new guidelines

University gets approval of student entertainment

The U of I's Financial Affairs office has submitted proposed guidelines for future concerts sponsored by the ASUI, which require approval of the University Bursar before any group can be booked to appear.

In a memorandum to the ASUI earlier this month, the university administration complained of damage to the Kibbie Dome, as well as violation of the Dome's smoking and drinking policies at the Oct. 20 Doobie Brothers concert and warned that administration intervention could be expected.

University Vice-president for Financial Affairs Sherman Carter, who in addition to ASUI General Manager Dean Vettfus and ASUI Entertainment officials must approve future concerts, said the guidelines will not be used to keep specific groups away from the university.

He said Dome Manager Dennis Hedges and Vice-president for Students and Administrative Services Tom Richardson will be charged with certifying that adequate safeguards are available for protection of university facilities when groups are booked to appear.

Nevertheless, the guidelines were criticised by ASUI President David Warnick, who said the new guidelines, which among other things give the university authority to approve what vehicles groups can use in setting up concerts, will likely result in some problems in lining up entertainment at the U of I.

"It does complicate matters," Warnick said, "when you're telling individual groups they have to get one more approval. The problems won't be the obvious ones, they'll just be the subtle problems of not being able to get approval quick enough for agents, who are a rather impatient breed."

Misuse of university facilities at concerts isn't the only thing that caused the university to issue the guidelines, according to Richardson. The motor vehicle recommendation, he said, was issued because of oil damage to the Dome after last spring's home show at the facility.

Like Carter, Richardson stressed the new regulations are not intended to keep specific groups out of the Dome, but are necessary since officials of the university are forced to answer for damages to facilities at the school.

An official of Palouse Entertainment Associates, which handles ASUI booking this year, Ed Gladder said the administration concern about concerts might be due to complaints from parents or alumni who are concerned about reported liquor and drug use at concerts.

Carter said such violations can be handled by Dome officials and the finance office of the university will not become involved in concert booking unless the university stands to lose financially because of damage to facilities or insurance contract violations.

Beer swilling, leg flaunting serves useful purpose

Students on this campus must seem pretty silly. Snarfing down pies, swilling beer, flaunting their legs, and taking part in plays purposely lacking in talent...don't we have anything better to do?

Maybe not. All those tummy aches, hangovers, and displays of flesh had a sound reason behind them. Through the efforts of students here, area charities will have more money to further their worthwhile causes.

Campus Chest week was organized by a Service honorary, Alpha Phi Omega, but that didn't stop all student groups from participating. For once, independents and greeks were able to get together and accomplish something. For five amazing days, the two groups put away traditional animosity, and accomplished something of value.

Next week, we will probably resume leaping at each other's throats. That's a shame.

Campus Chest Week reflects what we can do, if we do it together. It's too bad non-thinking mutual distrust usually gets in the way.

JIGS

The grasping fingers of OVEREXTENSION squeeze and pressure us into a mass of uptightness like children squishing Wonder Bread into a solid ball. The huge controllable O.E. monster pops us into its mouth--we're eaten alive. Or, worse yet, it squeezes us so the blood runs from us and we are numb; when the grasp loosens we lie without energy or feeling--lifeless. That Overextension Monster--activity, going, doing, saying "yes" to people yet wanting to say "no", new promises on top of unmet and broken ones. Deadlines eat away at the soul and pressure the mind until it ceases to create and only functions to fulfill the immediate obligation--meeting the time, beating the clock.

FEEL THAT WAY NOW--any of you-- student, faculty, staff, community person? Meetings, exams, papers due, obligations to people and things, people with troubles who talk but somehow never listen...the list continues. It gets written, a few items crossed off, and more added to be left un or half done. NO TIME...NO TIME...NO TIME...NO TIME...NO TIME...

Where did they run, those 24 hours each day? With unpleasant tasks the days seem shorter to me.

Everything crammed into the hour--all those meetings and hurry, hurry, busy, busy, busy. The time flies. When finally there is a moment (only a moment mind you) for self, relaxing, loving, laughing (not to mention dancing), the prime force moves toward rekindling the energies for the goings and doings, and the Sandman (oops, Sandperson) comes along and ZAP! sleep takes over.

And then there are the days (had any lately?) where time waits and bread baking, cake making, idea exchanging, car tuning, letter writing (those uplifting, talking ones--not those obligatory now-you-owe-me-kind which I put on my Overextension List), friends sharing, nose smelling, ears hearing, eyes seeing occur. Perhaps the state of quiet, relaxation and unhurried sense of nothing pressing with only to be doing what suits the day and the wanting of self creates the illusion of longer hours. Yes, those days of time waiting do exist to be cherished and to be worked toward. What this says to you--only you know. What this says to me is that I have been wound up too tight inside, maybe even turned inside out to see the wants there. To look internally rather than externally for the keeping of my time. How to relax myself and work toward stretching the hours by filling them with meaningful-to-me endeavors. Setting priorities based on my personal needs-wants. And, too, rediscovering that rewards-reinforcements (any "behavior mod" people out there) need to come from inside. IN-OUT...INTERNAL-EXTERNAL...INTRINSIC-EXTRINSIC SELF-OTHERS

It's not too late to catch the Autumn though most leaves have fallen and been sucked up by the big leaf vacuum. If beauty is seen now, remembering to look next autumn might be easier. And when the snow falls perhaps you'll look up, stick out your tongue and catch one of the first falling snowflakes.

Enough of this--you're probably ready to fall asleep, go on to the Sports page, skim the next page's headlines. WHAT, you repeat, WHAT is the meaning of all this? That question I can't answer. However, one point of all this is that (or-is this):

Time is Precious...It gets filled by us with garbage.

EVENTUALLY, the garbage needs to be taken out.....

TIME IS PRECIOUS!

Letters

Last chance

To the Editor:

This Letter is to inform you and the off-campus students that there will be one more try to unite the off-campus students. It will be held Monday, Nov. 15, 1976 in the SUB Gold Room at 7:30 p.m.

The last few weeks there has been a concerted effort by some of the senators and some of the off-campus students to try some seminars to present to the off-campus students the issues now before the Senate. The second function of these meetings was to organize the off-campus students into a viable input body of the ASUI.

So far the effort has failed and the expectations of the few senators are dismal. This next meeting therefore is set up as a continuing effort to have the off-campus students represented in meaningful fashion. If any off-campus students have any complaints that they would like to present to the Senate, or if you, as an off-campus student, would like to have a voice in the ASUI, then this is your last chance to make the off-campus students opinion heard. Please attend!

Thank you,

Wrong context

To The Editor:

I would like to clarify what was printed in last Thursday's paper as compared to what I stated in my interview with the Arg.

First, I was misquoted as saying that the police do "slipshod" work. I did say however, that it is a damn shame that the Administration is trying to keep Blue Mountain from taking place because of "illegal activities documented in the Moscow Police Report on 1976 Blue Mountain" after the Senate paid the Police Dept. $800 to patrol Blue Mountain last year. (This quote is from an earlier ARG Article.) I also stated that I am sure that this money was not intended to be used by the police so they could write a report documenting illegal activities but rather to maintain a degree of law and order so students could enjoy future Blue Mountains.

I might also add that I believe being misquoted once and taken out of context twice in the same article is a level of journalism which no university newspaper should submit itself to. Warren K. Parkinson Candidate for ASUI Senate

La Pointe speaks

To the Editor:

Five days from today, the ASUI will elect several senators, and one vice-president. As in all past elections, several 'non-issues' are again clouding the campaign. On campus drinking, rock-festivals and the like are still with us, as are some feelings of animosity between various interest groups within the university. I believe the opinion of the general student-body on the first two examples to be quite clear: that students on campus should have a legal right to consume alcohol within their living groups as they wish, and that rock festivals should continue to be held as long as there is some control on their size and on the well being of their audience.

One key issue which has been rarely mentioned in this campaign happens to be that of most importance: the survival of this university as Idaho's number one institution of higher education. In order to survive, the problem of dealing with the animosity between various university groups comes before all others. Cooperation between all students, regardless of their living group affiliation or personal likes or dislikes is a must. Cooperation between the students and faculty and administration wherever and whenever possible is another necessity. In this way, we at the University of Idaho can present a united front to the people of the state. I believe that it is time for such cooperation to get underway. I believe that, you, the student body, will have enough independence of thought to view these matters as I have, and see that together we stand a chance of succeeding while splintered we have none.

ASUI changes

To the Editor:

The two constitutional amendments on the ASUI ballot next Wednesday deserve your support.

The first would explain which fees the ASUI Senate is supposed to budget. At present, the constitution refers to "appropriate" ones, without a full explanation.

The new wording would list the ASUI operations, the student union operations, the marching band and the ASUI recreation fees.

The second amendment would make it easier for students to petition for a recall election for any elected ASUI official. The present procedure makes it too difficult for students who are upset with an ASUI official to express their point of view.

Finally, remember the ballot will ask your opinion of what should be done with the space where the Fieldhouse used to be, near the Arboretum, behind Memorial Gym.

Committee praised

To the Editor:

This past Tuesday we had an excellent presentation by the ASUI Issues and Forums Committee. They had Bob Clampett speak; the creator of Bugs Bunny and a host of other characters very familiar to us all in the world of animation. The SUB Ballroom was filled and you could tell by the boisterous response of the audience that they enjoyed the show very much. I personally would like to thank Devon Cuddy, the chairperson of the Issues and Forum Committee. Devon worked very hard for weeks to put the show on. It is the tremendous work done by people such as Devon that break up the monotony of school and provide students with an opportunity to hear a good speaker. Congratulations Devon; We appreciate your effort.

Church propoganda

To the Editor:

Ever since my arrival in the United States, and particularly to this campus, I have become very distressed by the vast quantities of Christian propoganda that adorn walls and command bulletin boards.

I am well aware of the fact that there are others, many others, who share my feelings on this subject. I am not one who is inclined to press my beliefs upon other individuals but I have grown weary of the blind, unyielding battery of Christian propoganda and lies.

I should not have to tolerate the subjective barrage of Christian untruths. I cannot possibly accept an ancient piece of literature such as the Bible as it reeks of physical and anatomical absurdities.

Perhaps someday Christians will realize that there are individuals who are totally uninterested in the Church's polytheist bunk and perchance Christians will even cease their fervent, if not futile, attempts to jam their beliefs down our throats.

Brad Preston

By BILL LOFTUS
Between 700 and 800 people were in the SUB Ballroom last Tuesday night, November 9. They were there for an ASUI Issues and Forums Committee program that was scheduled for 8 p.m. Bob Clampett was to give the program, a history of animated cartoons from Gertie the Dinosaur through Bugs Bunny to Fritz the Cat. Clampett is famous in the cartoon industry for his own work in animation and for creating Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, Sylvester, Tweety, Beany and Cecil, the Sea Sick Sea Serpent, Daffy Duck, Elmer Fudd, Beaky Buzzard, and Yosemite Sam. He also designed the original Mickey Mouse doll that Walt Disney marketed.

Bob Clampett started in the cartoon business early. When he was "12 or 13" he already had a contract with the Hearst newspaper syndicate stating that he was to start working for them as a cartoonist when he finished high school for the respectable wage of 75 dollars a month.

He never did go to work for Hearst. After designing the Mickey Mouse doll and its subsequent acceptance by Disney, one thing led to another and he wound up working for Warner Brothers' Studios, shortly after his high school graduation, in 1931. It was here that he helped create the first animated Tweety cartoon called "Beauty and the Beast."

The lecture part of his program included the history of animated cartoons, anecdotes about his years in the business, and some of the original cartoons of his characters. Mr. Clampett told about the first use of cartoons between Vaudeville Burlesque acts, one of which was Windsor McKay's

"Gertie the Dinosaur". There were also early pictures of the Warner Brothers' Studios, and other famous people associated with the business like Carl Stalling, Mel Blanc, and Rudy Iking.

His anecdotes included a story about girl-watching and its consequences for the cartoon department on the Warner Brothers' lot and several about the cartoonists' battles with the censors.

It was during the early years of cartoons that censors were even calling swinging cow udders obscene and requiring that they be clothed or left out. Tweety was feather-less originally, but under the threat of censorship, Clampett painted him yellow to simulate feathers. As a result of the tight censorship the cartoonists began to put in outrageous things for the pre-release studio audience, knowing that the censors would only cut them out. Bob brought in one of his own jokes on the censors that somehow managed to escape them. The joke was an allusion to self stimulation on the part of Elmer Fudd's dog in a cartoon entitled "A Stitch in Time." The dog (a male) was dragging its hindquarters around on a rug to get rid of a flea when it stopped, faced the audience, and said, "I'd better stop this; I might get to like it."

The early animations included some early Bugs Bunny, Beany and Cecil, Daffy Duck, and Tweety cartoons among them. The other part of Bob Clampett's program included a large number of early sketches of his characters and other peoples' work as they appeared at various stages in cartoons.

He also stayed for about an hour and a half after he finished with his lecture to give autographs and to answer questions. When asked about why they weren't making the cartoons the same way and the same quality that they used to, he replied that the cost for a similar cartoon today would run "at least 125,000 dollars" which was more than the studios could afford to produce for the average $25 a week rental fees. He also answered questions about the current state of the industry and where he thought cartoons were headed for. Surprisingly (for a 60-plus year old man) one of his favorite pieces of animation in recent years was Ralph Bakshi's "Fritz the Cat." He said, "at least it was something different." Fitting in with that statement was another one about why Saturday morning cartoons aren't successful anymore. "Blahh!" he said. "They aren't any fun anymore. They're all written at the typewriter now with no integration of the visual part, and there isn't any cooperation with the gag writers anymore." His visit was also useful to art students as he visited several art classes on campus. He also helped improve the U of I's image in the community by going and talking with a Junior high art class in Moscow.

GSA backs Limbaugh

Citing his intention to appoint a graduate advisor to his cabinet, as a major influencing factor, the executive board of the Graduate Student Association announced its endorsement of Mark Limbaugh as ASUI president at a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Besides his proposed inclusion of a graduate student in his cabinet, the executive board supports Limbaugh because he seems both receptive to the unique problems of graduate students on campus as well as having a general understanding of the ASUI.

Another recent development within the organization of the ASUI Senate was the trimming of their $2250 budget request to $600 upon recommendation of the Finance Committee last Tuesday.

Speaking before the twelve members of the executive board were four ASUI presidential candidates: Lynn Tominaga, Gary Kidwell, Tom LaPointe, and Limbaugh. Vice-presidential candidate Gary Quigley and Senate candidate Dave McClure also gave a short speech.

During the rather routine speeches of the candidates, attention seemed focused on the problem of the University's relations with the state legislature and taxpayers. In the question and answer period which followed, however, there were several interesting issues raised.

If graduate students on assistanceships were to strike because of the changeover in fee structure, all four presidential candidates present at the meeting agreed to support the strike, if every alternate channel of action had been exhausted.

Emphasizing that they doubted that graduates would have to resort to such extremes, the candidates sympathized with the graduates over the $50 semester fee increase.

The 400 graduate students on assistanceships are denied ASUI privileges as they are not technically full-time students, but they may shoulder as much responsibility. The candidates suggested earmarking the $50 fee specifically for a graduate studies program. Services for graduate students such as the library and various lab facilities could be improved. Currently, the money goes into a general fund.

To enable graduates to take advantage of specific privileges such as lower fees at the University Golf Course, which is included in the $17.50 paid by full-time students, Limbaugh suggested making the fee optional. Any student, graduate, or undergraduate, could then have greater say in what privileges he pays for.

Kidwell objected on the ground that such a procedure would be totally unrealistic. Citing the food service at the SUB as an example, as it is under the auspices of the ASUI, Kidwell said it would be nearly impossible to check an ID for every student who wanted to buy a hamburger at the SUB.

Commenting that he had more questions for graduates than perhaps they had for him, vice-presidential candidate Quigley asked for feedback to an article appearing in last year's Argonaut which stated that out of 119 graduate programs offered at the U of I, 90 were not up to the standards of the Board of Regents.

Quantitative standards would be a more accurate phrase, responded Betty Devereux, acting president for the Graduate Student Association. The quality of graduate programs is largely ignored at the U of I, according to Devereux, as Regents measure the number of MA's graduating in a department and use this statistic as a standard.

Referring to the ASUI's ratification of $600 for the association, Devereux remarked, "Six hundred dollars is a meager return for the $9000 that graduates put into the ASUI," she explained. That the rationale given by the Senate for reducing the requested budget was that the organization is a new group and should not be given more money than it can handle.

Although the funds are allotted for the Graduate Student Association, the money may be used only for communications and office supplies. Expenses set aside for guest speakers and programs in the proposed budget were entirely cut out. As the association serves as a political base as well as a social group for graduates, this is of particular concern.

Emphasizing his extreme personal bias, English graduate student, Gene Dworetzky commented that "graduate needs will never be fulfilled under the ASUI," but he quickly added, "It's a start and we need that."

Students probe fees, sports, K-Mart

By ROSEMARY HAMMER

Why did the U of I schedule the fall semester to end Dec. 21? Now people who live East of Idaho cannot drive home for Christmas. They have to fly or miss Christmas day, and Santa does not like that. Mark Ibanez

Popular opinion aside, the administration is not plotting to ruin everybody's holiday. According to Tom Richardson, student and administrative vice president, a certain number of instructional days are other source, Bob Coonrod, academic vice president replied, "We'd be glad to do it if we can find where that other place is, and if it is legal and feasible." I've been listening lately to some ASUI candidates pushing to have more student input for the selection of the new university president. How much say do students really have in administrative appointments? Tim Ryan

The Presidential Search Committee is comprised of 2 students, 5 faculty members, university. No replacement has yet been found for Dr. Hartung, whose resignation will be official June 5, 1977. According to Bob Coonrod, academic vice president, Dr. Hartung wants to leave the new president with as much flexibility as possible. Thus, he wants to make sure he doesn't make any commitments for his replacement.

I'm new here, and a little confused about the tuition for grad students. It seems a little strange that grads have to pay, because grads have less money than anyone. It is my understanding that they will not be allowed to attend part time, either. Doyle Albert

Ronald Stark, acting graduate school dean, explains that graduate programs cost more for the university to operate. Graduates require more sophisticated facilities, travel and take much more of an instructor's time. "Graduates get fringes you don't have in the undergraduate level, such as a lower student-faculty ratio," he said. However, grads are allowed to attend part-time, and a per-credit fee can be utilized.

Just because ASUI concerts are starting to make a little money, I don't see why the administration has to step in and take over. I'm curious why they've decided to step in just now. Why not before? Eric Givens

Damage done at the Doobie Brothers concert prompted administrators to oversee future concerts. Sherman Carter thinks that

Why does the University put so much emphasis on a losing football team, and so little on minor sports? not everybody is cut out to be football players. Bill Curran.

Leon Green, athletic director, explains that football, basketball, track and cross country are all traditional sports here, and there simply isn't enough money to fund all minor sports. Part of the funding for these major sports comes from the pockets of enthusiastic alumni. Green went on to say that the intramural program at this university is among the best, giving all students with desire to play an opportunity to do so. In other words, football has been here since 1903, so tough cookies, you upstart rugby and soccer players.

I would like to know if they are going to increase fees. Why can't they take money from someplace else, instead of making the students pay for everything? Denise Young.

There was an agenda item to fund all intercollegiate athletics through student fees, but it has not been approved by the regents. When the Board convenes the first week of December, they will discuss fees, and much depends on what is decided at this meeting. As to taking money from some

There are no formal standards for student representation for the appointment of various

Is the new K-Mart on university property? Brandy Holve

Yes, the K-Mart people are leasing university land, according to the business office.

Why does the administration feel they have power over the Kibbie Dome? Bill Poitevin

According to Dr. Sherman Carter, financial vice president, the regents hold the university responsible for the care of all its facilities, including the Kibbie Dome.

Presidential candidates profiled

By DON WILLIAMS

The Argonaut now presents the ASUI Presidential candidates. There are six and they are: Tom LaPointe, graduate, history; Mark Limbaugh, junior, business management-economics; Gary Kidwell, senior, speech; Lynn Tominaga, senior, agriculture; Jay Williams, junior, mathematics; and Mike Gallagher, junior, radio-television. The Vice-Presidential contenders will be on page 16.

LaPointe is running for the presidential office because he believes that he can learn from the successes and failures of the past ASUI presidents because he has attended school here for several years. "I think I can analyse them and improve the student government," he replied. An example LaPointe cited was the "bargaining away of a large fee increase for many smaller ones."

He is in support of the recall procedure change, because the number of students necessary now to remove an unsatisfactory executive or senator is too large. LaPointe would like to encourage more ASUI projects to become paying projects. To help facilitate this effort, he proposes an expansion of the bookstore and outdoor programs such as the golf course. There is also a need for more funding for the communications department.

Two ideas he had specifically for the golf course would be to make it the storehouse for the outdoor department and maybe put in a small ice rink. This, added to a possible beer license for it would draw more money out to the facility, making it more self-sufficient. As far as obtaining a liquor license for the SUB is concerned, he said, he is interested, but there are some city laws that would have to be changed first. "It would be more realistic to sell it at the golf course."

The current parking proposal, LaPointe thought was a mistake. He believes that it makes it harder for students to fight small increases, therefore making it easier for those who would want the students to pay more.

He also feels that the P-D-I option is wrong because "a passing grade to my knowledge of the definition is anything above an 'F'."

"I ran mainly," says Limbaugh, "because I saw things as a senator that I will be able to do as president." He added that he was not running on his past experience alone but also several programs that he has lined out and will implement once in office. As president, he would add a "little more enthusiasm and a little more student involvement" to the job.

Limbaugh supports more student involvement in the executive branch, he is also planning an assistant program with one graduate and two undergraduate positions. Secondly, better public relations with the state and more student support. Thirdly, he plans to get a base of communication with the new U of I president. Limbaugh would also like to "provide more services for students" and try to increase the efficiency of the SUB and golf course. The sixth program would be to make some arrangement with the administration that would allow dormitory residents to use their meal tickets in the SUB on weekends. He believes that it will be tough to get the administration to agree with that proposal. There should also be carpeting in the library, "it has been shoved under the table" too long. Limbaugh stressed the fact that he had additional programs in mind.

According to Limbaugh, the alcohol controversy is hurting our relations with the community and we should get their backing. "We should get a beer license," he said "I think beer on the golf course is a good idea." This would make it easier to take money out of the golf course once it became self-sufficient which would be used for other projects.

Students will have to bear some of the costs that the U of I is faced with, the more frivolous, "there has been a lot of waste in catalogues, charging for them would end some of the waste."

When asked why he was running for the ASUI presidency, Kidwell replied, "I had between 50 and 60 people, who were dissatisfied with the declared candidates at that time, ask me to run." He went on to say he had had experience with the student government and was not unfamiliar with the system.

Some areas that he believes will need special representation from the new president are having a good line of communication with the legislators, the Board of Education, faculty, and the administration. Kidwell has worked for the legislative action program which he believes has opened a good line of communications with the legislators. The ASUI president will have to be able to communicate well with the new president. A bill he introduced that will be on the ballot is the constitutional amendment lowering the number of signatures needed for a recall election. Institution of an annual examination of programs to find which ones serve a useful function is a concept Kidwell said he would like to see. He also thinks that the Argonaut editor should be a one year post "with no senatorial control of the editor," this would limit the political overtones in the position.

"No presidential candidate can guarantee alcohol on campus," Kidwell said, "although I would be willing to strive to it. It is dependent on the outcome of the current lawsuit on drinking in the dormitories."

He said that user's fees for certain things would be acceptable, such as computer cards or catalogues, that are now

Campaign spending

The six candidates for ASUI President have been spending both their own and solicited contributions in this year's campaign. The Argonaut asked each candidate to estimate how much money he would spend by the end of the campaign Wednesday, and although perhaps the biggest spending candidate wouldn't tell, the other five provided the paper with the figures.

Candidate Jay Williams, who had been advertising daily on a local commercial radio station and has placed posters throughout the campus told the Argonaut his campaign budget was "none of your business," although he did say he would discuss the matter after the election.

Candidate spending by the other five candidates is as follows: Tom La Pointe, $160; Mike Gallagher, $125; Mark Limbaugh, $120; Lynn Tominaga, $100; and Gary Kidwell, $60.

wasting money. Kidwell added that the current parking proposal should be re-examined.

Tominaga is running because he is concerned about the cost of education. His major argument is that in the past the ASUI has been inconsistent and therefore the Board of Regents and the State Legislators have been untrustworthy of the students. "I hope to try to present programs to educate the people of the state and try and show them that the students are responsible for the direction of their education."

One project would be to let students have control over some of the money that goes into the athletic budget. He believes that if the students would like some of the minor athletic sports funded they should be. To be able to do this it is necessary that the students gain the trust of the Board of Regents by showing responsibility. There is also a need for the university to have better communication within and outside of the university, especially in the southern part of the state. He stressed the need for a credible student government that would be able to plan the way the students would like to see the university go.

To help fight the fee increases, Tominaga also thought that it would be wise to hire a full time lobbyist for the U of I.

He expressed concern over the feasibility of the administration of a full time bar in the SUB. In his opinion, a full time liquor license would be "too much time, too much money, and too much hassle." Tominaga is in favor of a beer license for the golf course and a caterers license for banquets and similar events in the SUB.

Tominaga is also opposed to users fees because once initiated, no matter how small they are, it will snowball on the students. It would be a removal of necessary restrictions.

"I pay $1200 a year in nonresident tuition," remarked Williams, that is great incentive for becoming president, so that I can do something about stopping further fee increases."

"Men overlook a lot of things that women have to concern themselves with," Williams explained, "like walking across campus late at night." A project that he would like to institute as president would be creating an escort service for those women on campus who might have second thoughts about going out after dark, alone, especially during the winter, when it gets dark early. This service could also be expanded to service wives of students. A problem he has experienced as a math major is punching out computer cards. University students have been forced to wait while high school students finish their class in fortran before being able to punch their cards. Has he thinks is ridiculous, why in an institution for college students are high school students given privilege over those who attend on a regular basis? If it has to continue he would like to set up a room in the SUB that could hold two or three key-punch machines that could be run on a pay-as-you-punch basis. Williams said that he would like to see liquor in the Kibbie Dome, "at least," he said, "beer and wine." He continued by saying that adult students should be allowed to drink because they have the right.

Fee increases he said, whether they be as tuition or user fees, should be shouldered by the state legislature so that "students would not have to bear the brunt of the burden. He

Idaho stalks Grizzlies

By JIM BORDEN

You'd think that with only two games left in the season, and no way for the Vandals to win the Big Sky championship, Idaho coaches and players would chalk up the year to experience and turn their heads to the 1977 football season.

No way, said Andy Christoff, Vandal defensive coordinator. "We have an opportunity to become the fourth winning Vandal team since 1943, and if we win both of these last two, we can have the second best record in Vandal history."

He told the Argonaut that a winning season gives "personal pride in starting a winning tradition in football here. When those starters come back on the field next fall, they can have confidence they're winners."

Christoff also added that a winning team is a big asset when the Vandals start recruiting freshman and junior college players.

"We'd like to be able to offer a winning team. We already have a great facility, and an excellent academic program," both of which, he said, make the Vandal program look that much better.

Should the Vandals beat their last two opponents of the year, they would end up with a 7-4 record, second only to their 8-3 record of 1971.

Another aid in recruiting, he said, would be the new IA division. The new NCAA classification might mean playoff games for the Vandals and some television exposure.

As Christoff put it, "we would be a big fish in a small pond instead of a small fish in a big pond."

But right now, the Vandals are concentrating on beating the University of Montana Grizzlies in the Dome tomorrow.

But the U of M is pretty tough, despite losses this season to Northern Arizona and conference champ Montana State.

Among the starters on their offensive line, are 260, 270, and 280 pounders which Christoff says, lets them run well, screen people off, and makes their small backs hard to see.

Idaho head coach Ed Troxel said of the Grizzlies, "Montana is perhaps the biggest team we'll face all year. I know they are the biggest in our conference."

The Idaho defense was plagued early this year by injuries, but is healthy again. So the offense has taken its cue and come up with the late-season injuries, among them offensive lineman Clarence Hough who is out for the season.

Expected back in action against the Grizzlies are quarterback Craig Juntunen and fullback Kevin McAfee, although Rocky Tuttle is expected to start at quarterback and Tim Lappano and Robert Brooks will start in the backfield.

Four other Big Sky teams play tomorrow, Boise State faces Idaho State in Pocatello, Northern Arizona plays host to Weber State, and league champ Montana State is at the University of Hawaii in a non-conference game.

Kickoff for the Idaho-Montana battle is scheduled for 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Kibbie Dome.

Women are moving on

By MIKE PERRYMAN

If it's going to be a big year for athletics at the U of I, and it certainly looks that way, the women's field hockey team is more than deserving of a chunk of the glory.

In last weekend's on-the-road tilt in Ellensburg, Wash., Idaho walked away with one defeat and three wins. They also established a new record for most wins in one season.

Idaho's only loss came at the hands of WWSC, 1-0. The second game, on Saturday, brought better results when sophomore Vikki Howard scored Idaho's only goal to edge by Pacific Lutheran, 1-0.

On Sunday morning, it was Idaho again, pounding their way to victory over BSU, 2-1. Scoring for Idaho was sophomore Karen Stambaugh and junior Cindy Sydnor.

By the time the U of I played her final game Sunday, adrenalin was flowing and spirits were high as she trounced WSU 3-0.

This weekend, the Idaho squad will be on the road again travelling south to Nampa where they will meet interstate rivals BSU and Northwest Nazarene. Idaho will meet BSU Friday at 4:00 and NNC on Saturday at 11:00.

These are the last two games that the women's field hockey team has slated in regular season action.

In other women's action this weekend, U of I women's volleyball will be making its way to the University of Oregon Invitational at Eugene.

Idaho is among eight teams that will be competing in the two day event. Other teams entered include; EWSC, WWSC, Oregon College of Education, Southern Oregon State College, MSU and the U of O. Our women go into the tournament with a record of 14-9.

Action for Idaho will get under way Friday at 6:30 p.m., when they challenge the squad from WWSC.

On Saturday, Idaho will face the U of O in an 8 a.m. bout and OCE at 4 p.m.

In previous week's action, the U of I netters managed to capture a fourth place in the large school division of the Northwest College Women's Sports Association Eastern Area Tournament held at WSU.

All other turntables are now obsolete.

Introducing the Accutrac 4000.

Its father was a turntable. Its mother was a computer.

The Accutrac 4000 is the most radical new idea in record playing technology since the introduction of the LP.

It's a marriage of solid state integrated circuitry, microelectronics, and the latest in direct drive engineering. We've replaced hundreds of mechanical parts with efficient, silent electronics. In fact, the functions of nearly 10,000 transistors are being performed by just two logic chips.

The result: The Accutrac 4000 is the most accurate, reliable, noiseless turntable ever invented. And it even lets you re-arrange selections on a record to hear them in the order you want.

The Accutrac 4000 reaches new lows...
Wow, and that's all down to an computerized digital WE-M-S-Kumble = 70dB (DIN B). Tracking error is more 3.4 g's. And to make it even more ideal, it's 10 Hz.

Our direct drive motor brings the massive direct drive platter to full speed instantly. And keeps it there with the help of roller bearings which have a 100,000 hour life.

There's a way a turntable can be made perfect. Now, listen to the selections on a record in the order you want.

Once we developed the Accutrac 4000, we had to ask: How do we get the most out of it? The answer: We had to make it work. Instead of just listening to the record, we had to make the playing order of the selections...

Keep the music you love...
The Accutrac 4000... push up...
button.

Suppose you want to hear selections 5, 3, and 7. Simply press the buttons marked 5, 3 and 7. In fact, you can pre-set these sequences with any combination of up to 24 commands.

And if you don't want to leave your chair to give the orders, hear it in by cordless remote control with the transmitter (lower left) and receiver (above).

The Accutrac 4000 system also lets you play records as sensitively as possible. It takes better care of records than any turntable possible.

The arm your fingers never have to touch. Because the tonearm is electrically driven, not manual, you never risk dropping it accidentally and scratching a record. It's damage free.

The reason for this is power. The Accutrac 4000 has a motor that drives the head that reads the surface of the record and does it with 100 times the accuracy of any other turntable.

And it does it with precision. The Accutrac 4000 has a motor that drives the platter at the speed of 33 1/3 rpm. You'll hear the difference.

And the Accutrac 4000 has a motor that drives the platter at the speed of 33 1/3 rpm. You'll hear the difference.

And the Accutrac 4000 has a motor that drives the platter at the speed of 33 1/3 rpm. You'll hear the difference.

Arg picks Vandals, 'Cats

By CHARLES REITH

There are three conference games and one non-conference game in Big Sky action this weekend. Since Montana State claimed the Big Sky Championship last weekend with an overwhelming win, the rest of the standings will be decided this weekend or the next. Second place is still up for grabs with Montana, Northern Arizona, and the Vandals in the running.

In the first conference game this weekend, Boise State travels to Pocatello to tangle with the Idaho State Bengals. Both of these teams have yet to win a conference game although the Broncos have a better overall record than Idaho State. The Bengals can be tough at home, as the Vandals found out, but then again they will have to contend with quarterback Dee Pickett. The question remains; can the defense come up big? Yes, but can the offense pull out a win? Maybe, but they will have to wait awhile. Boise State 28 Idaho State 20.

Weber State could play the role of spoilers this weekend as they soar into Flagstaff after coming off with an impressive win over South Dakota State last weekend. On the other hand, the Northern Arizona Lumberjacks will be trying to redeem themselves after last week's embarrassing defeat by Montana State. If Rod Bockwoldt fills the air with footballs, this game could be close, but then again Weber State's defense remains a question mark. Northern Arizona might let out their revenge on the Wildcats. Northern Arizona 32 Weber State 18.

The Vandals return to the Kibbie Dome this weekend to host the Montana Grizzlies of Missoula. The Grizzlies, in the past, have always given the Vandals trouble when it comes to winning football games. Montana's defense and offense is underrated, but hopefully the Vandals have seen what the Grizzlies are capable of. A case in point was when they held Montana State scoreless for three quarters. The last time the Grizzlies played in Moscow, the Vandals had to come from behind two touchdowns to tie them. (35-35). However, if the Vandal offense is rolling this weekend the scoreboard should be doing the same thing. Idaho 38 Montana 25.

Montana State travels to Honolulu to tangle with the University of Hawaii. The game will signify the end of an enjoyable vacation for the Bobcats. Montana State 33 University of Hawaii 14.

Character is hard to measure

By CRAIG CARTER

Clarence Hough's career as a football player for the U of I ended last weekend as the result of a severe knee injury. He left the game like most offensive linemen, unnoticed by the majority of fans and sportswriters. Little do they know that when Hough walked off the field the career of one of Idaho's most outstanding offensive guards ended.

Head coach Ed Troxel seems to agree with that. "I can't say enough about Clarence. In the past ten years he's been one of the top three guards to play for Idaho," Troxel said. Offensive coordinator John McMahon called Hough "one of the best offensive guards we've ever had." During the season Hough had been one of the highest graded players for his work on the field by the Vandal coaching staff. To be that highly valued by the coaches is an accomplishment in itself but the fact that week in and week out Hough played so well is an indication of the type of football player he was.

Hough had a tremendous season and doesn't have too many regrets outside of his injury. "I'm pleased with my season considering my limitations. I did as well as I could," he commented. The high point of the season for Hough was the Boise State game. The low point was, obviously, this week as he spent the entire time in the hospital. Hough wanted to make sure that if this article was printed to thank all of the people that came to see him.

Character is a hard thing to measure in a person. To give you an idea of the character of Hough, when he hurt his knee, rather than come out of the game, he stayed in for one more play, which resulted in a Vandal score. If that isn't character, ...?

Up With People!

By DAVID NEIWERT

Up With People, the internationally-known youth musical production, will appear in concert in the U of I Memorial Gym, at 8 p.m., Monday, Nov. 15.

They are an independent, nonprofit, educational organization peopled by youths between the ages of 17 and 25. Approximately five hundred youths participate in the program world-wide; there are five casts in the organization, each one composed of ninety people.

The youths participating in the program are not paid; rather, they pay their way in to the show. While they are performing, they are also learning academic skills on the side. Those participating pay $400.00 annually; however, most of them are sponsored by individual parties, such as businesses or civic groups.

Up With People was formed in 1968 by a businessman named J. Blanton Belk, who saw the turmoil often associated with the nation's youth. He decided that he wanted to give them a chance to show their good side. As a result, he formed the group, whose act centers around the positive side of humanity, tries to stress those qualities, and encourage the audience to do so in their daily lives.

There will be a meeting in the Chief's Room in the SUB Monday at 3 p.m. for any students interested in joining the program. Films and slides will be shown.

Album Preview

By PATRICK ERICKSEN

TO BE PREVIEWED TONIGHT, FRIDAY, NOV. 12, on KUOI-FM, 89.3

New York Mary--A PIECE OF THE APPLE

There isn't anyone in this group that I've ever heard of but they play some pretty good jazz on this album. It's sort of a mixture between swing music (Glenn Miller style) and progressive jazz, complete with synthesizers and crashing percussion. The use of horns here is the highlight, I think. On some of these cuts, the horn section sounds so smooth, and the music so mellow, they could almost pass for a less hip Tower of Power. "Midnight Magic" really soothes the head if you're looking for an alternative to heavy metal madness. But it's a highlight, as the rest of the album is less laid back, more the rambling type jazz format. I don't think any groundbreaking work is done here.

TO BE PREVIEWED SATURDAY, AT 10:10 pm.

Felix Pappalardi--"CREATION"

You all remember Felix, he used to do some work for a band called CREAM back in the sixties, until he met a guitarist named Lesley West, and together they formed MOUNTAIN, and were responsible for some fine albums, most noteworthy being "Nantucket Sleighride," an excellent album. Well, if this album is the best he can come up with now, I think Felix should carefully study whether his future lies in production of records, at which he is pretty good, or performing on them, at which, at least on this turkey, he is terrible. He's surrounded himself with some musicians from Japan, whose names are so difficult to pronounce, that on the jacket they are reduced to ludicrous nicknames like Sugar, Daybreak, or Flash. Throw in sappy music like "Ballad of a Sad Cafe," and you've got the most boring waste of time outside of an ASUI campaign speech you're likely to run across in the next week or so.

TO BE PREVIEWED SUNDAY, AT 10:10 p.m.

Hubert Laws--"ROMEO AND JULIET"

I swear that I've heard the title cut of this album used as background music for some commercial lately, I think it was peddling Geritol or something. That kind of spoiled it for me at first, but in time I grew to like this album a lot. It's great music to study by, unobtrusive yet entertaining. Very similar to Tim Weisberg, so similar in fact that the two are practically indistinguishable. I couldn't really recommend Hubert Laws over Weisberg, I think that Weisberg melodies are much nicer, (more commercial too, as Laws experiments with rhythms a great deal more, sometimes soloing more than Weisberg will). And of course, Laws is much more Jazz-Oriented than is Weisberg, so I imagine your feelings for this album will hinge on your appreciation of jazz. It kind of reminds me of an old Herbie Mann album, "London Underground," and that's good.

TO BE PREVIEWED ON MON., NOV. 15, at 10:10 p.m.

Robb Strandlund--"ROBB STRANLUND"

This album is getting heavy airplay on the CW stations in the west, and even some progressive rock stations, in the SF Bay area for example, which explains what it's doing in our preview racks. Robb Strandlund is pure country, not at all country-rock. Although he has written some widely accepted rock tunes, most notably "Already Gone," which he co-wrote with Jack Tempchin, whose FUNKY KINGS album appeared favorably in these pages some time back. That song turned into a hit when the Eagles made a rocker out of it, but it's done in a completely country version here by Strandlund, and remarkably well, too. The only musician of real note who plays on this album is Dallas Taylor, who plays drums throughout. A version of the Parsons-Ethridge classic, "Hot Burrito Number 1" is included, but I don't think it packs the punch that the original version did. This is overall a pleasing album, though, and bound to do well on the Country charts.

Campus Chest Week: a display of talents

Campus Chest week continued on the U of I campus, with beer chugging, pie eating and legs contests, as well as an un-talent show and Mr. Ugly Man/Miss Campus Chest events.

Charity fund raising concludes tonight with a free Campus Chest Dance from 9 until midnight in the SUB Ballroom.

Intern applications available

Application blanks for state legislative internships are available from the Secretary of the Political Science Department. The internships last the length of the Idaho legislative session--about nine weeks. The internships begin the first week in January and interns will be notified of their appointment about December 4th.

Anyone wishing to learn more about the legislative internships are urged to contact Professor Duncombe in room 207 of the Administration Building or telephone him at 885-6120.

Internship applications must be submitted by November 15th.

Sexism in the media: aspects and attitudes

"Sexism in Media Employment" will be the topic of a two-part panel discussion Thursday Nov. 18, at the U of I.

Media Professionals from Idaho and Washington, in fields including advertising, public relations, broadcast and print journalism, will participate as panelists. Sponsored by the U of I student chapter of Women In Communications, Inc., the program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Appaloosa Room of the SUB.

The program will consist of two panels of five individuals each, covering sexist attitudes in media employment, ways of handling those attitudes without getting fired, techniques to use to avoid being sexist, and "reverse discrimination" against males in the media.

Panelists include Loris Jones, reporter, Daily Idahoian, Shirley Mix, owner of the AD-1 advertising agency, Art Hook, general manager for KUID-TV, Joyce Campbell, program director for KUID-TV, and William Stellmon, head of the U of I Agricultural Information Office, all of Moscow; Jay Shelledy, assistant managing editor, Lewiston Morning Tribune.

Quigley-Scott vie for VP

By DON WILLIAMS

The two Vice-Presidential candidates are Gary Quigley, sophomore, accounting and Scott Allen, senior, political science-English. Next Tuesday, there will be a comparison of the candidates and a short discussion on the two referendums and the one special question.

Quigley believes that the office of Vice-president will play an increasing role in the governing of the ASUI. He is running because the full potential of the office "has been realized in the past."

Some areas that Quigley would like to devote himself to is the joining together of the students, faculty, and administration for the appropriations of more adequate funds for the U of I.

He thinks that the ASUI should try for the cheapest increase in fees that is possible, in the long run. There may be a need to implement user fees to supply the money, such as a charge for the school catalog and time schedule.

Within the next two or three years state funds will be withdrawn from intercollegiate athletics and the students will have to decide which sports they will want to support. It is not unreasonable to expect an increase of at least $50 to support these teams.

The alcohol policy, according to Quigley has not as yet been addressed but the one possible starting point for it would be the golf course. This change should be made slowly, he added, so that any embarrassing situations may be avoided.

Allen has been active as a legislative action program co-ordinator and promotions manager, along with attending various other institutions around the world and he believes that the experience he has gained from these will make him a good vice-presidential candidate.

He believes that improving the ASUI student communications will enhance added that if there is no way of getting out of a fee increase, the legislature should increase funding first.

Gallagher is running for the presidency "because I have a real concern that the student voice, which is so important, continues to play a large part in helping determine our future when it comes to the cost of education." He also mentioned his belief in the need for more student input on other important issues.

It is necessary that student involvement increases or at least maintains at its present level, he said, because that is how the ASUI has progressed to this point. The position needs a good manager with the necessary experience to run the student organization.

"We need to set up a good communications structure involving interested students dealing with higher education, financing, dealing with the Board of Regents, the legislature and the administration." He explained, adding that there was a definite need for two-way communication between the students and the student government. "I have already started working on programs that would improve our effectiveness," remarked Gallagher.

Liquor should "definitely be sold on campus," but within the legal limits. A couple of legal matters would have to be settled first, he added, one would be the regent's policy and second, the city zoning policy. "Thanks to an active student effort we've made significant progress in dealing with the regent's policy," Gallagher added. There is also the lawsuit to be decided and it is still not known whether or not it will be an open hearing or a regular court case.

He believes that any user fees should be determined by the students and not forced upon them. There should also be a committee to represent the students at University budget hearings.

the student government. A weekly newsletter will be an integral part of this communication. It will contain information on issues that would directly affect the students and possibly some social events. This newsletter would be sent to all of the living groups and put in convenient places around the university to inform the students.

A catalogue fee would be ridiculous because most of these should be free services anyway. If the students had to give the money, he said, then it should go into academics.

Alcohol sales on campus would "generate revenue and it would pull the golf course out of the mud."
