Fuller: 20th century Da Vinci

By BILL LOFTUS

R. Buckminster Fuller, a white-haired portly 81-year old man, appeared in the SUB ballroom last night to give his views on the state of humanity and how the world should be.

Fuller arrived at the SUB about 40 minutes late. The crowd, estimated at about 1,100, broke into applause as soon as Fuller walked on stage despite the wait and the lack of seating. In the introduction by Paul Blanton, chairman of the U of I's Arts and Architecture department, Fuller was described as "a 20th, maybe 21st, century Leonardo Da Vinci."

Fuller began to relate his philosophies about life, the world, and the universe. He has been variously described as an inventor, engineer, architect, philosopher, and world planner. Last night Fuller, the third annual speaker in the Ezra Pound Lectures in the Humanities series, touched all those bases.

Of his origins Fuller said, "I was born in 1895. I was, like most of my contemporaries, brought up with the old world values. The older people would say, 'Never mind what you're asking, I'm going to teach you.'"

Fuller reached the low point in his life in 1927. He was discredited, untenured, and broke. "I found," he said, "I had to decide whether I wanted to make money or make sense." Fuller decided to "peel off from the system" and see what a human being in his position could do to advance humanity. One of the main purposes of his experiment was to see "How can we make human beings successful."

Fuller spoke on the concept of synergism. "Synergy is the behavior of a system which can't be predicted simply from the operation of its parts," Fuller explained. To Fuller, "The universe seems to be a great synergistic complex. Synergistic strategies are where we feel we must know the whole to understand the parts."

Operating Manual for Spaceship Earth is one of Fuller's most popular books. About our natural resource policy Fuller said, "If we make use of our technology, in ten years we can phase out our fossil fuels and still maintain our present standard of living."

Fuller traced the constriction of the human view from the earliest civilizations. We have become limited in our ability to grasp the universe. According to Fuller, we are putting our emphasis in the wrong areas. "Politics are outmoded; war is outmoded," he said. "The universe isn't particularly concerned whether Democrats or Republicans win."

Fuller, himself twice expelled from Harvard, criticized our current educational system. He said, "In order to learn, we have to make mistakes. Unfortunately, we now punish people for mistakes. If I ran a school, I would punish those who had all the answers and reward those who make the most mistakes and could tell me what they had learned from them." Fuller now holds over forty honorary degrees.

He was optimistic about the new generation and America. About the dissidents of the 1960's Fuller said, "We suddenly had a generation beginning to do their own thinking." Of America, "We are the beginning of a great world man."

Fuller ended by saying "My whole hope is that humanity will gain the sensitivity and intellect to do its own thinking. I'm optimistic that we can make it." And the crowd gave him a standing ovation after listening for nearly two hours.

Kossman is reinstated negotiations pending

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

Mike Kossman was reinstated as Argonaut editor by the Communications Board Wednesday night.

Kossman had been suspended from that position for a 72 hour period by that student committee on the grounds of "alleged mismanagement of the Argonaut."

The Comm Board voted to reinstate Kossman following an executive session that lasted over an hour. Under ASUI rules, the public cannot attend an executive session. The press can, but reporting of the sessions is restricted.

When the meeting was opened to the public, Comm Board Chairman Craig Heitmann presented a motion to reinstate Kossman. Heitmann's motion passed by a unanimous vote of the board.

The reinstatement, Heitmann said, came following an agreement from Kossman that differences between the board and Kossman could be negotiated. The subject of these negotiations, Heitmann said, concerned a difference between the Argonaut editor and the Comm Board in interpreting the ASUI rules and regulations.

Heitmann said that should these negotiations reach an impasse, Kossman could again be suspended. "Until it can be shown that some agreement cannot be reached," Heitmann said, "Kossman will continue as Argonaut chief.

But Moscow attorney Ron Schilling, who represented Kossman Wednesday night, asked the board to weigh the ramifications of handling the case by disciplinary methods.

Argonaut/Steve Davis

Kossman's back!

"There is a possibility of real harm being done here," Schilling said. Schilling said that if further action is required in arriving at an interpretation of the ASUI rules, it should be handled through judicial council.

Obscene phone caller is plaguing local women

By JIM BORDEN

"What are you wearing? Would you like to know what I'm doing with my hands?" he asks.

The U of I is presently being hit with a rash of "Nuisance" calls, nearly always to women the caller asks for by name. He, described by the victims as being in his twenties, with a soft, mid-range voice, identifies himself as "Bill" or "Bill Thomas" and sometimes "John Thomas."

Eight such calls have been made in the past six weeks, the most recent of which occurred in March with anywhere from three to eleven days between them.

Nearly all follow the same pattern. He calls, asks for the woman by name, identifies himself, and then asks lewd questions. He has not called the same woman or place twice.

Dr. Robert Lehman, a university psychology professor, said such callers are usually not well adjusted heterosexually, and they try to compensate by being slightly aggressive and putting women down.

He said that these and other characteristics common to such callers may not relate to the university caller.

"Obscene callers are usually insecure about their sexuality, and are angry at women," he said. Lehman said that during the call, the caller may be masturbating. In this way, the caller "gets sexual gratification, and expresses his hostility toward women."

Lehman also said that in most cases, the use of the telephone to maintain his distance from the woman reflects the caller's anxiety and protects him from it in dealing with women.

"Normally, obscene callers don't go on to more violent acts," Lehman explained. He said the callers are typically timid and shy, especially with women.

Lehman said since the university caller asks for the women by name, he possibly either knows them, or finds female listings in the phone directories.

He speculated that the university caller might want to be caught and is giving a clue in the phony name he uses. He said in some cases, obscene callers don't like what they're doing and would welcome therapy.

He said callers, if not caught, sometimes continue to place calls, with the frequency of calls precipitated by the caller's cycle of sexual arousal, his sexual frustration, or his need to alleviate depression.

Regents may review latest U of I calendar proposals

By MARK ERICKSON

At the Board of Regents meeting scheduled for Thursday in Pocatello, one of the items on the agenda is the proposed academic calendar.

Furor arose two months ago when what seemed to be a "mandate" for a change to a late start calendar came down from the Board. At that time a committee was established to study all proposed changes in the academic calendar.

The committee is to report next Thursday with a recommendation on the matter. In a phone interview, A.L. "Butch" Alford, Committee Chairman told the Argonaut there will probably not be any recommendations presented to the Board next week.

"I don't know for sure whether we will present one or not," Alford commented. "I doubt that we will at this time."

It seems the current early start schedule in use at the U of I is in little danger of being changed at this time.

"I don't have anything in mind personally that would be better than the present system in use," Alford said.

The U of I faculty council has been waiting for the Board to receive next week's recommendation so they can prepare for the general faculty meeting May 3rd.

The adverse reaction the Regents caused two months ago when they proposed the late start program was partially cleared up by Alford. "What I've really been after is a good search for alternatives," Alford said. "We Regents don't want to step in and say 'we don't give a damn about the concerns of the students and faculty.'"

The faculty council has drawn up a list of alternatives with the present early start calendar their first choice.

The Regents meeting will run Thursday (all day) and half a day Friday. U of I business is scheduled for Thursday morning.

ASUI Senate

Fee increase on ballot

A proposal to place a $3 student fee increase on the spring election ballot was approved by the ASUI Senate Tuesday night. The approval of Senate bill 74 will place the funding of several ASUI operations before the general student body for action.

The proposed $3 per student per semester fee will finance entertainment, outdoor programs, the golf course, student bar association, repair and replacement, graphic arts, Argonaut, KUOI-FM, production, and promotions.

In other action, the senate voted down an amendment to the ASUI by-laws that would have placed a representative of the Black American Student Association as ex-officio member of the senate. Senate bill 31, originally submitted February 15 and held in committee since then, was brought out of committee to the floor, where it was defeated for lack of a majority vote.

Two bills that would have restructured the entertainment department of the ASUI were held in committee. Senate bill 69 would have called for an evaluation of Palouse Entertainment Associates (PEA) and Senate bill 70 would have eliminated the office of ASUI entertainment manager. Gary Quigley, ASUI vice-president, said both bills were held in committee until the ASUI could decide whether to employ an entertainment manager to bring shows to the U of I, or to continue with the present arrangement with PEA. Quigley said some restructuring of entertainment would be done, but no definite action would take place until after the upcoming Willie Nelson concert.

Brian Davies, president of PEA said he was not sure what would be reorganized in the entertainment department, but said the ASUI was considering a part-time professional manager to bring shows to U of I.

Tom Kees, special education student at Moscow High, is to step off his exercise bike onto the real thing early next week. Joan Mott and Sue Raposita have coached Tom in his training for the two-wheeler.

Tom Kees Bicycle brings new freedom

By MARK ERICKSON

Tom Kees is going to take his first real bicycle ride next week. Tom is 19 years old and has cerebral palsy. The story behind his first bike ride is one of helping and sharing. Tom is one of 10 students in the special education class at the Moscow High School. For over a year he has been working on a stationary exercise bike and has learned to move the wheel so well that it was decided he was ready for a real bicycle. specially equipped with over-sized training wheels.

An ad was placed in the paper for a used bicycle and "thousands" of calls with offers of help were received.

Tom Raffetto, KUOI radio station manager heard of Tom's plight and put it out over the airwaves.

An offer from Martin's Auto Service Center in Moscow for a brand new bicycle was accepted and Tom's first bike was to become a reality.

"It will be exciting for Tom to get outside and ride," said his teacher Sue Raposita. "We plan on taking him all over town."

Raposita is a graduate of Marymount College in Tarrytown, New York and Columbia University in New York with a master's degree in special education. Tom's other teacher, Joan Mott, is a graduate of Northern Michigan University and is working on her master's here at the U of I.

The bicycle will enable Tom to improve his coordination and learn to walk better. In addition to the help of Raposita, Tom will also be given therapy on the bicycle by Mike Cherasia, a graduate student working in special education from the U of I.

"We would like to thank the community for responding so well with offers of help," Raposita said. "We would also like to thank Tom Raffetto for his help."

Providing the weather stays as nice as recent days and everything goes as planned, Tom should be out riding early next week.

An expensive gem

When the polls open this semester you will be voting on a three dollar fee increase. This may be the first time the student senate beats the Regents to the financial punch in requesting a fee increase.

I think the students should know exactly what their money is going to be spent on. The official reasons for the fee increase are very misleading. The senate and Tominaga would have you believe several different areas within the ASUI need the extra money to deal with steep increases in costs over the past few years.

Granted, costs have increased tremendously and many departments do need some additional financing but in fact the fee increase is necessary for a very particular reason.

The Gem of the Mountains, our annual look at the year that was, is the main reason a fee increase is being considered.

The Gem receives a student subsidy in excess of twenty thousand dollars. In effect you are asked to fork over twenty thousand bucks and then graciously allowed to pay seven dollars for the privilege of reading the damn thing.

Breaking the Gem down even further, it's like producing a product to sell. - It cost seventeen dollars to print one copy of the Gem. It sells for seven dollars. That ten dollar net loss on each copy adds up to the twenty thousand student subsidy.

During the budget hearings this year the Gem came through without any cuts at all in its budget request. It was more or less rubber stamped by both the Com-Board and the senate.

I question the assumption that the majority of students want to continue to pay the outrageous costs of supporting the Gem.

When you vote on the proposed fee increase this spring what you are really voting on is whether or not you wish to support the Gem.

Vandaleers lauded

To the Editor:

I am taking this opportunity to express appreciation and thanks to Glen Lockery and The Vandaleers in conjunction with their tour through North Idaho in support of the SEND rallies.

Not only did their performances exceed their established excellence, but moreover, the young people individually and collectively presented themselves well, on and off stage.

Glen Lockery can be especially proud of this edition of The Vandaleers and we wish him another 30 years of success.

The Scholarship Endowment National Drive received a special "SEND OFF" in the Idaho Panhandle, thanks to the presence and performance of The Vandaleers.

Can't bear Cross

To the Editor:

Steve Cross' "Born Again" testimony (Argonaut, March 25) has initiated the following comments which I trust are just in time for the Good Friday edition.

I fail to understand how anyone could abandon himself so simplistically and wholeheartedly for an egotist Jew who was crucified nearly two millenniums ago. It seems to me that Jesus was an awfully presumptuous person. His gimmick was a selfish requisition for unquestioning devotion. Jesus claimed to be the son of God but evidence thereof is certainly lacking. Mr. Cross stated he "knew that Jesus was the Son of God." How can such a claim be affirmed? I implore that Mr. Cross bestow us all with such insight.

Why would anyone care to prostrate himself before a man who once ordered a slew of characters to drink his blood? The idea of taking Communion repulses me. The thought of Jesus' blood washing his body down my throat is totally unattractive. No form of cannibalism appeals to me.

Many of the world's ugliest crimes have been committed for the sake of religion and in the name of Jesus Christ. I doubt he would approve of the way his teachings have been bastardized. If Jesus reappeared tomorrow, he and I would set out and destroy every church and memorial constructed in his behalf, then we'd be crucified the next morning.

Friedrich Nietzsche Himself said, "Christianity has been the greatest misfortune of mankind so far" (The Antichrist, Section 51). At this point in my life I heartily subscribe to such a motto.

Q.: Why was the Safeway shoplifter, Miss Vakubowski, treated with kid gloves? At age twenty-five, she should get more than her hands slapped! Signed Rath and Indignation
T.S.: First, may I ask just what else you would suggest be slapped. As it turns out the Argonaut story of last does not fully relate the case. Vakubowski was caught Saturday, spent Saturday and Sunday nights in jail, was arraigned Monday morning with the following consequences: $25 for shoplifting, $100 - $75 suspended for battery, 10 days in jail suspended, restitution of any medical bills incurred by the Safeway employee, $7.50 in court costs and the "significant" cost is that the conviction is what is called a "record conviction." A record conviction is with a person for as long as he or she lives. Why is this so significant? Besides always being there for a future employer to see there is a possible additional consequence in this case. The twist in today's column is that this woman is a French national...and because of the "record conviction" she may have to face another hearing, one in which the outcome might be deportation.

Q.: Why should students have to pay for lost and found ads?
T.S.: "Because" says the Argonaut business manager, Charlie Hopkins, "it all boils down to the reality of dollars and cents." Be reading next time when T.S. presents more solutions and as a real first makes his first real news scoop! Until next time this is T.S. saying Happy Trails.

University Year in Action presents on-the-job experience, plus credit

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

U of I students have more than the option of a formal education or on the job training. Now they can have both.

University Year in Action (UYA), a federally funded program through the ACTION agency, allows students to spend one year working at their chosen profession, while earning college credit. UYA is currently taking applications from interested U of I students.

UYA is "an alternative to the classroom," said Liz Sullivan, U of I program management assistant. The UYA program pays the student $200 a month during the course of a year. Junior, senior and graduate students are eligible for the program, she said.

Undergraduate students earn at least 30 credits for the year, while grad students earn a minimum of 24, she said.

UYA deals with poverty in America and all of the UYA projects are centered around the goal of helping impoverished Americans, Sullivan said.

UYA was first initiated in Idaho in 1974, she said. Sullivan added that 91 students have participated in UYA since that time. There are 40 openings this year, Sullivan said.

Projects may emphasize either research or program development, Sullivan said.

Areas of study covered by the UYA program include agriculture, anthropology, art, architecture, bacteriology, child development, engineering, forestry, wildlife and range sciences, general studies, geography, home economics, interior design, journalism, museology, philosophy, psychology, political science, religious studies, sociology and theatre arts.

Art Bean, a U of I psychology student, is currently working at State Hospital South in Blackfoot under the UYA Program. His job is to devise methods and programs to help emotionally disturbed adolescents solve their problems. Bean said he would like to remain in this field.

"It's really helped me in terms of what I'd like to do in psychology," Bean said. Bean plans to return to the U of I next fall and finish work on a masters degree in psychology.

U of I psychology major Jane Houghland agreed UYA is a good experience. Houghland, who plans to finish her B.S. at the U of I in December is also working on a UYA project at State Hospital South.

Houghland said she will pursue a Masters degree in the subject as a result of her UYA involvement. She added the experience will help her in finding a job when she finishes her education. "It's opened a lot of doors for me," she said.

Students interested in applying for a UYA project for this year should contact Liz Sullivan at the Campus Continuing Education office in the Guest Residence Center. The applications should be filed with UYA by May. Students will be placed in June, Sullivan said.

Program bids close Friday

Student organizations and living groups interested in raising money have been invited to submit bids to sell Vandal football programs. Bids must be sealed and submitted by April 15.

John Ikeda, athletic department business manager, said that the programs will be sold for $1 each.

Bids will be based on the amount of commission for each sale. Further details can be obtained from Ikeda at 885-6466 or in room 107 of Memorial Gym.

An Idaho baserunner is eyed by Gonzaga pitcher Lance Woodruff as he takes a big lead off first base. Gonzaga went on to win the game 4-2.

Zags hold off Vandals 4-2

By ED O'BRIEN

It was a perfect afternoon for watching a baseball game but it was a case of too little too late for the U of I in Wednesday's 4-2 loss to Nor-Pac conference contenders Gonzaga university.

Idaho failed to score the first four innings and managed only two singles by Roger Vanderhye and Par Bailey. The strong arm of Gonzaga pitcher Lance Woodruff kept the Vandals in check while the "Bulldogs" jumped on Rick Ketring for single runs in the first two innings and two more in the fourth.

Designated hitter Jon Bergt singled to lead off the fifth inning. First baseman Benet Ekhammer then doubled, scoring Bergt for Idaho's first run.

In the bottom of the seventh, Ekhammer reached base on an error and following a walk to Jon Klimek, Dan Stanke singled over third base, for the Vandal's second run. It looked as if Woodruff was running out of steam at this point but he managed to get out of the inning on two fly balls.

Idaho brought the go-ahead run to the plate in the ninth inning, after a walk to Klimek and a single by Mark Harris, but relief pitcher Dave Smith, who came on in relief for Gonzaga in the eighth, struck out Pat Bailey to end the game.

It was a disappointing afternoon offensively for coach John Smith's team after the fine showing against Portland State last weekend but the Gonzaga pitching was the main reason. Woodruff and Smith combined for twelve strike-outs, many of them in key situations, and allowed only six hits.

Rick Ketring (3-2) went the whole nine innings on the mound for Idaho and threw well despite giving up ten hits.

First baseman Benet Ekhammer and second baseman Jon Klimek played excellent defensive ball for the Vandals the entire afternoon.

Idaho now stands at 2-3 in the Nor-Pac conference.

Today at 1 p.m. and Saturday at noon, the Vandals are home against the Broncos of Boise State University, for back to back doubleheaders at Guy Wicks field.

Recruiting questioned at sports convention

A U of I student addressed questions about the effect athletic recruitment would have on women's athletic programs at colleges and universities during a recent convention in Seattle, Wash.

Becky Law, senior physical education major from Moscow, said that as a member of a four-student panel at the national conference of the American Alliance of Health, Physical Education and Recreation (AAHPER), she joined in discussing student concerns about formal recruitment. She and other panelists agreed that major concerns about recruitment include increased pressure to perform, loss of educational emphasis in athletics, the danger of choosing an institution for the financial aid it provides rather than the education it can offer, and the danger that students may feel like a "bought and sold" commodity rather than an individual.

Law said her fellow panelists, Sharon King from the University of Georgia, Mary Beth Morgan from Houston Baptist College, and Karen Smith from the University of Iowa, all agreed they did not favor organized recruitment.

She said there is a growing number of students and coaches in favor of recruitment, but those at U of I believe there should be an educational emphasis in women's athletics and fear recruitment might destroy this.

Most of the support for recruitment comes from schools with more money.

Livestockers score in 'world series'

Four U of I students won a major award at the national livestock and carcass judging contest held recently in Omaha, Neb. Winners of the Live Market Animal Evaluation Award were Dan Faulkner, Bliss; Stewart Hyndman, Idaho Falls; Mark Kossler, Salmon; and Tom Davidson, Englewood, Colo.

Davidson was high individual for the market division

Participating in the two-day judging event were 180 students from 22 universities. The Omaha contest is considered the "world series of livestock and carcass judging," according to Dr. John A. Jacobs, associate professor of animal industries, who coached the UI team.

In the market division, students were required to evaluate 14 groups of livestock for carcass composition, grades and carcass values. Results were determined from the carcasses of these animals.

"Our University of Idaho students predicted carcass yields with an average of 75 per cent accuracy, which is a better score than that achieved with many mechanical devices," Jacobs said.

Sparks wins research award

Walter C. Sparks, professor of horticulture at the University of Idaho's Research and Extension Center at Aberdeen, has received the first "Outstanding Research Award" presented by Gamma Sigma Delta, the UI College of Agriculture honor society.

Willie Nelson:

The rocky road to the top

By DAVID NEIWERT

Everyone in Nashville was always telling Willie Nelson to give up singing and concentrate on songwriting. They all agreed that he could write songs that were little short of incredible.

But most of his associates, producers and record executive contacts were convinced that Willie would never make it as a singer.

Willie, on the other hand, disagreed with them. "I always thought I could sing pretty good," he says.

He believed that, yes, he did write good country songs, but he also believed in his ability to interpret his songs better than any other singer. And so he stuck to his guns and refused to listen to the opposing voices.

It's now paying off for him, more so than he ever dreamed it would. Last year his album Red Headed Stranger became the hottest item in the country music world. It sold millions and gained Willie numerous awards including two Grammys, the Rolling Stone and Playboy Country Artist of the Year awards, and the Country Music Awards' Songwriter and Singer of the Year awards.

Before that, in 1973, Willie was inducted into the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame for his abilities as a songwriter.

That's a long way for a kid from Abbott, Tex., to go. Willie had only a mail-order musical education, but in the late 50's he made his move to Nashville.

There he was an immediate success as a songwriter, at least, he started selling songs.

His first piece, "Family Bible," he received $50 for; later it became a country gospel classic, but, until recently, all the royalties that Willie was able to collect from it was that initial $50.

His career as a singer, however, was another story altogether. He made a number of albums, but none ever sold well. Still, Willie kept plugging them out, despite the constant discouragement from his associates. In 1974 he made Phases and Stages, which was chosen by the L.A. Times as "Country Album of the Year." In 1975 he made the album The Outlaws with Waylon Jennings and Jessi Colter, which became an immediate success. Then in 1976 came the Red Headed Stranger album.

Lit. Section deadline set

The deadline for the upcoming Argonaut Literary Section is Mon., April 11. All contributions should be in by 5 p.m.

The section will feature poetry, short stories and other creative works by students, faculty and interested area residents. David Neiwert, Argonaut Special Editor, will be in charge of the section. All contributions should have a stamped and self-addressed envelope if the author wishes material to be returned.

The section is appearing in co-operation with the Moscow Fine Arts Festival.

Willie will be appearing in concert in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome April 16. Tickets for the show, which is general admission only, are being sold at the SUB desk, Paradise Records and the Magic Mushroom for $5.50. They will cost $6.50 the day of the show. The concert is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m.

Appearing with Willie will be pop-country music performer Michael Murphy. Murphy is known best for his big single "Wildfire."
