Polls show Carter advantage slim;

By BILL LEWIS

What looked last summer like a runaway for the Democratic nominee, may turn out to be one of the closest races ever, as Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford square-off in tomorrow's election. Wire service and Network polls give Carter a slight lead going into tomorrow's race, with the most recent Louis Harris poll showing the Democratic nominee leading Ford 45 percent to 44 percent.

Carter has dropped from a high of 62 per cent in polls taken shortly after the Democratic convention, with his support fairly stable since the beginning of September, according to Harris.

The election will rest on Ford's ability to pick up undecided and Democratic cross-over votes, according to Harris, as Democratic strength in other races appears to be strong.

A Washington Post poll released yesterday showed Carter with enough support to pick up 214 electoral votes, 46 less than needed for election. The Democrat was ahead in 18 states according to the Post, with Ford leading in 24 states, totaling 197 electoral votes.

The Post and Harris polls, as well as a sampling taken by the New York Times and CBS news said the election was close enough to fall within the margin of error which pollsters allow for, making the race too close to call.

In Idaho, Ford is heavily favored, after gaining support from officials of the State's Reagan forces, which gave the former California governor a landslide victory in last spring's Idaho Presidential primary.

Idaho's incumbent congressmen are given the edge in this year's race, with First District Representative Steve Symms shown to have a solid lead over Democrat Ken Pursley in recent polls.

In the second District, Republican George Hansen has apparently been hurt by revelations about his alleged income tax irregularities. Hansen's margin slipped from an October poll which showed him with support of 40 percent of the voters to 34 percent in an Idaho Statesman poll released yesterday.

His opponent, Democrat Stan Kress is within 2 percentage points of Hansen, according to the newspaper, with 32 percent of the vote. The survey reported 34 percent of the electorate was still uncertain about who they would vote for in the Second District election.

high student turnout expected

By GLENN CRUICKSHANK

Reprinted from the Lewiston Morning Tribune

University students are not attending the political rallies in droves this year. Most will not slap on a campaign bumper sticker, hoist a protest sign or pass a leaflet for their favorite candidate. But they will vote.

In fact, the predictions are that a high number of U of I and WSU students will show up at the polls Tuesday.

"In the past, the only political action students took was to challenge the administration," said Jim Redinger, state chairman for the Idaho College Republicans. "They've seen what happens when the administration isn't watched and now they're getting involved in working within the system."

Even the university political clubs are working together, as the U of I Campus Democrats and College Republicans are co-sponsoring student voter transportation to the Moscow polls. They and their WSU counterparts have also been sponsoring voter registration drives.

Their efforts have apparently been successful. An informal poll of 316 U of I students by U of I political science professor Amos Yoder shows 86 per cent of those students are registered and plan to vote.

Yoder's survey showed that political science, business and agriculture students polled preferred Ford to Carter by a 2 to 1 margin. They also selected Pursley over Symms, Norma Dobler over Gerald Snow for the State Senate, Tom Boyd over David Stowers for State Representative, and Michael Goetz over Elton Walker for Sheriff. The James R. Lucas-Robert Hosack race for State Representative showed no clear favorite.

Frank Mullen, Yoder's counterpart at WSU has asked his political science students whether they intend to vote and most have said yes.

But when it comes time to discuss the issues, he finds a problem. "There are a very few kids really interested in what the candidates have to say," said Mullen. Most of them are voting only because they feel that they have a citizen's duty to do so."

This lack of philosophical interest has hit the campus political clubs hardest.

On a campus of more than 17,000 students, the WSU Young Democrats have attracted only about 35 active workers.

The clubs on the Idaho campus have had better luck inspiring students. The U of I chapter of College Republicans has 130 paid members and 30 of those are active. Idaho Young Democrats have a signed membership of also 130 students with about 20 of those being dedicated members.

Once again the candidates

The following is an Argonaut overview featuring the candidates of interest to Moscow residents. (With special attention to the Symms-Pursley congressional race.) Argonaut Associate Editor Bill Lewis devotes special attention to the Symms-Pursley congressional race. Also featured are the hopefuls for state representative, and those for county commissioner positions and the office of sheriff.

A difference in political philosophy and style characterizes the race for first district congressman between incumbent Republican Steve Symms and Democratic challenger Ken Pursley.

A flamboyant campaigner, Symms stresses his opposition to many government spending programs and says he will continue to work to remove government influence from the county's economic system.

Running a more low keyed campaign Pursley has endorsed federal programs for education and senior citizens and called for government controls to protect natural resources of the state from businesses and developers.

Elected in 1972, Symms has won high marks from conservative organizations because of his opposition to gun controls, support of strong defense budget, and attempts to cut such federal outlays as the Food Stamp Program administered by the Department of Agriculture.

Pursley claims to agree with the Republicans' opposition to expanding government, but says Symms' performance has been ineffective.

The congressman's "consistent no votes don't accomplish anything," charges Pursley, who adds that because Symms often stands nearly alone in his opposition to some federal programs, he is unable to work with other congressmen.

Pursley contends he will provide better protection for the environment than Symms, who was labeled one of the twelve worst congressmen on environmental issues by a national environmental organization.

The democrat also criticized Symms throughout the campaign for his refusal to debate him on the issues.

Pursley said federal campaign funds should be diverted in congressional races to buy media time for debates between candidates. Symms countered the criticism saying his duties in Congress kept him out of the district during the early parts of the campaign and he preferred to concentrate on travelling the state rather than debating, during the time he spent in the district.

Although in Washington during most of the campaign, Symms has been able to attract a lot of attention because of his flamboyant style. Illustrating his opposition to gun control earlier this year, the congressman brought some weapons to a press conference before a vote on a gun control measure.

Unable to match Symms' attention getting techniques, Pursley used one gimmick during the campaign, an empty chair, to symbolize Symms refusal to debate the challenger.

Senate candidates from District 5:

Democrat	Republican
Norma Dobler	Gerald Snow

Norma Dobler has served as the Representative from District 5 in Boise for the last four years. Her experience includes student here at the University, lab assistant and secretary in the college of Forestry. Her husband is currently a professor of Business Law. Dobler was instrumental in the passage of the bill creating a state kindergarten system, an issue which her opponent Gerald Snow has been continuously attacking.

Dobler opposes in-state tuition, and has fought against the chancellorship bill and a constitutional amendment removing Idaho's status as a land grant college. Among the bills that she would like to see passed are tenant--landlord legislation and reforms in the marijuana laws.

Gerald Snow, like his opponent, hopes to be appointed to the Joint Appropriations Committee. Snow stated that he is qualified for this post from his experience as a member of county advisory boards as well as an advisor to the Northwest Production Credit Association.

Snow also opposes the chancellorship bill, and the concept of in-state tuition. He says the current marijuana laws should remain unchanged, including the possession of more than three ounces of marijuana being classified as a felony. Snow supports landlord-tenant bill legislation.

One of the main issues Snow has stressed has been the state's kindergarten bill. Snow stated that kindergartens are too expensive and should be cut back, along with other new educational ventures, such as some special education programs.

House of Representatives from District 5: (two seats)

Democrat	Republican
David Stowers	Tom Boyd
Robert Hosack	Jim Lucas

Jim Lucas, Republican candidate for House of Representatives, is running because "the State grows, the University grows, inflation increases, and the relative budget does not keep pace."

On issues of interest to students, Lucas felt he would need to look closer at the Tenant-Landlord bill, but did oppose the Chancellorship bill and the in-state tuition idea.

He opposes removing the Constitutional Status of the U of I because it would "put appropriations for the school into the area of politics, which should not be allowed."

Robert Hosack, the incumbent representative from this district, served for 31 years as a professor of political science here at the University, half of that time as department head.

Hosack opposes the efforts to remove the Constitutional status of the University. "Political interference in educational matters is highly undesirable," he said. The University of Idaho has one of the most desirable situations and I think that it should be preserved.

David Stowers, Democratic candidate for Idaho House of Representatives, grew up on an Idaho farm and graduated from the University of Idaho with a B.S. in political science and an M.Ed. in Biology

Stowers opposed the concept of the Chancellorship system for Idaho universities, and allowing the legislature to divide up the money. "When you do that, you put it back into the legislator's pocket, because we are so out-voted we would probably end up getting less anyway."

Stowers also opposed the concept of removing the U of I's constitutional status, and favors the Landlord-Tenant legislation.

Tom Boyd, a 1951 graduate of the University of Idaho and chairman of the Genesee School Board, is running for the State House of Representatives because he is "concerned for education."

Off-campus progress

To the Editor:

This letter is to inform you and the off-campus students of the progress of off-campus student representation. On Oct. 18 of this year there was an off-campus student seminar conducted by myself, three other senators and the ASUI president. It was a successful meeting that informed the senators of the feelings of the off-campus students, and likewise the senators informed the off-campus students of the activities of their respective government operations.

The feedback that I received about that meeting was tremendous. There was nothing but excitement about the thought of off-campus students having a say in the decisions and direction of the ASUI. This feedback has caused actions to be taken that possibly could change the whole representative system of the ASUI.

To facilitate these changes, there will be another off-campus student seminar next Monday night at 7 p.m., in the Blue Dining room of the SUB. All interested off-campus students that would like a chance to give input and to be informed of the actions of the ASUI are very welcome to attend. Topics to be discussed range over many and varied subjects and therefore the meeting will have an informal format. I urge all off-campus students to come to the meeting as you might be surprised as to how much the ASUI would like your input.

Thanks for the chance to relay this to the students.

Speak up

To the Editor:

It is time for the students and faculty of the University of Idaho to speak up to the irresponsible and unrepresentative job that their 1st District Congressman is doing. For four years the State of Idaho has waited for Steve Symms to "warm up" and get into gear with favorable legislation and active participation in Congress. Instead, we have seen only a neophyte legislator representing his own interests, receiving a hefty salary (taxpayers' money) for work not done. His record is one of non-attendance, and when he does react, his voice falls within that very small and ineffective far-right wing comprising only five per cent of the voting body.

Most recently, Symms has twice suggested and urged that former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz should be the next President of the University of Idaho. That is the same Earl Butz who recently was forced to resign his post after his very vivid racial slur was quoted in a widely-read publication. The attitude of Butz is reminiscent of pre-Civil Rights days; he is a member of that hard core element in society who do not yet accept the principles of human rights. Earl Butz is certainly not a person who should be involved in the decision making for contemporary education. That Steve Symms would even suggest such a man to hold such a powerful position at the U of I raises the question: does Steve Symms understand what we are trying to achieve here or is this just another of his mis-representations of those whom he is paid to represent?

Fortunately, the students of the University have a forum by which we can let this Congressman know our feelings--the General Election on November 2nd. By voting against Symms, we can help to elect a man who will represent us, keep our interests and viewpoints in clear focus, and will participate fully in the legislative process. Ken Pursley will earn his salary in Washington, D.C., by working with and for us. The student vote counts, and this is going to be a close race. Get to the polls on Tuesday and vote NO on Steve Symms.

Keith J. Coffman

Barrage of advice

To the Editor:

Recently the voters of District 5 have been treated to a barrage of advice from Idaho's deep south on the importance, from the University's standpoint, of electing legislators who will participate in the majority (read Republican) causes. The deplorable record of Mr. Vern Ravenscroft in the area of support for higher education need not be reviewed here, since he is no longer in the legislature. His partisan motivations are in any case evident by his being chairman of the state Republican party. Mr. Phil Batt, however, is a power in the legislative leadership. What kind of record does he have in the area of support of education which entitles him to presume to advise the citizens of District 5 on such important matters? In the most recent legislative session Senator Batt noted NO on House Bill 529, the supplemental appropriation for higher education. On House Bill 698, the State Board of Education appropriation, which included funds for Student Incentive Scholarships, he again voted NO. On the appropriation for vocational education, House Bill 707, he voted NO. This is the same Senator Batt who snipes at higher education and University faculty salary needs in his occasional articles in the LEWISTON TRIBUNE, who is the most articulate advocate of tuition, who sponsored a constitutional amendment the intent of which was to shift much of the burden of support for higher education from the general fund to the student and his or her family. Citizens of District 5, vote your convictions, but do not be befuddled by the gross partisanship and "crocodile tears" of these politically motivated "carpetbaggers."

More like him

To the Editor:

The first district race for congressman has been portrayed by you with vast unfairness. Steve Symms may represent a small right wing clique; but if you clarify the connotations of "right" you will be correct in your statements. Being the minority ISN'T necessarily wrong. Indeed not! Instead, I wish there were 300 more like him.

Steve Symms is for cutting government to the bone. Ken Pursley SAYS he is for the same thing. But Ken Pursley recently condemned Steve Symms for voting "no" on a whole host of bills, all of which would increase government. It is a truism that individual freedom varies inversely with the rise of government power. Well, it seems to me that Ken Pursley has lost sight of that fact and is dangerously close to believing what he professes abhorance for.

Your editorial might better have been signed "B.S."

Kurt Buff

A better choice

To the Editor:

The Democratic candidates for legislature tell us they favor keeping the funding of the U of I at the present "high" level. Robert Hosack expresses this best when he states, in a questionnaire distributed by the AAUP, that he "would make little change in the relative proportion allocated to higher education."

The fact is that funding for the U of I has decreased in real dollars since 1969; a fact easy to understand considering the Democrats' commitment to the status quo.

Fortunately students have a better choice. Republican candidates Jerry Snow, Jim Lucas, and Tom Boyd have again and again pledged their support of greater funding for higher education in general, and the U of I in specific.

Acting in office

To the Editor:

A couple of years ago, a friend's father told me, "All lawyers are liars, and all politicians are lawyers." Plainly attorneys have no monopoly on falsehood. Nor has the legal fraternity penetrated into politics to the extent that man suggested.

Nevertheless, I'm afraid that he expressed something that most of us have come to believe about political leaders: They never act in office like they act in the campaign.

A conspicuous exception to this cynical "rule" is our congressman, Steve Symms. In all the short time he has represented us in Washington, he's done what he said he would do. You might not agree with every stand Symms takes--I don't--but at least you know what he thinks because he doesn't hide behind weasel words. He acts in Congress just like he says he will act when he talks in Idaho.

His stands on the issues are of particular importance to students. None of us can deny that we have seen in recent years a gross expansion in the powers of the government to control our lives. Steve fights this erosion of rights at the hands of paternalistic politicians by forcing government to limit itself to regulating only those human activities that must be overseen.

Unfortunately, he is outvoted more often than not. That means that we need more people like him in Washington, not fewer. We certainly don't need another politician to swell the already bloated ranks of the majority. Hopefully, many students will vote for Steve Symms and send him back to Washington to raise an independent voice for Idaho.

Tom Thrasher

Drop in the bucket

To the Editor:

Just a drop in the bucket, but Tuesday is an important day for the university and its financial problems.

James R. Lucas is running for Position B for this district's legislative House seat. As county commissioner, Lucas was a man of his word and a man of commitment. Lucas at 54 still is a man of sincerity and commitment.

His opponent, a man in his middle sixties, pledged two years ago to support a consolidated May presidential primary. In fact in 1974 he even carried an Initiative petition in support of it.

However, when Bob Hosack got to Boise he voted against the May presidential primary. When Bob returned to Moscow after the session, he told KRPL listeners that he "probably should have voted for the presidential primary." In politics that's called "waffling!"

The next year there was a proposal in the legislature to consolidate both primaries in May and eliminate the August primary in the Initiative that Bob carried.

However, Hosack forgot his commitment to his constituents. He told the House State Affairs Committee that there was no real need to consolidate the two primaries. He said the savings would be "just a drop in the bucket."

"Just a drop in the bucket." I was there. Hosack said a savings of $150,000 to $200,000 is "just a drop in the bucket" in the context of the entire State budget. He said that again this week on KRPL. Think of that the next time student fees go up. We now know that the second primary cost over $275,000 statewide; here in Latah county it cost $6,600 ($12,154 for both primaries in this county.) It may be peanuts to you, but it's waffling to me.

There are 70 legislators in the House. Position B in District 5 is "just a drop in the bucket," one vote. But let's make it a drop in the bucket of commitment and economy. Let's vote for a better memory and a younger man.

Lucas would be a better commitment Tuesday.

Latah County Sheriff:

Democrat

Elton Walker, Republican, has 23 years of experience in Moscow police work, and is currently a Deputy Sheriff. He stated that he knows many of the people in the county, and hence feels that he can work with them effectively.

Among the projects Walker is interested in are reforms of the policies and organization of the Sheriff's department. He emphasizes the need for in-service training.

On issues pertaining to students, Walker objected to the using of narcotics agents on a "catch as catch can basis". He said emphasis should be placed on prosecuting the pusher, not the user. Walker did say, however, in any undercover activity you are bound to catch someone who "is just getting their feet wet."

Walker does not view the high turnover rate in the sheriff's office as being caused by problems within

Mike Goetz has served with the Sheriff's department for the last four years and has completed a number of in-service trainings sponsored by the FBI.

One of the main campaign issues that Goetz has stressed is the high turnover rate of the sheriff's department. Pointing out that 8 out of 11 men resigned last year, Goetz would like to institute changes such as rotating shifts and days off. He stated he would view the first six months of employment as a probationary period, where employees must prove their worth.

Like Walker, Goetz is opposed to the use of narcotic agents without stringent control. The emphasis should be on enforcement against the pusher rather than the user.

District 1
Democrat
Dan Blood

It's a tight race in the contest for Latah County Commissioner. Three men--Dan Blood, Gary Morris, and Lee Lisher--are seeking the position in the District 1 race; two others--Everett Hagen and LeRoy Carlson--are running for the District 3 seat.

Blood and Hagen are both Democrats, Morris and Carlson are Republicans, and Lisher is an Independent.

Both races center around a number of key issues, namely the number of polling places in the county, the construction of a new Industrial Park Complex, and the overall growth to the county. Morris, the incumbent, in the District 1 race, has been under attack by his opponents for limiting the number of polling places, though he states that the number should be expanded in the future. Blood, a local farmer, said that it is important to have more than one polling place; and on the Complex issue, he says that it would be an excellent program, but that it will need careful watching. Morris agrees with him on this problem; however, Lisher is against it. Lisher is also a farmer, and he feels that the complex would be more of a burden to the taxpayers than it is worth. He does, however, feel that a growing county is something that cannot be avoided as do his two opponents.

In the District 3 race, LeRoy Carlson and Ev Hagen are facing off in what appears to be a contest down to the wire. Both men favor an increase in the number of polling places, but they take issue with the problems of county expansion. Carlson's stance favors the new Industrial Park Complex and would allow for a growth in the county's population, while Hagen feels that it would be a mistake to favor either of the two. Expanding the county, he says, would ruin the quality of life in it, and the new industrial park, in his eyes, has been poorly planned. Carlson, on the other hand, says that the park could only benefit the county, and that we have no right to determine who can and who cannot live in the area.

It's your money.

And Gary Morris and LeRoy Carlson believe the county commissioners should be accessible and responsive to you while they're spending it. Think about that county budget when you vote. Vote for fiscal responsibility.

- Morris and Carlson are
- willing to listen.
- sincere in their desire for efficient government at the lowest possible level.
- fiscally experienced
- accessible...they'll be available when you need them.

From Norma Dobler
5th District Candidate for the Idaho Senate

Dear Friends,

You need to be represented in the Idaho Legislature by people who understand you and your particular problems. That is why I am asking you to vote for me to be your Senator.

I have been a part of the University of Idaho community for thirty-nine years -- as a student (degree B.S. in Business), a staff member (laboratory assistant and secretary), a faculty wife, a parent, and alumna.

My four years of experience in the legislature has been invaluable training. I have served on three standing committees -- Education, Health and Welfare, and Resources and Conservation. In addition I have followed closely the deliberations of the Joint Finance and Appropriation Committee.

Some benefits that I have been instrumental in achieving for you have been 1) obtaining an appropriation which, when matched with federal funds, yielded $145,000 for Incentive Grant Scholarships; 2) improving the Retirement Plan; 3) amending the law to solve the compensatory time problems; 4) securing an additional $100,000 for University of Idaho employees' health insurance benefits.

I have listened to student concerns expressed in my visits with 34 living groups. I have discussed problems with faculty and staff in personal contacts and in AAUP and IPEA meetings. I will continue to keep in touch --

I need your vote on Tuesday, November 2nd.

Sincerely,

Norma Dobler

Vandals edge ISU 6-3

By JIM BORDEN

Ralph Lowe kicked a 53-yard field goal to give the University of Idaho Vandals a tougher-than-expected 6-3 victory over cross-state rival Idaho State University in Big Sky football Saturday in Pocatello.

The win gives Idaho the state of Idaho championship and a 5-3 season mark, 3-1 in Big Sky, while ISU falls to 1-7 on the season and 0-4 in conference play.

What was predicted by some to be a high-scoring Idaho runaway, turned into a defensive dogfight.

The Bengals went ahead midway into the first quarter with a 40-yard field goal and it wasn't until, with four seconds left in the first half, Idaho got on the board with a 35 yard boot of their own.

Little did Lowe know that his third-quarter 53-yard boot would win the game, the second this year won by a Lowe field goal. The kick tied an Idaho school distance record.

Both teams were able to penetrate into the other's territory easily enough, but neither team seemed able to travel that last 20 yards to the goal.

Neither team had an exceptional offensive day, the Vandals coming away with only 275 total yards to the Bengal's 233.

The Vandals had several key defensive plays, most important of which was an ISU field goal attempt blocked by Vandal noseguard, Tim Sanford.

Robert Brooks led all Vandal rushers with 53 net yards, just one yard shy of becoming sixth on the Vandal all-time rushing list.

Vandal head coach Ed Troxel said of the ISU defense, "They cared tonight. There's no doubt. You can look at them and say that's their best effort of the year."

He said, "They were just like us, they bent but they didn't break."

In other Big Sky games over the weekend, Northern Arizona crushed Boise State 42-7 to remain undefeated in the conference, and the same is true of Montana State after a 21-12 victory over Montana. NAU and MSU meet Saturday in Bozeman to decide the Big Sky title. Also Utah State trounced Weber State 36-10.

The other Palouse team, Washington State, won a thriller 23-22 over Pac-8 rival Oregon on a 14-yard touchdown pass with 19 seconds left.

U of I women score double victories

Idaho netters came away with the Number 1 position over the weekend in the Montana State Invitational Volleyball Tournament held in Bozeman.

The U of I women beat previously undefeated WSU 15-7, 18-16, 7-15, and 16-14 in the best three out of five matches.

In other women's action over the weekend, the women's field hockey team edged past Northwest Nazarene College 2-1 and by Eastern Oregon State College 2-1 in a doubleheader held on Saturday.

The U of I field hockey team is now 8-3-1 on the season and will travel to Ellensburg, Washington Nov. 6-7 to compete in the Washington Invitational Tournament, sponsored by Central Washington State College.

Soccer team beaten

The place of play was Ellensburg, Washington, the setting, crisp autumn air right for football, and the game, soccer?

It was soccer, but the U of I team seemed out of place in this conference game against the Central Washington State College Wildcats. The game held on this past Saturday, found Idaho being sucked under to their first defeat by a score of 4-2.

"We didn't start playing until twenty minutes into the game," remarked U of I soccer coach, Teoman Sipahigil. Idaho's offense was indeed shaky at first, but as usual, their defensive abilities were pressure play all the way.

CWSC established themselves early in the first half as the run-and-gun team.

Idaho was quick to pick up the lag in their running game and established an even harder pace which lasted throughout the game.

Both teams exchanged attempts at scoring through the entire game, but it was definitely run-oriented offense that won the game for the Wildcats.

"We had too many errors today," said Sipahigil after the game and it was no wonder. Idaho was forced to run harder and set-up quicker than they have had to in their previous games.

When the U of I did slow the ball down and establish an offensive formation, they moved the ball, they scored, or at least came very close to making the points. Field general Larry Houston of Idaho, was a dominating factor throughout the game on offense and defense.

Towards the midway mark of the first half, Jim Ansbomb was able to capitalize on a deflected kick from the CWSC goalie, to score Idaho's only point of the first half. In the second half, Juku Wani of Idaho received a pass from the right wing position. Wani dribbled the ball within 25 feet of the CWSC goal, looked for the shot, took it and made the second and final goal for the U of I.

CWSC scored duce goals in each half. The goals scored in the second half came towards the end of the game and were about three minutes apart.

Scoring for CWSC: Tom Madden-1; Cary Davidson-1; Tim Crawley-1; and Chuck Hutvarachaa-1.

Idaho now stands 0-1-3 in the season with another game scheduled for next week-end, against the team from Gonzaga of Spokane. U of I soccer action will get under way next Sunday at 1:30 in Kibbie Dome.

Many Interests: Many Skills

Veterinarian. Luke received DVM and BS degrees from WSU and practiced veterinary medicine at Lewiston and Seattle for some 15 years.

Cattleman. Raised on a cattle ranch, he learned early about fish and game, forestry and water problems. He presently raises prize Hereford cattle.

Vandal Booster. It was the U of I which first opened the gates of the world to him, Luke says. A former president of both local and state Vandal Boosters, he considers himself "one of the fathers" of the Kibbie Dome.

County Commissioner. Luke served a term as Latah County Commissioner, attaining goals he is proud of.

Family man. Luke and his wife, Violet, have a son, Jim, a Moscow High School senior, and a daughter, Gail (Mrs. Douglas) West, who lives in Illinois. The West's two sons call Luke "Daddy-Doc."

"When I practiced veterinary medicine out of Lewiston, I covered most of the Genesee area. I live at Moscow, attended the U of I and I run my cattle at Potlatch across from the Henry Fitch Place. I know my 5th District, and the people I hope to represent."

"I won't lecture the legislature. I'll listen. I'll listen to the other representatives ... and I'll listen to my friends and neighbors at home. And when it's my turn to talk ... I think the House of Representatives will listen to me."
