Nixon due

Former president, Richard M. Nixon, will make his first public appearance since his resignation in the University of Idaho's SUB ballroom, tomorrow night at 7 p.m. Nixon plans to reveal the facts of what really happened in the Watergate affair. It is also expected that Nixon will point out the individuals who were instrumental in his frame up. For the facts, see page 9.

Pot legalized

The Idaho State Legislature passed a bill Monday which made the possession and use of marijuana legal. The bill which met with severe contention during its passage, was finally passed with a vote of 103-107. The ramifications of the bill have yet to be seen. See the details of this history making action on page 6.

Ford exiled

President Ford announced in a late night press conference that he had decided to take his family into exile with him. After conferring with President Lon Nol of Cambodia, both heads of state agreed on taking residence in Switzerland. For related story see page 15.

New policy

The University of Idaho has decided on a policy of what one high level official calls the "no second chance situation." The policy entails the use of force to evict students from Residence Halls if they fail to comply with University regulations. One such regulation requires students to purchase a meal ticket, whether they want it or not. Story on page 10.

Carter named big cheese

In a bloodless coup d'etat this morning at 2:59 a.m., Dr. Sherman Carter seized control of the University of Idaho.

Catching former president Ernest Hartung in his pajamas making a corned beef and cabbage with rutabagas on rye with Alka Seltzer chaser sandwich deep in the bowels of an in-operative boiler in the sub basement of the Tri Delt sorority house, Carter ordered Hartung to be delivered to the Saint Angelic Isadora Duncan Memorial Commons Building and Home for Dispossessed Horse Ranchers in downtown Joel, and ordered the sandwich to remove itself to the suggestion box in the main hallway of the administration building, soon to be known as the Sherman Carter Memorial Center for Fiscal Fol-De-Rol.

The sandwich, sensing a change in the status-quo-vadis, was overcome during its uphill trek by low lying ammonia emanating from a submerged pipe in Paradise Creek upwind of former Argonaut editor's live-in home for unwed mothers and soon-to-be-unwed mothers.

Hartung, however, having been sniffing stale beer in the garbage can in the alley behind the Moscow Police Station earlier in the evening, was not so quick on the uptake, and as he was led away by former Director of Campus Security Ed "Smiling Jack" Schmidt, named by Carter as Senior Superior Head Zed and Hog Heaven Honcho, was heard to scream in a mellow, multi-melodic tone: "what about my reserved parking space?"

Having raced to the S.A.I.D.M.C.B. & H.F.D.H.R., with his sleepy-eyed, pajama-clad burden in his 497 1/4 horsepower overhead-cam supercharged V-13 Pinto, the Head Zed returned to campus in time to aid Carter as he signed commitment papers for Dave Warnick, John Orwick, Kenton Bird and Dr. Tom Richardson, who learned of his impending one-way trip to Orofino via the spillway of the Dworshak Dam while discussing Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever with Sandy Gallagher (former Affirmative Action Officer and soon-to-become curator of the Alfred Puttman Memorial Shuffleboard Emporium in Sand Flea, South Dakota) at an abandoned gypo sawmill and chipmunk meat packing plant on the outskirts of Avery.

As he was led away, Richardson plaintively wailed, "What the hell am I going to say to my mother-in-law?"

Gallagher, her hair arranged by Rick of Nyack in a honeydew-melon page boy cut, with the blood-red slogan "Dead Groundhogs are Forever" embroidered in Pendleton wool thread around her naval, took her usurpation philisophically, croacking in a soft, sultry slur "I was getting just a bit tired of running the University all by myself."

With the powers that were, but are no longer, out of his way, Carter removed himself to his new executive washroom at the base of the fountain outside of the Sherman Carter Memorial Keep Em Ignorant Library (soon to be closed and converted into a repository for "Spiro Agnew for Veep in '76" campaign buttons).

Emerging dawn, pale but still feisty, Carter issued his first communique: "My relations with the members of the student body here have been less than amiable in the past. I intend, however, to rectify the situation, soon, in my favor.

"I will ask the Board of Regents when they meet here (pointing to the executive washroom) to increase student fees 3,000 per cent to make up the operating deficit of the hot sandwich line at the Sherman Carter Memorial Union Building, and to approve the immediate construction of a commons building and domed yacht anchorage on the site of the present College of Mines, Engineering, Forestry and UCC buildings.

"The building will reflect my lasting and deep-seated interest in the well being of the students here, and will be called the Sherman Carter Memorial Eroneous Ecumenical Titanic Onslaught."

Continuing, Carter said of his predecessor, "In my opinion, Hartung was too soft on the students. In fact, he was a true son of a

Vettrus found dead at salad bar

While minding my own business and studying in the red section of the Blue Bucket, a familiar person around the SUB suddenly popped over the wall of my corner booth, and asked me what I was having for lunch. Somewhat startled by this display of acrobatic skill, I said, "Dean, where did you learn to leap like that, and why do you want to know what I'm having for lunch?"

Observing that my sensitive delicacies had been ruffled, Mr. Vettrus changed the subject by mentioning that the SUB salad bar was open for business.

"Now why would I want to eat at the salad bar," I asked? After adjusting to the situation, I could see he was pondering my question, and I expected an answer momentarily. "Well, to begin with, we got your three main choices of salad. There's the cottage cheese, the tossed green salad, and the jello fruit salad," he said.

"But Mr. Vettrus, I don't really think I want salad for lunch," I explained.

"Nonsense," he screamed, "We got your three types of salad dressing; French, thousand island and Italian."

Surprised by his sudden outburst, I asked, "But Dean, don't you have any blue cheese dressing: I mean what's a salad without blue cheese dressing?" "Like I said, you got your French, thousand island, and Italian." Still puzzled, I questioned once more, "No blue cheese dressing?"

"No blue cheese," he said, "but we got three additional items you can put on your choice of salad. We got your beans, tomatoes and croutons. The beans are fresh, the tomatoes are fantastic, and the croutons are crunchy."

Almost feeling like a good salad, I needed just a little more persuasion before temptation overcame me. "Do you have any pickles with the salad?" I inquired.

"We got your three additional items with the salad of your choice. There's the beans, tomatoes, and croutons, but there are no pickles," he stated.

"Boy, I sure could have gone for a dill pickle with blue cheese dressing on my salad," I interjected.

"We got your three types of salad dressing; French, thousand island and Italian," he grumbled.

I was about to ask him if I could mix salads, when he dove out of the booth and ran across to the blue section, where he applied some peer group pressure on a student smoking in the no smoking area. A quick half nelson doubled with a shoulder arm lock downed the student and made him lose hold of his cigarette butt. Not to be so easily overcome, the student grasped at the burning cigarette, and upon its retrieval, he branded Vettrus on the inside of his left thigh. This served to only infuriate Vettrus even more, but once the cigarette had been snubbed out in his flesh, he released his hold on the student.

Trotting back to the table in victory, Dean said, "I wish students would apply a little more peer pressure; if they did, we could eliminate the abuse of cigarette smoking in the blue section."

Deeply impressed by this remarkable individual, I asked, "Dean, is it alright to mix salads. I mean, can I put cottage cheese around the tossed green salad, and a little fruit salad off to one side, topped off with blue cheese dressing?"

Dean's muscles tensed, and then with a slow gravelly voice, he said, "No blue cheese, but we got your French, thousand island and Italian."

"But Dean, is it alright to mix the salads and the dressings with the beans, tomatoes, croutons and pickles?" I asked.

Clutching the side of the table until his knuckles went white, he hissed under his breath, "no pickles, you got your beans, tomatoes, and croutons — no pickles."

"Well, after thinking about it I guess I don't want any salad, but what do you have in the way of sandwiches," I asked.

Leaping out of the booth and screaming at the top of his lungs, Vettrus dove into the salad bar and committed suicide by suffocating in the cottage cheese. Taking the entire salad bar with him as he fell to the floor, his body made one final violent shudder before it stilled.

I rushed to his side and found his body covered with salad dressing. "Well Dean, you got your French, thousand island and Italian," I said.

I reached down and wiped the dressing from his eyes, but something seemed strange. I couldn't help but taste the dressing on my fingers. "Funny Dean, I could swear that's Blue cheese."

"We got your French, thousand island and Italian, but there isn't any blue cheese."

BEER DRINKER'S QUICK QUIZ

Just to kill a minute or two, why don't you match your own beer-drinking habits and preferences against those of the Budweiser Brewmaster. While you're taking the test, it might be a good idea to cover up the answers with a cold can or two of the King of Beers.

1. When you do use a glass, do you ease the beer down the side? Or do you pour it down the middle to get a nice head of foam?
2. How much foam do you like on a glass of draught beer? None at all One inch One and a half to two inches
3. Do you like to drink your beer in little sips? Big swallows? Something in between?
4. Which do you like best? Canned beer Bottled beer Draught beer
5. Which beer is brewed by "exclusive Beechwood Ageing with natural carbonation to produce a better taste and a smoother, more drinkable beer?" Budweiser Some other brand
6. When you say "Budweiser," do you say it... often? ...eagerly? ...loudly? ...gladly?

ANSWERS
1. Right down the middle 4. Any of these, as long for a healthy head of foam.
2. 1 1/2 to 2 inches.
3. Big swallows.
5. Only Budweiser.
6. All answers are acceptable.

Graduate applauds regents action

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is directed as a response to the article that appeared in last Friday's Argonaut concerning the Board of Regents latest decision to eliminate the college of education at the University. As a senior education major, I am sad to have seen this action take place, although I do believe it is for the better.

When I graduate (cum laude) this spring, I will be able to look forward to unemployment or to a position as a laborer mechanic or insurance salesman. There simply are no jobs available for prospective teachers.

This state has a department of education in every single one of its colleges and yet the only graduates that will get teaching jobs his year will be those whose parents are on local school boards.

I applaud the regents decision to close the gap between education graduates and jobs available. It has taken me four years to realize that I should have majored in anything other than education and now some other poor schmucks won't have to make the same mistake I did.

Regretfully,
Raymond Conrad

The New Idaho Stadium has finally got the dome we've all been awaiting for. With a little ingenuity, and a great deal of hard work, the canvas roof formerly over the American Pavilion at Expo '74 in Spokane, Wash., has been reconstructed over the Idaho stadium.

Dean fights college closure

Editor:

The Regent's decision to close the College of Education has brought great disappointment to all of us in the academic field. This action just goes to show what is happening in the world to the quality of education.

The past few years have shown a dramatic loss of enrollment at institutions of higher learning. Just because there are less students attending college, there is no reason to attempt to cut back on the number of teachers. On the contrary, now we can improve the student-teacher ration even more. Quite possibly there will be a day when each pupil will have his very own teacher (at premium wage of course). At the present time, I know of no teacher that receives what he is deserving and there are still not enough instructors to go around. Worse still, I return from a vacation in Acapulco and find that the Regents have abolished the College of Education right from under my feet!

Why can't people get it in their heads that there is nothing more valuable to mankind than the teaching of prospective teachers so that they in turn can learn to teach others to teach. Teaching is the backbone of learning, and learning is the backbone of education, and we all know that education is readin' and writin' and 'rithmetic, the most sacred of our country's ideals.

I've been in the education business all my life, and I've learned a great deal from it. The Bored of Regents has now decided to put me back in the job-hunting market. Although I don't really mind not having my own secretary, or closet or having to share the same washroom with the rest of the fellows. I am an educator not a job seeker. My great mind was never intended for corporate drivvel. Who knows, maybe I'll go back to school and get an education.

Disapointingly,
Dean Roland Smith, M.D.
Dean of the former College of Education

What about that date?

My Dearest Editor:

I thought we had a date last night, or did you forget snookums. To refresh your memory, you asked me out two days ago in our English class when you were correcting my term paper. What really burns me, on top of your not showing up last night, is that I got a D on my paper.

Did you know I sat in the Billiard Den for three hours last night, waiting for your royal highness. I even wore my see through blouse for our date, but never again toots, no sireee, not me.

Just to show you that you didn't ruin my evening, I went over to Mor's Club and got totally polluted. Then I let this creature who had been staring at me for virtually the entire night, come over and pick me up.

One last thing baby, and this is really going to devastate you, I think the creature and I really got it on, and there might be a bouncing bundle of junk on the way. Also, guess who'll be hit with a paternity suit when it arrives. That's right sugar, you figured it out, it's you. So I'll see you in court, or in church, which ever comes first.

Unfortunately Yours,
Chesty Morgan

Asst. Editors note: It is most unfortunate that the editor can not answer this particular letter, but there is a tragic reason. Following his English class two days ago, he slipped and fell from his car while it was traveling at 70 mph. Memorial services will be held for what was left, tomorrow at noon, at Our Lord of Ladies Church.

A real pain in the butt

Dear Editor:

I am writing as a concerned student in hopes that people will become aware of my plight, and that of many others. The problem centers on the acute shortage of toilet paper.

For the past two years that I have been living in the dorms, I have rarely had the opportunity to use toilet paper, because it hasn't been available. Many people are getting irate, especially those who find sections of Time magazine and Moscow phone books as a final necessity. Did you know that I was forced to wipe with Henry Kissinger's latest trip to the middle east, and that a break-down of negotiations forced me to withdraw my position.

Things are gettin pretty bad around here, and everyone in the dorm finds this problem a real pain in the butt. What really urks me, is when I see a sorority decorated with what I believe to be our toilet paper. What seems to be a cute prank by fraternities, is really a nightmare to us.

After living with this situation for quite some time, I consider myself an expert on paper. During the course of my begging and pleading with University housing for additional toilet paper, I have made tests on certain publications, and the grade of paper they use. Time magazine isn't bad, but the glossy paper does a real smear campaign on my backside. The Moscow phone book is a little better, but the pages are so thin that my fingers end up walking through the yellow pages. I have come to the conclusion that your publication, the Argonaut, is the best suited for my purposes.

Hopefully this article will generate enough interest to remedy this filthy problem facing my dorm. If nothing happens in the near future, I look forward to wiping away my cares with this article.

The End,
Bill Butz

AEC picks Moscow for nuclear test

The 'Widow-Maker', America's new 100 megaton nuclear bomb will be tested upon the city of Moscow, Idaho, the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) announced today.

Sarah L. Blast, director of the AEC, stated in her press release, "The site was chosen only after considerable research had been done. We discovered that in the past, hordes of long-haired druggies were congregating in Moscow on the first Sunday in May." Blast felt that scheduling the test on that day would not only do the city of Moscow a service, but would give direction to the nation as a whole.

Reaction was almost immediate. Boise legislators were reported to have called an emergency meeting at Michael's restaurant in Boise. Although the meeting was closed to the press, sounds emanating from closed bar room doors were described as those of 'song and revelry'.

Boise State University's head football coach, Tony 'That's alotta' Crapp, said that Moscow was an excellent choice for the blast and that "it will really help our recruiting program".

The AEC had submitted the proposal to the Moscow

Chamber of Commerce last Febuary. Larry Frupp, director of the chamber, said that he received strong support from the Moscow businessmen in that they were looking forward to the increase in the tourism trade.

U of I President, Earnest W. Hartung, was unavailable for comment. Sources in the physical plant indicated that Hartung was directing a special physical plant 'task force' whose mission is to dig a forty foot deep hole in the president's back lawn. Sources speculated that the hole might be a bomb shelter. The official statement regarding the digging was in preparation for a 180-foot Sequoia tree donated to the president in gratitude for the awarding of the student housing construction contract to Boise Cascade.

The ASUI president's office announced that President Gerald Scored and Vice President 'Rocky' Rockefeller should share in the explosion. David Warnick ASUI president, said that he was hopeful that the senate would pass a resolution encouraging them to attend this great event.

The proposal was not without opposition. Mark Beatty, senator and member of the stadium board, said that he had done several exhaustive examinations on the proposed 'ground zero' for the test, the Moscow Hot L. Beatty said, "In order to achieve the maximum effect from the test, it was absolutely necessary that 'ground zero' should be the Palouse Pea Palace, better known as the Kibbie Komplex, the U of I's new mini-use stadium.

President Scored's hot line to the Kremlin was reportedly buzzing madly all day. Our sources in Washington did not know of the content of the calls but confirmed that they had originated from the Kremlin and that party chief Breznev was making the calls to Scored.

An Argonaut reporter in the Russian capital said that Breznev was concerned over the use of a city with the name, 'Moscow'. An unconfirmed report from inside the Kremlin quoted Breznev as saying, "Now, dammit Gerry, that's getting a little too close!"

The city of Pullman reacted violently to the proposal. A spokesman for the Pullman Chamber of Commerce said bitterly, "They (Moscow) have already got their damn shopping center, why can't we have the bomb?"

Mob hoops Schmitz after concert

This is a police composite of what witnesses have described to be the killer of former Campus Security Chief, Ed Schmitz.

The Chief of the U of I campus Security force Ed Schmitz, who has been quoted as saying "I'm going to get those degenerate students to act cultured at their school functions or die trying", was found hanging from a basketball standard and about three and one half hours after the John Denver concert in the Memorial Gym late Saturday night. Schmitz was reportedly hanged with a make shift noose made from the strap of his walky-talky and a seat belt from one of the Security Force Pintos. Approximately 560 of the U of I students that attended the concert are under suspicion for the crime.

Captain Larry Peon of the Moscow homicide squad says that he thinks the murder stems from the fact that Chief Schmitz was doing an excellent job of maintaining order at the U of I rock concerts.

Late last week Chief Schmitz, who incidently was a member of the M.P.D., was given full authority by President Hartung under direct order from the Board of Regents to police all future rock concerts "using his own discretion".

Schmitz immediately took control and issued a special bulletin to the student body describing his "13 concert commandments" plan.

Among the details of the plan were several rules that, if broken, were punishable by forced attendance to the Borah Symposium. The following are only a few of the rules: 1. Slacks and permanent press solid

Council meets

The Faculty Council will continue its review of standing committees today. This is the third week they have labored on the special order.

Also on the agenda for this afternoon is review of the proposed Affirmative Action policy, an interdisciplinary M.A./M.S. program proposal, criteria for academic ranks for librarians and a report on Campus Planning.

Most of the items will probably be carried over until next week in light of the Board of Regents meeting here this week.

shirts for the men and plaid knee length dresses and flats for the women - mandatory dress, 2. No drinking, eating, smoking, kissing, touching, yelling, barfing, scratching, sleeping, laughing or singing. 3. Any persons found to have dilated pupils and/or bloodshot eyes will be incarcerated in the men's handball court (north) to "suffer through cold turkey and hopefully cure their problem before it inevitably leads to heroine" 4. Several thousand seats will be placed in the gym for all further concerts so that when you buy your ticket you will sign for it and a seat with a name card will be assigned to you. 5. All seating will be in alphabetical order.

Along with issuing his "commandments" Schmitz fired Ed Gladder, abolished the Entertainment Committee, and appointed Sherman Carter to head a "Cabaret Board" made up of retired professors, unemployed sanitation engineers and several local wheat farmers. The board will decide who will be invited to play at U of I concerts in the future. The board met last Thursday evening in the ally behind Morts Club and decided on John Denver for this Saturday, Conway Twitty for April 22, and Petula Clark for May 7.

Saturday's concert went well according to Carter who said that the crowd was very well behaved with very few exceptions. One of the exceptions was an incident which involved six young sorority women who attempted to disrupt the concert by producing rude noises from their armpits with their hands.

It wasn't until the concert was over and Denver was on his way back to his cave in the Rocky Mountains that the trouble started. Chief Schmitz was busy helping the clean up crew pick up the pine needles and acorns that had been strewn all over the gym by the band during the frenzy of Denver's performance.

As the last remains of the mess were being discarded approximately five hundred disgruntled students burst into the gym shouting obscenities and hurling tater-tots.

According to eye witness accounts Schmitz was engulfed by the crowd and by the time you could change your socks he was dangling from the hoop on the West side of the main floor.

Funeral proceedings and a wake will be held in the Gault/Upham cafeteria all day Monday. Reverend Donald G. Mephistopheles will preside over the ceremony and has slated that old Cole Porter favorite "Pushing Up Poppies" as the theme Hymn.

Jocks found in sheepish position

Three football players have been suspended from the team and threatened with loss of their scholarships for violation of training rules.

J.C. Hatband, Gregg Luckyman, and Kill "The Animal" Killmonger were discovered by Zed Zidtz, chief of the University Pinto Patrol, in the Ag Science sheepbarns at 1:30 a.m. Saturday night.

Zidtz said that he was on regular patrol near the buildings, located north of the Moscow-Pullman highway, when he heard "disturbed bleatings, as from a sheep in pain." "I investigated the sounds" he said "and found the three young men in obvious disarray, with straw on their clothing."

Coach "Trots" Foxhole said the suspensions were based on violation of his training rules, which set a curfew of 11:30 p.m. on weekend nights for athletes, "except during full moons."

A spokesman for the players defended their presence at the barns. He explained that athletes are taking an inter-disciplinary course in "Sex Education for Livestock," team-taught by Bill Rees of the psychology department and Joel Hamilton of agriculture.

The spokesman, who asked to remain unidentified, said the players were studying at their fraternity, Lambda Sigma Delta, when they realized that they had a test Monday. Because they had to assist at the Easter Sunrise services the next morning, they wanted to get some lab time in before Sunday afternoon spring practice.

He quoted one of the players as saying, "We can't see that we have done anything wrong. Our first obligations are to our studies."

The training rules were set up years ago to control the behavior of 'non-academic' types who tended to party and throw Vandal Boosters through plate glass windows.

However, sources close to the city prosecutor's office said that investigation is being made into possible criminal prosecution based on section 869.h, Idaho Code, "misdemeanor violation of a minor quadruped".

The source said that so far as it is known, this would be the first such prosecution of the law, since 1945, "when veterans were returning from overseas in great numbers." The law was passed in 1899.

Tom Richmanson, vice president for student affairs, whose jurisdiction includes athletics, declined to comment on Foxhole's actions, referring the Argonaut to Jon Warrant, university attorney.

At his office, Warrant also declined to comment, but on his desk were several open books and a copious amount of notes. The books included two volumes of the Idaho Code; Master's and Johnson's "Sexual Dysfunction", and a leather-bound first edition of KraftEbbing.

Head cheerer busted for lewdness

Mary Sue Limberlegs, the head of the Vandals cheerleader squad, was arrested last Friday for allegedly making obscene gestures at a crowd of about sixty fans watching the U of I Vandals play Central Washington in a double header in Clarkston, Washington. Miss Limberlegs was escorted off the field in the seventh inning of the second game by two members of the Clarkston City vice squad, who immediately drove her downtown and booked her for unnecessary lewdness.

Lieutenant Jerry Peep, acting head of the Clarkston City vice squad, said he received a call from a concerned citizen about two o'clock Friday afternoon, saying that one of the young ladies on the Idaho Cheerleading team was making "sexually inviting movements with her body during the yells." The alleged concerned citizen reportedly said that Miss Limberlegs was "going completely out of her way" to arouse the passions of the predominantly male population in the stands.

Upon receiving the alleged phone call, Lieutenant Peep sent out two vice officers to check into the matter. According to eyewitnesses, the two officers pulled up to the scene in about the bottom half of the first inning and surveyed Miss Limberlegs until the top of the seventh inning before they made the arrest. Miss Limberlegs reportedly went along without a fuss.

Miss Limberlegs is being held in the Latah County jail until April 16, when she will appear in Municipal Court to have her case heard.

Miss Limberlegs was not open for comment on the incident of her arrest but when asked about her particular style of leading cheers she replied, "Oh you know, some like it hot".

There had to be a better way...

... and there was. Now modern energy and techniques have made possible the essential increases in food production.

Energy not only helps fill the shelves of our modern supermarkets; it's vital in almost every other aspect of life. The conservation of what we have and the intelligent pursuit of new sources are responsibilities of supplier and user alike.

As I see it... John Hawley

The decision to allow race car driving to be a Big Sky sport is a horrendous mistake.

The track team has already complained that half of their team has been eliminated by the Vandal road racers, who claim the track is the only place to practice. But you ain't heard anything yet.

The UI race car team has demanded a special 21 car garage be constructed to house their machines and in the mean time they think they can park in the Administration Building. Even more ridiculous are the fee increases students will face to support the new team.

If you thought five extra dollars was a lot for the new stadium what about the $600 extra each student will have to pay for six Ferraris, 11 racing Porches and four BMW 3.0's (for road rallies.) And what about the $50,000 per semester salary the UI administration has agreed to pay to A.J. Foyt to coach the squad.

All this is bad enough, but the Big Sky rules for intercollegiate competition is what irks me. The rules state "whenever two teams race each other, the home team will drive clockwise around the track, while the visitors must drive counter clockwise. In my book that's suicide, but Coach Foyt assures us, what the hell, you asked for excitement, now you're gonna get it."

When Coach Parnell Jone's Boise State racing squad comes to Idaho next weekend maybe some Big Sky officials will see how foolish their decision to make race cars driving an official sport was. If not, maybe they might want to rewrite the rules.

The race against BSU will be a 200 mph game of chicken and if anyone from Idaho survives, then the season will be off to a successful start or will it?

Beerball featured as new sport

Head Coach Ed Troxel said today he plans to ignore the recent decision by the Idaho football team to have kegs of beer rather than Gatorade on the practice field.

"What we have here is a failure to communicate," Troxel said. "You can play beerball or you can play football, but you can't play both at once," he said.

Grain Belt Tuborg, a defensive lineman for the Vandals, said, "It gets hot and sweaty out there and when I work up a thirst there's only one thing that can quench it—cold beer on tap!"

I.M. Straight, a quarterback hopeful, is one player who doesn't like the beer on the field. "I voted against it, but with so many in favor, my objection was like shooting a B-B gun at Fort Knox. What bums me is after calisthenics I go to throw some passes and all my receivers are weaving."

Troxell denies reports that fewer injuries had occurred because of the looseness of the team when slightly crocked.

like Sonny Jourgenson with their beer guts and all, and there is a complete lack of discipline."

He said there are a few players, who refuse to drink the cold grog, but when every practice turns into a party time, it's getting out of hand.

The players seem to enjoy the practices now, but their "happy hours" could ruin any hope for a winning season next year. Some players have reportedly booted their starting berths after excessive beer consumption.

Head manager, Al K. Hall said, "The team's spirit is high, but there's a big problem with hangovers. The fellas won't put their helmets on if they have headaches, and I get the blame when they bitch about the way they fit."

Hot L Moscow beats the Baltimore

Hi folks! Happy Harvey here agin with another of those exciting tours of one of the Palouse Empire's fabulous hot spots. Today we find our little group in marvelous Moscow for one of the most accommodating inns around, The HOT L MOSCOW.

As we cross the threshold of the entrance look around at the ornate wood carvings done by that famous artist, Graff E. Tea. Off to the left is the international travel center, or as it is affectionately called, the Greyhound baggageroom. Travelling up a small flight of stairs we come to the front desk, manned by that happy-go-lucky guy Daryl the Desk Clerk. Good old Daryl is one of the most colorful people at the Hot L Moscow. He's best known from his high school days when he won the Troy "Why I want to pursue a career in chicken farming" oratory contest. Yep, you've come a long way since then haven't you Daryl.

Look, there goes one of the Hot L's interesting residents, Hot Tina. Doesn't she look cute in that sexy terry cloth bathrobe and fuzzy slippers. Please excuse her hair in curlers but she works nights. As you can see, Tina loves Bon Bons but she keeps her weight down by doing evening exercises on the job. She's one of the most popular people at the Hot L, and often has many visitors.

As we continue on our tour, we come to the Brackish Room, home of world famous dining. Superb dining is the key note here with more dishes offered than the A and W down the road and cheap too! The room features the fabulous flaming Potato Burger, truly a unique eating experience. The kitchen is ably manned by Clarence the cook. Never mind the cigar in his mouth, Clarence says it gives the food an improved flavor.

Perhaps you need a little pick-me-up after work, or maybe an after drink is what you have in mind to keep that marvellous meal down. Then make way to the Garbage Lounge. Definately an 'in' part of the Moscow night life, the Garbage Lounge offers half-decent drinks at interesting prices. If you wish to quibbel about drink prices, Bill, the 6'6", 265 lbs. bartender will be glad to show you his fist size.

The rooms are the next stop on the tour. Each one has been intimately decorated just the way you better like it. Those bouncy, fluffy Army cots are a joy to slumber on and for your convenience, pillows and sheets are also provided at no extra charge. To complete the decor, is a night stand and even a lamp.

As we complete our little fun-filled tour we wave goodbye to Sid the Manager and toss him a friendly "get bent" for his gracious hospitality. So folks, this is Happy Harvey here saying so long from the HOT L MOSCOW.

Fear of abolishing tenure system opens new positions

In an unprecedented move last Friday the general faculty recommended the proposed dismissal policy to be sent to the Board of Regents for approval.

The recommendation came just four days before the regent's April meeting here. A special meeting of the general faculty was called last Friday to take action on the Faculty Council recommendation to adopt the dismissal policy recommended by the Regent's last month.

The general faculty attached an amendment to the acceptance recommendation. The amendment recommends the regents vote to abolish the tenure system.

Tony Rigas, faculty council chairman, spearheaded the move to abolish tenure. Rigas said, "The faculty feels that a tenure system is not needed. If we are doing a good enough job we will be retained in our positions. If we are doing a poor job... well, the job market has plenty of well qualified people to replace us."

"The regents have a chance now to hire the highest quality instructors possible," he added.

The amendment received little opposition, but those in opposition argued bitterly against the motion to abolish tenure. Advocates, however, shouted down the opposition with cries such as, "coward", "neurotic", and "If you oppose this you must be insecure in your position." Siegfried Rolland and Barbara Meldrum headed the unsuccessful opposition move.

Faculty Secretary Bruce Bray said the recommendation is a "milestone in the University's history." He said "we can probably expect to see a large crowd of new faces within the faculty ranks by the end of the next academic year."

Apparently Bray was correct to a point. ASUI President Ernest Hartung's office reported receiving almost 75 resignations by five o'clock last night. Hartung said "the largest amount of faculty members resigning are elders of the faculty ranks who cannot accept changing with the times."

Hartung commented, "the resigning elders were all due for retirement in the near future, anyway."

Sources close to the regents say they have been prepared for such a move. According to a reliable source the regents will accept all resignations and with the projected dismissals "60 per cent of the faculty will be leaving at the end of this semester." Sources also said the regents have signed contracts to fill all the vacant positions indicated there will probably be several new positions formed to "alleviate the problem of understaffing in several of the University's schools and departments."

In addition to the faculty dismissals, sources indicate all three University vice presidents will be dismissed. Sherman Carter will be replaced by Harry Davey from financial aids. Robert Coonrod will be replaced by philosophy instructor Nick Gier and Tom Richardson will be replaced by student John Orwick.

What's happening Charles Reith

The ASUI Big Name Entertainment Committee have announced they will have a Beatles Reunion in the SUB Dipper on Friday April 4 at 8 p.m. Along with the former members of the group, U of I's favorite host Ed McMahon, will emcee the concert. Admission to the concert will be $6.50 single and $10 a couple. Patrons will be given a 50 per cent discount if they bring a Beatle's single on the Vee-Jay or Atco label.

Randy Bachman, leader of Bachman-Turner Overdrive, will be giving a testimonial at the Campus Christian Center on the U of I campus. His message will be "Don't Get Yourself In Trouble." Later in the program he will be joined by other members of the group when they do a medley of their million seller hits. Cheech and Chong were originally scheduled to appear but were declined by high ranking officials at the last moment.

The music department has sponsored a drum jam session on Wednesday April 2, at 8:00 p.m. Appearing on the program will be Ringo Starr, Ginger Baker, Keith Moon and Charlie Watts. They will be doing songs from each group's repertoire. On standby should any of these drummers fail to appear will be Buddy Rich and Karen Carpenter.

After the pie eating contest on Thursday a chocolate speedway contest will be held in the SUB Ballroom at 9:00 p.m. Those who can fill a pail in one minute or less will win a double pass to Northwest Racetrack at Stateline to see the real thing.

For the Mr. Ugly Contest on Saturday April 5, from 9 to 12 males with pimples, scars, beef, stitches and blackheads are requested to enter. As for the Miss Campus Chest, females with measurements of 38-24-36 or better will be considered for prizes. A jukebox will be provided at the dance.

Unfortunately this column came out three days early so try to read and drink to it in good health upon this April Fool's Day. Remember the joke might be on you but don't choke on this. Instead use it in the chocolate speedway contest or for some other similar source. CRAP! HAVE A GOOD ONE!

University loses entire accreditation

The University of Idaho's accreditation was lost, following an action by three major accrediting agencies, according to several high level officials.

Yesterday's action was undertaken as a result of several factors, Thomas Fairmont of the Northwest College Association, said today in an interview with the Argonaut.

"We felt last week's destruction of the entire Physical Science building because of unauthorized explosions called for some action."

He said the collapse of the Art and Architecture building, which followed the explosion, was another factor.

"We at the association can understand some people being upset about this," Fairmont said, "but the teacher's strike that followed was completely unjustified."

Roger Wallins, an English professor, now one of the strike leaders, disagreed. "We must have the five hundred percent increase in life insurance," he said. "The condition of these buildings demands it."

Asked about insurance for students, he said, "How can the university pay them? They aren't employees. And I don't want any of this printed."

Academic Vice President Robert Coonrod had no comment.

Fairmont said, "In addition to the strike, we considered the total condition of the departments in the university. Many of them were going to be cut anyway, for example, most of Letters and Science and Business and Economics. Forestry is mostly made up of out-of-staters, so it isn't truly an Idaho service. And of course education was on the way out anyway," he said.

Asked about the financial effects of the loss of accreditation, Carter said, "It'll be tough to get money from the legislature, and alumni will probably be contributing less frequently. But there will probably be other resources to tap."

Fairmont gave as another reason for the loss of accreditation student threats on the lives of numerous administration officials, and destruction of many administration offices.

Sherman Carter said his life had been threatened numerous times but he has thus far escaped injury. He disclosed that he has set up a booby-trap system around his office. It is activated whenever suspected staff, students or Argonaut reporters approach his office.

Asked if the system was illegal, Carter replied, "Well, you know the plaque on my wall, don't you?" He apparently referred to a poster on his south wall, stating, "I don't always play fair, but I don't always lose either."
