriation, calling it inflationary spending. This charge was leveled at a Congress which had just taken steps to cut almost $7 billion from the budget for Pentagon expenditures and foreign aid.

In 1971 Mr. Nixon requested less money for the Office of Education than the amount contained in the original 1970 appropriation. Money for schools in federally affected areas was cut; money for construction of higher education facilities was cut by more than 50 percent; and money for libraries and community education was cut by 12 percent. Aid to land grant colleges was totally eliminated, and money for elementary and secondary schools was increased by less than 1 percent.

When Congress again acted to restore these funds, Mr. Nixon responded with still another veto, this time calling Congress's action "the kind of big spending that is wrong for all the American people." Because of the measure's widespread support — the increase received unanimous support in the Senate, and in the House 97 percent of the Democrats and 85 percent of the Republicans voted for it — the president's veto was overridden. Mr. Nixon, however, responded by distributing only 91 percent of the appropriation. He impounded $31 million, refusing to spend $13 million for higher education, $10 million for school assistance in federally affected areas, and $8 million for community education.

Mr. Nixon's third education budget included only $1.85 billion for elementary and secondary education — a drop of $50 million from the fiscal 1971 appropriation. He sharply cut money for libraries and educational communications (down $35 million), vocational education (down $25 million), and assistance to federally affected schools (down $10 million). Moreover, he requested no money for school equipment and minor remodeling or for construction of public libraries.

When Congress once again attempted to restore these funds, Mr. Nixon vetoes the bill on August 16 of this year.

In contrast to Richard Nixon, Senator George McGovern has established a consistent record of support for legislation designed to improve and broaden the educational opportunities available to all of our citizens.

In recent years Mr. McGovern has cast votes for the restoration of funds to the National Science Foundation, an increase in the funds for the prevention of school dropouts (The Murphy Amendment), and an increase in monies for student loans and the construction of higher education facilities (The Kennedy-Case Amendment).

Since 1958 Senator McGovern has sponsored at least a half-dozen bills aimed at improving the quality of education in America. Among these is the Fogarty-McGovern Act which provides for federal grants to train teachers for the mentally retarded.

Perhaps more significantly, Mr. McGovern has repeatedly championed the cause of American education at a time when it has become a victim of mistaken national priorities: "Everywhere...we are told that education is the key to our future....The dry pages of the budget of the United States Government...tell a very different story...They tell of a nation which spends $21,600 to kill a Vietcong soldier and 44 federal dollars per year to educate each of her primary school children."

We, the undersigned, believe that on the issue of Education Mr. Nixon has indeed "short-changed" the American future and that there is little indication that his policy is likely to change in the next four years. We therefore urge you to compare Mr. Nixon's position with that of Mr. McGovern and to make that comparison a part of your deliberations before going to the polls on November 7.

The Idaho Senate (See page 9 for the House) race

Orval Snow (D)

Running as a Democrat team from District Five, the three Democratic candidates for the Idaho State Legislature all oppose the concept of in-state tuition for funding higher education.

Norma Dobler, Paul Kaus, and Orval Snow are all finding adequate solutions hard to come by though.

The third candidate, Snow, is a farm resident in the Moscow area. He is a past county commissioner and is now seeking the State Senate seat from the district.

Prosecutor Candidates

rap pot law

Leriget

During a two hour broadcast today on KRPL radio, Peter Leriget, candidate for Latah County prosecutor said, that the private use of marijuana should be a misdemeanor at least and perhaps users shouldn't be prosecuted at all.

Leriget stressed that the real intent of legislation about marijuana is to control traffic and to arrest and imprison the criminal offender, not the so-called victim. However, few of the major traffickers in the drug are arrested; it is the user who is arrested and imprisoned. None the less, in Idaho the possession of marijuana, a controlled substance, is against the law. It is the responsibility of the prosecutor to decide whether or not a case will be prosecuted.

He continued that we must ask ourselves the question that as a nation we were forced to ask during the prohibition: does legislation restricting the behavior that we have decided harmful to our

Snow takes a similar stand on higher education funding, taking a "realistic" approach by saying that he doesn't see how anybody in this area could not strongly support the University.

Snow backs Governor Andrus' "reorganization plan" and has also mentioned strong support of the upgrading of Highway 95, not only "for obvious reasons, but also to better utilize the facilities of the Port of Lewiston."

He has taken stands on both abortion and legalization of marijuana, possibly a rare move for local candidates.

Abortion stand

His abortion stand centers on "individual decision" and he doesn't see a need for governmental prevention. He has cautioned, however, against the possibility of Idaho becoming an "abortion state", saying that some controls might be necessary to avoid profit or notoriety if abortion was legalized.

Snow's stand on marijuana is a little more cautious: He feels there are "enough problems with drugs," prescription and otherwise, without legalizing another widely-abused substance.

Snow expressed a feeling yesterday that some campaigning this year has been overdone. He thought this had possibly been a year of overexposure in campaigning, and seemed glad election was finally here.

Candidates

Possession of marijuana in Idaho is an indictable misdemeanor. A crime is a misdemeanor if the maximum punishment does not exceed three months in jail and/or a fine of $300. The maximum punishment for an indictable misdemeanor is one year in jail and/or a fine of $1000. Any crime which has incarceration in a penitentiary as a possible punishment is a felony.

society cause more harm in its enforcement than the original harm we set out of control?

Felton

Robert Felton, candidate for Latah County prosecutor, said that Idaho law against possession of marijuana is too strict. However Felton limited that view to possession only. "I don't care what they do to pushers," he said. Felton also stressed that as prosecutor it is his duty to enforce Idaho law. He cannot control legislation; he has no choice but to enforce the law as it stands.

Seems like our present Commissioners have all they can do to file the petitions when they are presented to them — In the wastebasket so Mr. Ingle informed us.

Lee Lisher is very interested in county politics and was instrumental in bringing to the public the mess the Highway District and County Commissioners have made of the road to the Ski Lodge. Even though he is resented, LEE LISHER attends all the Commissioners meetings. He has helped many people realize they have a say in county policies, if they would only make themselves heard, and LEE LISHER is one that is a good listener.

E.B. Newsome (R)

"I do not favor tuition for in-state students," said E.B. Newsome, Republican State Senate candidate from District Five. Referring to proposals to alleviate financial problems of the state's institutions of higher education, he added that other means of taxation would have to be studied, specifically the use of income or sales taxes.

He disagreed with the proposal made by fellow party member and Idaho House candidate Robert Weisel who advocates 100 per cent state funding of primary and secondary education. Newsome favors an increase in state funding beyond use of the property tax, but feels the need for retention of local control.

The proposal to create a State Youth Corps to care for state parks and lands was made by Newsome's opponent, Orval Snow. Newsome said he agreed with the concept of providing training and jobs for young people.

Newsome, a Moscow insurance man and realtor, said he felt he could cooperate with Governor Andrus as long as the Governor's program was in the best interests of north Idaho.

On the abortion issue, he said that perhaps the Idaho law is too restrictive, and there may be some areas where it is permissible. However, he said further studies would have to be made.

Newsome has served as Moscow Chamber of Commerce president, chairman of the Moscow Elks board of Directors, and served on the board of directors for the Moscow Opportunity School for 15 years.

Idaho Needs Harold Snow

Lisher—commissioner

How about a write in vote for LEE LISHER as Latah County Commissioner for District No. 1. Lee is an honest, able young man and that is a combination we are surely lacking in our county politics.

Why not give our one Highway Commissioner, Pat Parsons, someone to help him. Lee Lisher attends the Commissioners meetings, which are open to the public. LEE has been struggling to make this county's commissioners use our tax money to do the job it was meant to do. LEE LISHER will do away with ignorance in taxing units. We should have at least one Commissioner that will try to do something for us the taxpayer. LEE can not accomplish as much as an interested-spectator. He needs your Vote!

If you are unable to locate your precinct, call the County Clerk at 882-0383.

The Idaho House race

"This is a crucial year for education."

Dobler, candidate for State Representative, is the wife of a U of I instructor, and has been involved in education on many levels. She has served on local school board, and is now employed part time at the University Cooperative Extension Service.

Dobler is opposed to in-state tuition, which she feels is, in part, actually mislabeled building fees. She said that practice is "a trend in the wrong direction in funding," but she was "not optimistic" about finding immediate answers to reduce the costs of higher education in the state.

She has also stated a desire to give each high school student an employable skill, and said it would "go far to reduce welfare rolls."

When asked why she ran for office at this time, Dobler mentioned education again, saying she felt "This is a crucial year for education," for both public schools and higher education institutions. She said this year offers a great opportunity to "really get something done in the area of education."

Weisel (R)

"I don't have tenure, and I believe a lousy teacher should be fired."

"We have to get the money where the kids are," declared Robert Weisel, Republican candidate for the State legislature. Consequently Weisel has gone on record as favoring state funding of basic educational programs, which actually would amount to 80 per cent state support.

He said there have been various methods proposed for relieving the property tax base for education funding, the simplest being an increase in the income or sales tax. A one per cent increase in sales tax was mentioned.

The Moscow High School government teacher said that with more state funding, salaries of teachers could be improved, and he also gave his opinions on tenure and tuition.

"I think tenure for the University of Idaho would be unconstitutional and don't approve of it. My wife and I are going to school part-time and if tuition is instituted, the State will have to provide for people who can't afford it. "I don't have tenure, and believe that a lousy teacher should be fired. There isn't really tenure in high schools; a teacher deserves a fair hearing, but if a poor teacher is rehired, it may mean the administration is afraid to rock the boat.

The proposal on the ballot to reduce the present 268 executive branches to 20 is wholeheartedly supported by Weisel. As a government instructor, Weisel said, "It's necessary to have clear lines of authority. This probably won't save any money but we have to know where to place the blame when something is done wrong. It won't be easy though with 268 special interests involved."

Harold Snow (R)

"Number one priority is increase in teachers' salaries."

A one percent increase in the Idaho sales tax is seen by Republican State Representative Harold Snow as the most viable alternative to the proposed college tuition for in-state students.

Snow, incumbent representative from District five running for re-election, stressed through that not all of this would go toward higher education.

He added that priorities are difficult to set under the existing tax structure, but said he felt that on the whole, the system is well-balanced. A number one priority is teacher salaries, which must be adequate for Idaho to compete in the market," said Snow.

And on the subject of tenure he said, "It's probably over-emphasized at the moment in all levels of education. We should re-evaluate hiring procedures and strive for equality in what is delivered."

Snow has served in the house since 1953 and is facing opposition from Democratic candidates Paul Kaus and Norma Dobler, and fellow Republican Robert Weisel. Two representatives are selected from District five. He has been Idaho's member on the Governing board of the National Council of State Governments and played a large part in creating the Idaho State Employees retirement system, Personnel Commission, and the merit system for state employees.

Kaus (D)

"I will be a part of the Andrus team."

Like Dobler, Kaus has long been involved with Idaho education, having taught in elementary school and served as principal at Lewiston, and is now an administrator at the U of I.

When asked yesterday if he had any final pre-election notes, Kaus said he hoped the University students would exercise their new franchise and right to vote. He said he has long supported the move, and hoped the right to vote would be used by students in Moscow.

Kaus, director of summer sessions at the U of I, has stated that tuition to Idaho students is "the least desirable alternative of funding higher education."

An Andrus man, Kaus stated he felt Idaho's democratic governor has been a "good governor" and has criticized the Republican-controlled legislature for its lack of cooperation with Andrus.

Kaus, candidate for State Representative, has said he looks for necessary increases for higher education. He has taken a stand to avoid "further duplication of small volume programs in higher education."

He singled out the graduate programs in three of Idaho's major institutions as places where duplication and expense could be reduced.

Babe drop last game

Treasure Valley Junior College rallied for three touchdowns in the final quarter to overtake the Idaho Vandalbabe 40-26 Saturday afternoon. The loss ended Idaho's junior varsity season with an 0-3 record.

Quarterback Andy Gilmore played his best game of the season, throwing three touchdown passes and approaching the 300 yard mark in yardage. His first scoring toss was a 12-yarder to Moscow's Steve Duncanson. Kurt Parsons managed a 14-14 halftime tie for Idaho with a one-yard run.

Gilmore threw a 50-yard touchdown strike to Tim Coles in the second half and gave Idaho a 26-20 lead when he flipped a 99-yard bomb to Roy Baldwin. The Chukars got back to sending in 6-5 split end, Jim Saunders, who had been held out for the first three periods after an injury. The talented receiver was too much for the shorter Idaho defenders.

Wed. Nov. 8th at noon, there will be a panel discussion concerning "Sports and Society" in the SUB. Hugh Cooke, ASUI Recreation Director, will moderate the discussion.

The public is invited to attend and participate. Serving on the panel will be Dr. Len Labine, a local sports announcer, and Don Smith, an Australian-born track star from WSU.

Vandals drop contest to Utah State Aggies

by Kim Crompton

In the never ending series of the Idaho Vandal football team, this week's episode ended as another tragedy when the Vandals were crushed in Logan by the Utah State Aggies, 51-7.

It seems as if each week the Idaho footballers have been getting progressively worse, this being their worst loss in several years. Once again the Vandals were unable to operate effectively as a team, with the offense sputtering continuously due to butter-finger ball-handling by the receivers and missed tackles by the defenders.

The game was a nightmare for Idaho's already weak secondary as they were picked apart by the passing of quarterback Tony Adams, who is ranked third nationally in passing, and the catches made by receiver Tom Forzani, the top receiver in the nation. It is easy to see why Utah State bettered or tied 16 school records in passing, as Adams completed 32 of 47 pass attempts for 406 yards, not to mention the 122 yards they gained on the ground. Overall, Utah State moved the ball for 538 net yards compared to a measly 150 for the Vandals.

Much as in the WSU-USC game, the Vandals played good football in the first and third quarters, but like the Cougars, were demolished in the second and fourth quarters. The Vandals made only eight first downs, compared to 29 for the Aggies.

Utah State scored only once in the first quarter on a 36 yard field goal by Mickey Doyle, while the Vandals were unable to score. The Aggies then exploded for four touchdowns in the second quarter to go in at halftime with a 31-0 lead.

Their first touchdown was a 3-yard Adams to Forzanni pass. Then, a few minutes later, Adams connected with Clark on a 27 yard pass for another score. Later, Adams hit Anderson on an eight yard pass for their third touchdown of the quarter. Finally, Adams hit Forzanni again, this time on a 20 yard pass for the touchdown.

The Vandals only score came in the fourth quarter when the Vandals went 34 yards in three plays behind the quarterbacking of Dave Comstock, with Randy Ammerman finally going in from the nine yard line.

Utah State scored three more touchdowns after that to take the lopsided win.

Waterpolo team third at UW meet

The Idaho Vandals finished third at the Washington Husky invitational water polo tournament over the weekend. The Vandals lost to Oregon twice by one-point edges to spoil their effort. Idaho opened with a 14-5 win over Portland State, then lost 9-8 to Oregon.

The Vandals rebounded to beat Washington State 8-4, then took Pacific Lutheran of Tacoma 9-4. In a semifinal game, the Oregon Ducks earned a berth in the championship game against Southern Oregon by nipping Idaho 13-12.

Famed Athlete Jesse Owens keynotes SUB Olympic program

Jesse Owens, outstanding gold medalist of the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin, will discuss "The Olympics: 1972 and the Future" at the University Thursday.

Owens will speak at 7 p.m. at the SUB. His appearance is part of a two-day program on athletics sponsored by the Associated Students of the University of Idaho (ASUI) Programs Office.

Events Wednesday, include a noon-hour panel on the "Role of the Modern Athlete" and a film, "Olympaid," showing Owens and Hitler at the 1936 Olympics. The film will be shown at 7 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theater.

Panelists to appear in the SUB Vandal Lounge are Dr. Len Labine, Moscow, sports announcer for KRPL; Bill Koss, assistant track coach at the University of Idaho; and Don Smith, an Australian athlete participating in track at Washington State University.

Paul Blanton, head of the university's art and architecture department, and Philip Drew, visiting professor of architecture from Germany, will discuss "Athletic Architecture" at 2 p.m. Thursday in the SUB. The session includes a visual presentation of the Munich Olympic architecture and a discussion of the planning and structural considerations in design of the athletic facilities.

Blanton worked in Frei Otto's Institute of Lightweight Surface Structures in 1972 and documented the Munich athletic complex while on sabbatical from the university. Drew is author of the book "Third Generation: the Changing Meaning of Architecture."

At 4 p.m. Thursday, "Sports in Today's World" will be discussed at a panel moderated by Ed Knecht, director of athletics. Panelists include Owens, Blanton, Dr. Leon Green, head of the physical education department, and Ed Troxel, university head track coach.

Owens, considered by many sports experts to be the greatest track and field star of the half century, gained international distinction at the 1936 Berlin Olympic games when he won individual titles in the 100-meters, 200-meters and broad jump and ran on the victorious relay team.

In 1960 he was named the "Champion of the Century" and has become involved in public service, including establishment of the Jesse Owens Educational Foundation to make better and more complete educational opportunities available to all youth.

OLYMPIAN, JESSE OWENS, will be speaking on "The Olympics, 1972 and the Future", in the SUB, 7:00 p.m. Thursday. This will climax this week's focus by the Program Board on the Olympics. The views of this famous athlete will be timely and important opinion in this year of such tragedy and controversy over the recent Games.

What's happening Vote for truth

by Mark Fritzer

Your vote is not fragile; it won't break if you cast it. America and her voting population have a miserable record of voter turn-out when it comes to electing the leaders that move and shake the form and substance of our country.

Too many people complain that all politics are corrupt and refuse to dirty their hands by becoming involved in the political process. Well, Mr. and Ms. Clean America, all those politicians that you dislike are there by the power of the ballot. It's powerful in its use by whom it puts into office and very powerful in its lack of use by whom it lets into office. The affluent luxury that allows you indolently to refuse to become involved is a direct product of how this country is led by its elected leaders. I believe that the anti-welfare argument says that people shouldn't be allowed to have that which they haven't earned. Well, earn your right to live American, vote.

When you vote, vote for truth and not corruption.

Voo Doo spell cast by music of Dr. John

by Joel Turner

"A colorful pageantry unique in modern music" comes to the U of I ballroom tonight. Dr. John Creaux, alias the Night Tripper, alias the gris-gris man, alias Mac Rebannack, brings his eight-piece band to Moscow for something more than just music. As Time magazine said, his is a "visual act as much as musical."

The idea of a total show, with each element contributing to the overall effect, is essential to the voodoo-cajun-creole music of Dr. John. All the separate effects combine in order to achieve the final goal—an audience which understands voodoo, an audience which has been put under a spell. "There's something mythological about his presence on stage" said Cash Box, which called him "a brain surgeon of the subconscious."

Next week, when news of Dr. John's concert at U of I is known, the number of people claiming to have attended will undoubtedly be far more than the capacity of the ballroom. Don't miss it.

Peace-Corps VISTA workers recruit here

Action-Peace Corps-VISTA has returned Peace Corps and VISTA volunteers on campus to discuss programs with seniors and graduate students the week of Nov. 6-10.

The recruiters man a table in the SUB lobby daily from 8:30 to 4:30. Representing the agency are Eric Thomson, a former Peace Corps Volunteer in Upper Volta, West Africa; Darlene Himmelspach, a former VISTA in St. Louis and Seattle; and Jim Rayburn, a former VISTA in Houston and now Northwest Regional Manager for ACTION recruitment.

Peace Corps is seeking December and June graduates with backgrounds in agriculture, architecture & urban planning, math, sciences, secondary education, forestry, fisheries, home economics, industrial arts. A very strong demand also exists for physical education seniors for Peace Corps programs

VISTA continues to utilize large numbers of people with degrees in the humanities in its programs throughout the United States. Sociology, psychology, architecture & urban planning, political science, history and english are the backgrounds sought by VISTA. Unusually large numbers of applicants will go into training programs starting with the new year as VISTA expands its strength.

"VISTA and Peace Corps still offer an unmatched opportunity for persons to contribute their skills creatively and find the kind of satisfaction only a meaningful job gives. The frustrations one encounters are more than compensated for by the wealth of experience one picks up, and the sense of accomplishment one gets from doing an important job well. The travel, readjustment allowances, professional experience, and in many cases, mastery of a second language are further dividends," according to Thomson.

Workshop scheduled at swim center

The University of Idaho Swimming Center will be the classroom for a workshop in November designed to qualify area swimmers as officials at swimming and diving competitive events.

The workshop is jointly sponsored by the women's physical education department and the division of continuing education, according to Dr. James Black, regional director. Although the class will be open to anyone interested, it is especially designed for those who have had some experience working at competitive swim events.

The instructor will be Vangie Parker of the University of Idaho women's P.E.

Eiguren reports on ISGA meeting

The Idaho Student Government Association, an organization designed to allow college students to work with the state board of education, held a convention Nov. 2, 3 and 4 at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa. Representatives from the U of I at the meeting were ASUI President Roy Eiguren, Vice President Mel Fisher and student Senator Clive Strong.

According to Eiguren, the dues for membership in the association were lowered from $1000 for the four state-owned colleges and universities, to $150 dollars apiece per year, while the fee was set at $50 for the five private institutions in the state.

Prior to the convention, Boise State College dropped out of the association, but Eiguren said that after the dues were lowered, there was a strong indication that it would rejoin.

Eiguren pointed out that the ISGA has been changing from a politically-oriented organization (in 1970 it endorsed Cecil Andrus for governor) to a body concerned more with quality education and the representation of Idaho students before the board of education.

dept. Other swimming specialists will also be used in the instruction.

This workshop is timely for those successfully completing the program to qualify as officials for the Women's National Collegiate Swimming and Diving Championships scheduled here March 15, 16, 17, 1973. They would also be able to officiate at all other high school and collegiate swimming and diving events.

Registration will be conducted by the division of continuing education so that one semester hour's credit may be earned. Students may register at the first class session scheduled for 7-9 p.m., Nov. 10 at the University pool. A total of six sessions will be followed by the final class on Saturday, Dec. 9. Cost will be $12 for each registrant. If anyone wishes to pre-register prior to Nov. 10, he or she may do so at the CONTINUING EDUCATION Office on campus. Phone: 885-6641
