Fees

A double controversy

By DAVID WARNICK
of the Argonaut staff

Student fees are at the center of two controversies.

One concerns the University of Idaho's right to charge any student fee which might be called tuition while the other concerns the possible $5 fee increase for Student Union Building operating expenses.

The Committee for Student Rights (CSR) plans to challenge the University next semester on the exact status of student fees and ask them to clarify the issue. The final clarification may involve a lawsuit by students.

According to the committee, the following steps are involved in challenging the University's charge of registration fees (termed "tuition" by the committee):

1. At the time of second semester registration, one should write "paid under protest" on the check used to pay the charges. The CSR said, "This is not mandatory, but will increase the chances of receiving a refund should there be a successful lawsuit. Even persons who have no intention of proceeding further should pay under protest to protect their interests."

2. Shortly after registration, the person should address a written demand for refund of the registration fees to the University Bursar. The CSR will provide forms, "using the language required by law."

3. If the bursar refuses to refund the fees, then an appeal must be made to the Administrative Hearing Board. If desired, the CSR will provide forms for this purpose and represent the person making the appeal.

4. If the Administrative Hearing Board rejects the appeal, then the case must be taken to the Board of Regents. If the board does not settle the matter, then several courses are open to the Committee for Student Rights, including a class-action suit. This would involve several students from various parts of the University bringing suit on behalf of all resident students paying the fee.

The basis for the Committee's challenge will be the U of I charter which states: "No student who shall have been a resident of the Territory for one year, next preceding his admission shall be required to pay any fees for tuition at the University except in a professional department, and for extra studies." The Idaho Code essentially states the same.

It's that time of year again

This week is finals week at the University of Idaho and students (from left) Harold Gibson, Mark Falconer and Mark Moehnert were absorbed in their books at the library.

Uniform student fees

$15.75—ASUI Membership supports activities sponsored by the ASUI

$18.00—Athletics—provides for admission to athletic events

$24.75—Services, Dormitory operations

$17.50—Service, Health center operation

$10.00—Service, Registration

$9.00—Service, Student Union operations

$6.50—Miscellaneous, "This covers costs for the intramural, general recreation and student accident insurance programs and pays for locker fees and student identification cards."

$17.50—Student Union Building fee

$5.00—Education Building fee

$3.50—Infirmary bond fee (this money is now paying off a loan on the Performing Arts Center)

$10.00—University Classroom Center building fee

$5.00—Wallace Complex building fee

$42.50—Athletic facilities fee, this includes Swimming Center, outdoor track and stadium

$10.00—University Facilities fee "This charge pays for such things as new tennis courts and campus improvements and has now been pledged to cover costs of converting the open stadium into a covered, multiuse facility."

$195—per semester total—Uniform Student fee

In addition, each out-of-state student pays $500 per semester in non-resident tuition, of which $450 goes in the general operating budget, and $50 into dormitory construction.

In addition, some contend the Idaho Constitution includes the entire U of I charter. In Dreps vs. Board of Regents of the University of Idaho the Idaho Supreme Court ruled:

"The territorial act, creating the University and prescribing the powers, duties and authority of the Board of Regents, was written into the constitutional corporate charter of the University as fully as it had been set out at length in the constitution."

Ernest Hartung, U of I president on sabbatical leave, added to the controversy recently. In a speech to the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, he suggested the legislature seriously consider in-state tuition as a method of financing higher education in Idaho.

Financial Vice-President Sherman Carter told the Argonaut in an interview that if higher education cannot be supported in a suitable way, then in-state tuition is one of the alternatives to be considered. The other alternatives would be cutting back or dropping programs.

Carter predicted net effect of the tuition challenge would be to accelerate fee increases.

The other controversy surrounding student fees is the proposed $5 fee increase to fund Student Union operations.

Last summer, the SUB had to borrow $25,000 from its building bond reserve to make up a deficit for the 73-74 fiscal year and provide operating capital.

The all-student SUB Board this fall proposed a five-dollar fee increase to cover the loan and projected financial losses. A copy of this proposal was sent to the U of I administration, who in turn suggested it to the Regents.

Meanwhile, the ASUI Senate decided they did not want to recommend the fee increase which the SUB Board had, and suggested that revenue from the SUB building bond fee be transferred to operating expenses, instead of building up a bond reserve.

Last Argonaut

Today's Argonaut is the last issue of the fall semester. The Argonaut will resume publication on Tuesday, Jan. 14, with a registration issue.

Happy holidays from the entire Argonaut staff.

Swim center manager contributes $4,850

The University of Idaho's Swim Center already equipped with an electronic "touch" system and a computerized score board, will shortly have a print-out unit capable of keeping swim event records to 1/1,000th of second.

Judith Graham Gautschi, center manager, contributed the $4,500 swim scoring printout unit to the center and also gave a gift of $350 to purchase new swim suits for the men's swimming team.

"Swimming is a so-called minor sport and after the major sports there isn't a lot of money left," she said of her reason for purchasing the new unit and new suits.

The eight-lane, 25-yard pool is equipped with electronically sensitized touch pads which record each swimmer's touch for scoring times which are recorded on a computer. The computer also carries the time to beyond 1/100th of a second in case of a tie.

Gautschi said, however, officials at swim meets must verbally call out the figures to a record keeper, which leads to confusion and the possibility of making an error. Presently the scores are kept on tape for future reference.

But with the new unit, she said, figures for each event will be printed out on paper so meet officials will have both immediate results and a permanent record. The printout will also keep "split" times—the time at the end of 25 yards, for instance, in a 50-yard event—for swimmers who want to know how they did in each lap.

Gautschi, manager of the center for just over a year, is a graduate of San Jose State University and a physical education teacher.

Student takes own life

A U of I senior political science major, Tom J. Hamlett, 22, died Saturday of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to Moscow Police.

Police responded to a call late Saturday night from Lindley hall in the Wallace Complex. They found Hamlett in a room there suffering from the wound. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Latah County Coroner Dr. E.L. Boas.

Plays present doubts about future marriage

By CAROLYN HARADA of the Argonaut staff

There is no answer to the question of whether marriage will be a thing of the past, however, "Solitaire and Double Solitaire" presented some intriguing and thought-provoking innuendos.

Each play could stand alone, but the total effect of both was inevitably due to the fine directing of Jamie Lewis, director, and the talent of the cast. The audience was left with a feeling of awe and depression to see the extreme of a marriageless society.

"Solitaire" seemed more like solitary confinement for the individuals of 2050 A.D., for the service cell looked like a machine-operated lockless prison.

The "call family" that the future man requests for was quite unique. It consisted of a 14-year-old pregnant girl, a mother, a son, and illegal 60-year-old grandfather who were playing house.

The family wore 1974 A.D. clothes because they were pretending to be a real family in this time period. "Very fake" describes their actions, but the future listless man (Rex Rabold) loves it anyway, for he has no stimulation other than his tapes and one picture while in his white room.

Early self-destruction was emphasized since there is only so much food, water, space, and air. An exception is made for those with high IQ's: they are not allowed the privilege of self-destruction until after 60.

The future man had a wife, but she chose early self-destruction for she could not take much more of the system. He, too, finally realized he did not like the system and chose his wife's way out.

As for Double Solitaire, the audience was left with hope, but the loneliness of each partner and the persistent techniques of trying to make their marriage work were still present.

The audience was captivated by the Potters' (Jim Cash, Jackie Crawley) intimate scenes and enrapt by Peter Potter's silent film depicting the joy and happiness of a couple without marriage.

However, one had to imagine that the play's actor, Peter Potter, (Kurt Daw) was the film actor, Peter Potter, (Scott Boutillier). At first it was difficult to distinguish where the real Potter was in the film.

Comic elements in both plays were shown, but drama was prevalent. Sarcasm, satire, and

Argonaut has position openings

Applications are still available for positions on next semester's Argonaut staff, Editor Kenton Bird said.

puns by the characters enlightened the evening.

Effective use of tapes depicting the computer's voice and slide projections of the Potter's wedding memories added to the mood of the plays.

Like a card game—the players win a few and lose a few. This hand of plays won a round of applause.

Lewis mentioned that the more experience a person has in all dramatic fields (acting, dancing, singing), the better director he will become. In essence, since he has acted in other plays, he knows what an actor goes through on stage. Therefore, as a director, he will be more receptive to the needs of the actor and will know how to communicate with him.

Six courses slated for winter session

Six courses tentatively have been scheduled for the University of Idaho's winter session during Christmas break, according to Paul Kaus, director of the UI Special Programs Office.

Kaus said a minimum of 12 students is required to offer a regular course, although students who wish to use the Christmas break for individual studies or work on research may make special arrangements. Courses will be $20 per credit for Idaho residents and $25 for non-residents.

Courses tentatively outlined include labor relations, digital computer programming, advanced Fortran programming, social stratification, fundamentals of speech, and field observation of veterinary medicine programs. Kaus said additional courses may be scheduled if students express interest.

Classes will meet during the Dec. 23-Jan. 10 period, some each day and others by arrangement between instructors and students. In some cases, extra sessions will be held to make up for Christmas Day and New Year's Day when sessions will not be held.

Kaus said those interested in registering must contact his office to get application forms and pay fees before Dec. 18. He said if the minimum number of students have not registered by then, courses may be cancelled.

Kaus noted fees will be refunded when classes are cancelled, but said if the course is offered as scheduled, fees are not refundable since income from the fees is necessary to cover the costs of the courses.

Three holiday concerts to be aired by KUID

Three major concerts have been scheduled for holiday viewing on KUID/12, Moscow, as part of "Great Performances," the continuing series of outstanding music events.

The concerts were filmed in the U.S. and Europe especially for television and feature internationally renowned conductors and outstanding orchestras, choral groups and soloists.

On Christmas day, Dec. 25 at 8 p.m., Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Tchaikovsky's emotionally charged Ninth Symphony. The work has long been associated with Bernstein, and with his mentor Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass.

It was at Tanglewood's famous Music Shed where this memorable performance of the Ninth was offered last summer as a centenary tribute to Koussevitsky. Remarks made by Bernstein to aspiring young musicians on that extraordinary occasion are included in the television concert.

Ash Wednesday, Feb. 12, 1975, will be marked by the 8 p.m. telecast of Mozart's "Requiem," the magnificent work that the great composer imagined he was writing for himself (he, indeed, died before completing it.) Conducting this full-length television concert will be Karl Bohm, the acclaimed Austrian, whose 80th birthday last summer prompted salutes and celebrations in New York, Salzburg and Vienna.

Dr. Bohm will lead the Vienna Philharmonic and distinguished vocal soloists Christa Ludwig, Gundula Janowitz and Peter Schreier.

On Good Friday, March 28, 1975, at 8 p.m., Bach's towering masterpiece—the Mass in B Minor—will be performed in its entirety (2 1/2 hours) by the Munich Bach Orchestra and Choir conducted by Karl Richter, and featuring Hermann Prey, Gundula Janowitz, Herta Topper and Horst Laubenthal as soloists.

Military in peace time is 1975 symposium topic

The role of the military in peace time has been announced as the topic for the 1975 Borah Symposium at the University of Idaho.

Two major subtopics will be CIA and other covert activities during peace time and determination of military budgets during times of peace, according to Dr. Harry Caldwell, professor of geography and chairman of the Borah Symposium Committee for the second straight year.

Dates for the annual gathering to discuss causes of war and solutions for peace—funded by the Borah Foundation—are Tuesday through Thursday, Jan. 28-30.

"There will be two addresses between 7-8:30 p.m. each evening, followed by a panel discussion," Caldwell said, noting an additional address and panel will be held that Thursday afternoon.

"Invited speakers will meet with University classes during the day," Caldwell said.

The 31 finalists and semifinalists of the Idaho Youth Senate will be special guests of the Borah Foundation and special discussions will be arranged for them.

The William Edgar Borah Outlawry of War Foundation was created in 1929 with the gift of $55,000 to the University of Idaho from Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago attorney and friend of the distinguished Idaho senator. During World War I, Levinson became convinced that international law must outlaw war if permanent peace were to be made possible. He believed the provisions of international laws made war legal.

Levinson's work led to the 1928 signing of the Kellogg-Briand Pact outlawing war, signed first by 15 nations and later followed by most nations of the world.

The first Borah talks were held in 1931.

Members of the Borah committee, in addition to Caldwell, are Dr. James Araji, associate professor of agriculture economics; Jeanette Driekell, learning resource specialist.

William Yanaros, assistant professor of naval science; consulting member Dr. Amos Yoder, Borah Distinguished Professor Political Science; and student members Debbie W. Baker, senior accounting major from Idaho Falls; Charles Daw, senior chemical engineering major from Hansen; and Jeff Williamson, senior political science major from Edison, N.J.

FIRST TIME EVER

OF THE LINEAR SOUND

You may have wondered why your "live" album sounds like it died. You can't quite get a handle on it, but it sounds like...well, like something's missing.

In fact, just the opposite is true. Something's been added — something that wasn't there in the concert hall. It's called bass.

Lots of bass. More than they played; more than they recorded. You may be wondering why anyone would do that.

Well, a little audio history should clear things up for you: You see, in the beginning there was the tinny speaker: Pretty awful.

Then somebody got the bright idea of boosting the bass, to cover up the tinny sound: Not bad. But when they buried the freshness, the life of the sound: Not good.

Introducing Linear Sound. It's from EPI, and it's just beautiful. It's called linear because it corresponds almost exactly with the straight-line graph of true, uncolored, natural sound. With no artificial ingredients added.

Speak up, Hartung

University President Ernest Hartung recently spoke to the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho and according to three different sources, urged the legislature to seriously consider in-state tuition as one method of financing higher education.

After an article on his speech appeared in a Boise newspaper, Hartung claimed that he was "quoted out of context."

Frankly, we wish Hartung had been completely misquoted. It was our hope that article was totally inaccurate—that Hartung hadn't even mentioned the possibility of in-state tuition.

Because in-state tuition is the wrong thing for a university president to bring up—especially to a group like the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, Hartung should be proposing other, more equitable, solutions to higher education's financial problems.

Hartung, currently on sabbatical leave, has been invited to address the first meeting of the ASUI Senate after Christmas. At that time, we hope he will affirm his opposition to in-state tuition.

If he doesn't, perhaps Hartung should take a permanent sabbatical.

Prepare for ASUI campaigns

Today's remarks are intended to warn those hapless students who will be subjected to political speeches and innuendo at hall meetings, house dinners and other student gatherings once we come back from Christmas vacation.

Students: be the first one on your block to make an ASUI politician feel foolish. Get your information now!

Here are some issues on which you may prepare now—but be careful, some clever politicians may fool you by adding additional issues to this list:

-The challenge of student fees by the Committee for Student Rights.

-The proposed fee increase for the Student Union Building.

-The future of the new stadium.

-The role of the ASUI in the preparations for the Blue Mountain Rock Festival.

-The future of intercollegiate athletics at the University.

The Committee for Student Rights is gathering legal background to bring a suit against the Board of Regents demanding that fees be declared unconstitutional. The case is strong for the student position according to preliminary information. The committee has been active collecting support, information and money with which to fight the case. The committee was allocated $250 by the ASUI Senate last Tuesday in a bill that was sponsored by ten of the 13 Senators and two of the three Faculty Council representatives.

However, the question will be asked what will happen if the students do win the constitutional challenge and the courts declare fees for in-state students unconstitutional?

Kim R. Smith

One may hypothesize that in-state tuition could be granted by constitutional amendment that would require a 2/3 affirmative vote from the two houses of the Idaho Legislature to place it on the general election ballot. The amendment could be blocked in the legislature or on the ballot.

One may further hypothesize that students could possibly end up paying greater "in-state tuition" than today's "fees", if such an amendment were passed. We would, in effect, change one euphemism for another.

It is an interesting case and it is a tremendous undertaking that active students have taken up. Students are finally demanding recourse on an issue that has baffled students and legislators for years—the constitutionality of charging "fees."

A possible alternative for the administration would be to impose tuition on the "professional departments"—in much the same way that law students are assessed a $100 fee—with the idea that the state has the obligation of paying for general education but not for professional education.

If in-state tuition were instigated, the University and students would have greater control over the use of those funds—including hiring and tenuring faculty.

The constitutional battle boils down to playing with fire: you either get hot chicken soup, or burned fingers. Student politicians will be selling this hot item next semester.

The SUB fee increase will be on the Board of Regents agenda next semester. The results of current research into the bond diversion will be a popular dinner-table discussion.

In either case, they will have to listen to the group of concerned students vocalizing their objections under the auspices of leader David Dorn.

Some ASUI candidates will call for a de-emphasis of intercollegiate athletics (read "football"); others will contend that the new stadium be prioritized for intercollegiate athletics.

Also, should the stadium be named to give it a multi-purpose emphasis or an intercollegiate athletics emphasis? These issues will be resolved by the ASUI Stadium Board. Athletics and the new stadium will provide cannon fodder for some campus political action in the elections that are nearing.

Still other candidates will emphasize student-oriented programs:

-Tenure ("My professor is so bad, we should get rid of him," somebody will say.)

-Student Programs ("But why doesn't the ASUI fund the Blue Mountain Festival?" his friend will retort.)

This has been a general outline of some of the issues that ASUI fuller brush salesman will be peddling next semester. Do your homework now—it will be a long semester.

Where's the turf?

Guarantees on use of dome needed

By BRUCE SPOTLESON
of the Argonaut Staff

Although home fields are usually an advantage, that's not always the case, according to at least a few members of the University of Idaho soccer team.

Idaho soccer players and fans are irate that their club's last home game had to be switched to another site especially since as one player put it, "We haven't lost on our home field in two or three years."

The soccer club had two home games on tap for the weekend of Dec. 7-8, but the first contest, Saturday against Whitworth College, was forfeited by the Spokane school. The Sunday game, against league leader Washington State, was switched to Pullman, a town that has never been too warm a host to Idaho teams.

Most teams don't opt to play a home game on the opposing school's field unless they have a good reason. In the situation that confronted the Idaho soccer team, there wasn't much of a choice.

Their own game field, the University of Idaho's artificial turf, was rolled up and ready to be tucked away for the winter. The job had been finished during the week prior to the soccer team's season-ending home weekend in early December.

The Idaho team is a member of the Northwest Intercollegiate Soccer League, in which it finished third this year after back-to-back first place endings in the last two seasons.

WSU, which wrapped up the conference crown by winning the season finale against Idaho, had originally planned to visit Moscow for the game during Thanksgiving week. But the Pullman team, with the seven-day vacation for which their school provides, opted to re-schedule the game for a later

It was tentatively set for Dec. 8 at Idaho, and the weekend of the game approached normally, until as team captain-coach Nicos Rossides noted, "We just went out to practice and it (the turf) wasn't there."

Apparently the soccer team's change in schedule didn't coincide with University plans to roll up the turf in order to protect it from construction hazards that might appear when work on the dome gets underway early next semester.

Last season the artificial turf spent the entire winter on its back. Along about the time administration officials started wondering if it indeed ought to be rolled and protected from the often incredible Palouse weather, ice had frozen on the surface, and the task was impossible. The U of I turf, by the way is a special type designed to facilitate its being rolled up.

This year, with construction of the dome in the offing, the rolling was completed early—too early as far as the soccer team is concerned.

"Whether they knew about our last game or not, they could let us know of the date they're going to roll up the turf," said Rossides. "Sometimes those games aren't scheduled until the week before they're actually played."

That was pretty near the case for the soccer team. Varsity track coach Mike Keller, who coordinates use of the field for activities other than varsity football, maintains that he was never informed of the game, and Rossides agrees this was quite possibly the case. He suggested that a change in the responsibility of who was to inform the U of I of schedule alterations may have been the real culprit.

But at least one team member and several soccer fans have complained to the Argonaut that scheduling difficulties are going to be even more of a problem when the dome is ready for use.

"I think the roof is foolish as far as the concept of multi-purpose use is concerned," said one soccer team member. "This stadium is going to be for football."

He echoed the feelings of quite a few students who have lately begun asking for specific guidelines and guarantees that would regulate use of the new domed field, and insure student access to it by groups other than just football and basketball teams.

Perhaps the University and its stadium board have reached a point where they must decide on a policy governing stadium use by folks like myself who might like to get in out of the rain-snow and hundred-mile an hour winds of Moscow, and not be confined to just listening to a stereo or playing poker, but real live exercise.

It was with that thought in mind that I supported the dome, despite the ire of my fellow students, although I have to admit to being terribly wishy-washy. Nowhere have I seen weather as bad as Moscow's.

If the dome were accessible to all of us, that might alleviate at least some of the pain a small army of the student body felt when the dome decision was made—bureaucratic miles from their reach.

Harland knows job

To the editor:

A common misconception among KUOI listeners seems to be that a disc jockey's voice and/or music is indicative of his ability to manage a radio station. This is simply not true.

A letter appeared in Friday's Argonaut "rapping" Communication Board's choice for KUOI station manager, Bill Harland. Whether Mr. Basoa likes Bill Harland's voice or music is irrelevant to the job of station manager. (Incidentally, Bill is one of the few people here who can successfully play music at any time of day, an ability which neither Tom McGrane nor Mike Jones has displayed. They play only "their" music, which hardly suits all the students even part of the time.)

It was stated that "these two alternatives McGrane and Jones were at least as competent as Harland, if not more so."

At this point I must "violently" disagree. I have worked for KUOI even longer than Bill has and in this time I have never seen anyone so enthusiastic or hard-working as Bill.

Neither McGrane nor Jones has ever displayed any interest in volunteering their services, other than one four-hour shift per week. On the other hand, Bill has worked in nearly every department here.

Being station manager is a complex job requiring knowledge of the "guts" of the station and the ins and outs of working with the University. It's not a job you just walk into.

Harland can handle the job. He can manage the station and that's the job. The job is not being everybody's favorite DJ or playing everybody's favorite music.

Comm Board really had no other choice.

Go Vandals Go

Came a tribe from the North brave and bold.
Bearing banners of Silver and Gold;
Tried and true to subdue all their foes!
Vandals! Come on you Vandals!

Come on and go, Vandals, go,
Fight on with hearts true and bold
Foes will fall before your Silver and your Gold
The victory cannot be withheld from thee;
So all bear down for Idaho, Come on, old Vandals, go!

Here We Have Idaho

And here we have Idaho
Winning her way to fame
Silver and Gold in the sunlight blaze, and romance lies in her name;
Singing, we're singing of you,
ah, proudly too;
All our lives through
We'll go singing, singing of You
Alma Mater, our Idaho.

ASUI President Dirk Kempthorne presented the suggestion to the Board of Regents at their December meeting, and they tabled the administration's proposal. The regents requested the U of I check with its bond counsel to see if the ASUI proposal was legal according to the bond contract.

Carter has now written the bond attorneys. Kempthorne noted, "If for any reason the bonding attorney writes back and says no, then Carter has said the ASUI can send their own letter presenting the case as we see it."

After talking with University administrators, Kempthorne said, "The consensus was that it will be legal."

The U of I Financial Vice-President mentioned there were two things for the Board of Regents to consider. The first was the legality of the transfer, and the second was a policy question on whether building bond fees should be used for operations expenses now, when they were designated for building purposes several years in the future.

Carter suggested that students were not looking at the long-term interests of the University.

Kempthorne responded to his comments saying, "There's where we differ on a philosophical point-of-view." In the paper giving the breakdown of the uniform student fee, it is noted...."detailed enumerations cause some students to feel that they should not be assessed some of the specific charges, when these students do not make use of specific buildings or services for which they must pay. However, for the same reason that it costs $2 to attend a movie, whether or not one is interested in paying for some of the costs which the owner of the theater incurs, the prescribed uniform student fee is in effect the established charge for "attending the University of Idaho."

The paper goes on to suggest, "If any component of the uniform fee were to be made voluntary, the $15.75 component for ASUI membership might be the first to be considered."

The paper notes that Idaho State University charges $200 in resident student fees, Boise State University charges $195, and Lewis-Clark State College, $125 per semester.

Out-of-state tuition at Boise State University runs $470 per semester; Idaho State University, $375; and Lewis-Clark State College, $300.

In another paper, prepared by U of I assistant budget officer Jerry Wallace, the fees at the University of Idaho are compared to other regional schools.

The paper draws a relationship between student charges and per capita income in the respective states. Wallace said this "serves to establish an equality among these states relative to monetary resources."

In addition, the paper uses "average student charge: a figure computed from total student charges in relation to total undergraduate students in attendance. Wallace found that if Idaho was to make student charges comparable in these terms to other states, charges would have to rise.

To make Idaho equitable with Wyoming student charges would have to rise $5; with Utah, $127; with Nevada, $33; with Montana, $68; with Washington, $83; and with Oregon, $123.

Mid-term grades retention asked

A recommendation from the University Curriculum Committee that mid-semester grades be retained will be presented to the Faculty Council at its meeting this afternoon in the Faculty Office Building lounge.

A group of faculty members had asked the general faculty to do away with the practice of issuing mid-term grades, which the faculty members termed "redundant." The question was referred to the curriculum committee by the Faculty Council.

A proposal that student evaluation of instructional personnel take place every other semester will also be considered by the council. Presently, instructional personnel are evaluated every other semester of every year. As a result, there is sometimes more than a full year between evaluations.

Proposed amendments to University Policy concerning the termination of faculty during a time of financial emergency and suggested guidelines for the use of language in University publications will also be considered by the council.

Summer session charges

- $8.75—Student Union-regular
 - $2.50—Education Building
 - $1.75—Infirmery (This has been diverted to the Performing Arts Center for ten years)

It's possible to graduate well up in your class...then flunk launching your career.

Dick Watts' success story: In 1968, as a graduating senior in Chemical Engineering, Dick faced the same decision you probably face today... where to start your career. He chose Kaiser Aluminum. In less than six years he's been through several levels of management, in the U.S. and in Jamaica, to his present job as Technical Manager at a major Kaiser Aluminum facility. He is responsible for Production Control, Development and Environmental projects. Dick is just one of many young engineers who have proven that the chance for advancement is better with Kaiser Aluminum than with many other companies. That's because we're young, diversified and growing. And we know that young people can take responsibility.

Don't flunk the first year of your career. It could affect the rest of your life.

That's why you too should make sure you pick the right company... the first time. If you're a senior in engineering (man or woman) who is interested in putting theory into practice—fast. And if one of your goals is to advance into a decision-making job—fast. You should talk to one of our regional recruiters. He'll fill you in on the current job situation—fast.

2nd at Daffodil

Vandals record stands at 4-2

The Cal-Irvine Anteaters defeated the University of Idaho Vandals 91-76 Saturday night in the finals of the ninth annual Daffodil basketball tournament.

The Vandals made it into the finals by defeating the University of Puget Sound 70-63 in overtime on Friday night. Davis and Welst led Idaho scorers with 12 points apiece.

In the Saturday night game, Coach Jim Jarvis' Vandals who trailed 39-37 at halftime, finally caught the Anteaters at 47-47 on Henry Harris 22-foot jump shot but the rest of the game belonged to the Anteaters.

With Jerry Maras hitting an 18-footer, Cal-Irvine went on a 17-2 scoring spree to lead by a 64-49 count, thanks mainly to deadly short jump shots from outside the key.

Maras wound up high for both teams with 23 points while Harris led the Vandals with 22 points.

The Anteaters' shooting from the field in the second half was staggering, with the winners canning 81 per cent of their shots. For the game, Cal-Irvine hit on 64 percent of its shots from the field.

When and if the Anteaters missed, the Vandals did a good job on the backboards, outrebounding their California foes 32-27.

The Vandals, placed two on the all-tournament team—Harris at forward and Roger Davis at center. Forward Rich Walker of UPS and guards Maras and Kevin Davis of Cal-Irvine rounded out the coveted five-man selected team.

The Vandals played Portland state last night. They face Chico State tomorrow, and Athletics in Action Thursday night. Game times are 8 p.m.

The Vandals came through in the second half of last night's game against the University of Portland and ran off with a 72-57 victory. The game was close during the first half, but good defensive play by the Vandals in the final half held the Portland team to 25 points.

Big Sky stats show no significant leaders

AP- Boise State's basketball team can score. It's leading the Big Sky Conference with an 88.4 point per game average.

But there's only one trouble—the Broncos are even more generous. They've given up 95 points a game, the worst record in the Big Sky.

Despite the porous defense, Boise State has a 3-2 record against college competition this season.

Idaho State leads the conference with a 5-2 record in non-league play, but have the best margin of victory record, averaging 10.2 points per game better than their opponents. The Bengals are averaging 75.1 points a game and have yielded just 64.9 per game.

Weber State and Idaho each have a 3.8 margin of victory spread for runner-up spot.

Northern Arizona is runner-up to Boise State in scoring with an 88.3 per game average, followed by Idaho with 81.

Montana is the stingiest defensive team with 62.3 points a game, followed by Idaho State with 64.9 and Weber State with 65.

Weber State leads the conference in rebounding, grabbing 11 more per game than their opponents. The Wildcats have drawn down an average of 49.5 rebounds per game and to 38.5 for their opponents.

Steve Hayes, Idaho State's 6-11 plus center, is leading the conference in scoring with 22.6 per game and rebounding with 16 per game.

Steve Connor, Boise State freshman and son of the Bronco coach, is runner-up in scoring with 20.8, followed by Pat Hoke, Boise State, 19.6, and Ken Tyler, Gonzaga, 19.

Jimmie Watts, Weber State, is second in rebounding, with 11.3 per game.

Q: When shopping for an amplifier/receiver, I have seen the term signal-to-noise ratio mentioned in the specifications. What does this mean and what is the best, a high or low ratio?

A: Signal to noise ratio is the ratio between (wanted) signal and (unwanted) noise delivered by the amplifier at maximum volume setting with the tone controls set in the off or "flat" position. Decibels (dB) is the method of showing this ratio. Generally when comparing amplifiers, the higher the dB ratio for S/N (signal to noise), the less noise and hum there will be. S/N ratios will usually be listed for each amplifier input function, such as phono, tape, tuner, etc. A 65dB rating shows that only 1/2000 of the signal will be noise, 75dB means that 1/6000 will be noise; generally the higher the S/N dB rating, the better.

Summer '75 information available at SUB

A tentative schedule for University of Idaho Summer Session courses is now available to help UI students plan their spring semester and summer courses.

Schedules for the June 9-Aug. 1 session are available at the SUB information desk, the UI information center, the registrar's office and the admissions office. The preliminary announcement lists anticipated course offerings, tentative fee schedules and housing information.

Although all amounts are subject to change by the U of I Board of Regents, it is anticipated the cost for the summer program will be $20 per credit for Idaho residents and $25 for nonresidents attending school on a part-time basis (five credits or less). Full-time students earning six or more credits will be charged $125 if they are Idaho residents and $180 if they are nonresidents.

Housing will be available during the summer session, probably in Theophilus Tower. The shared room rates now range from $12.50 to $15 per week for the shorter summer program, with the higher rate charged periods of time to service check-in and check-out procedures. Some family housing may be available on campus for periods of six weeks or longer.

Prices slashed!!!

We have a limited number of extra copies of all of this year's Argonauts and we're giving them away!

Here's your chance to pick up a Christmas gift for someone with an interest in the University of Idaho. Or maybe you're working on a research paper and you remember an Argonaut article on the same subject that might help you out.

We've also got copies of many of the major college newspapers in the West. If you formerly went to another school or are contemplating going on student exchange, you can find out what's going on in the outside world.

And best of all, it's free. Stop by the Argonaut office in the basement of the SUB today from 1 to 5 and help yourself. Anything left over after today will be recycled.

Turnabout is fair play, too. If you have piles of old issues of the Argonaut — or any newspaper, for that matter — bring them down to our office. We'll arrange to have them recycled for you.
