Football at Idaho

Setting a new tradition

The Idaho Vandals saw their signal five times Saturday night as they wrapped up the school's second best season ever with a win over the Northern Arizona University Lumberjacks 31-14 in Kibbie Dome.

Idaho now stands 7-4 on the season, second only to the 8-3 record of the 1971 team, and holds a 5-1 Big Sky conference record for sole possession of second place. The 1976 season marked the fourth winning year the Vandals have had since World War II.

Instrumental in the finale win were the Idaho defense which head coach Ed Troxel said kept Idaho in the game in the early going, and running back Robert Taylor who rushed for 201 yards, including a touchdown run of 72 yards to lead the Vandal offense.

Regents consider new fee

By BILL LEWIS

Proposed fee increases, new traffic regulations and a change in the U of I's pass-fail option will be on the Idaho Board of Regent's agenda for its December meeting next week.

Meeting December 2-3 in Boise, the regents will consider a proposed $10 application fee and a fee increase for part-time students at the U of I. The application fee replaces a proposed fee for the school's catalogue and will be charged to all students upon their acceptance at the school.

Part-time students' fees will increase by $5 a semester, to make up for a funding shortage in the Kibbie-ASUI Dome. Under the proposal, the new fees would amount to $25 per credit for resident students and $30 per credit for non-resident students, and is designed to help cover an estimated $27,000 deficit in Dome operations this year.

The university plans other moves to make up for the lost money, in addition to the fee increase proposal, including charging higher rental fees for athletic contests and concerts held in the facility.

The regents will also consider new traffic regulations at the meeting, designed to aid the school in enforcing a paid parking program to be instituted next semester.

The new traffic rules would allow the school to tow away illegally parked cars, or place a device on them preventing the owners from moving the autos. The rules were explained to U of I faculty and staff members earlier this year by Business Manager Don Amos, who said the school would not use such stringent actions against all parking violators, but only against chronic offenders.

The regents approved the paid parking proposal for the university at their October meeting in Moscow, and asked the university administration to present the new enforcement regulations to the board before the parking program went into effect.

A change in the school's pass-fail policy, which would stop the practice of recording D's as passing grades will also be considered by the board. Sent to the regents by the university faculty, the proposal would make Pass, D and Fail the possible grades under the pass-fail program for undergraduate students, while Pass and Fail grades, with D's recorded as failing would be possible for graduate students.

According to supporters of the measure, who sent it to the regents at a university faculty meeting earlier this year, the changes would heighten academic standards at the school, tightening university grading procedures.

The change is supported by the university administration and accompanied by two other proposed academic changes. One change would limit to one year the maximum amount of time a student has to remove an incomplete grade, while the other would require approval from the Administrative Council before graduate students would be allowed to take more than 10 credits during the summer session.

The limit in removing incompletes will prevent requests for longer extensions, according to university officials, who say some students have requested five and ten year extensions in removing incomplete grades. The graduate student credit limit is designed to provide a more thorough review of graduate student loads.

Dinner theater

"You can't take it with you"

Firecrackers have been found but requests are still being sent out to locate live snakes for the Moscow Community Theatre production of "You Can't Take It With You," the hilarious comedy with a moral underpinning.

Slated to open Nov. 30 at 7 p.m. as a dinner theatre, the play, which is the first venture of the community group, will run through Dec. 2 in the U of I Student Union Ballroom. Tickets, available at the SUB, are $6.00 which includes the price of a buffet dinner. The dinner will be served at 7 p.m. followed by the play at 8 p.m.

Although "You Can't Take It With You" is a nostalgic comedy focussing on the amiable antics of the crazy Vanderhof and Sycamore family, the play is more than a frivolous comedy the audience simply comes to laugh at, according to director Ed Chavez. Mingled with the hilarious characterizations of the family is a vital message, as perceptive today as in 1936 when the play was originally produced: life is to be enjoyed.

Cafeteria change draws mixed reactions

By ROSEMARY HAMMER

Carpeting, lowered lighting fixtures, natural wood, and an intimate decor...in the Wallace Cafeteria? Yes, indeed. That's what current plans predict by Fall, 1978, if the Board of Regents approve.

When the proposed renovation is complete, the enlarged facility will serve as the only cafeteria for dormitory dwellers. Gault cafeteria will be closed, and perhaps used for special functions. Meal tickets will be replaced by more up to date computer cards, and the old chow line will be no more. Instead, the new cafeteria will feature different meal items at different stations. An all-day snack bar is also on the drawing board.

The U of I housing department estimates the plans will result in annual savings of $50,000. The total cost of renovation is estimated at $1.9 million. But what do students think of all this? In a very unscientific recent survey, Wallace residents seem to be in favor of it, while other students have some reservations.

John Codding, an Upham resident, is not at all pleased by the proposed plans. "It will be crowded," he predicted. "I like smaller areas to eat in."

Like many others, Karen Ingle, a Tower resident, fears the quality of meals will take a sharp plunge. "I'm against it, I don't think the food or service will be as good. I like it better at Gault," she stated.

On the other hand, Cindy

Ogren, a Wallace resident, said, "I'm for it, it will be nicer, and not so crowded." Jay Zoellner a McConnell resident, voiced similar opinions. "It will be good to get everybody together, easier, and it will cut down on expenses" he commented.

Seeing both good and bad in the plan, Kathy Shannon, a Wallace resident remarked, "I think it's a good idea, but it's going to cost a lot. It should be worth it though, since there's supposed to be an increase in students in the next few years. Let's just hope everyone that says they're going to come here shows up."

Diane Holbert doesn't think the present cafeteria system is really all that bad. "The two cafeteria system is good," she said. "I think having only one cafeteria will put too many people in one place," she continued.

"Food prepared in large quantities is never as good," said Barbara Ritter, a Tower resident. She fears a severe reduction of palatability will be one very important result of the remodeled dining facility.

Buses heading to South Idaho

Chartered bus service will be available for University of Idaho students desiring to travel to Twin Falls, Boise or Idaho Falls areas at Christmas time.

The buses are scheduled to leave the Wallace Complex at the university at 5 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 21, and will return Jan. 9, 1977.

The charges will be $38 round trip to Idaho Falls, $32 round trip to Twin Falls, and $26 round trip to Boise. Reservations must be made in advance, and the tickets must also be paid in advance.

Bus travelers may take one suitcase and a small piece of carry-on luggage. There will not be space for skis and other large items.

More information is available from the ASUI Programs Office.

Opinion

Dome fee unfair

It's time for another fee increase.

Not a general increase affecting all students, but this time a fee hike for part time students, to provide money to cover a $27,000 operating deficit for the Kibbie-ASUI Dome.

The Idaho Board of Regents will consider a $5 per credit hour fee increase proposal for part timers at its meeting next week, and although this latest proposal has received less publicity than other past fee increases, it seems just as questionable as increases which have affected all students.

Arguments against past general fee increases also apply to this newest university proposal, including the assertion that the state should pick up a larger tab for higher education in the state, and students should have a larger say in how their money is allocated once it lands in the state's education coffers.

But this time there are new arguments.

If these new funds are to make up a budget deficit in the Kibbie-ASUI Dome, which was never intended to be a financial burden on the university in the first place, why are students overlooked in the administration of the facility?

Why do students have problems in staging their own entertainment events there? If the students are paying for a high priced dome manager and if they are contributing to the dome's operations budget, shouldn't the student Activity Center Board have a say on how the money is spent?

And the regents should finally ask, why does the dome deficit exist?

These questions aren't just important to students. They are important to Idaho taxpayers who at least indirectly will pay for financial misfortunes such as the Kibbie dome. The questions should also be important to the regents who have the option of telling the school some academic justification is needed for increased student fees, and better management is the only answer for financial shortcomings such as that of the Kibbie-ASUI Dome. --BL

Letters

Thank-you

To the Editor:

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to the many people who aided, supported, and voted for me in Wednesday's election. I am looking forward to the opportunity to express their ideas and opinions, which are so desperately needed in the student government at the U. of I. I hope that the senate will become more responsible in its representation of all students.

Thank you again for your support.

Fee unwanted

To the Editor:

In the November 19th issue of the Argonaut I read of Mr. Sherman Carter's proposal to raise part-time student fees by $5 per credit to cover the deficit in funding for Kibbie Center. I think his proposal is incensing to those who are attending the University of Idaho for academic reasons and have little or no interest in Kibbie Dome.

Part-time students are entitled to instructional and library privileges only. Their student activity cards do not permit them free admission to events at the dome (or anywhere else on campus), so why should they be assessed for something they'll have to pay additionally to use if they choose?

A fee increase for additional faculty (or even to keep the two positions threatened in the physics department), or for improvement of programs, or for renovation of buildings, would be tolerable, but to propose raising the fees of part-time students for the benefit of Kibbie Dome, which has already had too much time, effort and money devoted to it, is preposterous.

The emphasis at the University of Idaho should be on nurturing, improving and maintaining the academic climate, not on pumping dollars and energy into a facility that so few of the students care about and truly benefit from.

In October, the regents wisely turned down a proposal to raise activity fees for a similar purpose. I strongly urge them to do the same to this proposal. Let those who use the stadium be additionally assessed for its use or let those involved in the athletic program develop a plan for additional funding from their sports-minded constituency, and allow those who are not interested in the frivolities of Kibbie Dome to hold on to their dollars until a more worthy cause develops.

The Dome, which has been sacred to some administrators, sports fans, and town merchants, is not the shrine at which most the students worship.

It would be wise, if you share my feelings, to write to the Board of Regents immediately. The proposal will be under consideration at the December 2nd and 3rd meeting in Boise.

Informative Arg

To the Editor:

While I was browsing through our school library, and reading my hometown newspaper, I found a stack of papers for U of I, namely your school paper, the Argonaut.

I picked it up to see what type of paper you people up north put out.

I was quite impressed with it.

Not only do you tell about the happenings on your campus, but you seem to let the students know what is happening elsewhere.

Congratulations, on having such an informative paper.

I always look forward to going to the library, not only to read my hometown paper, but also to read the Argonaut.

Propaganda

To the Editor:

Concerning a letter to the editor published in the Argonaut of last Thursday, Nov. 12, entitled Church propaganda, I wish to comment.

The author's concern that Christianity is being jammed down our throats is an unwarranted concern, I feel. The choice to follow Jesus Christ, and believe in Him, can be made only by each individual himself or herself.

No one can make that choice for anyone else. But to deny people the chance to make that choice would, in my opinion, be the same as denying them access to information which would help them to choose to believe or disbelieve the theory of evolution, for example.

The Bible, which I believe gives accounts of God's interactions with man, and

His becoming man in the person of Jesus Christ, is truly an ancient piece of literature. The Bible is also one of the most well documented, best supported pieces of literature in the world today, regarding archeological findings, ancient and modern manuscripts (both Christian and non-Christian), and pure logic. There is neither time nor space to list these facts here. They are already categorized and well referenced in Evidence That Demands a Verdict by Josh McDowell, available at Crossroads Bookstore. To examine these facts is something every thinking person ought to do before making a choice for or against the claims of Jesus. If nothing else, one would at least find that Christianity does not require misuse or disuse of one's intellect or reasoning.

The most evident witness for the reality of Jesus Christ that I have seen, is the changed lives of those that have decided to put their trust in Him. I have seen many such changed lives, inexplicable by any natural means. These people, having discovered a source of stability and assurance in their lives, want to share this good news.

I urge everyone who truly abhors propaganda to seek the facts for himself-herself. Speak to one of these people who claims to have "found it," or read the book previously mentioned to see if the Bible has credibility. Then make your own decision.

Field hockey review

"I give all the credit to the field hockey players this year," said coach Jo Dean Moore. In her first full-time position as assistant professor of women's physical education at a major university, Moore has put together the finest women's field hockey team in U of I history.

The team will be losing seven seniors this year; Darcy Aldrich, Jayne Davis, Karla Harman, Nancy Hubbard, Kathryn Hunter, Jeannie Meyer, and Pat Steinbruecher, but Moore says that next year's team will be at no disadvantage. Recruiting prospects for next season are highly encouraging. Letters are coming in at a steady pace from all over the state and inquiries are being made by women here on the U of I campus.

Last Tuesday night Idaho played and defeated the WSU team 2-1, in a hard-fought game. Scoring for the U of I was Vikki Howard-1 and Laurie York, who scored on a free penalty shot. Making WSU's one point was Maud Sterling.

Both teams showed quickness and stamina. Said Moore, "We've a strong aggressive, determined team.

We may lose the ball to the other team, but we get it back." U of I statistics reveal that on the average, Idaho women have been able to contain the hockey ball twenty minutes out of every thirty to the opposition's end of the field.

The Idaho offense sets up in the "traditional formation," 5-3-2-1, which lends itself well to the U of I's style of play. The offensive power-house that Idaho women have designed speaks highly for itself when one views their final season record of -6-2.

Moore says, "The halfbacks and full backs are outstanding in tackling and keeping their eye on the ball." Scoring is evenly distributed among the starting line with all but two players scoring thus far in the year. Five of the seven seniors playing have been teammates for four years. The resulting depth in the team shows up in the win column.

Substitutions figure in as a very important part on any team. All of Moore's subs have come off the bench when needed and have performed as well as the starters.

The rules of field hockey are unique, to say the least. The main piece of equipment in the game, the hockey stick, is designed for right-handed people only. So south-paws that really want to be top hockey players must get used to playing right-handed. Field hockey does not look technical to the spectator, but there is more to the game than meets the eye.

University of Idaho women closed out their season this weekend by competing in the Northwest College Women's Sports Association Regional tournament in Ellensburg, WA. The U of I team handily defeated OSU by a score of 3-0 in their opening game on Friday. In later competition, the U of I tied Oregon College of Education 1-1. On Saturday, Idaho squeaked by Northwest Nazarene College 3-2, but lost to Canada's Simon-Fraser University 2-0.

B-ball starts new season

By MIKE PERRYMAN

It has been several years since an Idaho basketball team has had a work-together type of ball club. Older students can remember the playing days of Tim Cummings and Malcolm Taylor, the type of "high-temperature" playing ability they put forth on the basketball floor, and the chants from capacity-packed crowds in Memorial gym of, "one-hundred, one-hundred points."

Exactly how the Vandals will do in team-on-team competition remains to be seen. Their first game does not come until Dec. 1, when they travel to Los Angeles to take on the squad from Southern California.

Said head coach Jim Jarvis, "this is really a team oriented freshman club." This remark may come as a surprise to many since all too often, freshman players come out of high school, rolling high and thinking that they will be "the star individual for the team,"; this is not the case with this year's Vandals.

In the annual Silver-Gold game held this past Saturday in Memorial gym, the Idaho varsity and junior varsity squared off in full scale competition before a fair sized crowd of exuberant supporters. Both teams exhibited the style of play that people are used to seeing from the much larger schools. This is because it is not too often that fans get to see the guards scraping for the rebounds right up alongside the rim with the forwards and center.

Jarvis has great confidence in every player in his team, and with good reason. Billy Hessing, one of six freshman playing for the varsity, showed excellent poise and stamina in the Silver-Gold game.

Says Jarvis, "Hessing is a 100 per cent type of player." The Idaho coaching staff will be looking to Hessing as their main court commander in a season that spans almost three months of hard play. At the other guard positions are Reed Jaussi - freshman, and James Smith. Smith, a senior comes to Idaho as a transfer from BSU. Our two resident forwards are numbers 12-Rodney Johnson and 52-Chris Price.

Johnson who is originally from Portland, Oregon, played with Oregon star Ricky Lee and with ex-UCLA great Richard Washington while in high school.

After being redshirted most of last year because of disc surgery on his back, 6-11 Jim Nuess is back. Nuess will be hammering the boards with a strength and coordination that the Vandal's must have to be effective inside.

As far as the subs go, there doesn't seem to be a weak link in the "Jarvis Machine." All backup players showed their competence in the Silver & Gold game. With the eagerness to play and talent to back up the go-get'em attitude that is being exhibited in practice and in their last scrimmage, Idaho fans can look forward to a great season from the Vandals.

In the Big Sky this year; BSU and ISU are looking to provide tough opposition to all challengers. Both of the southern teams have a lot of their players back from last year and should be big powers in the conference this year.

SOCCER

In soccer action this weekend at Kibbe Dome, Idaho found itself watching Saturday and Sunday's games from the bleachers. Saturday morning action started out with WSU defeating Whitman 2-1 and later, Montana downed CWSC 3-2. Sunday, Whitman blanked Montana 1-0 and WSU took the tournament by crushing CWSC 4-0.

VOLLEYBALL

The top fifteen teams in the Northwest will compete this weekend in the Northwest College Women's Sport Associations regional volleyball tournament in Manmath, Oregon. Idaho enters the tourney seeded in the eleventh position among inter-northwest teams. Vieing for the championship and a berth in the national playoffs in Austin, Texas will be, among others, Portland State University, seeded number one.

Tax rebel says IRS violates rights

Editor's note: This is the first in a three-part series on tax evasion in Idaho, what is happening with the public, the law and the Internal Revenue Service.

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

When Jay Shelledy first revealed Rep. George Hansen's record for late filing of his tax returns two weeks before the election, Hansen was virtually counted out by many political analysts. Not only had he been involved with one scandal already during his term, but now he seemed to be embroiled in another.

Not until the election results were in Tuesday night did it become evident that many experts had either counted too heavily on Hansen's ineptness or on his democratic opponent, Stan Kress. What they failed to take into account was that possibly a scandal concerning taxes was of more concern to Northern Idaho than to the voters of the southern end of the state where Hansen was elected to a second term. Such is the opinion of one Gary Mason, tax rebel. Mason, a resident of Rexburg said in an interview Sunday that he believed that the scandal didn't hurt Hansen's re-election chances one bit.

"In fact, it may have helped," Mason said. He ought to know the attitudes of people who are tired of paying taxes. He has spent the last six years developing a strategy based on legal means of defeating the Internal Revenue Service in court. Mason, a member of the loosely knit American Constitutional Rights Protective Association, bases his defense methods solely on the Bill of Rights, chiefly the fourth and fifth amendments which guarantee the individual's right to privacy.

"The main objective is to put the IRS under, legally," Mason said. According to the former truck driver who now owns a business in Rexburg, the IRS has in the past looked into an individual's private financial records including bank accounts without the individual's knowledge or permission. This, he said, is unconstitutional since the defendant is prosecuted without being advised of his rights.

And yet the Income Tax is constitutional in itself. It is provided for in the 16th amendment to the US Constitution. But Mason said that doesn't give the IRS the right of violating other laws. "The 16th amendment can't overturn the fourth, fifth or seventh amendment," he said, adding that the federal government is currently using the IRS to side-step due process and taking away the rights of the individual.

And his protests do not stop with the fourth, fifth, or seventh amendments.

Mason is currently looking into the possibility that the IRS, by requiring that each citizen fill out a tax return every year, is violating the 13th amendment which prohibits slavery in the United States. Mason feels that the individual cannot be forced into spending his time to figure out what he owes the government during the months from January until April 15 without being compensated for his effort.

Mason hopes that by his efforts and those of others working in his cause, the IRS cannot only be licked, but completely destroyed. He said that he wants a complete repeal of the 16th amendment.

Another goal he said he is striving for is to rid the nation of what he called a socialistic element. He admits that this fight has been slow and that he has lost many fights, particularly the first ones, "But we've learned a lot since then." Another factor he considers to be in his favor is that he feels that he doesn't necessarily have to win all the time. "The way to beat socialism," he said, "is to slow it down and we've done that." He said that it comes down to one thing with him. That is the upholding of the U.S. Constitution "under the spirit it was written by our founding fathers."

Mason spends a great deal of his time in court helping people who are doing battle with the IRS, but he has also been traveling around the country lecturing. He said that he is not personally in trouble with the IRS and that he doesn't owe them any money, but he has recently begun a fight with the State of Idaho concerning his refusal to collect sales tax at his business in Rexburg.

He said that he has just completed a brief for a case in court over the matter and has based his defense on the fourth, fifth, thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution. "We won't collect their sales tax for them," he said simply.

Asked whether he has encountered any trouble from the IRS, he said that he has had quite a few run-ins with them, despite what he calls a clean bill of health with the federal tax machinery. "It's almost a daily affair," he said. "They don't like what we're doing."

But he said that he doesn't have anything personally against the IRS agents. "They're just morally wrong," he said, adding that he has seen agents attending his lectures and meetings.

So, what have his dealings with the IRS accomplished besides keeping him out of jail? "If we've taught them anything," he said, "It's manners." He also believes that the IRS's days are numbered because of the threat of a growing tax revolt. In Idaho Falls, the revolt, he said, "is definitely under way and the IRS is doing its best to keep it under raps..." He went on to say that for every one like himself who is fighting the IRS, "there are at least ten who had to bow out."

Mason concurred that the IRS is in trouble, but not for the same reason. He believes that principle, which he believes is the backbone of his cause, will destroy the IRS. He said that the IRS collects revenue for the Federal Reserve, which he said is not a federal agency. Therefore, the IRS, he continued, is not a legally sanctioned governmental body.

"They'll be disbanded in one or two years." He said.

He agreed that there are many people who would be willing to fight the IRS if they didn't have so much to lose by doing so. "I think most people are sympathetic to our cause."

After contacting IRS District Director Howard T. Martin of Boise, one thing became apparent; The IRS said it has never heard of Gary Mason.

With respect to the IRS violating the fifth amendment when investigating suspects, IRS Public Relations officer Marshall Rutherford of Boise said that there have been "several Supreme Court decisions that have upheld the position of the IRS." He said that the officials of the IRS "hear about these strategies (such as Mason's) all the time."

Director Martin went on to say that a conviction or an acquittal is handed down from a court because of the evidence of possible tax evasion and not because of a violation of a suspect's rights. However, he did say that the IRS will have to give individuals a warning in the future when bank accounts are studied. As a result of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Martin said that suspects must be notified within three days of the summons sent to the bank. The individual then has 14 days to reply. If he should object to the disclosure of his records, he can have it stopped, pending final decision on the matter in a court of law.

If you're thinking about your future, you will eventually come to think about money.

We believe in the future . . . your future, both while you're getting your education and after. That's why we have nine different savings plans with different terms, times and interest rates.

Plan for your future now. A savings account is the difference between 'worry' and a plan of action.

With us, student savings is a full 'credit' course for the future.

We're the students bank.
