

Warnick, Lutman elected

David Warnick

Gregg Lutman

David Warnick was elected ASUI President in elections this week, polling almost 60 per cent of the vote against three other candidates.

Gregg Lutman got the nod for vice president by defeating his opponent by a nearly two-to-one margin.

The election also saw ratification of the ASUI's first new constitution in five years, election of 13 senators and three Faculty Council representatives and narrow approval of a survey question on making athletic admission fees optional. Details on page 3.

Talisman House future uncertain

That unassuming white house on Ash St. that has offered everything from a night's lodging to a Free University might not be around any more. A shift in emphasis of drug education programs has resulted in funding cutbacks for projects like the Talisman House. Jo Hagerud reports in today's centerspread.

ERA ratification rescinded by Idaho House

Warnick, Lutman at helm of ASUI

Over 2800 students turned out and ratified the ASUI's new constitution and made their decisions concerning candidates running for ASUI elected positions. Dave Warnick was elected ASUI president by a wide margin in the ASUI elections held this Tuesday and Wednesday.

The constitution was ratified 2113 in favor and 367 against. Thirty-five per cent voter turnout was required in order to ratify the constitution. During last year's election, a constitutional amendment providing staggered elections was defeated because only thirty-two per cent of the ASUI membership turned out to vote. A low voter turnout was not the case this year, as 2,817, roughly 47 per cent, came to the polls.

The size of the voter turnout was not particularly large in comparison with recent years. Although only 32 per cent turned out in last year's election, over 55 per cent voted in 1973 in the so-called "beer campaign," and the voter turnout in 1972 was also higher than this year's.

Warnick received 1,557 votes for President, while the other presidential candidates combined only totaled 1,954. Dan Yake was runner-up with 521 votes, while Nile Bohon received 332 and Ken Buxton received 201 votes.

No action on protest

In a letter to Tom LaPointe, Rick Smith, chairman of the election board, stated that the board could do nothing in regard to LaPointe's recent protest concerning the participation of the athletic coaches in the ASUI elections.

LaPointe filed a request for a 'full investigation' of what he calls "unfair influences by the (University) staff members" in the recent election. LaPointe was part of the anti-athletic list turned out by the coaches.

Gregg Lutman got the nod over George Peters by a two-to-one margin in the campaign for ASUI vice-president. Lutman received 1,348 while Peters grabbed 691 votes.

Mike Rush, who was running un-opposed for the two year Faculty Council position captured 1,730 votes. Diane Lacey was elected to the one-year position on Faculty Council in a fairly close contest with Scott Hanford. Lacey received 1007 with Hanford receiving 876 votes. The Faculty Council Graduate Position went to Grant Burgoyne receiving 1,164, while George Anderjack, his opponent, captured 899 votes.

Mark Beatty received the highest number of votes for the ASUI Senate. Beatty, an ASUI senator last year, ran for re-election and received 1,008 votes. Second highest vote-getter was Kim Smith with 915 votes.

Other candidates elected for senate positions were Bill Butts with 910, Ann Vogt with 890 votes, Britt Nichols with 872, George Ambrose with 861, Linda Copple with 826, John Rupe with 817, Maureen McProud with 764, Tom Falash with 758, Lance Salladay with 747, Mike Helbling with 745, and lastly, Gary DeMeyer with 707.

Candidates for the Senate that lost were, in numerical order: Lotspeich (700), Shute (688), Kidwell (655), Linville (642), Ross (592), Richter (582), Loera (577), Gibler (574), La Grone (570), Wood (549), Rana (537), Stevenson (532), Borchard (495), Spoljaric (490), Fritts (489), La Pointe (478), Huggins (445), Kinchloe (413), Neisinger (354), Feraday (351), and Gauzza (296). Owen Wilmont, who started a write-in campaign, received a total of 126 votes.

The results of the controversial athletic fee option were very close. The survey was designed to gauge student opinion on whether to make the athletic fee of $18, assessed at the beginning of each semester, optional for the student. The results were 1,396 in favor of the option while 1,352 opposed it.

Senate discusses ISL report

The ASUI Senate heard a report and discussion on the effectiveness of the Idaho Student Lobby (ISL) at their Tuesday meeting.

The ISL represents students at the Idaho legislature and is supported by funds from student governments of universities throughout the state.

The lobby, represented by its Executive Director, Mick Meyer, was criticized for acting independently of the schools throughout the state and not representing students by ASUI President Dirk Kempthorne.

Meyer told the senate it was necessary for the ISL to change priorities after the legislature begins and the lobbyists see what measures have a chance of passing.

The lobby, Kempthorne said, is in danger of losing touch with the student governments around the state because of a lack of communication.

Senator Grant Burgoyne said the lobby was "in a lot of trouble and at the present level of funding can't justify its existence."

Meyer commented on issues the lobby was concerned with at the 1975 legislature, which he called "the best in the history of the ISL."

Although Republican Senators Phil Batt and John Barker have given up their efforts to institute in-state tuition during this legislative session, Meyer said many legislators think "students should pay for the cost of their education."

Rick Smith informed LaPointe that the election board had studied the matter and determined that there was no violation under the existing rules and regulations.

Smith went on to say that if LaPointe wanted to pursue his protest, he should contact the university administration through Tom Richardson, vice-president for student and administrative services.

'Country Store' near finish

"Our only hold-up is the specified control doors which just arrived and still have to be put in," said SUB manager Dean Vettrus.

Vettrus was referring to construction of the SUB Country Store and Stereo Lounge, which are now near completion.

"The order for those doors was put out back in September, but they just arrived February 24, last Monday.

"At least the delay has given us time to re-evaluate the project," he said.

Originally, Vettrus and the SUB board considered making the lounge into something called "Penny Lane," a chain primarily selling candies. "But then the price of candy started shooting up, and we abandoned the idea," he said.

The "Country Store" as now planned will, according to Vettrus, sell some candies, but also magazines, tobaccos, and "sundries" such as soap and toothpaste.

"This should help out the bookstore a great deal with its space problems," claimed Vettrus.

But it was the stereo lounge Vettrus called "the best this side of Seattle."

Although there will not be any 8-track facilities in the store, records and other tapes can be played and recorded, Glen Billadaeu said. Billadaeu is putting together the lounge now, installing equipment and designing it.

Sound from the lounge will be piped into the Vandal Lounge and blue area of the blue Bucket, he said, when speakers have been properly installed.

The lounge itself will consist of four rooms: the operator's room, and three quadraphonic listening rooms, he said. Listeners will not be permitted to play records themselves, but they can request music and how they want it played.

"We have a fairly good-sized record and tape library now," said Billadaeu; he estimated the lounge owns over 2000 records and tapes.

"One summer somebody ripped off a lot of our records," Billadaeu said. "They were very selective, picking out exactly what they wanted; we could tell from what was taken."

Speakers were also taken but have since been recovered and are now at the police station. "I've been trying to get them back for some time," said Vettrus, "but the police have said they want the speakers for evidence in case they catch the criminals. But I have hopes of getting them back soon."

The three quad rooms in the lounge are sound-sealed, as far as rubber on the door-cracks will permit, and offer colored lights and potentiometers which are placed on the lights.

Billadaeu said after all the supplies are in, final construction of the lounge should take about two weeks.

Bad bill bummers

Bad check writers, beware! The university is about to catch up with you.

In a recent newsletter, Sherman Carter, university financial vice president, said that any individual cashing three checks in one school year which are returned due to insufficient funds or written against non-existent accounts will be denied further check-cashing at the University for the balance of the school year.

Jerry Reynolds, university controller, said that prior to the Carter statement the University never had a set policy regarding the number of bad checks a person wrote. He said that his office tries to maintain a flexible policy for students, especially in cases when parents failed to transfer funds to a student's checking account in time.

Reynolds noted that between 200 and 300 bad checks are not redeemed annually, either because the student cannot or will not come up with the money. Reynolds said the normal university procedure is to send them for collection to the check-cashing center which accepted them in the first place. If that doesn't work, they are returned to his office. Failure to receive the money then means that the checks are turned over to a collection agency.

Students who do not honor their checks cannot have transcripts sent to another institutions and can be denied subsequent registration. In addition, if the checks are large enough, criminal penalties can be brought against the writer.

Philomone Lund, SUB business manager, said that the SUB has lost over $900 due to unredeemed bad checks this year. She added that this money must be replaced by SUB operational funds.

Fire in Upham Hall causes flooding

Fire alarms ordered all people out of Gault-Upham residence last Friday as the result of a burning trash can, according to Safety and Security Director Ken Nuhn.

"There was a related incident about two months ago," said Nuhn. "A trash can which was still inside the building was set on fire, but it didn't greatly affect the water sprinkler system."

Last Friday's burning, however did flood out some areas of Upham basement, because a sprinkler was activated according to Nuhn. "There's only a small piece of material holding the sprinkler off, and this material melts at 135 degrees; then it all goes off," he said.

He indicated that only one sprinkler erupted, but that since the water is highly pressurized much of it was released.

Nuhn said we thought an occupant of the building threw ashes or something burning into the can, setting off the blaze.

Another incident possibly related to equipment malfunction occurred in Wallace Complex Feb. 19, when complex security personnel found smoke in the basement areas of the building.

Nuhn said "there was a malfunction in the cold storage compressor," but did not explain why smoke was released into the basement.

No one's immune

The Argonaut offers its congratulations not only to the successful candidates in this week's election but also to the Associated Students as a whole. The interest by students, as evidenced by the 47 per cent voter turnout, can only add to the credibility of student government in the eyes of the public.

Outgoing Vice President Rick Smith and his election board also deserve a pat on the back for the efficiently managed voting. The booths were staffed by courteous, informed students and the results were compiled early and in a readable format.

The candidates endorsed by the Argonaut for president and vice president were winners, but the question has been raised if the Argonaut had any influence or whether we just have a knack for choosing winners.

In either case, a few words of explanation are appropriate at this time. Although both President David Warnick and Vice President Gregg Lutman received the Argonaut's endorsement, that doesn't mean they received our unqualified support on all issues.

To perform its service to the students, the Argonaut has to comment from time to time on the success and mistakes of the ASUI government in general and those two officers in particular. And that won't change, even though Warnick is a former Argonaut columnist and both are friends of members of this newspaper's editorial staff.

While their terms of office last, Warnick and Lutman won't be immune to criticism. In the news columns, they'll be treated as the newsmakers they are and won't receive any preferential treatment.

And should either disagree with our coverage or comments, they have the same recourse offered to all Argonaut readers: criticism is always accepted in the form of a letter to the editor. —K.B.

Behind the lines

How often should the Arg publish?

By KENTON BIRD

All ASUI departments have begun preparing their budget requests for next year and the Argonaut is no exception. But before our request is submitted, we'd like some student feedback on one question: How often should the Argonaut be published to meet the needs of the University of Idaho student body?

On a twice-weekly basis, the Argonaut is a half-breed. We aren't able to provide the immediate, breaking news coverage of a daily newspaper (the election results elsewhere in this issue are a day old, for example). Yet we aren't really able to take the in-depth, magazine approach that would be possible if we just came out once a week.

Publishing two times a week, we are able to include elements of both dailies and weeklies. We're hampered, however, because our days of publication (Tuesdays and Fridays) make it difficult for staff members to schedule classes around the Argonaut. And the loss of those students who aren't able to work because of class conflicts places an undue burden on those staff members that remain.

I think the University of Idaho community has reached a point where it could support a "daily" newspaper — four times a week, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday. That's how the Daily Evergreen at WSU is set up.

With the growth of the Moscow business community, our business staff believes there is enough advertising potential to justify increased frequency of publication. (Some merchants

To the editor:

On February 26, a massive bust took place.

More than half a dozen dogs who were sitting on University property were picked up by the dog catcher, whom the Moscow City Council recently bestowed a technologically modern van upon for his great services to dogdom.

A policewoman receptionist at the Moscow desk said that the day dog licenses were due, the city council also agreed on a proposition which made it illegal for dogs to be on public property (but even on the University grounds?)

The main protests formed are against this obviously money engendered operation, and the fact that they are out to "screw" the student. It seems, from time to time, the city council has had to dream up a problem in order to eradicate it. This seems to be their "Year of the Dog".

The situation remains: will the student body neglect this incident or let the authorities totally rape them? Will the students use their newly-adopted constitution and representatives to pass stop gap measures against this total usurpation of student-dog relationship or allow the authorities to walk over student rights?

Subtly, through many devices, authorities gain control over the individual citizen through small steps of intrusions, such as drug laws, using narcs, dog leash laws and numerous others. (Isn't the new head of campus security a fully-commissioned police officer who wants to commission his "troops," also?) want to advertise in every issue, whether that's one issue a week or four issues a week.)

On a Tuesday through Friday schedule, a newspaper would essentially have two staffs. One set of reporters and editors would work Mondays and Wednesdays and schedule the bulk of their classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays; the other would do the opposite.

The question remains, though, do the students here really want a newspaper that often? One student told me it takes most of the people in his living group two days to read the Argonaut as it is.

A weekly publication, on the other hand, would allow the staff to spend more time developing and polishing its articles. The Argonaut could take a news magazine approach, summarizing and perhaps departmentalizing the news.

The size of the paper wouldn't necessarily stay the same if frequency of publication were changed. On a twice-weekly basis, we've averaged 16 pages an issue this semester, for a total of 32 pages a week.

If we moved to four times a week, it's anticipated the issues would be from 8 to 12 pages each, or a total pages per week of 36 to 40, just a little higher. And if the Argonaut switched to a weekly, an average issue

Freedom for dogs asked

He only attained his position through the system, which probably thought it was a good cause to have a man in charge who had authority to arrest. Where will this end?)

Lately, it seems, these protection priorities have become enhancing power plays intended to show who is boss — the authorities. This group consists mainly of the city council, the Moscow police (admittedly, there are only a few real "pigs" on the force, but the number could increase), the faculty to a degree, the regents, and lastly, the student body of the ASUI with its dully (sic) elected officials.

The students of this campus are being tread upon by authorities who have no right to dictate to us what we as a sub-society within a town (the only true business in town is clearly the University) can or can not do.

It is shameful for a society to dress up a place under the guise of "A Higher Institution of Learning" and then expect the so-called educated mass to do nothing about their rights as students and citizens of a community.

We have elected a senate and a new constitution "in order to promote and maintain those endeavors germane to student control, do establish an ASUI government, to provide for the organized conduct of student affairs and to promote the educational, cultural, social, and recreational activities of the members of the Association, to act as the official voice of the student body..."

Shall we degenerate this pact

by pushing aside friends, dogs or ethics? Or shall we ask our new tribunal to help us strive for our independence from overbearing officials, and nudge our ASUI representatives to claim their rightful one-third vote pertaining to student affairs, alongside the faculty and regents?

Are we, as students, going to allow the misguided arm of the law to strip us naked and intrude on our private right to an "informal" education?

We must stand united to inform our adolescent right-wing babysitters that their intrusion onto University property is shameful and will not go unattended, even if University officials allowed them to enter. They are knocking at the golden gates to rampage through our rights, do not let them enter.

Please, it is thrown to you, our new representatives.

Allow our dogs on campus, chained if need be. Don't shut down every door to freedom by allowing the authorities to trample our dignity as students. We want our freedom and so do our dogs, most of whom are better behaved than most capitalist businessmen.

It is the University that allows the police to usurp our rights, and therefore, it should be our elected representatives who fight (on behalf of the students) the primary cause of student protest and resentment — the University officials who sold University lands, allowed narcs on campus, commissioned the security chief and brought the dog-catcher on school property to "arrest" our dogs.

It should be your responsibility to allow dogs freedom on campus and your first senate proclamation should be to keep city officials off the University grounds.

Thanks to the red pickup

To the editor:

Last Monday at 7:40 a.m., my parked car was struck by a semi-truck as it was making a right turn onto Elm Street. The driver of the semi was unaware of what he had done and continued on his way.

The driver of a red pickup truck, however, had seen the accident and took off in pursuit of the Semi. He returned shortly and left the semi's license number on my car's windshield. When I arrived at the scene a Moscow Police car was there and the driver of the semi had been returned by the campus security wagon.

I never got to meet the driver of the red pickup and thank him, so I am thanking him here for going out of his way to right a wrong. He has shown me that some people are not afraid to get involved. To him I am really grateful.

Let's rock on an open floor

To the editor:

There is an Elvin Bishop concert due here on March 8. In view of the management of the Fleetwood Mac concert last fall, we want to share some opinions and desires, and we hope others will bring their ideas to the Argonaut and to those responsible for management of the upcoming concert.

We remember reading in the Argonaut after the Fleetwood Mac concert a reference to an opinion of a U of I employee who was involved in managing that concert: in sum, it was on the order of the following (note: not a direct quote): "That was one of the finest, best-run concerts we've ever had here."

We'd like to offer another opinion: it was a drag.

The music was beautiful, but a dance-floor full of chairs has no place at a rock concert. Especially in a dreary Moscow winter we need every chance we can get to get loose, rub elbows, and see each other in a non-regimented scene that classrooms and crowded bars can't provide. And besides, sitting through an Elvin Bishop concert is like masturbating on your wedding night.

REMINDER: this concert is our concert. We are the paying customers and $3.50 per ticket is a lot of money for most of us. Administrators, managers and planners don't pay $3.50 per ticket. WE DO.

Please join us in demanding control over the concert. If some administrator wants to get his rocks off on neat rows of people let him join the army. We can obey local ordinances and school rules, and still have an open floor. If the law says we can't drink or smoke in the gym, O.K. But let's rock.

Rock and Roll is here to stay!

Athletes respected as individuals first

To the editor:

Hey, coaches, what are you trying to do? If you want to get involved so badly why don't one of you run for a faculty position and leave the student election to the students?

I resent you attack upon me as being "anti-athletic." I use the school's athletic facilities nearly every day. Or do you only consider as athletes those persons you directly control? I only called for a reduction of the athletic budget, not the abolishment of it.

Troxel states that he felt that his players have been dismissed as just "jocks." Who actually is perpetuating such an image?

Coaches who post voting instructions are suggesting that athletes don't have the mentality to decide for themselves. Your actions suggest how much individuality you allow players under you autocratic and condescending control: What athlete would take the chance of protesting anything in such an environment?

I didn't speak with the athletes as a group because I respect them as individuals first and athletes second.

Perhaps if the coaches had used the time and cooperation toward analyzing the upcoming games we could have as good a basketball team as Montana has even with "its low school morale."

Law School 7 becomes Law School 3

To the editor:

To the students of the University of Idaho.

We would like to express our thanks to those who worked and voted in favor of the Law School "7." It took much time and a lot of hard work to accomplish what we did.

Though we did not accomplish the ultimate goal of electing all seven of our candidates, we did elect three which is a clear indication that the students are intent upon making the administration and student government more responsive to the students.

Many people came to recognize the fact that the law students' interest is not substantially different from that of the other students' interest. We do have certain interests that are particularly our own but that is part of being a member of a diverse society.

We would like to especially thank our campaign managers Bev Benson and Joe Miller.

Hopefully within the next six months of our term in office we can bring major beneficial changes to the University of Idaho and the ASUI by working with the other students and senators.

Biased sports coverage charged

To the Editor:

If objective reporting is considered good reporting, then the Argonaut's Sports Editor John Hawley has a lot to learn about good reporting. Mr. Hawley's bias is only too clear to anyone who reads his intramural news.

Beta Theta Pi's 42 to 41 loss to McConnell Hall in basketball is hardly a "devastating blow" to any Greeks.

And how can you say that "Last fall, Lindley Hall thrashed Alpha Tau Omega winning the football title," by a score of 7 to 2, when the previous week you reported that ATO "squeaked by Sigma Alpha Epsilon 6 to 0," in the Greek Championship Game?

When a 5-point GDI victory is a thrashing and a 6-point shut-out by a Greek team is a squeaker, the Argonaut's prejudice becomee sadly obvious.

It is quite possible that more male U of I students participate in intramurals than any other University program, and I believe we deserve a higher standard of quality in reporting intramural news.

Jerry Mansell

Alpha Tau Omega
Editor's note: Sports Editor John Hawley explains he is not a GDI nor is he a fraternity member. He comments: "I have no prejudices either way and I strive to be accurate. The Betas' loss was a devastating blow because Greeks usually win that event. (If it wasn't why did you write?) When I said Lindley thrashed Alpha Tau Omega it was because ATO was favored to win. It took quite a while, but I finally found the story that allegedly said "squeaked by." It was the October 18, 1974 issue and the story said "slipped past the Sigma Alpha Epsilon to capture the title..."

You ask for higher quality reporting after making mountains out of molehills. Argonaut prejudice doesn't become "sadly obvious" rather it is ridiculous nitpicking that becomes obvious.

Newby's hearing postponed

By BILL LEWIS
of the Argonaut staff

Academic review hearing scheduled for yesterday morning for Dr. Floyd Newby has been postponed at the request of Newby's attorney.

Newby was notified earlier this month that he would not be rehired as academic chairman of the Wildland Recreation program or Director of the Wilderness Research Center. He had requested yesterday's review hearing.

Allen Bowles, Newby's attorney said Newby originally appealed on the grounds that John Ehrenreich, dean of the college of forestry had not followed proper procedure in dismissing him because faculty members and students had not been consulted.

Ehrenreich this week did meet with faculty members and students, but Bowles said the meetings came too late for him to prepare Newby's case, so a continuance was requested.

Bowles said the continuance meant that the hearing would be postponed and not that Newby intended to give up his appeal efforts. Ehrenreich said he conducted meetings with selected students and both tenured and non-tenured faculty members in the college this week.

Thirteen of the seventeen tenured faculty members that met with Ehrenreich voted to sustain the decision to dismiss Newby, according to Ehrenreich.

Two faculty members abstained from voting, he added.

Over three quarters of the non-tenured faculty members voted in favor of the firing, Ehrenreich said.

Ehrenreich said he met with selected groups of students before Newby's decision to postpone the hearing. The students "offered advice," but didn't offer a formal vote on the firing, he said.

Because the consultations with faculty and students came at such a late date the entire appeals procedure will have to start over, Bowles said. Starting the appeals procedure over will mean that Newby will go through the procedure of asking the administration for specific reasons for his dismissal, Bowles said.

He said that Newby had not yet received a new copy of the reasons for his dismissal from the administration.

Although faculty members voted against Newby, Bowles said the dismissal might still be challenged on the grounds that a biased presentation was made to the faculty members before they voted. "A vote doesn't necessarily mean an informed vote," Bowles said.

Academic Vice-President Robert Coonrod said he gave information concerning Ehrenreich's meetings to Bowles Wednesday after being unable to reach Newby throughout the day.

Wednesday afternoon, Bowles asked for the postponement, Coonrod said.

Ehrenreich said he was informed of the request for a postponement Wednesday by Coonrod. At that time Coonrod told him that the postponement might mean a cancellation of Newby's appeal, Ehrenreich said.

Faculty members selected to be on the review panel were: Scott Higginbottom, political science; Donald Seelye, business; Richard Wallace, zoology; Charles Stratton, English; and Richard Bull, animal industries.

When rescheduled, the committee is to determine whether proper procedures were followed in Newby's dismissal. Under the terms of academic review hearings set down in the University handbook, the committee is not charged with ruling on Newby's competence.

At the organizational session, Higginbottom who was elected chairman of the committee said that the committee would have its decision drawn up soon after the hearing, which was then anticipated to last only one day.

When the committee comes to a decision its verdict will be submitted to the office of the academic vice-president and to Newby.

Ehrenreich said Newby would not tell him yesterday whether the postponement was in fact a cancellation. He added that he is still meeting with groups of students about the matter.

Trainee learns flexibility

By DAVID HASKELL

This is the second article of a series dealing with the Philippines and the Peace Corps representative, Dave Haskell. The formal assignment with the United States Peace Corps was to give Seminars in the process approach method to teaching science in the Philippines. I was assigned to a teachers college to act as an instructor in introducing these methods. However, as is typical with many Peace Corps jobs, that's not exactly what happened.

But with this goal in mind, I entered my training period at Brattleboro, Vermont in the summer of '70. Peace Corps training in many ways is to basically prepare you for an experience you cannot be prepared for. You stand in front of a door and the instructors try to describe what's on the other side, but until you open it, you really can't comprehend what they are saying. However, being experienced (many instructors were recently returned volunteers from the Philippines) at this sort of situation, they instill certain ideas which will guide the volunteer.

Flexibility and Sensitivity were the watch-words of this training. With a basic understanding and appreciation for these two ideas, you can survive anything on the other side of that door. Flexibility is the capacity to adapt and change to new situations and roles you will be expected to play. The volunteer has to try and fit the roles the host country presents him in order to facilitate the changes he wants to make. Sensitivity guides him to be searching for the new patterns of communication the people will present. Sensitivity also asks him to have empathy for ideas and values he may not agree with.

With these two concepts in mind, the Peace Corps trainers describe certain situations that will probably arise once the volunteer is "in country". One of these is the "Surprise Number". In a teachers meeting or party or a gathering, the volunteer may be called upon, without notice, to entertain, somehow, the rest of the group. To refuse is difficult and embarrassing and means he doesn't go along with their social customs. So the Peace Corps teaches volunteers Philippine songs or activities to do in this situation. Training provides the volunteer with a background on cultural customs and important values of the people.

However, because it's a personal reaction to a foreign culture, they can't really prepare the volunteer for it. The training also included a twelve week intensive course in the dialect (Cebuano) of the town, even though I was to teach in English. The Philippine education system is based on our own, with courses taught in English in most upper grades.

The Peace Corps assigned me to teach science instruction methods at an elementary teachers college in Bukidnon, located on the big island of Mindanao. I was fortunate in that I found housing as a boarder with a Philippine family. The family consisted of a married couple (about my age) with three children, plus three maids and three other boarders. The family and their friends became a focal point of my social interaction with the community. A lot of my time was spent also with the Doc. Velez family (neighbors) and their boarder, Eddie.

Eddie was my interpreter to Philippine culture because he was partially "westernized", having worked at Clark Air Force Base, and was well-liked but relatively independent of the Philippine community itself.

There was another Peace Corps volunteer in town, Sharon, who taught at the same school, but our social lives were generally separate. We saw each other a couple of times a week, but seldom attended gatherings together. However, we often got together for moral support, to analyze our problems, and "cry on each other's shoulder."

David and his date drink Coke at a school dance in the Philippines. As is the custom there, this date was arranged by a third party.

Defining my situation in terms of social relationships is not an accident, but a fundamental feature of Philippine culture. This setting is somewhat unique in that my social life didn't center around the school and its teachers.

The next article will augment this setting by letting you follow me through a "typical day" in the Philippines.

Report on the Talisman project

Despite funding cutbacks and T-House provides services, sports

Text by Jo Hagerud Photos by Brian Kincaid

There is an unassuming and soft house on the edge of the U of I campus. The door reads "WELCOME IN." ... Of travelers have passed through the door in August of last year. Most seek a night's food or emergency aid. But soon, the sign may be gone and the door permanently closed.

The future of the Talisman House is uncertain.

It was established in 1971, under the direction of present coordinator, Bob Cameron, a member of the Idaho State Drug Education Team. Cameron applied for federal aid for the Talisman project. It was one of the first education programs to be given money by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The University was responsible for part of the program.

Originally, the house was to serve as a place to stay for people seeking help with drug problems. Drugs were not allowed at the house, but visitors were not questioned about past or present use of drugs.

An outreach education program was developed by representatives from the house to talk to interested groups about drugs and problems associated with their use. Cameron also organized the first Nightline in Idaho from Talisman House. Staff members were trained by Cameron to communicate with and help drug users.

Today, drug education plays only a minor part in the service of Talisman House. Why the change in emphasis of the program, Cameron thinks it is primarily due to a lack of public interest.

"In the 1960's people were upset about drugs. Media sensationalized drug use and created a sense of hysteria. They heard about kids destroying themselves and their families with drugs. Then, the interest just ran out and they returned their interest to other problems," said Cameron.

Watergate is an example of a national interest, he said. Cameron d feel there is any more or less use of drugs in the Moscow area now. "It has just been played down on the back page of the paper. And drugs are possibly better accepted now," Cameron said.

When public interest slowed down, so did funding. Federal money was repeatedly cut back. "Out of the original 20 college drug programs supported by HEW, 10 have been eliminated and funds available given to remaining programs," Cameron explained. Under terms of the initial agreement, HEW provided total funding the first year, 75 per cent the second year and total support beyond that would come from the University.

"We didn't get the $30,000 funding we had planned to from the University to operate this year," Cameron said. "Instead we received only $10,000. Out of that we pay $1,500 back to the college for rental of the house. We are essentially operating on a carry over from last year's government funding now. There is no money for anything except survival and we are really pushing and shoving to do that."

Why did the University refuse to grant funding? Cameron feels that Talisman House was competing with the Women's Center and Child Care Center for the money available. "And rightfully so," added Cameron. "These projects did not exist when we first requested aid."

Cameron said he struggled through last semester with the question of whether Talisman House could, or even, should survive. He feels that Talisman is offering services to high school, college and community members that no present organization provides.

Accommodation of travelers in a kind of basement "youth hostel" is one apparently needed function of the house. "People today are on the move, they have no money and stop here for a place to stay temporarily, or for something to eat," Cameron said. The house has also served as a base for students in search of housing. There have been over 200 visitors in the past six months.

A fund is maintained to aid those in need of emergency assistance. One recent example of a minor emergency was when one visitor was "busted" by the dog catcher and assessed a five dollar fine. The penniless lodger was a black Labrador Retriever in temporary custody of the house while the owner was absent.

Space is provided at Talisman House for an HEW office taking applications and distributing food stamps. Cameron said that the office serves about 1000 people monthly.

A "Free University" is coordinated by Talisman House. Colleen Bakker is employed as director of classes. "We try to fill a gap in UI curricula," said Bakker. "Our classes are basically to help people develop interests and hobbies. "We want to help people find something to do besides sit in a bar all afternoon."

Bakker explained that a $2 registration fee was primarily all the expense involved in taking a class. Instructors are usually students or community members who donate their time and expertise in the various programs offered. Space for classes is provided by the university when it can be arranged or groups meet in private homes.

"I found that one way to learn was to teach," said Bakker. She felt that past classes had been a success because "it was a good way to bring people with similar interests together to make friends." Some of the classes now offered at the Free University are: auto mechanics, honky tonk piano, dog obedience, breadbaking, guitar and a survival course. The school has 15-18 class offerings open to the community.

A Renaissance Fair is sponsored by Talisman House in the spring. Peter Pengilly is in charge of the show, which furnishes local craftsman a way to display or sell their creations. Musicians meet and receive exposure to a community audience. Bike racing, puppet shows, kite and model plane flying entertained the 5000 persons who attended the fair last year.

The newest innovation is a T-Shirt Patrol. Volunteers from Talisman House donate their service to various local concerts to enforce safety, smoking and no-alcohol rules.

Depending on who you are, Talisman House can also function as a community garden plot, an employment referral service, a dark room facility, a message center, or just a mailing address.

Will Talisman House remain in spite of its bleak economic outlook? Cameron feels the one possibility for survival lies in becoming part of UI Student Services. The pros and cons of keeping the house in operation will be reviewed by Jean Hill, dean of Student Advisory Services, before the end of this semester.

Vandals play for the last time in old Memorial Gymnasium

The construction of the Memorial Gym in 1928 was one of the highlights on the University of Idaho campus back then. Today the New Idaho Stadium is scheduled to take its place in the future.

By JOHN HAWLEY-
of the Argonaut staff

Friday and Saturday nights the Vandals will be playing their last games of the season, but more important they will be playing for the last time in Memorial Gym.

On December 20, 1928, the Vandals defeated Whitman College, 51-40, in the first game ever played in the facility dedicated to the memory of the gallant men of World War I. The Vandals hoopsters will play in the new dome-covered stadium next season.

Back in the 1928-29 season, the Vandals finished second in the Northwest Division of the Pacific Coast Conference with a league record of 6-4. The coach then was Rich Fox, who issued a call for a basketball squad when football season was completed. He had 25 men come out, among them were five lettermen from the previous year: McMillan, Burgher, Stowell, Drummond and Thornhill.

Frank McMillan was the team's leading scorer and made all-conference forward in a year when Idaho administered double defeats to Washington State, Oregon and Montana. Washington and Oregon State twice conquered the Vandals that year.

In those days of hard luck and depression a good athlete would participate in two to four varsity sports. A prime example is Darwin Burgher, who in his senior year (1928-29) was captain of both the football and basketball squads. Burgher played quarterback, end, half-back and punted for the grid team. He was a big man, standing well over six feet tall and weighing more than 200 pounds, but his superb coordination earned him a starting berth on the cage squad.

Another football star who played roundball was a guy named Cheyne. He played quarterback and running back during the unforgettable game in which Idaho beat UCLA 20-6. Although not a starter on the basketball crew, Cheyne saw plenty of action.

In the 1928-29 season Idaho played teams like the Spokane Sparklers and all the Northwestern schools, who today are members of the Pacific Eight.

When the Vandals move from Memorial Gym next season it will be difficult to determine whether it will be to their advantage. Of course they will be gaining an ultramodern facility with all the luxuries afforded the professional ball players. They will be the best indoor sports facility in the state and will be able to hold many more people.

But the history of Memorial

Gymnasium will not move. It will stay where it was made by such stars as Frank McMillan, all-conference in 1928, Fred Quinn, All-American forward in 1946, Gary Simmons, All-America guard in 1958, Gus Johnson, who garnered 466 rebounds and 438 points in 1963 and Chuck White, Idaho's all-time scoring king, who had 1,319 points from 1961-63. Other names like Gary Simmons and Nick Stallworth, who holds the record for most personal fouls committed, 117, in 1949, and more recent stars like Malcolm Taylor and Henry

Gargoyle gives years of loyal support

Harris leave their history behind in Memorial Gym.

Opponents may heave a sigh of relief. No longer must they come to the hostile confines of "the pit" where the cheers of Idaho boosters bounded from the brick walls down to the players. The gym will remain standing, but the memories may fade and be replaced by a modern new home.

Saturday nights were alright for fights, but they were also the night of the big game in the Memorial Gym.

Construction on and around the New Idaho Stadium insures the westward movement of sports in Idaho.

Vandals host ISU and Boise State

The Vandals will entertain Idaho State and Boise State this weekend in the last two games to be played at the Memorial Gym.

The ISU Bengals, 8-3 in the conference, must win both their games this weekend to have a shot at the league title. The Vandals are looking for their first win in February and are hoping to leave their old gym with fond memories.

The game will match two of the league's leading scorers, ISU center Steve Hayes (19.9) and Vandal forward Henry Harris (19.7). Harris is one of the great shooters around, especially from outside. If long bombing Steve Weist, who is averaging 17.0 points a game, can connect it will spell trouble.

Two ISU players are hoping to set records this weekend. George Rodriguez is within five assists of his own ISU one-season record of 106, and Steve Hayes needs 43 points to become ISU's 8th 500-point scorer in one season.

The Bengals proved they could come from behind last week when they came off a 30-14 deficit and shot 68 per cent in the second half to win in double overtime 69-62. Idaho fouled up and let down defensively last week when they, too, went into overtime—against NAU.

Saturday night the Boise State Broncos will storm into Memorial Gym with hopes of destroying Idaho's going away party. The Broncos, fresh off a disastrous road trip through Montana where they lost three straight will be trying to salvage a winning season.

BSU's junior center Pat Hoke leads the Bronco scorers with a 19.4 per game average. Freshman guard Steve Connor is averaging 18.3 while their other guard, junior James Smith, is averaging 13.3 ppg. Sophomore forward Terry Miller is averaging 11.9 and freshman forward Trent Johnson is averaging 8.5. These averages indicate great teamwork and fine talent.

Idaho's new starting center 6-10 junior Jim Nuess had 19 points and 15 points in the Vandals 108-104 double over time loss to Northern Arizona last Saturday night. Ervin Brown, who is averaging 10.1 a game, has played consistently good ball this season and Rick Nelson at forward is only averaging 4.7 per game, but he has been a steady defensive man and a fine rebounder.

The Vandals are riding a six game losing streak going into the weekend with a 2-10 league mark and 8-16 record for the year. They have to win both tilts this weekend if they are to have any chance to escape the league cellar.

Tonight the "King Spud," symbol of supremacy between ISU and U of I will be at stake. The Vandals must win by at least 10 points to regain possession of the giant potato trophy because the Bengals took a 75-66 nod at the Minidome in January.

Co-captains Roger Davis (out with a broken foot) and Nelson will join guard Gene Stroebel in bidding farewell to Vandal fans as they end their collegiate career Saturday night.

At intermission, several awards will be presented. They include the Ronald White award (most outstanding player), the Oz Thompson award (player who inspires sportsmanship, scholarship and leadership) and the Jay Gano award (most inspirational).

Jobs For Summer Look Promising

Informed sources report that summer job opportunities for college students "look good" this year. National Parks, Dude Ranches, Guest Resorts, Private Camps, and other tourist areas throughout the nation are now seeking student applications.

Summer job placement coordinators at Opportunity Research (SAP) report that despite national economic tourist areas are looking for a record season. Polls indicate that people may not go for the big purchases such as new cars, new homes, furniture or appliances, but most appear to be planning for a big vacation.

A free booklet on student job assistance may be obtained by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Opportunity Research, Dept. SJO, 55 Flathead Dr., Kalispell, MT 59901. Student job seekers are urged to apply early!

Thinking big in Photography? Think about the Mamiya RB67

If you want bigger and better enlargements than you're getting from your present negatives, the Mamiya RB 67 could be the answer. Its "ideal" 2 1/4 x 2 3/4 format can be enlarged without cropping to the most popular sizes—8 x 10, and 16 x 20". You get 30% more enlargeable image area than with 2 1/4-square, five times more than with 35mm. And that means significantly more detail and crispness in your enlargements.

Consider that the RB 67 adds this superior image quality to the inherent advantages of a thoroughly modern single lens reflex system. The ease with which you compose your pictures on the big RB 67 finder screen. The convenience of the revolving back for switching from horizontal to vertical format without having to turn the camera. The versatility of interchangeable lenses, film backs, viewfinders and finder screens. Better yet, come in and see this unique camera and its system for yourself. How about today!

Council eliminates discounts

The Campus Affairs Committee is reviewing student evaluations of teachers for the Faculty Council.

The committee is holding an "open forum" meeting next Monday in the Chief's room at the SUB. The purpose of the meeting is to gather student input on the evaluation process. The meeting will be at 4 p.m.

In action taken last Tuesday the Faculty Council approved the University bookstore committee's recommendation concerning the proposed elimination of faculty/staff discounts at the bookstore. The new policy will read "that the faculty/staff discount does not apply to textbooks required for the current academic year."

According to the bookstore committee this will bring the policy of discounts more into line with the original intent of the discount. The new policy addition will also eliminate the abuses to the discount policy.

The council ruled Tuesday that the athletic department would refrain from scheduling athletic contests during finals week. The ruling was supported by Athletic Director Dr. Leon Green. Green said the department would make every effort possible to follow the policy. He also said that some events were scheduled years in advance, but he did not foresee any problems.

Trekkies meet, plan organization

At Wednesday's first meeting of students concerned with reviving Star Trek, an encouraging turnout was reported by organizer, Mark Lotspeich. "I feel by the turnout and crowd reaction, that the formation of a club is our next step," Lotspeich told ace Argonaut reporter, Kenton Bird.

Lotspeich said a meeting for next Wednesday was planned. The meeting at noon in the SUB

The council also directed the faculty secretary to discontinue publishing the list of university hospital patients in the University Register. The council took the action because of people on other types of "official absence"

Also discussed at Tuesday's meeting was a report on the English Composition program. The only other item presently on the agenda for next week is the proposed Affirmative Action policy for the University.

Ballroom will be highlighted by a slide presentation of some of Star Trek's most popular scenes.

Lotspeich also felt that if the turnout for next Wednesday's meeting in the Ballroom is accompanied with growing interest and enthusiasm, he will go to the new senate with a budget request for a Star Trek Club.
