In the harshest sentence for possession of marijuana in the current local drug cases, former ASUI Vice-president Brian Kincaid was sentenced yesterday to nine months in the Latah County Jail.

Kincaid was sentenced by District Judge Roy Mosman after pleading guilty to the possession charge. An earlier charge of cocaine possession was dropped by the County Prosecutor's office, in return for the guilty plea on the marijuana charge.

The sentence came despite a comment to the court from Prosecutor Bill Hamlett that jail would be of no benefit to Kincaid, who earlier unsuccessfully challenged the constitutionality of drug laws before Mosman.

Both the prosecutor and Kincaid's attorney Jack Porter asked that Kincaid be given a fine, to serve, in Porter's words, as a reminder of the offense.

Mosman said anything less than a jail sentence would show the law could not control Kincaid, and "unduly diminish the seriousness of the offense."

Kincaid, who began serving his term immediately, said last night the sentence was "totally unjustified," and the harshness was a result of his insistence before the court that drug laws are unjust.

Nevertheless, he says he "wouldn't do anything differently," adding that the sentence strengthens his pro-marijuana beliefs.

Kincaid, who served a probation term for a marijuana charge two years ago, said he holds no animosity toward Judge Mosman, who he called "one of the fairest judges around."

In yesterday's court session, the judge said Kincaid was not a danger to society "in the classic sense of the word," but the fact that he was considered a leader of U of I students who elected him ASUI

KINCAID: NINE MONTHS IN THE SLAMMER

Vice-president made his actions dangerous.

Kincaid will serve the entire term, according to Mosman, who said after the court session that he doesn't anticipate shortening the sentence.

Since possession of marijuana is an indictable misdemeanor and not a felony, Kincaid won't be eligible for parole, although the sentencing judge could shorten the jail term.

Some time could be taken off the sentence, Mosman said, under a state law provision for prisoners with good behavior records, and Kincaid said he hoped to become involved in a work release program.

Porter said an appeal to the state Supreme court could be filed, challenging the "appropriateness of the sentence and the constitutionality of marijuana laws, although the prospects for victory on either point are "doubtful."

If an appeal were filed, Kincaid said, he would favor challenging the law, rather than Mosman's sentence. He said the judge was entirely justified in sentencing Kincaid to nine months for a crime which carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1000 fine.

Hamlett said the sentence is the longest initial jail term for possession of marijuana in the current drug cases. Another defendant charged with marijuana possession is serving a year's jail term, Hamlett said, although that sentence came after a probation violation.

A pre-sentence investigation conducted by the Idaho Department of Probation and Parole had recommended that Kincaid be sentenced to four months at the state correctional facility at Cottonwood.

Kincaid was elected ASUI Vice-president last November and resigned last month. He had not enrolled in school this semester.

The "NEAR SUPREME"

Our "Near Supreme" system is precisely what the name implies. That is, it offers you very nearly the best sound available at any price. Without hesitation, we can promise you superbly reproduced music at volumes sufficient to fill any listening room you are likely to find in an ordinary home.

The secret to so much performance for so little money is the Advent Loudspeaker. It was, and is, one of the great bargains in high fidelity history. The Advent's true, unexaggerated musical balance extends down to that bottom half octave of bass which most speakers either omit or shabbily neglect.

The power unit for the Near Supreme is the Harman Kardon 430 am/fm receiver. It has enough watts to drive the Advents as described above, with the special advantage of a separate power supply for each channel so that neither side can drain power from the other during especially demanding passages.

The disc-handling chores are admirably dispatched by the B.I.C. 920 belt drive, programmable turntable. Fully equipped with base, dust cover and the excellent Audio Technica AT11E cartridge, the 920 is the perfect mate for the Advent-Harman Kardon combination.

Parking fees debated

The U of I's Faculty Council has appointed a student-faculty committee to recommend changes in a university proposal for parking fees on campus.

The proposal, which will be considered by the Idaho Board of Regents at its October meeting in Moscow would include charging fees ranging up to $60 for campus parking, while street parking will remain free.

The matter was originally scheduled to go before the regents this summer, but was withdrawn at the request of council Chairman Bert McCroskey, who asked the administration to wait until faculty members were back on campus before submitting the proposal.

Faculty, staff, and students spoke out against the plan, designed to raise money for parking lot maintenance and academic programs, at Tuesday's council meeting.

This isn't the first time the faculty has considered the matter. In 1971 the council voted down a parking proposal, also proposed to raise money for lot maintenance.

History department chairman William Greever told the council this week, "the administration was obviously bluffing in '71 when they said they had absolutely no money for parking lots, which haven't turned into potholes since that time."

Greever said the faculty should come out against the proposal and put the administration on notice that teachers haven't stopped "defending their rights."

Faculty members shouldn't be required to pay fees to support academic programs, Greever said, "simply because the regents lack the power and the legislature lacks the enlightenment to support education."

Whatever recommendation the faculty-student committee comes up with, Greever said, the decision should be reviewed by the general faculty before the regents take up the matter.

"The faculty governs this institution," Greever said, "and not the business office."

Nevertheless, Business Manager Don Amos says the money from the fees is needed if parking lots are to be improved. Amos added that new enforcement policies will accompany the fees, if approved by the regents.

Automobiles parked illegally, Amos said, will either be towed away, or equipped with a device which would prevent the owner from moving the car.

The car would be returned or the device removed, Amos said, after the violator paid a fine. He said such a system would eliminate the inequity between student and faculty parking fines, which must be paid by the students but are often ignored by faculty members.

Without an effective method of enforcement, Amos said, the new fee system would be "a waste of time."

The committee members charged with coming up with an alternate plan include Gary Scott, Jay Scheldorf and student Mike Rush, who will report back to the council next week.

University Vice-President Robert Coonrod said the school's proposal isn't "written in stone," and the administration will be receptive to faculty suggestions.

Among the proposals the committee will consider is a plan from former council chairman Richard Schermerhorn, which would provide a uniform fee of as little as $15 for faculty members and less for students, with money going only to academics.

Schermerhorn says such a plan would cut administrative costs and eliminate the need to designate certain parking spaces for different classes of parking.

Such a proposal was endorsed by another former council chairman, Sig Rolland, who said the faculty should be sure all the money which comes from fees goes back to academics. He said the university's proposal would cost faculty members much more than would be returned in higher academic funding.

In addition to faculty members opposing the plan, Evelyn McGraw, secretary in the college of letters and sciences presented the council with a petition signed by University staff members opposing the proposal.

The debate at the meeting wasn't unanimously against parking fees however. John Hallaq, business, said he would be willing to pay for parking if such a fee would assure him a space. Hallaq said present parking on campus makes some faculty members unwilling to leave the campus during school hours because they might not find a spot when they return.

Gladys Bellinger, home economics, told the council the fee is approved a special exemption should accompany it, providing free parking for emeritus faculty members and handicapped persons.

In other business at the first council meeting of the school year Steven Davis and Harry Caldwell were elected as faculty representatives to two and three year terms respectively on the budget liaison committee.

Faculty at Large

What is a faculty member?

That question is bothering many U of I teachers who are unhappy with the inclusion of a number of non-teachers, designated by the university president as faculty at large.

A mild controversy over the issue arose at Tuesday's Faculty Council meeting where faculty members were presented with a list of university administrators, appointed to positions of faculty at large without rank, by President Ernest Hartung.

Council member Jay Scheldorf questioned whether the University attorney, physical plant manager, or dome manager would be considered faculty members.

Vice-President for academic affairs Robert Coonrod responded to the complaints of Scheldorf and others at the meeting, saying the president gives faculty status to department heads, who are directly responsible to the university administration, and to administrators who are regularly in contact with students and hold a masters degree.

Coonrod said part of the reason the appointments are made is to give administrators a voice in governing the university.

With or without faculty at large status, Scheldorf said, "these people have a lot more say about running this institution" than teaching faculty members.

Coonrod conceded there is a problem with the practice, however, since faculty members must be given one year's notice before they are fired and the same rules might apply to administrators with faculty at large appointments.

For that reason, Coonrod said, the university probably won't try to make any drastic reductions in the number of faculty at large. He added that as present occupants of administrative posts retire or quit, their successors may not get the same faculty title. This, he said would amount to a "gradual" reduction in the number of non-teaching faculty members.

Coonrod said this is the only school he has been at that had faculty at large, and he added that although he is chairman of the group, he has "no great commitment to it."

He told faculty members who are unhappy with the practice to consider changing the faculty constitution, which sets procedures for faculty at large appointments.

According to former council chairman Sig Rolland, when the faculty constitution was originally drafted, university administrators demanded some provision be made for faculty at large positions, as a price for supporting teachers' efforts to gain a constitution.

The discussion over who should be considered a faculty member is an annual fight, according to Faculty Secretary Bruce Bray.

He agreed some sort of reduction of the number of faculty at large may be in the offing, probably by not giving faculty status to successors to present university administrators.

The following is a list of administrative and service officers appointed to faculty status by university President Ernest Hartung:

Accola, William V., Director, Computer Services; Amos, Don A., Business and Real Estate Manager; Baldrige, Jo Ann, Associate Registrar; Burcaw, Susan S., State Coordinator, Correspondence Study; Bush, Corlann G., Director, Special Services, Student Advisory Services; Cron, Carolyn S., Director, University Relations; Davey, Harry E., Jr., Director, Student Financial Aids; Frank, Eloise F., Director, Career Planning and Placement Center; Fosberg, Margaret W., Superintendent of Nurses, Student Health Service; Gagon, George, Director, Physical Plant; Hedges, Dennis S., Manager, The William H. Kibbie-ASU Activity Center; Hunter, Larry O., Director, Management Information Services.

Johnston, Richard A., Director, Alumni Relations; Leonard, Robert R., University Physician; Director, Student Health Service; Long, Richard S., Manager, University Bookstore; Morin, Bernice M., Director, Food Services; Owen, Glenn B., Director, Institutional Services; Parton, Robert R., Director, Housing; Ramsey, Charles A., II, Coordinator, Minority Student Programs; Reynolds, Gerald R., Controller; Rice, Charles W., Jr., Manager, User Services, Computer Services; Telin, Matt E., Registrar; Vetrus, Dean L., General Manager, ASU and Student Union; Warren, Jon G., General Counsel

Crime and Punishment

Can one man bend the law to make it fit his own moral image of the world?

It would appear that in Moscow this has come to pass.

District Judge Roy Mosman has built a barricade with the intent of slowing the tide of change here in Moscow. Behind that barricade he has carefully arranged all the elements of his personal concept of social order. His application of the law to the young offenders appearing in his court is based on that carefully arranged order.

Those offenders who please him with their personal interpretations of life find themselves basking in the warm merciful glow of his fatherly love and benediction.

But Judge Mosman is also a stern father. The errant youth who dares to contradict the Mosman flow of social logic will feel the severe hand of our stern father.

Brian Kincaid will spend the next nine months in the Latah County Jail for an offense which the state of Oregon punishes with a $5 fine.

The real issue here is not the severity of Brian's punishment. The issue is that Judge Mosman allowed his personal feelings to color his application of the law.

A father must be stern at times, but he must also be wise. Judge Mosman is an intelligent man but his wisdom in dealing with today's youth is handicapped. Like many others of his age, Judge Mosman finds the current social structure and seeming chaos of the world very unsettling to his own security. He feels that his social order is under constant attack and his arbitrary use of the law as a defensive weapon to assure his own security is bad for both the young offenders and for his community.

Mr. Mosman, in time your barricade will either be swept away or by-passed. The law will survive your misuse because of its very nature. And, sir, there will always be young men and women and the current social order will always be under attack.

Moscow has known some excellent judges. Among them was the late Mr. Felton. He was a man who dispensed justice as justice with a love of the past and faith in the future. MK

JIGS

Editors' note: A former resident of Moscow, who has returned after living in Seattle, JIGS will be writing a column once a week on a variety of subjects.

Seven years absent and now...home again. The most-asked question is, naturally, "how is it, to be home again?" Surprisingly, after the initial shock, worries and tears, many reasons surfaced and continue to grow strong as I begin Month Six in the "Dry Pea Capital of the World," former home of Blue Mountain, and present home of the financially-burdened University of Idaho (which, for those of you here in the late sixties, was considered the hotbed of radicalism in Idaho--remember Tom Hayden's visit in the Spring of '69). Enough, on to the reasons for feeling okay about returning:

Family.

A few good eating spots: The Seasons in Pullman, Pete's Hoseapples in Troy, and the Bacchus Room in Moscow.

A small theater reminiscent of Seattle's Movie House in its pre-fame days. By the way, some good films are playing. "All the President's Men" plays at the Micro Sept. 15-18 for those who missed it this summer and those who missed the "live uncoverage" in 1972-74. I saw "King of Hearts" in Seattle's Movie House (post-fame days). It's delightful and complete with a glowing gentleness to warm bodies from the inside on these beginning-to-be Fall evenings. MMH's description of "Buffalo Bill and the Indians" suggests a comedy which Cody's treatment of Native Americans and buffalo was certainly not. If the film is based on the play, "The Indians," it is a serious attack on Buffalo Bill's folk hero status and is worth seeing. "Seven Beauties" I mention because it is directed by Lina Wertmuller. Two of her films, "Mimi the Metalworker" and "Swept Away," left me with mixed feelings. If you want to laugh you will, but for those of you who only want to be entertained, be forewarned as Wertmuller's are usually message films.

On to Item Four: Moscow Food Co-op and with it some laid back people. The Co-op's selection includes grains, cheeses,

"To Market, To Market to buy a fat pig,
Home again, Home again, jiggy,
Jig." --Mother Goose

spices, produce and juices (wild black cherry, papaya, boysenberry, etc.). If you're a tentative guzzler, try the Unfiltered Apple Juice; (you'll be sold--at least on the Apple Juice.) With the birth of the Farmers' Market (after an abortive attempt the summer of '75 and a bit of labor this summer), a new dimension has been added. Try a Saturday morning walk to the Old Post Office and plan to stay to take full advantage of the good harvest, fine community and university folks, barter and banter. When the market is gone, the Co-op will still be going--so why not drop by. There's sure to be something to catch your eye or tempt your tastebuds.

Reason Five will be the last (always a nice feeling, those prime numbers). The scenery is beautiful. Am seeing it with new eyes--the rolling Palouse Hills, beautiful wildflowers and weeds, and clean (unlike Lake Washington) streams and lakes.

Lest I leave you sounding like a city slicker (with all my allusions to Seattle): of the past seven years, four were in Seattle and three in the Yakima Valley.

I am not sure where all this prattle will get me...or your reading of it get you. I would enjoy your comments and may even print some of them. I am amazed at how quickly the people with thinking, struggling, trying-to-grow minds find each other in this small community (oops, that's Reason Six).

I will leave you with a quote: "While there are still cranes in Hungary, poetry is bound to continue" (R. Graves)...And if poetry continues, Hungary will continue. Religion and politics are unnecessary to the culture--or the individual--that has poetry...man's primary problems aren't political; they're philosophical. Until humans can solve their philosophical problems, they're condemned to solve their political problems over and over and over again...there's got to be poetry...and magic...poetry and magic...at every level."

"Even Cowgirls Get the Blues"--Tom Robbins

Perhaps that's what this column is about--poetry and magic. JIGS

Letters

To the Editor:

For many years now America's colleges and universities have been governed by a principle known as "collegiality." This concept, unique to academe, assumes that faculty are not simply academic employees but also "co-managers" with "shared authority" in institutional administration. This is supposed to make America's intellectual laborers different from other workers, who have for the most part remained content to allow business executives full managerial prerogatives.

The sad fact is that America's college professors have actually had very little power as co-managers. A 1970 survey showed that the median participation of faculty in the governance of 1970 institutions was below "consultation." Faculty had final authority in one area only: the evaluation of students. The associate counsel of the AAUP, traditionally a strong advocate of collegiality, states "that the collegial system... (is) correctly perceived by many faculties as existing at best in form only."

But empty exercises in collegiality continue on all campuses, and Regent Ed Benoit's address before the University Faculty was a beautiful example. Benoit promised the U of I faculty that their campus was still number one in budget priorities; that an 18-person committee with only four faculty members would get the "right man" to represent 500 faculty; and that a personnel policy which eliminates peer review and reasons for dismissal of non-tenured faculty would save the State of Idaho money by preventing faculty suits against the regents.

It is very difficult for us to believe that we are still number one when we were the only Idaho school asked to make up an "execution list" for our already underfunded programs. The personnel policy--labelled unfair and unethical by the regents themselves--is an insult to human dignity.

Benoit's prediction that it will save tax dollars flies in the face of the fact that Larry Quinn, associate professor of history at LCSC, will soon be filing suit against the regents for arbitrary denial of tenure. The Idaho Federation of Teachers, the state's largest and strongest faculty organization, will be supporting Quinn morally and financially.

In all fairness the regents did decide to make cost-of-living raises top priority for the next legislative session, and we must take this, despite our general skepticism, as a move in good faith on their part. This, however, is quite a similar IFT proposal at the May regent's meeting met with stiff resistance, especially from Benoit himself.

Collegiality on Idaho's campuses remains essentially inoperative and blunt-speaking Benoit makes it no secret. Defending the personnel policy in early 1975, Benoit stated: "To put it bluntly, this proposal eliminates peer review and puts it (control) where it belongs--with the board." There is no hint of shared authority here, but strong reasons for us to move as quickly as possible toward collective bargaining for Idaho's college and university faculties.

On the passing of Mao

By NICHOLAS GIER

Mao Tse-tung is dead, but his legacy will profoundly shape the future of China for the next century. For quite understandable reasons, it is difficult for many Americans to objectively assess Mao's achievements. China's government is a dictatorship and the road to that political control is littered with the bodies of Buddhists, landlords, Nationalist officials, and missionaries.

There is no question that there were atrocities--how many and how bad we will never know. But is this our sole criterion for judging an acceptable government? If it is, we find ourselves immediately in serious contradictions. On his way to political power, Chiang Kai-shek was also the author of slaughter and liquidation. In 1927, with the help of organized crime in Shanghai, he was able to effectively eliminate the left-wing of the Nationalist Party. And in the March of 1947, his subordinates were responsible for the deaths of ten to twenty thousand dissident Taiwanese.

We are very fortunate: the American Revolution was one of the few world revolutions that did not involve systematic violence outside the bounds of normal armed conflict. The French Revolution of course was an entirely different matter, and the Federalists were just as anti-French then as the rightists are now anti-Mao.

Therefore, no matter how much we truly sympathize with the Dali Lama, we simply must get beyond the atrocities in order to make a fair assessment of Mao. In the areas of industry and agriculture there has been indisputable progress. The mainland Chinese are well-fed, clothed, and provided with more than adequate medical care.

Critics are quick to point out that there has been much more progress on Taiwan. These comparisons are misleading, mainly because of the fact that Taiwan had been a prosperous Japanese colony and remained comparatively untouched by the civil war. On the mainland, Mao had to rebuild a completely devastated country.

Philosophically, Mao's contributions are not what one would call original. He was a doctrinaire Marxist with some evidence of creative synthesis with traditional thought. Searching out contradictions in all things, being polemical, and self-reliant are definitely not old Chinese virtues. But the way in which Mao had inculcated his philosophy is certainly traditional. The Chinese are used to being told what to do; Confucianism places heavy emphasis on what the "books" say. Therefore, there is a subtle but important link between Confucians faithfully following the classics and Maoists reciting from the little Red Book.

Our final assessment of Mao must be mixed. On the negative side, even the most sympathetic visitors are squeamish about the regimentation and indoctrination, especially among the children. Any person raised in the Western liberal tradition must remain unalterably opposed to political repression and liquidation, although for diplomatic reasons we must be friends, even allies. On the positive side, China is finally and completely in the hands of the Chinese people, not Western imperialism or one of its agents. China has finally regained the integrity that it had before opening its doors to the West in the 1850's. As the Christian Science Monitor phrased it: Chinese "society is unified, orderly, and disciplined. People's energies are bent toward national goals that will benefit all."

Mao Tse-tung

Chairman Mao dies

It came as no surprise when Mao Tse-Tung, Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party, died early Thursday morning at age 82. Hsinhuya, the official Chinese news agency, said Mao died of natural causes as the result of a long period of failing health.

There have been indications for some time that Mao was not in day-to-day control of the country because of his deepening illness and that many actions were taken by others in his name. However, the recent demotion and firing of former Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping was widely believed to have been at Mao's direction, indicating he still held enormous power.

It is not known who will replace Mao as Chairman, and there is considerable speculation. No designated successor was provided for while Mao was alive, even though his imminent death has been expected for some time. The party constitution provides that a plenary session of the 195-member Central Committee elects the new chairman.

Among those in the running could be Premier Hau Kuo-feng, Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, a leader of the radical faction of the party; her proteges, Vice Premier Chang Chun-chiao, Wang Hungwen (the youngest possible successor at 42), and Yao Wen-yuan; party vice chairman and defense minister Yeh Chien-ying; and Chen Hsiliu, commander of Peking units of the 3 1/2 million-man Liberation Army. Wang is also a vice chairman of the party.

Mao was born in the village of Shaoshan in Hunan Province December 26, 1893 to peasant parents. While still a young man, he became one of the 13 founding members of the Chinese Communist party in 1921. He was 42 and at the peak of physical and mental powers when he assumed leadership of the party in 1935 during its harrowing 8,000 mile "Long March" from the east coast to Yen-an in Shensi province. Civil war broke out in 1946, and three years later Mao proclaimed the People's Republic from the high red walls of the Forbidden City in Peking. Since then, he has been virtual ruler.

Idaho faces BSU in opener

By JIM BORDEN

Big Sky conference defending football champions, the Boise State Broncos, are hoping to set an unprecedented record by winning their fourth straight league title. To do so this year, however, they must get past a greatly improved U of I squad in the team's season opener tomorrow in Boise.

"If we are to beat the Vandals, it must be done with proper fundamentals and techniques—we must have balance in our attack. We have to keep them off-balance so they can't use their size to their advantage," according to rookie BSU head coach Jim Criner.

His staff is concerned about testing its inexperienced defensive line against a big Vandal offensive line. "We will be playing against a much bigger and more physical team, and I'm worried about controlling the line of scrimmage," Criner said.

The Broncos, however, will have linebackers in the game who are all returning lettermen, which may make it difficult for the Vandals to run.

Offensively, the Boise team will start sophomore quarterback Dee Picket, a 6-1, 186-pound scrabler from Caldwell, Idaho, as well as sophomore running-back, Fred Goode, 5-11, 170, and freshman fullback Shawn Beaton, 5-11, 217.

The Bronco offensive line averages around 230 pounds and is composed of juniors and seniors. They will be attempting to open holes in a hungry Vandal defensive line which Vandal boss Ed Troxel says has made great progress.

"The strength of our defense will be the key to the game against Boise," said Troxel. He said the Broncos have greatly skilled players who are threats to score from anywhere on the field. "They must be contained," Troxel said.

Troxel will start four seniors, six juniors, and one sophomore in the defensive lineup, including strong safety Barry Hopkins, a Vandal tri-captain, and tough linebackers Kjel Kiilgaard, a junior, and John Kirtland, a senior and another tri-captain.

But the cloud to watch thundering in the distance is the Vandal offense. Having led the Big Sky last year in rushing and ranking second in total offense, the vandals boast a mighty offensive line, anchored by All-America candidate John Yarno at center, and a lightning-quick backfield led by sophomore signal caller Rocky Tuttle and running back Robert Brooks.

Tim Lappano impressed coaches last year and will start at the fullback spot. The sophomore is 5-9, 180.

So it will be a young backfield and an experienced offensive line which will tangle with the Broncos tomorrow. Four seniors, Yarno, tri-captain Wil Overgaard, a left tackle, Clarence Hough, right guard, and Kittrell, right tackle, are the "old men" on the offense who may decide the game's outcome.

The game is said to be a sellout with 20,000 fans expected to view the game. Attendance at Saturday night's game could come close to the all-time state of Idaho mark for a collegiate contest. In 1947, 22,500 fans jammed old Neale Stadium on the UI campus to watch the "Battle of the Palouse," a game won 7-0 by WSU.

The Women's Intercollegiate Basketball and Tennis are having their preseason organizational meetings. The basketball meeting will be Sept. 14 at 4 p.m. at WHEB room 200.

Any full-time woman student who is interested in competing on the intercollegiate level may contact Ms. Bonnie Hultstrand, who will coach both basketball and tennis, at WHEB room 105 or phone 885-7921.

Vandals predicted Big Sky champs

By CRAIG CARTER

Sports Illustrated magazine has not been known in the past for making accurate predictions. This year they predicted the U of I Vandals football team to take the Big Sky Conference championship. I think Sports Illustrated might be right for a change.

The Vandals appear to have most of the tools to provide them with their first championship since 1971. The time since then and now has not been a high spot as far as the win-loss column goes.

A winning season would no doubt please coach Ed Troxel, his coaching staff, Vandal boosters, student fans and the players themselves. But consider some of the opponents the Vandals will face in comparison to the other in-state Big Sky schools.

The Vandals play Pacific-Eight Athletic Conference member and rival Washington State, New Mexico State from the Missouri Valley Conference, Ohio University from the Mid-American Conference and Colorado State from the Western Athletic Conference.

Boise State faces Augustana College (from South Dakota if you were wondering), Cal-Poly SLO and Humboldt State. Idaho State gets a crack at Cal-Poly SLO too and Portland State.

You can see the Vandals play a much more quality schedule than our other in-state rivals. Granted, Idaho is a Division I school where Boise and Idaho St. are Division 2, yet the chances of winning would seem better when playing a Cal-Poly or a Portland State than a member of an established powerhouse conference as the Pac-8 or the W.A.C.

I don't mean to imply that our rivals in the state aren't quality teams. Idaho found out last year the caliber of the two squads losing to I.S.U. and tying B.S.U.

The Vandals will deserve an extra pat on the back if they do accomplish a winning season and take a Big Sky crown. It will take a great effort to do both and I have a hunch they know it with the opener at Boise coming up.

Offensively, the Vandals look to be one of the tops in the conference. No offensive line in the conference has the talent or the potential as the Vandals. The running game relies on excellent depth of players that could start for anybody in the league.

A major factor in the Vandals road to success will be the play of the defense. Last season was one of ups and downs. If the defense comes around and improves week by week, the Vandals chances for winning will look better and better. BSU has never lacked a high-power offense and looks good again this year.

Looking ahead to the first game many people see quite an offensive show in store. I think it will be a tough time for the Vandals as new B.S.U. coach Jim Criner makes his debut in a town that has grown accustomed to winning seasons. I think it will be a tougher time for Boise State. It will be an intense, hard hitting game with the hungriest team eating the spoils of victory. I say it will be Idaho 34, Boise St. 28.

An interesting evening in Boise...

By BILL KIRTLAND

Tomorrow's season opener with Boise State promises to be another hard-hitting rematch in the young but fierce intrastate rivalry.

BSU holds a 3-1 advantage in the five game series with last year's contest ending in a 31-31 tie. Both teams left the field disappointed.

Not quite a year has passed, but for players and fans alike the time seems a little longer.

Some interesting changes have been made since the last encounter of these two teams.

The game was originally scheduled for November 27 of this year. BSU asked to change dates because the Idaho game would have conflicted with the Division II post season playoffs which the Broncos plan to be in.

Gone is Tony Knap the brains behind the ruthless offense that became the class of the Big Sky Conference. Graduation hit the Broncos hard with the loss of the versatile John Smith and numerous other All Conference performers.

Jim Criner, a former assistant coach at UCLA was named to replace Knap.

Criner brought with him a new defense, 5-2 Oklahoma, and a new offense, an adaption of the Veer T.

The annual spring game against the BSU Alumni had to make even the most ardent Bronco Booster look the other way. Plagued by injuries, the Broncos turned in a dismal performance.

While few Boise fans are willing to discuss internal problems, team dissention is a reality. Bob Cleveland and others have left the Criner camp. Cleveland was one of the toughest backs in the conference last season.

Controversy mounted around the quarterback position.

Greg Stern a top signal caller in Division II lost the starting job to Dee Pickett. Pickett has yet to call a play in conference action. Joining Pickett as first year starters will be Steve Woodward at tight end and running backs Fred Goode, and Shawn Beaton.

It is no wonder street talk in Boise is not of the usual over confident type. If Bronco fans aren't worried they better be, and those that are have good reason to feel that way.

While Boise is not as strong as they have been in the past, they are not to be underestimated. The Vandal players and coaches have expressed nothing but respect for the Bronco Team.

Idaho has one of the strongest teams in recent history. The kicking game and offense have looked good. The Vandals return a veteran defense who are hungry to prove themselves, after last year's inexperience. The Idaho defense will be the key to the outcome of the game. It should be an interesting evening in Boise.

Football profile focuses on Yarno

By CRAIG CARTER

Most eyes at a football game follow the man with the football. This means quarterbacks, running backs and receivers are the guys who are watched by the fans since they usually have the football. One man who always has the football yet seldom has the attention of the fans is the center. The one player who sets the entire offense into motion is often overlooked. The second the football leaves his hands so do all those thousands of eyes.

Although the efforts of offensive linemen are often overlooked, the picture might change this year as Vandal center John Yarno leads an offensive line considered the best in the Big Sky conference.

Yarno has been setting offenses into motion by snapping the football for eight years. He played at Gonzaga Prep and Ferris High Schools in Spokane. It seems playing center runs in the family as Yarno's father and uncle played center for Gonzaga Prep. Yarno's younger brother, George, is a defensive standout at Washington State playing noseguard.

When Yarno came to Idaho as a freshman, he was nicknamed "the rope" because he stood 6 ft. 4 inches and weighed 195 lbs. Today the "rope" enlarged into a massive 6 ft. 5 inches and weighs 240 lbs.

This will be the third year that Yarno will be the center for the Vandals. This year could be the finest year for Yarno and the Vandals and already pressure is being felt. "I feel I'm under pressure because I haven't proved myself yet. I have to do a good job this year," Yarno added.

Some of the pressure Yarno feels should be relieved by other three year starters that have been playing alongside him like offensive guard Clarence Hough, and tackles Will Overgaard and Greg Kittrell. "It makes things easier when you have been playing together for a time. Clarence and I have been playing side by side for three years now and I know where we will be at on the field at all times," Yarno said.

Last season the offensive line moved the opposition enough to lead the Big Sky Conference in rushing. With the experience coming back they stand a good chance to repeat that performance.

Yarno gives offensive line coach John McMahon a lot of credit. "He made us what we are today. He taught me everything I know and he's an excellent coach." McMahon has developed a solid offensive line that will be tested this year. With talent at running back Idaho has the offensive line will be counted on to open holes for them.

The first test will be a hard one. "Boise State game could make or break our season. It's too bad to put everything on one game but they've been Big Sky champs for three years," Yarno said.

There will be a lot of pressure on Yarno this season. But if you like to see where football games are won and lost, keep your eyes on him and the offensive line this season.

The Palouse Empire Mall will be opening Sept. 28, according to the mall's developer. Rosauer's and Pay n' Save expect to open first, with the rest of the stores opening a month later.

Palouse Mall: "Horn of Plenty"

The Palouse Empire Mall, under construction on university land northwest of the U of I campus is scheduled to open in less than three weeks, according to a Spokane developer.

Earl McCarthy, developer, says two stores in the facility, Rosauer's and Pay 'n Save should be ready to open by Sept. 28, while another business, K-Mart should be ready about a month later.

McCarthy and the city of Moscow had a dispute this summer over utility lines serving the facility, which city Engineer Bill Smith said didn't meet certification standards.

Since last May, when Smith informed the city council that the water lines at the facility didn't hold water, sewer and water systems have been brought up to standards. Both Smith and McCarthy say a few small utility problems still exist but neither think it will postpone opening the mall.

McCarthy said the complaints from the city engineer weren't his biggest problems.

McCarthy said other problems this year, including bad weather and financial troubles of the mall's contract postponed completion of the facility longer than the complaints from the city engineer.

He said the financial difficulties have been worked out and a local company is handling paving of the mall which will be one of the last steps before opening of the facility.

The developer will meet with store owners after basic work is done to determine what construction will be carried on after the facility opens.

He said about 60 additional days construction work will be needed after the mall opens, which is "about normal" for a project of that size.

The weather this spring and summer has been "ridiculous", McCarthy said, pointing out the early fall opening date was set in May, and hasn't been moved back, despite construction problems.

The mall, located on 40 acres of university land should have two more department stores, and a motel-convention center within two years, he said.

Negotiations continue with major store owners, according to McCarthy, and Robert Templin, a Coeur d'Alene motel owner is planning on opening the convention facility when financing and a liquor license is secured.

After spaces in the mall are filled, McCarthy said, a covering in the center of the facility will be built.

Under the terms of the agreement with the university, McCarthy will collect 92 per cent of the rents which come from the center, and the buildings in the facility will revert to the university in 60 years.

Ballet Folk and Guild work to show dance as art form

By SUSAN SAMPLE

Countering the typical red-white-and-blue fervor of the Bicentennial, Moscow's Ballet Folk offers a new interpretation: We are an endangered species, losing touch with the world of nature and ourselves.

As part of the Bicentennial Parade of Idaho's Music, Ballet Folk will perform the symbolic ballet "Requiem" Tuesday, September 14 at 8 p.m. in the U of I Auditorium. From there, they will travel to Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, Boise, Philadelphia, and Washington D.C. where a final performance will be presented in the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Recapturing the revitalistic spirit of the American Indian Ghost Dance, artistic director Jeannette Allyn choreographed contemporary dance steps to music matching the primitive theme composed by William Billingsley, U of I professor of music. This marks the first time the work of a local composer has been used by the Company.

The Ballet Folk is Idaho's professional dance company in residence. Designed to travel and perform for communities both large and small, the Company adheres to the belief that dance is an art for the people. Accordingly, their repertoire includes a variety of dances from classical ballet to American ballet. Western themes are a favorite.

"I get goose bumps every time I watch them," commented one enthusiastic supporter. Although financed by income from performances, grants, school tuition, and contributions, Ballet Folk receives substantial support from the community. People appreciate and encourage the company. "Even small towns like Kellogg support them, which seems like an unlikely place. You know they must have something."

Six years ago in the brick building on Third Street, which currently houses the the Sheep Shop, Carl Petrick and Jeannette Allyn opened the Moscow Dance Theatre. After several relocations due to the increasing size of classes, the husband-wife team decided to start a professional company in addition to the theatre. That was in 1972. Two years later, both the Company and theatre moved to Ridenbaugh Hall at the U of I at which time the theatre became the Ballet Folk School.

Due to the complexity of Ballet Folk, a corporation was formed in 1974. Along with the Board of Directors, it administers both aspects of Ballet Folk, the dance company and school, fulfilling legal functions and responsibilities.

Essential to the operation of Ballet Folk is another group, the Guild. When costumes must be sewn at the last minute, receptions planned or fund-raising projects organized the Guild comes to the rescue. This volunteer group of 40 to 50 members provides the much-needed work behind the scenes.

"Ballet is a young art. It requires a lot of stamina and training. Most dancers start at age eight," noted Joan Muneta, administrative assistant for Ballet Folk. Attesting to this, the twelve dancers belonging to the professional company range in age from early to mid-twenties. "Men don't dance on point, however, and they can start later in life," she added. Of the troupe, eight are women and four are men.

Interestingly, only one dancer can boast of an Idaho hometown. The background of the other members spans the nation, including Chicago, Minneapolis, Ohio, and New York.

Last summer, Ballet Folk Company, in cooperation with the Idaho Dance Arts Alliance sponsored a six week workshop for the first time. Attracting 100 students, mostly of high school age, the workshop brought in four guest teachers presenting a variety of dancing techniques. Mary Anthony from New York taught classes in modern dance while Pamela Johnson from Chicago instructed students in ballet. Jazz and character dancing were taught by Candy Foley and Ny Somers from San Francisco also taught classes in modern dance. Due to the success of the workshops, the Company hopes to repeat the program next summer.

Thirteen states were toured last year by the Company, and this year the projected schedule covers 17,000 miles. The fall season will see the dancers in eastern Oregon, Wyoming, Washington, and Idaho.

As part of the Bicentennial Parade of Idaho's Music, Ballet Folk will have the opportunity to tour the eastern cities, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C.

September 21 has been declared "Idaho Day" in the nation's capitol and a special program has been arranged in a school on Idaho Street. "Hoedown," a ballet in the spirit of the Old West, will be performed at that time. Another activity scheduled is a luncheon with the Congressional Delegation and Governor Andrus.

Closer to home, Moscow's Mayor Paul Mann will proclaim the week of September 13 through 21 as "Ballet Folk Week" to honor the Company. During that week, on September 20, the Guild has arranged a special quilting display and demonstration to be held in the SUB Ballroom at the U of I. The highlights of the afternoon will be a talk by Pearl Wheaton, a native of the Palouse area, who has been a quilter since her childhood. She will discuss quilt patterns and what they mean, using a collection of thirty quilts she intends to bring with her.

A display of books on quilting is to be sponsored by the Bookpeople and the Moscow Public Library. David's, a local department store, will display a variety of supplies used in the art.

Exhibited for the first time, that same afternoon, will be a quilt collectively made by the members of the Guild. Thirty squares in red, white, and blue carry out an American theme with the unusual addition of a ballet dancer in the middle. This unique bed covering will be raffled in November at the Octoberfest, an arts and crafts fair to be held at the Fairgrounds. A German band will add a lively touch to the festival along with the Ballet Folk Dancers.

Besides the Ballet Folk Company, there is the Ballet Folk School. Beginning at age four, students may enroll in the various classes offered. The school operates in cooperation with the U of I, and credit may be received for the ballet classes. Other special dance classes are also offered which include Yoga, Tai Chi, Oriental, and Polynesian dancing.

Biker tells of cross country journey

By E. SUE JUDY

One look at her tan would tell most people that the well-browned freshman has spent her summer loafing on the beach.

Which shows that they ought to look again.

Part of Lori Colhoff's summer may have been spent near the water, but the greater portion was spent riding in the mountains, farmlands, plains and forests of America's Bikecentennial Trail.

Lori was one of approximately 2000 riders who traveled the cross-continental trail in groups of 10-14 during June, July and August. Lori's group left Reedsport, Ore., June 8 and traveled an assortment of main highways and back roads, arriving in Yorktown, Va., on Aug. 23.

The recreation major from Sandpoint, Ida., said the trip's most overpowering obstacles were not physical ones. "You don't really have to be that strong, you just have to have the mental power to keep yourself going," she said.

She told of the long "roller coaster" ride in high humidity through Missouri's Ozarks. She also told of riding across Wyoming with a 35-40 mile per hour head wind and of crossing Lolo Pass in numbing cold. Those parts of the trip, she said, were tests of mental stamina.

Passing the test, however, had rewards, she said. She related that she had a great feeling of exhilaration after making it to the tops of mountains and knowing, "I made it!"

Colhoff said that in the cross-country trip, "You get a better feeling of exactly how big this country is... There were times when you just felt like you could get swallowed up and no one would even know you were gone."

The biker said the trip gave her some idea of how early cross-continental travellers must have felt but added, "I came to the conclusion I wouldn't have made it as an early pioneer." She explained that paved roads, grocery stores and other modern conveniences added greatly to her comfort.

Even with modern conveniences often at hand, Lori said she had to adjust to "life on the road." She said she was sore the first week and a half, tired the first three to four weeks and "everything looked so much different from the seat of a bicycle than from the inside of a car."

However, biking became a lifestyle and Lori had several readjustments to make to what she called "civilian life." She said the riders became so used to camping out that sleeping in a bed felt odd. She told of renting a motel room in Richmond, Va., and leaving the two double beds vacant while the bikers slept on the floor in sleeping bags.

She also said she grew accustomed to burning 6,000 calories per day and eating accordingly on a semi-health food diet. She now has to readjust to normal eating habits.

Lori made several recommendations for future cross-country cyclists. She said not to go without fenders, as the bike's tires flip water into packs and shoes. She suggested starting out with a better physical conditioning than she had.

Colhoff also suggested going with a friend. She said that groups were "thrown together" and that while members of her group were "tolerant" of one another, other groups met with chaos and eventual break up.

Lori said she had mixed feelings of disappointment and relief at the end of the trip. She said, "I just wanted to see for myself if I could do it." She did.

But the end of the trip is not the end of the trail for Lori Colhoff. The Bikecentennial simply whetted her appetite for more biking and other outdoor adventure. She looks forward to other summers and other roads, like Alaska or Baja or Europe.

Bikecentennial rider Lori Colhoff's cycling is now confined to the U of I campus and surrounding area ... for the time being. Argonaut/Steve Davis

The Hewlett-Packard first family of calculators are in a class by themselves.

Hewlett-Packard built the world's first advanced pocket calculator back in 1972. And led the way ever since.

Today, Hewlett-Packard calculators are recognized as The First Family by more than one million owners worldwide. Including Nobel Prize winners, USA-USSR astronauts, explorers, educators, scientists, businessmen, and students. Here's why:

First family design.

Hewlett-Packard was first — and continues to lead — in the translation of state-of-the-art technology into advanced calculators.

First family performance.

Hewlett-Packard means the kind of performance that includes RPN logic with four-memory stack, a full range of advanced functions, and much, much more.

First family reliability.

When you buy a Hewlett-Packard calculator you get one year's protection on parts and labor. And a two working-day turn-around on most repairs.

First family support.

Every calculator comes with its own comprehensive Owner's Handbook. In addition, a complete selection of optional accessories increases the versatility of the calculator of your choice. Hewlett-Packard offers more because Hewlett-Packard's got more to offer.

Free booklet while supplies last.

"What To Look For Before You Buy An Advanced Calculator" helps you make a wise purchasing decision. Pick up your free copy at your campus bookstore. Or telephone 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) toll-free for the name of your nearest dealer.

HP-21 Scientific.

New low price — $80.00***

The HP-21 makes short work of the technical calculations even so-called "non-technical" courses require. If you need a calculator that does more than simple arithmetic — this is it — especially at its new low price.

- 32 built-in functions and operations.
- Performs all standard log and trig functions (in radians or degrees).
- Performs rectangular/polar conversion, register arithmetic and more.
- Addressable memory.
- Two display modes: Fixed point and scientific.

HP-22 Business Management. $165.00*

The HP-22 easily handles the kinds of calculations you face in business courses today, in management tomorrow. Breeze through business math calculations. Build existing statistical data into reliable forecasts. If you're going into business administration, this is the calculator for you.

- Combines financial, mathematical and statistical capabilities.
- Performs complex time-value-of-money computations including interest rates.
- Performs rates of return and discounted cash flows for investment analysis.
- Performs extended percent calculations, accumulated interest, amortization, etc.
- Ten addressable memories.
- Full decimal display control.

HP-25C Scientific Programmable with Continuous Memory. $200.00*

The HP-25C is our keystroke programmable. It can solve automatically the repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces. What's more, Continuous Memory lets you retain programs and data even when it's turned off.

- Continuous memory capability.
- 72 built-in functions and operations.
- Keystroke programmability.
- Branching, conditional test and full editing capability.
- Eight addressable memories.
- We also offer the HP-25, (without the Continuous Memory feature) for $145.00*

HP-27 Scientific/Plus. $200.00*

The HP-27 is for the science or engineering student — whose course work extends into business administration. The reason: It features every pre-programmed scientific function we've ever offered, plus comprehensive stat and financial functions. Thus the name: Scientific/Plus.

- 28 pre-programmed exponential, log and trig functions.
- 15 statistical functions, 10 financial functions — 53 in all.
- 10 addressable memories — 20 memories in all.
- 6 selective clearing options gives flexible use of memories.
- Fixed decimal, scientific or engineering display formats.

Moscow dogcatchers...their job is protection

By BILL LOFTUS

There's a blue and white van with a blue bubble on top that cruises the streets of Moscow with the persistence of a hungry predator. Maybe you've seen it and haven't known what it was or maybe you've found out what it does the hard way. The van belongs to the City of Moscow and serves as their dogcatcher's wagon.

There are three dogcatchers in Moscow: two are pre-vet students at the U of I and the other is a third year student in Veterinary Medicine at WSU. All three are part-time workers, and each works about 20 hours a week. They work on staggered shifts and do most of their patrolling around the residential sections.

About the only time they are on campus is in response to complaints called in by faculty or students. Police can answer those complaints as they are authorized to pick up loose dogs or deal with dog problems. The van that the dog catchers drive is not equipped with mace, guns, or net so they have to coax any loose dogs to them in order to capture them.

There is no quota system that the dog catchers must follow to keep their jobs. The main purpose of dog catchers, according to the vet student, is to protect other peoples' property and to see that loose dogs are not hit by cars or stolen from their masters. Most of the owners seem to see it that way too.

The Moscow Dog Pound is a concrete block building at the end of White Avenue on the east side of town. The pound has nine cages in it, but is seldom full. A few dogs are given overdoses of tranquilizing drugs to put them to sleep, but that is seldom done either. The pound, formerly a house, has a furnace in it that is turned on when the weather is cold. The dogs are fed and watered twice a day while impounded.

Usually the first time a dog is found loose the owner gets a warning, but irate owners may end up with a citation. If the owner cannot be located or contacted, the dog is impounded. Board is set at a dollar a day at the pound. The impoundment fees vary, however. For the first impoundment the fee is $5, the second costs $10, and the third cost (and subsequent ones) is $20.

If the dog is unlicensed and the owner lives in Moscow, then a license must also be bought. The owner has seven days to claim the dog after which the dog may be given away or put to sleep.

Several improvements were made at the pound this summer: the building was given a new coat of white paint, the windows were repaired and sheathed in steel screening, and the rickety wooden garage door was replaced by a steel door. The latter two may have been in response to an attempt at canine liberation which occurred last year, in which the liberator kicked in one of the old door's panels.

The pound has no set hours, but a dog can be claimed at the police station in City Hall, and when an officer becomes available he can accompany the claimer out to the pound and release the dog. No shots are given at the pound, but dogs with obvious symptoms of distemper or rabies are removed to a local vet's office for isolation. Most dogs come out of the pound healthy, according to those involved with it.

The basic license fees in Moscow are $3 a year for male or spayed female dogs and $5 a year for unspayed females. These fees are in effect for the first two months of the first year of ownership, or of residence; after that period the fees double. The owners may be cited for a license-less dog at any time.

When a dogcatcher spots a loose dog there are four steps to follow: one is to make sure that the dog is on someone else's property, two is to coax the dog to him, three is to check for a license or other identification, and the fourth is to try to locate and contact the owner.

When an owner is cited for a loose dog, a $15 bond must be paid and the matter is brought before a district court judge.

Complaints about dogs on campus usually result from tied dogs barking outside of classrooms and are called in by faculty or students.

Complaints from townspeople are usually because of property damage or because dogs are tied too close to doorways in public places and people are afraid to walk by them.

There are presently six dogs at the pound. The dogcatchers usually bring in from three to four dogs a week, and some are left off in outside cages at the pound by owners who no longer want them. The dogs seem to belong to about an equal percentage of students and townspeople, and about half are purebreds, according to a dogcatcher who has been on the job since June. Before a dog is destroyed, it is usually advertised on KRPL, an AM radio station in Moscow.

If a mad dog is spotted, all the dogcatchers can do is to try to keep people away from it and call the police for help.

After hearing about all the heavy fines, bonds, and license fees there is one lighter consideration for dog owners in Moscow.

According to Chief Hudson of the Moscow Police Department, the "leash law" is not strictly enforced. The dog simply has to be under control (not tearing up someone's property), to be responsive to voice commands to be considered under control, and exempt from wearing a leash.

Women's Center open

The Women's Center is nothing to be afraid of: it's no more a militant fist-shaking organization than it is an exclusive sexist hide-out, according to its directors. Funded by fifty cents from each female student's registration fees, the center maintains an informal atmosphere open to all. On hand for use by students are a resources file, containing information on subjects ranging from birth control to employment opportunities, a lending library, and current issues of periodicals.

Special programs coming up include a report on the Women's Healing Conference, Tuesday; Single Parent's House, Wednesday; Feminist Psycho-therapy, Tuesday, September 21; Edible Wild Plants, Wed. Sept. 22. All programs are scheduled for the noon hour. The center is there to help in any way possible, the coffee is always hot and the ears always open. If you need a place to hang out and relax, stop by. You won't find any political rallies going on, just plain folks interested in making the world a better place to live. Open 8 to 5 weekdays.

Police forum on KUOI

A police forum sponsored by the ASUI Senate will be next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Cataldo room of the SUB.

Representatives from campus security, the administration, and the ASUI will be there to answer questions.

Broadcast over KUOI, students will be able to call in questions. KUOI's number is 885-6392.

Register deadline today

Today is the last day for students to register late without petition or fee. It is the final day to drop or add a class, and not have the change appear on your record. Today is also the last day to change from the regular grading system to the pass-fail option, according to Matt Telin, University registrar.

Beer on Golf Course possible

An effort is underway by the ASUI to engineer a modification in the City of Moscow beer ordinance, to allow the golden brew on the ASUI Golf Course.

The change would allow the 18 hole, student owned golf course to sell beer on its premises. David Warnick, ASUI President, feels that the revision could also enable the course to become somewhat self supporting.

Last year, the students of this university subsidized the operation of the course to the tune of $18,000. It is Warnick's hope that this subsidy could be eliminated within three years of a ruling in favor of the issuance of a license for the sale of beer.

As the ordinance now stands, no such license can be issued to any bar or lounge located outside the boundaries of a Common Business District, Light Industrial Zone, Light Industrial District, or Motor Service District. The ASUI Golf Course is zoned as a residential district.

The various legal aspects of the alcohol on campus issue have been brought to district court in Ada county. The outcome is pending. Until the suit is decided, Moscow Mayor Paul Mann insists that the city cannot take any action. Warnick contends that the city is merely stalling.

"Right now, it is a considerable problem," stated Mann. "With the suit that the students have filed against the state, we really don't know what the city will do when it's settled," the mayor continued.

Warnick expressed cautious optimism about the eventual decision of the issue. In April of 1975, the Board of Regents vetoed a change in the overall liquor policy governing the University, 4 to 2. Later, a proposal concerning the sale of beer on the golf course was defeated by a vote of 3 to 3, indicating that the Regents may not be adamantly against the change.

Interviews to be held

Positions on student-faculty committees are still open according to Ralph Fortunato, ASUI academics manager.

Fortunato said, "If students are not on these committees, it will be administrators that will make the decisions that affect students."

Any student, including graduate students can apply.

Committee openings include the academic hearing board (graduate position), affirmative action, audiovisual services, bookstore advisory committee (graduate position), commencement, cultural exchange, fine arts, library affairs (graduate position), officer education, recreation, safety, student services, traffic committee, university curriculum committee (graduate position), and the university judicial committee.

In addition there are two positions on the graduate council and several openings for committees in the college of letters and science.

Interviews will be held Sept. 13-17 in the ASUI office from 9-5 and on Sept. 15 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the senate office.

Police may affect Moscow deliveries

Recent court rulings and a new policy by the Moscow Police Department may effect mail deliveries in downtown Moscow, and on the U of I campus.

In a recent letter to local government agencies, police chief Clark Hudson said court decisions will force the department to issue citations to all vehicles parked in violation of the law.

Such a policy would apply to state and county vehicles, as well as to the Post Office, which often double parks its vehicles, if a parking space isn't available while making a delivery.

Postmaster Howard Buchanan said he has noticed no change in enforcement since the policy was announced and the post office is waiting to see how strongly the police will enforce the regulations.

Hudson said the letter was primarily meant to apply to parking meter regulations which must be enforced equally against all violators.

He said the policy of allowing delivery vehicles to double park in the central business district until 11 o'clock every morning remains unchanged, as does the practice of encouraging delivery's to be made from alleyways.

There is no limit on when a delivery vehicle may double park in residential areas or on campus, if no convenient parking space is available, according to Hudson.

The police chief emphasized that regulations against parking in restricted areas are enforced against anyone, and he added that any motorist who causes an accident by being illegally parked can be held liable for damages.

Buchanan said the Post Office is concerned that if a change in policy comes about it will be enforced against everyone.

The city will have some trouble from the post office, Buchanan said, if government vehicles are cited and "the produce truck that blocks the entrance to the post office every day" is left alone.

23 1/2 HOURS A DAY KUOI FM NEVER STOPS

A recent study by the University of Idaho Cosmology and Astrophysics Department has determined that 23.4985693 hours is a more appropriate and accurate measure of the period of time represented by the term "day" in respect to the movements of masses within the universe at large. In keeping with our tradition of ever progressive programming the staff of KUOI FM has decided to adopt the new and more accurate standard of reference in order to better provide the students of the University of Idaho with continuous information and entertainment whenever they turn on their radios. ## Reggae music: To be good, it's got to be real

By SCOTT WESTWOOD

I'm sure most of you reading this are aware of the excitement that is being created by Jamaican reggae music. In fact, it is the hottest item in the music press at present. It even made the cover of Time magazine. However, I've gotten the impression that while everyone knows what reggae is, not many have actually heard it. It is well worth listening to, as it has a definite tendency to grow on the listener.

There are two albums I would recommend to those who want to get a taste of actual reggae. The first, "Catch a Fire," by Bob Marley and the Wailers is their best album. It is well-played and produced. The cuts "Concrete Jungle," "400 Years," and "Kinky Reggae" are the best, blending in a lead guitar that is more in evidence than in most reggae with the basics that make up reggae: a steady, repetitious beat that is accented on the second rather than the first beat, an expressive organ part, the everpresent bass on the fringes, and an interesting mixture of blues, gospel and dialect in the vocals.

The lyrics range from attacks on social oppression and political repression to reaffirmation in faith in the Rastafarian religion. The vocals and lyrics are especially good on this album--on others they are less intelligible and contain more dialect and slang.

The second album I would suggest is the soundtrack to "The Harder They Come," the film about reggae and the culture it grew out of. The record is a collection of songs that were hits on the charts in Jamaica, and in that respect it can be considered a more representative reggae album than that of the Wailers. Jimmy Cliff, who played the lead in the movie, is excellent on the title song and on "You Can Get It If You Really Want." Toots and the Maytals, who are second in popularity only to the Wailers, have two songs in which they show their style of concentrating on the vocals rather than the music.

The rest of the artists aren't big names, but the same feeling is evident in their music which is less produced and therefore more authentic.

A word of caution: Don't be tricked into buying cheap imitation commercial reggae.

There are several albums out by groups who claim to play reggae music which actually are nothing more than Latin Pop. Make sure you get the real thing.

Doobie Brothers at Idaho

The Doobie Brothers have tentatively been signed to appear in concert here Oct. 20, according to Ed Gladder, Palouse Entertainment Associates vice-president.

Gladder said they have received information that the Doobie Brothers agreed to appear here, but he said these type of agreements have fallen through before. Gladder said they expect to know for sure next week.

Orienteering course set

A course entitled curricular orienteering (Gen. Stud. 200) is now recruiting students for this semester. The two credit, pass-fail class trains students as academic advisors for employment within the university or careers in psychological counselling fields. This is the second year the course has been offered and as a result several student academic advisors are available in room 223 of the UCC for any problems a student may have. The advisors are well trained in communication, university catalogue regulations, major fields of study, and external credit opportunities. This program is not meant to replace the faculty advisors, but to supplement them

Album Preview

The following are some of the albums which will be previewed between today and Tuesday on KUOI-FM, 89.3 at 10 p.m.

Fri., Sept. 10--PETE CARR--Not A Word On It

Pete Carr has been a session guitarist of some notability for several years now, doing most of his work out of the Muscle Shoals Studios in Alabama. His best effort that I have heard to date was his work on Jim Capaldi's album "Whale Meat Again", and although this album has its moments, I still like the former album better. Carr can sound alternately like Jeff Beck, or Eric Clapton, mostly depending on the mood of the song. But he never really does find a sound that I could call original, although his playing of other styles can be very good. For instance, listen to the opening cut of the album, and I think you'll agree that it's almost a dead ringer for Beck's "Cause We've Ended As Lovers", which, if you're going to cop someone else's riffs, isn't a bad choice at all. The rest of the album is good background music, shining in some spots, dragging in others. And, as the title says, there's not a word on it.

Sat., Sept. 11--FLO AND EDDIE--Moving Targets

After their last album, "Immoral, Illegal and Fattening", Flo and Eddie were beginning to get an almost Zappa-like reputation in the music business. That album couldn't be previewed on any station in this part of the country, although KUOI did make an attempt that lasted until about mid-way into the second song.

This album won't have any such problem, consisting almost entirely of pure pop and pablum. Mark Volman, also known as the Fluorescent Leech, sings in the opening cut, "I'm overweight, I'm underpaid, no one's beating a path to my door." Obviously Flo and Eddie plan to do something about that, and if given the proper airplay, this album should sell well among 10-14 year olds. The album's title cut closes the album with these lyrics:

"Is this album everything you'd hoped for?
Don't you wish you could get your money back?"
At least they're honest about it. Be forewarned.

Mon. Sept. 13--TRACY NELSON--Time Is On My Side

This album turns out to be much more pop-oriented than might be expected from this veteran of the Nashville scene. Ms. Nelson has a very earthy voice, like a deep-voiced Linda Ronstadt. She uses some well-known session players to back her up, most notably Jesse Ed Davis and Danny Kortchmar on guitars, Jim Gordon on drums, and Jim Horn on sax and flute. Music ranges from the sexy tongue-in-cheek "Arm and a Leg", to the rollicking "Couldn't Do Nuthin' Right", to a rather disappointing version of the title cut.

But they are still alive. They have a message for you.

On July 31 these women hastily left a weekend retreat in the Colorado Rockies. They had been warned to flee a flash flood which was roaring down the canyon. They started out, but never reached the bottom of the canyon alive. More than 100 others also lost their lives in the Big Thompson Canyon that same night.

A tragedy, people say. It is certain that these seven women who were part of the staff of Campus Crusade for Christ International will be deeply missed by family, friends and fellow staff members.

But what these women and their families would want you to know is that they are more alive than ever in heaven. That they lived a full and wonderful life on this earth. And that they now are better off in the presence of the loving God and Savior whom they served.

If you were to die today, do you know for certain that you would go to heaven? Would you spend eternity in heaven with Christ or separated from Him forever? For those who have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ, death's sting has been taken away. God is our refuge and strength. A very present help in trouble.

He reaches out in love to all men and women, offering His forgiveness, peace and comfort through Jesus Christ. So there is no reason to fear life or death.

Jesus said, "I am the resurrection, and the life; whoever believes in Me shall live even if he dies, and everyone who lives and believes in Me shall never die" (John 11:25,26).

A personal relationship with Jesus Christ doesn't begin at death—but it is available to you now—in life. Twenty-eight other women leaders of Campus Crusade for Christ International left that retreat with these seven. They are still alive—physically as well as spiritually.

But they also have a more keen awareness of the delicate balance between life and death. And more than 5,000 other staff of Campus Crusade for Christ have a keener awareness of life. For them, life is Christ. For the women who died, Christ is life. The message that follows explains what these women want you to know—how you can find new life in Jesus Christ. They had committed themselves to sharing this message in life or in death.

Just as there are physical laws that govern the physical universe, so are there spiritual laws which govern your relationship with God.

LAW ONE

GOD LOVES YOU, AND OFFERS A WONDERFUL PLAN FOR YOUR LIFE.

(References should be read in context from the Bible wherever possible.)

God's Love

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life" (John 3:16).

God's Plan

(Christ speaking) "I came that they might have life, and might have it abundantly" (that it might be full and meaningful) (John 10:10)

Why is it that most people are not experiencing the abundant life? Because...

LAW TWO

MAN IS SINFUL AND SEPARATED FROM GOD. THEREFORE, HE CANNOT KNOW AND EXPERIENCE GOD'S LOVE AND PLAN FOR HIS LIFE.

Man Is Sinful

"For all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). Man was created to have fellowship with God, but, because of his stubborn self will, he chose to go his own independent way and fellowship with God was broken. This self will, characterized by an attitude of active rebellion or passive indifference, is evidence of what the Bible calls sin.

Man Is Separated

"For the wages of sin is death" (spiritual separation from God) (Romans 6:23).

This diagram illustrates that God is holy and man is sinful. A great gulf separates the two. The arrows illustrate that man is continually trying to reach God and the abundant life through his own efforts, such as a good life, philosophy or religion.

The third law explains the only way to bridge this gulf.

LAW THREE

JESUS CHRIST IS GOD'S ONLY PROVISION FOR MAN'S SIN. THROUGH HIM YOU CAN KNOW AND EXPERIENCE GOD'S LOVE AND PLAN FOR YOUR LIFE.

He Died in Our Place

"But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Romans 5:8).

He Rose from the Dead

"Christ died for our sins... He was buried... He was raised on the third day, according to the Scriptures... He appeared to Peter, then to the twelve. After that He appeared to more than five hundred" (1 Corinthians 15:3-6)

He Is the Only Way to God

"Jesus said to him, 'I am the way, and the truth, and the life, no one comes to the Father, but through Me'" (John 14:6).

This diagram illustrates that God has bridged the gulf which separates us from God by sending His Son, Jesus Christ, to die on the cross in our place to pay the penalty for our sins.

It is not enough just to know these three laws.

LAW FOUR

WE MUST INDIVIDUALLY RECEIVE JESUS CHRIST AS SAVIOR AND LORD. THEN WE CAN KNOW AND EXPERIENCE GOD'S LOVE AND PLAN FOR OUR LIVES.

We Must Receive Christ

"But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, even to those who believe in His name" (John 1:12).

We Receive Christ through Faith

"For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God, not as a result of works, that no one should boast" (Ephesians 2:8,9).

When We Receive Christ, We Experience a New Birth.

(Read John 3:18)

We Receive Christ by Personal Invitation

(Christ is speaking) "Behold, I stand at the door and knock, if any one hears My voice and opens the door, I will come in to him" (Revelation 3:20).

Receiving Christ involves turning from self to God (repentance) and trusting Christ to come into our lives to forgive our sins and to make us the kind of person He wants us to be. Just to agree intellectually that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that He died on the cross for our sins is not enough. Nor is it enough to have an emotional experience. We receive Jesus Christ by faith, as an act of the will.

These two circles represent two kinds of lives:

SELF DIRECTED LIFE

S - Self on the throne

† - Christ is outside the life

• Interests are directed by self, often resulting in discord and frustration

CHRIST DIRECTED LIFE

† - Christ is in the life and on the throne

S - Self is yielding to Christ

• Interests are directed by Christ, resulting in harmony with God's plan

Which circle best represents your life?

Which circle would you like to have represent your life?

The following explains how you can receive Christ:

YOU CAN RECEIVE CHRIST RIGHT NOW BY FAITH THROUGH PRAYER

(Prayer is talking with God)

God knows your heart and is not so concerned with your words as He is with the attitude of your heart. The following is a suggested prayer:

"Lord Jesus, I need You. Thank You for dying on the cross for my sins. I open the door of my life and receive You as my Savior and Lord. Thank You for forgiving my sins and giving me eternal life. Take control of the throne of my life. Make me the kind of person You want me to be."

Does this prayer express the desire of your heart?

If it does, pray this prayer right now, and Christ will come into your life, as He promised.

If you have come to know Christ personally through the presentation of this good news, write for a free booklet especially written to assist you in your Christian growth.

Senate discusses university parking proposal

The ASUI Senate discussed the university's parking proposal during Tuesday's meeting and most members agreed that a $10 fee should be instituted for everyone, and the first come, first served basis should be continued.

Larry Peterson, faculty council representative, explained the proposal being offered by the administration in which faculty as well as students would pay $60 for reserve parking, $30 for regular parking, and $10 for perimeter parking.

Peterson stated this "user fee philosophy" will cover the cost of parking maintenance with any excess funds being used to build more lots. The university is also considering hiring a parking administrator and secretary that would be paid out of the parking fund.

Parking maintenance costs are currently being paid out of the general education fund.

"By charging $60, we hope to encourage car pools and cut down the cars on campus," Peterson said.

Boise State charges $30 for reserve parking and $2 for everything else, according to Peterson. ISU charges $20 for reserve parking, and all other is $5.

The faculty council, which is opposed to the administration proposal has appointed a committee to draw up another proposal to present to the administration.

The final proposal is scheduled to be considered at the October regents meeting to be held in Moscow.

In other business, ASUI president David Warnick spoke on the subject of student fees and in-state tuition. "I see in-state tuition as a trap which we should not fall into," he said. "In 1947, fees were about $50 per semester...if fees had increased (at the same rate as the consumer price index), we would now be paying about $106 per semester instead of $217."

He added that part of the extra increase is due to the increase in services provided by the ASUI, and if the students desire more services then a change in the fees should be made. Other changes, he said, are "Best pointed out by one ASUI Senator who told me today that support for public education is 'going down the tube'."

Other senate action included living group assignments for each senator, and passage of a bill concerning a change in the pay plan for part-time students.

The next regular meeting for the senate is Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Chief's room of the SUB.

Idaho has vehicle study

The Idaho Transportation Department, Bureau of Highway Safety will begin a study on September 7 to determine the mechanical condition of randomly selected vehicles throughout the state. The information gathered during the study will provide a data base on vehicle condition during the existence of a mandatory vehicle inspection program. This study is unique for the nation and is being jointly funded by the Bureau of Highway Safety and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

That friendly feeling far from home.

The most important thing in your life right now, is probably not your bank.

And that's as it should be.

You aren't here to worry about your bank. But your bank should be here to worry about you.

And we are.

That's the First Security feeling. Confidence, security, trust. If you're from any one of over 100 Intermountain cities, you may have grown up with that feeling. And you have every right to expect it here.

Even if First Security was not your bank at home, we want to be your bank here.

IMPORTANT STUDY ABROAD ANNOUNCEMENT: Limited openings still remain on CFS accredited Academic Year 1976-77 Programs for Fall, Winter, Spring or Full Year for qualified applicants. Students in good standing-Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, Senior Year are eligible. Good faculty references, evidence of self-motivation and sincere interest in study abroad and international cultural exchange count more with CFS than specific grade point. For applications information: CENTER FOR FOREIGN STUDY/AY ADMISSIONS/216 S. State/Box 606/Ann Arbor, MI 48107 (313) 662-5575.

Bridge, anyone?

For the first time in over three years there will be an organized contract bridge club on campus. Scott Bonomi, a bridge player of long standing, expects at least 72 players to attend his regular Sunday evening tournaments in the Silver room at the SUB.

Each player will be assessed a $1.25 fee to play on Bonomi's boards, with all profits going to the Student Union treasury.

Some tournaments have been described as being rougher on the players than major surgery is on a neurosurgeon, but Bonomi promises that only friendly games will be played.

For more information contact Bonomi at 885-7663, or see the program director in the SUB.

Six electronic calculators, including two scientific models, are available for student use at the reserve desk on the ground floor of the Library.

The calculators were purchased with funds allocated to the Library the ASUI and are for use only within the building.

WEIGHT WATCHERS®

PROUDLY PRESENTS

JEAN NIDETCH

Founder of Weight Watchers

Thirteen years ago a hopelessly overweight 214 pound woman lost 72 pounds through a sensible, carefully planned weight control program. She not only changed her own life, but she brought new hope to men, women, teenagers throughout the world. Most important, she brought success to them. Not only in helping them lose weight, but in keeping it off. That woman is Jean Nidetch, Founder of Weight Watchers®, the internationally famous weight control organization. You owe it to yourself to meet this extraordinary woman and hear the story of Weight Watchers as she tells it. It will be a meeting you'll never forget. Don't miss it.
