Mall construction begins

By SUE THOMAS
of the Argonaut Staff

Earth-moving machines have begun working 24 hours a day on construction of the Palouse Empire Shopping Mall on University of Idaho land.

The Mall, located just west of Moscow on the Moscow-Pullman highway, is the project of Earl D. McCarthy, a developer from Spokane, who has leased the property from the U of I. In an interview with the WSU Daily Evergreen, McCarthy stated that this first phase of work would be preparation for construction; grading, leveling, and basic drainage work.

McCarthy said Tuesday that the grading work would be done in 30 days if dry weather continues.

"If we have good luck," he said, "then we can start three to four months earlier in the spring."

Earth-moving he explained, needs to be done when the ground is dry although other facets of construction can start when the ground is moist. Hence the company can, if the grading is finished this fall, start in April as opposed to June.

Despite McCarthy's leveling and grading, the most important part of a mall are the tenants—major stores that will sign contracts and make the investment pay.

McCarthy, when contacted by the Evergreen on Monday, refused to reveal whether he has had any firm commitments from any potential tenants or who such tenants might be. However, a source at the Moscow City Hall hinted Monday that two of the stores to be located in the new mall will be Safeway and K-Mart. "This is just speculation," the source said, "we will not know for sure until the developer brings his plans in."

According to the Evergreen, a source at the Pullman City Hall also said he believes that K-Mart is one of the more definite tenants for the Moscow mall, in which case, he claimed, the shopping center in Moscow cannot compete on the same level with the potential shopping mall in Pullman.

One controversy which has unsettled Moscow businesses, but has since been resolved, is the question of taxes.

According to Gene Slade, business manager for the University, the shopping center and the land it will sit on will be taxed like any other business.

Questions had been raised by several Moscow businessmen about the taxation of the property because state land normally does not pay city or other taxes.

There has not been a formal contractual agreement about the taxes, Slade said, although the University is willing to sign such an agreement.

The beginning of actual physical development of the mall hasn't caused any pause in the continuance of plans for a shopping center at Pullman, according to Warren Bishop, vice president in charge of university development at WSU.

Sherman Bailey, manager of the Pullman Chamber of Commerce, was quoted as saying "McCarthy is an experienced and capable developer, but he may be starting the work without any major tenants." When asked if he thought McCarthy was just bluffing the Pullman Merchants, Bailey said that the ideas was possible "and they'll play all kinds of games to get it (the mall)."

Larry Larse, Pullman city supervisor, was not discouraged by McCarthy's graders, and expressed enthusiasm for Pullman's retail development plans, which include a major shopping center and enhancement of the existing retail outlets in Pullman.

Bishop refused to comment in an interview with the Evergreen on Monday, but he expressed the attitude of continual optimism a week ago when he was informed of McCarthy's plans to go ahead with the mall.

The issue which is apparently still up in the air—and the issue which may ultimately decide where a shopping center is located—is who gets the tenants.

Counselors trained to aid handicapped

By JENNY SNODGRASS of the Argonaut Staff

There is much concern circulating within the minds of 20 grad-students involved in the new rehabilitation program for handicapped persons.

After two semesters of course work, summer school for field internship experience and outside visitations, the students will be turned loose as rehabilitation counselors. As professional counselors, they will be trained to help physically, mentally, emotionally or socially disadvantaged persons of working age.

The purpose of the program is to enhance public awareness of the handicapped and increase understanding through providing opportunities for all handicapped persons to become self sufficient, self supporting and contributing members of society. In addition it will provide an opportunity for discussion and the resolution of any problems related to rehabilitation of the handicapped.

Dr. Harold (Pete) James, Associate professor of the vocational rehabilitation program stressed that there was concern about architectural barriers on campus.

As for the emotional aspect, a counselor must help the client develop a satisfying and independent life. He must be aware of the fact that no matter how handicapped the person is, he can do anything. The client must be made aware of this also through the encouragement, trust and care of his counselor. It is important to note that handicapped persons are constantly influenced by surrounding society.

In order to produce an accomplished counselor, the training requirements include medical aspects of disability, psycho-social aspects of handicapped conditions, counseling theory techniques, placement and job development and the ability to utilize research finding and professional publications.

With majors ranging from psychology to law, the students are now faced with two alternatives. They will work for either their M.S. in which a thesis is required, or a M.E.D. in which they will take a comprehensive exam.

The 1974 entrance salaries for rehabilitation counselors in the State Vocational Rehabilitation Agencies range from $9,500 to about $10,500 a year.

Senate to negotiate terms for stadium top

By KENTON BIRD of the Argonaut Staff

The University of Idaho administration will probably be able to meet most of the proposals made by the ASUI Senate regarding control and use of the stadium, Financial Vice President Sherman Carter said Thursday.

With an eye on reality but with its hand on its billfold, the senate Tuesday night voted unanimously to set up a special senate committee to negotiate with the administration on the stadium.

Included in the senate's action were 10 specific points for negotiation, including one acknowledging the probability of a student fee increase by requesting that any such increase be limited to $5 per semester.

"We're close to being in good solid agreement," Carter said of the senate's 10 points. "I think that with a certain amount of trust, we can give the students most of the things they are concerned about."

But Carter said any final agreement would probably not be "in these words on all points."

He said the administration could not commit itself in matters on which the Board of Regents have final authority. "Some of those things we (the administration) don't have the power to give away."

One of the senate's points was that the escrow account for the undersurfacing of the stadium not be released for any purposes but Carter said control of the escrow account rests with the regents.

Another senate request was that the administration budget all maintenance and salary costs out of the University's general operating budget.

Carter, however, pointed out that the regents have final authority on budgeting funds. And, he added, the board has expressed a desire to finance auxiliary (non-academic) activities from sources other than the general operating budget.

The regents also have the sole authority to name and rename all buildings, the vice president said. The senate's plan asked that the stadium name mention the ASUI.

On other points, Carter said it would be premature to comment on them before they had been discussed with the senate committee.

"There are some factors that will need to be discussed with the committee," he acknowledged. Representatives of the administration will be meeting soon with committee members but no date had been set, Carter said.

Carter said he was pleased with the action taken by the senate and saw it as an encouraging scene.

When asked whether he thought this meant the senate was taking a position in support of a conditional fee increase, Carter said: "I feel confident that when the true facts come out, good judgments will be made."

The other requests made in the senate plan approved Tuesday:

—A new ASUI department would be created to administer the athletic complex and determine priorities for usage and scheduling. It will be governed by a committee with a majority of student members.

—A percentage of income from non-ASUI activities that use the facility would be placed in a fund to be administered by the committee to be used for student programs.

—The $18 athletic admission fee now paid by students would be applied toward the purchase of a season ticket in other areas.

—The ASUI would use the facilities at no charge except for clean-up.

—The manager of the facility would be hired by the board, with half of the salary to be paid by the ASUI and half by the University.

—The $5 fee, should it be instituted, would be kept separate from the athletic fee and would be redirected to the ASUI for other use when the bonds were paid off.

Mark Beatty has been named chairman of the senate's negotiation committee. Other members are Sens. Mark Lotspeich, Grant Burgoyne, John Rupe and Gregg Lutman. The proposal for the committee and the points of concession was authored by Mary Morris, Emily Hansen, Bill Fay and Burgoyne.

Bush is top vote-getter in freshman election

Ron Bush, a Kappa Sigma pledge, received the most votes in the Frosh Council elections held last Wednesday. He received 112 votes and becomes the Frosh council chairman.

He has said that he wants a freshman as a voting member of the ASUI senate, or stagger the Senate elections so that freshmen might be included. He also said that he considers the stadium roof to be an important issue to freshmen.

Also elected to the frosh council were Ann Vogt, who received 109 votes; Tamara Slovaczek of Alpha Gamma Delta, 97; Rick Sandahl, Delta Tau Delta, 69; John Pfaff, Lambda Chi, 68; Patrick Borchard, Farmhouse, 65; and Chip Day, Theta Chi, 63.

The system of voting was changed from methods used in past elections. Before, the voting was preferential; that is, a person's favorite candidate received 7 votes, second favorite 6 votes, and so on. This year, all seven choices received one vote.

Voter turnout was slightly smaller this year than last year. In 1973 230 ballots were cast; this year's total ran 209.

Open hearings on tap for Casey appointment

Greg Casey's possible appointment as an ASUI Senator will be discussed in several open hearings over the next few weeks. Ordinarily an elective office, the appointment was made by ASUI President Dirk Kempthorne, and is now being considered by the ASUI Senate. and is now being considered by the ASUI Senate.

An open hearing of the senate sub-committee on the appointment will be held next Thursday. Casey will be called on to answer any questions put to him by senators, students, or other interested people who attend.

A final vote on the appointment is expected about Oct. 22, said Senator Grant Burgoyne.

"We want a lot of people to show up for the hearings," said Burgoyne. "We want student reaction and opinion on this."

He said that Kempthorne had received a list of potential candidates from his own advisory committee, and that the names were kept secret until the list was narrowed down to one nominee. "We didn't even know who applied," he said.

The final senate deliberations, scheduled for Oct. 22, will be private, but the vote will be public. A majority vote will confirm or deny the appointment.

Argonaut puzzle of the week

Hey, girls—did you make the supreme sacrifice of not taking that required 1:00 class, just so you could keep up with "All My Children?" Do you often have flashbacks of scenes from "Peyton Place?" Do you eat mush every day for breakfast, even in summer? If you answer "yes" to these questions, then try your luck on this puzzle. The first three people to fill it out correctly will win their choice of: 1) a love affair with a married person, 2) a free abortion for yourself or someone you met at a party 6 to 8 weeks ago, or 3) a stab-in-the-back gossip session about the close friend of your choice!

U of I student seeks county auditor's seat

In an unusual political year where no one wants to get involved in politics, two U of I students are reversing that trend.

Glenn Miles, graduate student in political science and speech, is running against Orval Snow, freshman Democrat incumbent senator from the 5th legislative District. Michael Hogan is running against 12 year Republican incumbent Kelly the County Auditor's seat. Hogan is working for his Masters degree in Business Administration. He is a member of the campus veterans' organization, chairman of the ASUI Issues and Forums Committee, and an active member of the Moscow American Legion Post 6.

Hogan was asked to run by some members of the Democratic Central Committee and for this reason he started a "write-in" campaign which resulted in his nomination in the August 6 primary.

"No official candidates have challenged Cline since he has been in office," commented Hogan.

What are Hogan's ideas on the management of the auditor's office? "The way I see it, the work output could be increased without an increase in spending."

The way this would be accomplished is to institute a student internship program within the office.

Hogan said that "we can for the first time have county business united with preparatory training. It is essential to take advantage of one of the greatest assets we have here in Latah County—the men and women of the University, both student and professional. They are the most economical source of manpower we have."

Hogan stated that the county government is here to "work for the people" and the University population is part of the community because the people do live here at least three-fourths of the year.

Hogan said, "That is not to say that I will work only for the university population but that they can't be ignored because they are an integral part of the county community."

One of the major functions of the County Auditor's office is as a repository of official documents and public information. It is Hogan's stated desire to implement the most updated program of information retrieval possible and to insure access by the general public to these facts.

"I would like to encourage everyone to get out and register to vote" was Hogan's closing statement.

An interview with Glenn Miles will be in next Tuesday's Argonaut.

Soft touch

Last week some students were sitting around listening to the broadcast of the Vandal-Bengal game.

One said, "Gees—this is almost like a home game—we can't see the field, and we're drinking."

Others have suggested the new stadium is the ASUI's first bar, with one giant foosball table for general amusement purposes.

So, treat it like a bar. Show those other spectators the same respect one would for area establishment foosballers. (And that does not mean the foosball players on a Wednesday night at Mort's.)

In fact, to decrease the temptation of relieving one's frustrations with violence, take a soft container.

Not necessarily soft drinks, but a soft container.

If you're more interested in drinking than the "giant foosball" table, stay home Saturday.

And watch the game on radio!

Attorney General Matt Dillon

The Attorney General race this year seems at times like the kind of contest where I'd like to vote "no." Or perhaps it would be better to write in Matt Dillon who through countless episodes of Gunsmoke has administered the laws of Dodge City with a minimum of hassle and a maximum of efficiency.

There have always been strong arguments about the top legal office in the state being political. Someone is always claiming that the politicization of justice had cut the corners off his or her special cause. The dropping of charges against former narcotics agent John Cobbley has been the latest controversy in this respect.

Nevertheless, the race for the AG spot this year is a real corker, unique unto itself.

To begin with, take the challenger, Wayne Kidwell. He's busy convincing the people that the "old" Wayne Kidwell is dead, and it's the "new" Wayne Kidwell who is running. The old Wayne Kidwell was a somewhat naive state representative from Ada County who innocently introduced bills on campaign and election reform. The New Wayne Kidwell knows better - knowledge comes from age - and opposes the Sunshine Initiative.

The old Wayne Kidwell was a

progressive, somewhat liberal Republican, the alternative at one time to Steve Symms. The new Wayne Kidwell prattles inanely about performing radical surgery on state welfare programs and catching more welfare cheaters.

Then there's the incumbent Attorney General Anthony Park. This Wednesday Mr. Park, who has done his best to arrest every pot smoking teenager in the state, appeared on the University of Idaho campus and sought to convince the students there he was a liberal Democrat after all (and there should be no hard feelings about the dope busts).

That's a little like Bobby Riggs passing himself off as a regional representative of the National Organization of Women.

Still, the Attorney General came and answered questions - and there were some tough ones. He was willing to grab a microphone and face a bunch of students not overly pleased with his presence. A lot of people seemed to have a friend that had been hassled by one of "Parks Narcs," and they all tried to get their licks in. They turned the questioning period into a less than pleasant experience for the AG.

The fact that some of the charges leveled against Tony and his office are true bothers me quite a bit. But the fact that he has shouldered full responsibility for past mistakes is encouraging. It means the guy is not totally unbelievable when he talks about having removed the "rotten apples" from his staff.

So, after hearing the incumbent Democrat present his case, I'm still skeptical about this race, and the thought of Matt Dillon may weigh heavy on my shoulders come November. But the skepticism is now mingled with some respect for a guy who is willing to slug it out on the issues (even if the issues arose from his own mistakes.)

Right now the feeling is more a sense of waiting, of turning toward Wayne Kidwell and watching to see what he does with his turn at bat.

Optional athletic fee asked

The ASUI Senate took two hours Tuesday night, and discovered that they could make sensible compromises among themselves, then work together for a common goal afterwards.

The goal: Student control of the athletic complex—with a roof on it.

Four senators submitted a bill creating a negotiating group to bargain concessions with the administration about the complex. The complex that students—and only students—have already paid $3.5 million for and will probably have to pay another $4 million for the roof.

In a committee of the whole, the Senate considered first what such a committee should ask for. After some extended debate they decided:

1. No more than a $5 fee increase.
2. A new ASUI department, called the Athletic Complex Department (ACD), that will administer the complex and determine priorities of usage.
3. Undersurfacing money will not be released.
4. A percentage of admissions money to go to the ACD, and this money will support other recreational activities.
5. The $18 per semester athletic admission fee can be used toward the purchase of a season ticket in other seating areas.
6. No use charge to the ASUI.
7. The stadium will be named after the ASUI.
8. The University will pay all maintenance and salary costs.
9. The ACD Board will hire the manager and pay his salary.
10. The $5 fee increase will be kept separate from any other fees.

The demands are strong, but they should have been better. Proposal 2 was changed from full student control to only majority seating on the board.

John Hecht

Why should it be the latter? Students have paid for the whole thing, so why should they not have complete control, with only advice from others?

But the hottest item that was suggested and failed to get through was to give students the option of paying the $18 fee or not, as they wished. This would have meant that even if fees went up $5 for the roof, and maybe $5 for a SUB increase, they could still end up paying less each semester at registration.

Bart Barranco summed up his feelings in debate when he voted down the proposal. He indicated that he felt the students were not astute or perceptive enough to realize what such an optional fee would mean to intercollegiate athletics, which are funded largely out of this fee.

At this time the Athletic Department receives roughly $218,000 a year from students via the compulsory fee. (6,000 students X $18 X 2semesters/year). There seemed to be an undercurrent among senators that in giving students the option to pay for the games they go to, instead of ahead of time, that such funds might be reduced.

Emily Hansen said, "I'd be the first to not buy tickets, but the athletic department can't run a business already budgeted on voluntary contributions."

Hansen is correct. Since the athletic budget is already planning on spending the Spring 1975 fee money, such a proposal would only be a bargaining point. Something more realistic would need to be proposed.

How about placing an IBM card in each Spring '75 registration packet? It would have the following question:

Would you 1) Prefer next fall to but a season ticket to intercollegiate athletics for $18, or 2) Be allowed to buy single game tickets as you wish?

Proper programming would total up the responses. Such programming would also separate answers by class standing, on-and off-campus residency, etc. With this information, the University would be able to anticipate how much money would be incoming and how many students would show up if they had to pay by the ticket instead of in advance.

I would venture to guess the legislature, which would be meeting at that time to allocate funds to athletics, would be interested in these results and projections.

This would take the place of a referendum, which costs money and usually gets a minimal return. It would be much more accurate, having a higher percentage of students giving input, and the results would be available quickly for all to see.

Here is how your senator voted. Next time your living group is visited, indicate your feelings. For those who live off campus (a mere 53 of the student body) letters to the Argonaut or the ASUI would be in order.

Voting for the optional fee check-off: Burgoyne, Beatty, Lotspeich, Morris.

Voting against the check-off plan: Asher, Barranco, Hicks, Lutman, Fay, Rupe, Hansen.

"Before man found fire he found art and scratched the picture of a bison on the wall of his cave. The creative urge is fundamental in all of us," quoted Governor Cecil D. Andrus.

The third biennial Governor's Conference on the Arts features a feast of arts activities to satiate even the most choosy connoisseur. Highlighting the three-day meeting, October 10-12 held largely in the University of Idaho Student Union, will be a Friday awards luncheon (noon to 2 p.m.) and conference banquet (7:30 to 10 p.m.). At the luncheon, Richard Collins, President of the Western States Art Foundation will be speaking for Governor Andrus who is unable to attend. Art Troutner, Boise architect and chairman of the State Commission of Arts and Humanities will present the coveted silver medals to Idaho citizens who have made distinguished contributions to the arts. KRPL radio's John Mix will be the master of ceremonies.

Academy award winner Celeste Holm will be the guest speaker at the banquet, her topic "More Than Meets the Eye." Master of ceremonies will be Bill Hall of the Lewiston Morning Tribune, and incidental music will be provided by the Idaho Strings, directed by LeRoy Bauer, U of I professor of music.

A major evening performance scheduled during the conference is the U of I theatre arts department production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman." This unabashed tragedy — popular both in America and Europe — will be performed at 8 p.m. Oct. 10-12 and again Oct. 17-19 at the new Performing Arts Center. Tickets are $2.50 for non-students and free for students presenting their ID's.

Donna Bray, member of the State Art Commission, believes the conference is going pretty well. She implied that with its various artistic endeavors, the conference is a sharing development type. People are learning from each other through display and discussion.

Numerous arts-related organizations are holding state meetings in Moscow during the conference. These participating organizations include the Idaho Commission on the Arts and Humanities, Alliance for Arts Education, Association for the Humanities, and the Clearwater District of the Idaho State Federation of Garden Clubs (14 clubs).

Bray noted that this is the first year flower arrangement is depicted as part of the Governor's Conference on the Arts.

Others include the Idaho Artist Association, Idaho Dance Arts Alliance, Idaho Federation of Music Clubs, Idaho Music Educators of America, Idaho Press Women, Idaho Writers League, Palouse Hill Weavers, and the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Non-members wishing to attend any of the separate programs sponsored by these groups should ask for information at the group's registration table at the SUB as some organizations are offering a reduced registration fee for non-members, adds Bray.

Special up-coming activities planned during the performance and exhibition hours which deserve special emphasis voiced Bray include, on Friday:

10:45-11:45 a.m. critic Hugh Kenner discussing the poetry of Ezra Pound, one of Idaho's most noted men of letters, Borah Theatre.

Controlling one's perception Unraveling that sexist

By RHONDA BRAMMER
of the Argonaut Staff

"A woman with excessive sexual desire is called a nymphomaniac. What do you call a man with excessive sexual desire?" the speaker asked.

"...normal," one woman replied sarcastically.

The group laughed. "Well maybe, but the point is," the speaker continued, "there really is no parallel word for men."

The audience, all women—some sitting on chairs, others on the floor, one woman pulling the cellophane off a chickensalad sandwich, another eating apples and cheddar cheese from a brown paper bag—had come Wednesday to have lunch at the Woman's Center and hear Corky Bush, U of I Director of Special Services and former college English instructor, talk about sexism in the English language.

"Language is sexist insofar as it perpetuates and supports conscious or unconscious assumptions about the primacy of male values," Bush said.

"Language controls a person's perceptions. Because it molds people's outlooks on life, it controls what they are capable of thinking about. When you change people's ways of talking, you change the way they conceive the world," she said.

An Aztec, who has only one word for rain, snow, sleet, and hail, is unable to perceive differences among the 26 or 27 varieties of snow that an Eskimo can distinguish simply because the Aztec does not have the Eskimo's 26 or 27 words for snow, Bush said.

"Language works like a filter by supplying categories to put stimuli and perceptions into," she said. Looking at the vocabulary of language reveals certain thought patterns by revealing the categories into which things are grouped. Women because of the words used to describe them, are categorized in certain ways that men are not, she said.

"What is the parallel word for men corresponding to 'whore' for women?" Bush asked. A long pause.

"A gigolo," one woman suggested.

Perhaps, Bush replied, but "gigolo" is a word with more status than "whore." That is another problem, she continued, often when parallel words do exist, the connotations are not the same. For example medical terms that deal with corresponding male-female biological processes often connote activity in the male and passivity in the female. "A man experiences an erection," she said, "a woman experiences congestion."

Syntax patterns differ in the sentences of men and women, and those differences too, indicate different ways of looking at the world, Bush said. One construction that women use conversationally far more than men is the tag question.

(Here Bush referred to Robin Lakoff's article in Ms., July 1974). A tag question in midway between an outright statement and a yes-no question allows the speaker to avoid commitment and avoid conflict with the listener. The problem is that the speaker's own impression of the listener's impression of themselves is likely to be different from the addressee's impression of their view and a yes-no question. It is less assertive than the former, but more confident than the latter. For example, instead of saying: "It is hot in here." many women are likely to say: "Sure is hot in here, isn't it?"

According to Lakoff, their tag question allows a speaker to avoid commitment, and thereby avoid conflict with the addressee. The problem is that, by so doing, speakers may also give the impression of not really being sure of themselves, or looking to the addressee for confirmation of their views."

"It gets ridiculous," Bush said, "when women start saying things like: 'I have a headache, don't I?"

English, in general, is good for describing objects and the relation of people to objects, she said, but it has "a scarcity of words to describe internal events, thoughts, feelings— internal reality." And without a word to describe a perception, you lose the perception itself.

she said. "That is why consciousness-raising sessions are so important to the women's movement" she said. Women must share the experience itself, because they cannot describe the experience through language, Bush concluded just as the bells chimed one o'clock. Women tucked their sheets of "Recommendations for avoiding Sexist Language" into notebooks, deposited wadded-up brown lunch bags in the wastebasket, and began leaving for afternoon classes.

A good time was had by all, wasn't it?

Dave Comstock, who led the Idaho Vandals to their first victory of the season, has been named offensive player of the week by the Big Sky Conference.

Comstock, who appeared before the hometown crowd at Pocatello, passed and rushed for 191 yards in Idaho's 28-9 victory over Idaho State. A junior, Comstock completed seven of 15 passes for 132 yards, including a 74-yard touchdown bomb to Collie Mack on the game's opening play.

Vandalbabes in search of first win tomorrow

By JOHN HAWLEY
of the Argonaut Staff

Idaho's junior varsity football Vandalbabes will be on the road this weekend to battle with the Treasure Valley Community College Chuckers, Saturday at 1 p.m. in Ontario, Oregon.

The Vandalbabes, who wound up on the wrong end of 28-6 score last Saturday in Bozeman, will be looking for their first win this weekend. The Montana State Bobkittens were able to thrash the Vandalbabes, who had trouble getting their offense together.

Dan Dennings and Dennis Deal will be competing for the Vandalbabes quarterback slot and either one could get the nod going into Saturday's clash. Running backs John Cleary and Robert Brooks are the leading ground gainers for the "babes," and will pose a threat to the Chucker defense.

Bob Neyennes recovered a fumble in Montana State's end zone and was responsible for Idaho's six points.

At the safety position is Rick Kirtland, whose two older brothers, Bill and John, are on the Vandal varsity football squad. Kirtland who has excellent speed will be a fine track prospect this spring.

Under the direction of former Vandal quarterback, Rick Seefried, the Vandalbabes should be victorious, if they can play up to their potential.

Soccer team downs Gonzaga; faces Montana this Sunday

The Idaho Vandal soccer squad, fresh off a tight 3-2 victory over Gonzaga last Saturday will travel to Missoula to tangle with the Montana Grizzlies in a Sunday afternoon contest.

The Vandals are plagued with a number of problems going into what could be their roughest tilt of the season. Goalie John Ferguson probably won't be making the trip thus placing freshman Jim Roberts in the nets. Roberts ability is limited with a broken finger, but said he will play if necessary.

Other injury blockage will detract from Idaho's performance Sunday as Sassan Bassir and John Etukudoh, who both missed last week's game, are doubtful starters for Sunday. Also Randy Farlee, who injured his ankle last week will be sidelined.

Fortunately, the Vandal scoring threat will be in tact with Joel O'Donkor, whose two goals were detrimental to Gonzaga last week. Forward Nicos Rossides who kicked in last week's winning tally and halfback Arnfinn Rusten will also be seeing plenty of action.

Vandals face tough West Texas

By KEVIN KELLEHER
of the Argonaut Staff

The Vandals play host to the West Texas State Buffaloes tomorrow in their long awaited home opener. Kickoff time in the ASUI - New Idaho Stadium is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. and a sellout crowd is expected.

The Vandals are fresh off their first win of the season, a 28-9 slapping of conference foe Idaho State. Troxel hopes the momentum of the win coupled with the enthusiasm of a large Vandal turnout, will arouse his Vandal squad, which is anxious to play their first home game.

Troxel says "This game is going to be a real bugger." The Buffaloes are a big, physical team that stresses good defense, the heart of their defense being the linebacker corps and the huge defensive tackles. Troxel singled out middle linebacker Bruce Davis, strong side linebacker Steve Rogers, and tackle Floyd Jones as the mainstays of the Buffalo defense. He said "To win we have to beat their middle people - run right at them."

The Buffaloes had a poor season last year losing nine of eleven games. This year the herd hopes to reverse those stats, and thus far they have been doing a good job convincing opponents that they mean business. The Missouri Valley Conference member has beaten Drake 37-17, Wichita 41-7, and Southern Mississippi 31-0. New Mexico State shutout the Buffaloes 41-0, but the Texas squad was slowed with a crushing flu virus, and thus their performance in that encounter is not true indication of their potential.

The Texas team highlights a potent, fast striking, high scoring offensive machine. The leading ground gainer is the fullback, John Darden, but their real talent is quarterback Tully Blanchard and split end Tracy Dixon.

Blanchard runs well and is a talented passer, who has connected on 11 of 32 aerials for 213 yards and three touchdowns. He executes the famed wishbone offense as well as any previous Texas quarterback. Blanchard's primary receiver is Tracy Dixon, but he frequently connects with his tight end Merced Solis.

Dixon is a real speed threat. The 9.2 sprinter has been on the receiving end of all Blanchard air strikes - long bombs. Coach Troxel has given the chore of keying Dixon to talented Chuck Love. Love will key Dixon, while Sims will fight the outside option threats.

The Vandals are most fortunate in that they suffered no injuries in the last week's clash with ISU. The flu that has been spreading across campus has not hit the Vandals too hard and Troxel expects to take a healthy enthusiastic squad into the encounter.

There is a good possibility that Troxel and his elite staff will formulate another razzle-dazzle play, like last week's 74 yard bomb to Collie Mack, on Idaho's first play from scrimmage. Hopefully, it will have the same results as last Saturday's lighting score.

Although this game is a non-conference game, it means a lot to the Vandals and Troxel. It is the first home game of the season for a debuting coach and a dedicated club. Troxel said "I'd consider the season a fantastic success if we won all our home games for the students and fans."

The Vandals seemed to put it all together last week. The kicking game was good, but Tanner missed a field goal that was well within his range, and a field goal could decide the Texas game. Tanner's punting was great and consequently he leads the Big-Sky stats with a 41.0 yard average.

The offense looked well, but the ball bounced in our favor. It seems that Comstock can run the veer quite well, mixing his attack with a touch of professionalism. All three backs, Brantley, Chadband, and Fredback, gained over sixty yards.

The defense looked good and bad. They contained ISU most of the game, but permitted the Bengals march 99 1/2 yards to score. They'll have to tighten up against Texas or the Buffaloes will trample them, making it a very long day for the Vandals.

With the victory behind them, and Boise State ahead of them, the Vandals should win. Coach Troxel has a 'Peanuts' cartoon on the wall of his office, that probably best epitomizes football at Idaho. It's the classic Charlie Brown holding a football and saying WIN-EVER REALIZE HOW NICE THAT WORD SOUNDS? Directly across the room hangs a tribute to an Ed Troxel, who won a bunch of high school games.

Record review

Filling the Hendrix gap

By ED GLADDER

If you ever have been a Jimi Hendrix fan and are tired of record companies releasing obscure Hendrix recordings that don't do Jimi justice, hold on a minute. There's a heavy dude named Robin Trower who's out to fill the void left by Hendrix' death.

Trower was lead guitarist with Procul Harum for six albums. Procul Harum? They're about as heavy as a helium lollipop, you say? Apparently Trower realized this when they were on the same bill with Hendrix a week before his fatal overdose. Trower had always claimed his main influence had been black rhythm and blues, and now says Jimi is really responsible for his "roots."

About a year ago Trower formed a trio made up of himself, bassist-vocalist Jimmy Dewar, formerly of Stone the Crows, and ex-Quiver drummer Reggie Isadore. They first released an album, "Twice Removed from Yesterday," that immediately got people talking about "Hendrix murmuring in his grave." Now he has a new LP, "Bridge of Sighs," that is heavy, hard, and will surely launch Trower to stardom.

Robin Trower isn't copying Hendrix; he's really expanding on him. He doesn't play lead with quite the wrecklessness that was so characteristic of Jimi; he's about a thousandth of a second slower and a little smoother. And Jimmy Dewar's voice gives the music more of a mysterious, almost spooky overtone. "Bridge of Sighs" shows all of this. Every cut on it sounds powerful to me so I can't really single any of them out, but the title tune is so forcefully serious, I wish Jimi was still around to hear it.

Nothing against Procul Harum, but Trower is a lot better off where he is.

In his "Rolling Stone" review of Emerson, Lake and Palmer's last album, "Brain Salad Surgery," Gordon Fletcher suggested that ELP should record all of their albums in live performance rather than in the studio. Apparently they thought it was good advice, since they have just released a 3-record LP, "Welcome Back My Friends to the Show that Never Ends," recorded live on their 1973-74 world tour.

The album is made up almost entirely of material from their previous discs, "Tarkus," "Trilogy," and "Brain Salad Surgery." And it is presented in virtually the same order that it was in their performance in Pullman last Spring, from the opening "Hoedown" to the ending fireworks on "Karn Evil 9"

ELP is a trio of tight, highly proficient musicians. Palmer is simply relentless on drums, Emerson is a master computer on keyboards and synthesizer, and Lake smooths it all out with his solid vocals, bass, and guitar. Their product is a rare blend of classical, jazz, and heavy rock music. You definitely get this message on the "Welcome Back" album. But you can't appreciate how much better their live spectacle represents the true Emerson, Lake and Palmer, unless you've seen them. Plus, live recordings just don't have the sound quality of the studio. For these reasons, a lot of people will rate the album mediocre.

I'm an ELP fan, I saw them last spring, and they literally blew what little head I had left out of the Coliseum. So naturally I'm a little biased. Maybe if they included a 16mm film to go along with it.....?

The Three Advent Speakers

When products become best-sellers largely on the strength of word-of-mouth advertising, and when people consistently go out of their way to write the company and say thanks for making them, you have reason to believe that something special is going on.

The something special is this:

The three speakers described in this ad do exactly what they are represented to do.

The Advent Loudspeaker

The original Advent was designed to compete in every audible respect with the most expensive speakers available, at a fraction — often a very small fraction — of their cost. Its useful frequency range is as wide as any speaker's, and its sound is clean, clear, and beautifully defined, with a musical balance that is satisfying not just with the best recordings or one kind of musical material, but with the whole range of music and the various ways of recording it. Its bass response is approached by only a handful of speakers at any price, and surpassed by none.

It cost $115 to $130, depending on cabinet finish.

The Smaller Advent Loudspeaker

The Smaller Advent was designed to do exactly what the original Advent does, at half the size and two-thirds the cost, except that it will not play quite as loud. Its range and overall sound are the same as the original (not close, but the same), and for anything short of roof-raising volume levels in really big rooms, you would be very hard-pressed to hear any difference between original and Smaller.

The Smaller Advent costs $79.

The Advent /2

This is the newest Advent and it sounds just like the other two except that it doesn't have the final half-octave of bass response that they do. It's designed for an absolute maximum of useful performance at lowest cost, and its own low price is made lower still by the fact that it works superbly with low-cost, low-power amplifiers and receivers. It comes in a beautiful, warm-white molded cabinet instead of the usual low-cost imitation wood finish, and since the enclosure does what a wood one does at far lower weight, it's much easier to mount on a wall or shelf.

The Advent /2 hasn't had as much time as the other Advents to get word-of-mouth going. But it will. What it does is enable people to put together a stereo system for $350 or less that isn't a "starter" or a compromise for a tight budget, but a joy to live with ever after.

The Advent /2 costs $59.50

To check the accuracy of the above statements, just bring along your eyes and ears and (whatever shape it's in these days) your common sense to STEREOCRAFT.

Bunker Hill taking action to reduce lead contamination

AP —Bunker Hill Co. is taking immediate steps to reduce lead contamination near its Kellogg smelter, the company's president said Thursday.

President James Halley and Dr. James Bax, director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, announced the action on a $250,000 joint study of lead in Kellogg.

The decision came after two days of talks, covering 14 hours, between Bax, Halley and representatives of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Halley said the company would begin immediately to launder uniforms of its smelter workers so they would not take lead particles home with them. He also said the company would examine an air-cleaning device to see if it needs replacing.

Bax said the company has agreed to provide data on sulfur dioxide emissions at the smelter, the nation's largest lead-zinc operation. He said earlier information provided by the company was inconsistent. "Neither the state nor the EPA has had all the information needed to make immediate decisions," Bax said.

Halley said Bunker Hill would pay most of the bill for the joint study. Earlier, the lead-zinc industry and public health agencies announced plans for separate studies.

Numerous cases of lead poisoning in Kellogg children were uncovered this summer by widespread blood tests. Tests were ordered after two Kellogg children were hospitalized in April with lead poisoning.

Halley said Kellogg doctors made a couple of studies starting in 1972 and concluded there was no serious lead poisoning problem.

"We got caught unawares by this problem," he said. "We asked the local medical community to conduct a study here after a lead problem arose at El Paso, Tex."

Halley said Kellogg doctors examined all children at a school within one mile of the smelter and reported no serious problems.

But he acknowledged the earlier study was probably conducted at the wrong time.

Try-outs open next week for two drama productions

Try-outs for two University of Idaho drama department productions are scheduled for next week.

A cast of about 16 persons are needed for the French farce, "A Flea In Her Ear" and between 7 and 14 persons for "Solitaire, Double Solitaire." The try-outs will be at 3 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, at the Performing Arts Center.

All students, not just drama majors, are eligible to audition for parts, according to Ed Chavez, head of the drama department and director for "A Flea In Her Ear."

"Solitaire, Double Solitaire," a thesis play, will be produced Dec. 13 and 14. It is directed by Jamie Lewis, a drama student.

"Flea" will run Dec. 5, 6 and 7. Both plays are scheduled to be performed in the Performing Arts Center on campus.
