These students may have beat the usual bookstore rush, but they probably can not claim the same victory over text book prices.

Textbooks & profits only publishers benefits

By JIM BORDEN

Do you think textbook prices are high? So does the manager of the U of I bookstore. Agreed.

But there doesn't appear to be much either he or you can do about it. "The publisher sets the price," says bookstore manager Richard Long.

The bookstore, owned by the University, buys its books directly from the publisher for 20 percent below the invoice price and then sells them to students at invoice price.

Twenty percent may sound like a fair profit for the books, but "when you subtract shipping costs, salaries, and other overhead, we're lucky to break even," according to Long.

The Argonaut viewed the bookstore's records and found them to support Long's statement. In fact, the bookstore might well go under financially were it not for sweatshirts, beer mugs, and other trivia which the store also sells.

The Washington State University bookstore also buys directly from the publisher for 20 percent below invoice. But the WSU students own their bookstore, and therefore can sell them to themselves for seven percent below invoice, cutting their profit to 13 percent.

Therefore, both stores purchase some of the same books, Adventures in Physics, for example, at the same price. In this case the invoice is $9.50. Subtract the 20 percent discount, $1.90, and you have the price to the bookstore for the book, $7.60.

Both stores would normally sell the book for $9.50, which the Idaho store does, but subtract WSU's seven percent student discount and the book sells there for $8.84.

In the past, according to Long, Idaho students have gone to WSU this time of year to buy books and save that seven percent. But Long feels that once a student pays the extra cost of driving to Pullman and then pays the higher Washington sales tax on the books, "it is about as cheap to buy here."

In fact, Idaho students may have no choice but to buy their books here as Long noted that the WSU bookstore manager has requested an Idaho class book list. He said the WSU manager would like to remove all the Idaho class books from his shelves for a couple of weeks until Idaho students had purchased the books here.

"He only orders enough books for WSU students," Long explained, "and if Idaho students buy them, then WSU students can't."

And if you had planned to buy used books at WSU, then save yourself the trip. Both universities have the same used-book policy. They buy used books from students at 50 percent of the original invoice, and then sell them back at 75 percent of the original invoice price.

Long explained that if the ASUI owned the bookstore here, it could either give rebates or discounts.

But even though the students do not own the store, they may yet receive a discount on texts. Long said that several years ago, the Bookstore Advisory Committee recommended a three percent discount, and the Faculty Council agreed, but only at such time as it was "economically feasible."

Long said that the problem is that the books must be paid for before the start of school. The store must then borrow from the university to pay for the books and pay back the university when school starts and students buy the books.

Of the $61,186 profit the store made last year, $25 thousand went to the bookstore scholarship fund, and $20 thousand went to set up a repair and replacement reserve. This repair and replacement reserve, it is hoped, will eventually allow the store to operate in the black at all times.

Long said the remainder of the store's profit last year went for other working capital.

Regents to consider alcohol policy

The Board of Regents will vote this weekend whether or not to follow the Administrative Procedures Act (APA) concerning an alcohol policy for Idaho university campuses. The board has maintained it is not bound by the APA in setting education policies, and has been cautious of setting a precedent.

The APA requires state agencies to hold public hearings and give public notice when enacting or changing policies.

U of I President Richard Gibb and ASUI President Lynn Tominaga have been working on an alcohol policy to submit to the Regents.

Tominaga said he recommended to Gibb that alcohol be permitted on campus in dormitory rooms and "any other property leased or rented from the University by an individual or groups." He added that written permission of the University president and other state and local officials might be required.

Standing University policies, state laws and municipal ordinances prohibit consumption or sale of alcohol in instructional and office buildings, physical plant facilities, dorm lounges, the Kibbie Dome and the SUB.

According to Tominaga, there are three Regents who would support a policy change permitting alcohol in the specified areas. He added that three Regents are opposed to any alcohol on campuses. The remaining two Regents are uncommitted.

If Gibb and Tominaga's recommendations are accepted, alcohol would be allowed in any area which is rented from the University, such as dormitory rooms and married student housing, and perhaps arrangements could be made for the ASUI Golf Course.

Parking regulations change

Persons with unpaid parking fines will not be able to purchase new permits at registration, according to Lee Perryman, parking coordinator.

A fine policy change includes a $10 fine charged for illegal parking in reserved space for handicapped persons. Also, drivers of state-owned vehicles will be responsible for paying all citations incurred.

Changed campus parking regulations for the 1977-78 school year authorize holders of the yellow core parking permits to park in the blue perimeter parking lots.

The "free lot" this school year is Lot 31 located west of the Kibbie-ASUI Dome.

ASUI Senate meets tonight

The ASUI Senate officially opens its fall term tonight with the swearing in of six new senators and a backlog of bills and reports from the past year. That meeting will be held at 7:00 tonight in the student union building.

ASUI President Lynn Tominaga said most of these bills, introduced last spring before the end of the semester, will be routinely referred to committee. He added, however, that two matters could raise controversy at tonight's and future senate meetings.

Senate Resolution 46, which will be introduced tonight, protests a $4 fee increase proposal. The Board of Regents will be considering the increase, needed to cover increased costs of athletics at the U of I. SR number 46 requests the State of Idaho to provide the necessary $50,000 for athletics.

Tominaga noted the students paid an additional $10 in fees starting in the Spring of 1976 to cover increased athletic expenses.

"We have taken on more and more of the burden of athletics," Tominaga said, adding that the state should now assist the University in financing athletics.

Idaho State University, Boise State University, and Lewis-Clark State College are also facing student fee increases for athletics. Tominaga said the student governments at those institutions are protesting the move, as well.

The Senate will begin the process of considering a major change in the form of the ASUI tonight with a bill that calls for the formation of a student house of representatives. Currently, the ASUI consists of a president, vice president and a 13 member senate.

Tominaga authored the bill which would create a 60 to 65 member house. Most of the members would be elected from living groups on the U of I campus.

Tominaga acknowledged the off campus student population posed a problem to this plan. One way of getting around this, he said, would be to hold a special election for 20 off campus representatives.

The proposed House would handle matters of University policy, acting as a sounding board for the senate, the ASUI leader said. He added that final legislative say would remain with the senate.

But first the bill needs senate approval and Tominaga said it won't come easily. One view held by some senators, he said, is that a new house would retard an already slow governmental process.

Tominaga counters, saying with the proposed house acting as a sounding board, it would compliment the senate. He added the proposed body, with its limited subject matter, might meet as seldom as three times a year.

Six senators, elected in the spring elections, will be installed tonight. Joining the seven incumbant senators are Ken Harris, Bruce Mooror, Greg Switzer, Gerry Wright, Mark Nuttman, and Vickie Tucker.

"I'm very enthusiastic about the senate this year," Tominaga said. "I feel they will be very hard workers," he said, adding they are "very dedicated in representing the students."

Staff to serve new students

New students interested in meeting with faculty and staff on an informal basis are invited to individual homes for dessert and conversation.

"Staff-Student Desserts" is a new activity this fall. It will give members of the faculty and professional staff an opportunity to invite students who are new to the U of I into their homes for dessert and conversation.

This activity is sponsored by the office of new student orientation. Desserts are planned for Tuesday, August 30, at 7 p.m.

Students interested may sign up outside the Student Advisory Services at the new student orientation booth during registration.

Timothy Miller, director of new student orientation said, "The informal interaction between students and faculty is very important. This has been done at other schools and has been very successful."

Among staff and faculty volunteering their homes is Dr. Richard Gibb, new U of I president, who will entertain some 30 new students.

Anarchy & Announcements

The U of I chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, this year celebrating 50 years on the Moscow campus, received two major awards during the group's recent international conclave at New Orleans.

The chapter was one of three, out of more than 300 chapters, receiving a Scholarship Emphasis Award, according to Matt McLam of Moscow, a former chapter president. The award was largely the result of the fraternity's scholarship enrichment program in which 17 speakers from the university, community and state participated in a year-long after-dinner speaker's program.

Organizing the scholarship enrichment program was scholarship chairman Phil Ward of Elma, N.Y.

The other honor was for public relations. A presentation book outlining the chapter's efforts in community service, hosting a leadership training conference and other activities was prepared by Ray Swenson and TKE alumnus Doug Johnston, both of Moscow.

Bob Harshman, Boise, one of two U of I delegates, was named to the Knights of Honor during the conclave.

Campus Capers

Ox, the St. Bernard mascot of the Theta Chi's, was painted last Tuesday by unknown persons, according to campus police. The dog reportedly worked itself into a frenzy and had to be taken to a veterinarian to be tranquilized and mediated. Police reported that the dog had been heckled that day.

Several fraternity houses had articles stolen recently. Three trophies were taken Saturday from the Alpha Chi Omega House. Wednesday, the ATO House scrapbook was stolen. A stereo was removed from the basement of the Sigma Nu Fraternity, Friday but returned later with an apology note.

Approximately $169 carpet piece was stolen from the recital room of the Music Bldg. last Wednesday.

Several windows at different sororities were broken Sunday night. According to a fraternity member, "These things happen between sororities and fraternities during rush week all the time."

This column is for your use. Has your living group won recognition, or embarked on a community project? Have you, yourself won an award, or maybe even become engaged? Well, this is the place to put it. Come down to our office, in the SUB basement, before noon, Mondays or Thursdays, and let us know. We'd like to pass the word along.

Wallace Complex cafeteria to open September 79

University officials say the Wallace Complex cafeteria construction is on schedule and the building will be ready to open in September of next year.

The $2 million project, conceived early this year, will allow the Wallace Complex Cafeteria (WCC) to accommodate all dormitory students when completed.

Don Amos, university business manager, said the cost of the project was originally estimated at $1.9 million, but had to be increased after all bids received were higher than expected.

Amos said $400 thousand of the bill will be paid in part, by the Wallace Repair and Replacement Reserve, and interest from bond fund investments. Part will also come from payments the University receives from the Farm House.

The other $1.6 million is

FBI-Hoover linked with Nazi police prior World War II

(ZNS) A private research organization sponsored by the Church of Scientology is charging that the FBI and J. Edgar Hoover maintained a very close but secret relationship with top Nazi police officials in Germany until the very outbreak of world War II.

The National Commission on Law Enforcement says that it has obtained 1785 pages of formerly secret FBI documents relating to the FBI's correspondence with the German police before and after the war.

Among the documents released are a number of friendly letters between Hoover and Berlin police officials, many of them written between 1939 and 1941, after the Nazi invasion of Poland and even the fall of France to Hitler's troops.

One letter above Hoover's signature, written in September of 1939, two weeks after the German invasion of Poland, indicates that Hoover was sending autographed pictures of himself to international police force leaders in Berlin.

According to the national commission, similar FBI correspondence to Berlin continued until early December of 1941 when it was discontinued because, in the words of one memo, it might "be embarrassing" to the bureau. The commission says the memos show that Hoover finally agreed to cut off his ongoing correspondence with Berlin officials on December 4th of 1941, more than a year after much of Europe had fallen to the Nazis and just three days before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

being borrowed from four Idaho banks, according to Amos. It will be paid back, $200 thousand per year for ten years, via bond fund interest, meal charge receipts, Farm House revenue, and residence hall rental income.

He said the University will pay about six per cent interest on the borrowed money, which in his words "is a pretty good deal."

The construction was proposed after existing food service and dining facilities and equipment were found to be obsolete, inefficient, and too small.

The Gault cafeteria will be phased out after completion of the new facility, and Theophilus Tower and Gault-Upham residents will then dine at WCC. Consolidation of the two cafeterias is expected to save $50 thousand a year in labor alone.

To accommodate students during the interim, food service times are being increased, noon classes are being offered, and some students who normally eat at WCC are dining at the Gault cafeteria instead.

Bernice Morin, head of university food services, said breakfast will run from 7 a.m. to 9:15 a.m., lunch, 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. and dinner, 4:45 p.m. to 6:15 p.m..

She added, however, that "the hours will be flexible as needed so that everyone gets served."

Noon classes are being offered in hopes of drawing some students away from WCC during the busiest times. Those students will eat earlier when the cafeteria is not as crowded.

However, Gary Quigley, ASUI Vice-president, feels that there may not be enough "heavy drawing" classes offered and therefore noon classes will have little effect on the WCC lunch rush.

In addition, McConnell hall residents will eat at Gault this year to help alleviate the rush at WCC.

Dormies to bear bureaucrat brunt

For those of you who didn't know it, there is a person called Betsy Brown who usually writes this column for the Argonaut. Well, she's been working for the Forest Service out at Potlatch and decided to keep at it for the first couple weeks of school. But since work in the Forest Service happens about as often as sliding up a sliding board, maybe I shouldn't say she's working.

Anyway, my name is Murtie Greenwich and I'm taking over the column this week. I'm not such a slick writer as Betsy is, but I did this once last semester. I wanted to impress my English teacher but it didn't work because I'm stuck taking English 104 for the third time this semester.

This column is about the ignorant Administration we have at this school. Normally I could care less about campus politics but this time they screwed me up and I got mad.

It all started this summer when my landlord raised the rent by $30 a month. I couldn't afford it and I couldn't find another cheap apartment so I decided to move back into the dorms. Well, it used to be that when you wanted to move into the dorms you sent them an application and told them where you wanted to live and also your second and third choices. And they sent back a form telling you what dorm you got. It was very simple.

I guess it was just too easy for the students, so that was why Housing had to change it. I think they must pay some fool bureaucrat overtime to sit up nights thinking of ways to make us poor dormies miserable.

Anyway, when I got my dorm application form I noticed that it didn't have any place for me to put down where I wanted to live. I figured the printer goofed up so I just wrote down that I wanted to live at Steel House anyway. (It's a co-op dorm and it's cheap. Betsy lives there but every dorm has its disadvantages.)

It wasn't a printer that goofed up. Housing came up with a screwy new system and I got a little form back that said yes you can live in the dorms and come to Wallace Complex on Friday, August 26 to pick the one you want to live in. I stood in line most of the morning while they shuffled all the cards they could have shuffled just as well without me standing there. It was a mess.

I asked a secretary why they came up with this awful malarkey and she said it was because they used to have a lot of no-shows and this way they could fill those places. That might be a half decent reason, but you'd think they'd make an effort to let people know there was a reason for all the inconvenience. If they'd asked me, I'd still say it was more trouble than it was worth. But they didn't ask any students what they thought. I don't think they care what we think.

Well, then I went over to the controller's office to try to get a parking permit. The lot next to Steel House is a "core" lot, so I need a yellow permit if I want to keep my car off the streets. The parking permits are supposed to be sold on a first come first serve basis so that everyone, including students, have an equal chance at them. Well that's the way it's supposed to be, but that's not the way it is. When the lady at the window found out I was a student she said I have to wait until registration day. The faculty and staff get first crack at the yellow parking permits, and the students get screwed as usual.

You kind of expect this crap from the Administration, but you might think the Senate or someone else in the ASUI would put some pressure on the powers that be to make them fix things up. But I'm not holding my breath. Playing junior politician takes a lot of effort and there isn't much time for these elite types to look out for the poor slob who elected them.

Last time I wrote a column I hear the senate got upset over a dirty word or two the editor didn't take out. (I wonder what they'd do if they saw some she did take out.) This time I was real careful with my language, so I hope all you senators out there appreciate it. Personally, I'd appreciate it if you spent some of your time doing something more useful for the rest of us.

To the Editor:

At the start of this school year I would like to find out whether there are any libertarians in town. It can be extremely difficult living and working within the altruist-collectivist culture. But it's very heartening and enlightening to converse with other libertarians. Therefore, I request that any and all rational beings please contact me at 882-9696; 125 Shoup Hall. Thank you.

Welcome back...

Hello there, and welcome to the U of I.

To all you returning people, well, here we are again.

As for you freshmen, good luck, and don't believe it when you're told the first year is always the worst. It never gets much better.

Some of you might like to know a little about the Argonaut.

We are student owned, and subject to no faculty or administration control. We are here to serve you, believe it or not. If you don't think we are doing the job, come talk to me. It may do no good, but at least you'll know who's responsible for this mess.

If you'd like to see an article published, please get us the information before noon on Mondays and Thursdays.

And we have a new column for you this semester. It's called, cleverly, "Announcements and Anarchy." Intended for your personal news (awards, engagements or...) it will appear each Tuesday. But, it will only work if you help.

If you wish to write a letter to the editor, it stands a better chance of being printed if it is typed, and relatively free of obscenities. You must sign it, but I can be persuaded not to publish your name.

Have a good semester, and do try to survive registration.

Several new courses offer different kinds of skills

A variety of non-traditional courses are offered this semester by the U of I.

A series of four seminars planned to improve skills in job seeking has been scheduled for September in the U of I SUB Borah Theater. Beginning Wednesday, Sept. 7, the programs are planned for 7 to 9 p.m. each Wednesday throughout the month.

Placement Center services, procedures and limitations will be discussed by Eloise Frank, director, at the Sept. 7 seminar.

Noted economist John Kenneth Galbraith takes viewers through 200 turbulent years of social thought and political economics in the "Age of Uncertainty," a television series that will be part of a course at the U of I.

The U of I Office of Continuing Education has arranged for Dr. Max Fletcher, professor of economics, to serve as instructor for the two-credit class which will involve watching 13 one-hour television presentations over KUID-TV and attending two class meetings on campus.

Also to be offered beginning in October is a television course on parent effectiveness training.

Galbraith examines the ideas of Adam Smith, Ricardo, Malthus, Marx, Spencer, Beven, Lenin and Keynes in a historical context. He then addresses himself to current concerns such as the state of our cities, multinational corporations, the arms race and the global issue of food in relations to population. Galbraith's narration is backed by tableaux, dramatizations and other techniques to keep the subject matter lively.

A $40 fee will be charged and students will need to purchase a $20 packet containing a text and supplementary reading materials from the U of I bookstore.

The first class session will be broadcast over KUID-TV at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 19.

To register or obtain further information, contact the U of I Office of Continuing Education, 1044 Blake St., Moscow, Idaho 83843, telephone 208-885-6486.

Persons interested in search and rescue work will have a chance to learn the techniques used and equipment required in search operations by taking a U of I class this fall.

The course on search and rescue techniques will be offered through the U of I Office of Continuing Education with Charles Stratton, associate professor of English, and Gene L. Neff of the U of I Army Officer Education Program as instructors.

"We're patterning after training offered through SAR units," Stratton said.

A $40 charge will be made for the two-credit class which will meet for 10 sessions from 7 to 8:40 p.m. in University Classroom Center room number 107 beginning Aug 30.

In addition to the classroom sessions, there will be two weekend field trips involving map and compass courses and a two-day practice search in connection with the County SAR Council. The class will be limited to 40 students. Students who do not wish to receive credit will be charged a $10 fee, according to Susan Burcaw, continuing education director.

Further information and registration forms are available at the Latah County Sheriff's Office and from the U of I Office of Continuing Education.

Persons interested in evening classes can study in a variety of area ranging from anthropology and education through music and zoology.

Such classes as mushroom identification, urban geography, principles of vocational rehabilitation, theories of counseling, religion and marriage, radio-TV programming, introduction to adult education and ethology or ecology are listed in the 1977/78 Time Schedule of U of I classes. Most meet one or two days each week, generally beginning at 7 p.m.

Students wishing to take these classes must go through regular admissions and registration procedures since the classes are regularly scheduled resident courses offered by various academic departments. They are not continuing education courses.

A complete list of evening classes and meeting times, including all registration information, is available at the U of I Registrar's office, room 104 of the Administration Office Building. Interested students should inquire immediately as U of I registration is scheduled for today at Kibbie-ASUI Dome.

Kincaid vs. Supreme Court over your "right to privacy"

By JIM SPIERSCH

"The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings, and of his intellect. They knew that only a part of the pain, pleasure, and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions, and their sensations. They conferred, as against the government, the right to be let alone--the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men. To protect that right, every unjustifiable intrusion by the government upon the privacy of the individual, whatever the means employed, must be deemed a violation of the Fourth Amendment."

This concept was written in 1890 by Louis D. Brandeis, prior to his Supreme Court Justice appointment while he was still in private practice. It is a classic in legal literature, having had a direct influence on the development of a very current legal concept, the right to privacy.

Yet, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled this summer the right to privacy does not extend to one's own home regarding possession of marijuana.

This decision came as a result of an appeal from former ASUI vice-president Brian Kincaid on his conviction for marijuana possession.

Kincaid was one of thirty students arrested as part of a drug "crackdown" in the spring of 1976. The Moscow police came to Kincaid's home early one morning on the basis of an arrest warrant naming his roommate. Kincaid was handcuffed and forced to sit naked on a couch, as police with guns drawn, searched the house and turned up a small amount of marijuana, less than one ounce.

The majority of people convicted of possessing small amounts of marijuana for personal use were given a fine and probation. Kincaid was the only defendant of the thirty persons arrested to be given a jail sentence. He received the harshest sentence for possession of marijuana in current local drug cases. He was sentenced to nine months in the Latah County Jail.

"I would like to see the students get a petition initiative started and send the petition to Congressmen Church, Symms, McClure and Hansen to support President Carter's Decriminalization Program and also to coordinate and start a referendum for regional referendum for next year on decriminalization."

The primary functions of incarceration are to rehabilitate and to protect society. Kincaid committed an offense against his own person and it was not proved he directly endangered other peoples' lives.

The Leaflet, published by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, states, "The Kincaid case is a stark reminder that selective punishment exists and as long as lengthy criminal penalties remain on the books, fate can rest on a judge's whim."

Second District Court Judge Roy E. Mosman, (who area attorneys rated below average in a recent survey conducted by the Lewiston Tribune), said Kincaid was, "not a danger to society, in the classic sense of the word, but the fact that he was considered a leader of the U of I students who elected him vice-president made his actions dangerous."

The sentence came despite a comment to the court from Latah County prosecuting attorney Bill Hamlett stating that jail would be of no benefit to Kincaid. Both the prosecutor and Kincaid's attorney, Jack Porter, asked that Kincaid be given a fine and probation.

Despite these recommendations, Judge Mosman said after the court session that he did not anticipate shortening the sentence. He added, "Anything less than a jail sentence would show the law could not control Kincaid and unduly diminish the seriousness of the offense."

Kincaid spent six weeks in jail before his $5,000 bail was put up anonymously. The local media disagreed with the judge. A number of editorials and articles appeared blasting him for applying a personal concept of social order and not justice.

In an appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court, Kincaid challenged the constitutionality of the state's marijuana law, principally as a violation of the right of privacy.

Kincaid restricted his appeal to the issue of whether he has a constitutional right of privacy which protects his private possession of small quantities of marijuana in his own home.

Kincaid's appeal lawyer, Allen V. Bowles of Moscow, argued that there is a fundamental right of privacy in the home which places upon the state the burden of showing a compelling interest in regulating his private possession of marijuana.

The appeal pointed out, although neither the Idaho Constitution nor the United States Constitution mention any right of privacy, a constitutional right to privacy has long been implicitly accepted and recognized by the United States Supreme Court or individual Justices thereof; in the Fourteenth Amendment's concept of personal liberty and

"It really outraged me! It upset me that the Supreme Court came back and said that I could not smoke pot in the privacy of my own home and the way they said it was, I really didn't have a right to privacy. Even if I did, I couldn't smoke pot in the privacy of my own home. The way I read that was you cannot smoke in the privacy of your own home because you don't have a right to privacy. And that scares me because that reinforces the police powers of the whole state and they can theoretically bust you for anything."

restriction's upon state action; in the Ninth Amendment's reservation of unenumerated rights to the people; in the penumbras of the Bill of Rights; in the First, Fourth and Fifth amendments.

Similarly, the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of Idaho contains provisions from which the right to privacy can be derived. Article 1, section 1 provides that, "All men are by nature free and equal, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are enjoying and defending life and liberty; possessing and protecting; pursuing happiness and securing safety."

This specific provision of the Idaho Constitution clearly indicates that privacy is a value of constitutional dimension in Idaho. Yet, the court ruled possession of marijuana is not a fundamental constitutional right and is not made so by being confined to the home.

Kincaid chose to fight the existing law by standing trial and publicly stating that Idaho marijuana penalties are disproportionate to the nature of the crime. His plea was guilty; he did not deny that he had broken a law or say that he was above the law, but he did ask the judge to look at the total picture of justice rather than simply at the legality of the situation.

Mosman asked Kincaid if he would still use marijuana. Kincaid replied that under certain circumstances he would still use it, but "would not possess it."

On July 28, 1977 Kincaid was sentenced to finish the remainder of his term by Judge Mosman. He began serving his jail term immediately.

Kincaid's reaction to the Supreme Court ruling was, "It really outraged me! It upset me that the Supreme Court came back and said that I could not smoke pot in the privacy of my own home and the way they said it was, I really didn't have a right to privacy. Even if I did, I couldn't smoke pot in the privacy of my own home. The way I read that was you cannot smoke in the privacy of your own home, because you don't have a right to privacy. And that scares me because that reinforces the police powers of the whole state and they can theoretically bust you for anything."

Kincaid, who grew up in Idaho, served two tours of duty in Vietnam as a helicopter door gunner and crew chief. He was decorated with two air medals for valor, one for the rescue of downed Air Force pilots under enemy fire. After his Army stint, he entered the University of Idaho in Moscow and was elected student body vice-president his sophomore year.

Kincaid said that upon his release from jail he intends to run for another political office at the university, probably vice-president. He added, "I would like to see the students get a petition initiative started and send the petition to Congressmen Church, Symms, McClure and Hansen to support President Carter's Decriminalization Program and also to coordinate and start a referendum for regional referendum for next year on decriminalization."

Kincaid is currently on a work release program. He is released each day from time to time to search for full-time employment. Upon finding employment, he will be released to work during the day, and return in the evening to the confines of his cell.

San Juan Pig Wars train better archaeologists

As a result of experience this summer, Dr. Roderick Sprague, head of the U of I Department of Sociology-Anthropology, says he will take a careful look at how his department trains archaeologists.

This summer, for the first time at the Moscow campus, students spent eight weeks in the laboratory cleaning and analyzing artifacts from the site of the Pig War in the San Juan Islands of Washington.

"The students who are now working at the site are much more careful in the field than others before them who have not had previous laboratory experience," he said. "Their notes are more detailed, and they use more care in searching for artifacts."

Historic archaeology as a field of study may lend itself better to this system than other forms of archaeological research, he added. The Pig War site falls in the realm of historical archaeology since the confrontation was from 1860-1872.

One of the most interesting pieces of information gained from study of the artifacts, Dr. Sprague said, is that both the English and the Americans depended upon the same supply sources. He said normally it would not be expected that warring forces would obtain their supplies from the same source.

Commanders of both sides reported boredom as the biggest problem.

This is the eighth year of work at the Pig War site, with the actual digging lasting only one week this summer instead of the usual eight. All of the work was done under a National Park Service contract for research.

"We undertook the work to learn more about where original buildings were located and to gain information to be used in interpretation of the National Park being developed there," Sprague explained. "It was a good reciprocal agreement, with U of I students gaining experience and the Parks Service gaining information."

He said his department expects to be involved in the same sort of development work at Nez Perce National Park in the future.

Church, McClure visit Grangeville, hear testimony on Gospel Hump

Senator Frank Church, D-Idaho, called the Senate Subcommittee on Parks and Recreation's hearing to order at 10 a.m. For the next nine hours, he and the other senator present, James McClure, R-Idaho, would hear testimony from approximately 75 people.

The subject of the controversy was the fate of a 343,000 acre parcel of land north of the Salmon River and east of Grangeville. Because of two prominent mountains on the land, Gospel Peak and Buffalo Hump, the area has been dubbed the Gospel-Hump.

Irate citizens of the area gathered to confront a Congressional subcommittee with fears that their jobs were being sacrificed. Environmental group representatives and industry spokesmen also testified on their respective viewpoints.

The main topic of the meeting was a Church-initiated compromise worked out between a taskforce of Grangeville citizens and environmental representative

The compromise suggested that 222,000 acres be set aside as wilderness. 43,000 acres would be opened to immediate development, mainly by the logging interests. The remaining 78,000 acres would be studied to determine the best means of development under the multiple-use concept.

According to Dan Lechefsky, a member of the compromise committee and Idaho's Wilderness Society representative, the agreement reached in Grangeville was "unique." Lechefsky said this was the first time that a ground-level policy had been reached by those close to an area rather than by Congress to decide what areas should be classified as wilderness.

Several local citizens charged that any wilderness would mean the loss of jobs for the Grangeville timber industry. However, environmentalists retorted that 90 per cent of the harvestable timber is outside the proposed wilderness area.

Dennis Baird, U of I social science librarian, called the proposed wilderness "a wilderness on the rocks" because of the scarcity of timber in the area. Baird was representing the Sierra Club as its northern Rockies chapter chairman.

Politicians from Idaho were present at the hearings also. Most of them endorsed the proposal including state Senator Mike Slack and Governor John Evans. A representative from Representative Steve Symms read a condemning statement, however.

"Instant wilderness means instant poverty," Symms spokesman said.

Senator Church endorsed the proposal. Church said, "We are here today so that everyone can have their say. That is true."

Senator McClure said he would "reserve judgement" on the compromise.

Written comments on the proposed compromise and the Gospel-Hump area will be received by the subcommittee in care of Church's or McClure's offices until September 7.

ENTERTAINMENT

ASUI sponsors year's events

The ASUI Programs Department will be sponsoring a number of university events this fall for students, faculty and members of the community. Many of the events will take place in the SUB, including "Coffeehouse," evenings of free coffee and local entertainment.

Art exhibits will be presented regularly in the SUB, featuring works by students, faculty members and recognized artists from throughout the country.

Two programs of films will be presented throughout the year. The ASUI Film Society and SUB Films will be shown in Borah Theater or the SUB Ballroom.

Touring theater, music and dance companies will perform under the sponsorship of the Programs Department and will feature such groups as the National Marionette Theater, Sept. 26.

Mel Blanc, the familiar voice of Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck and dozens of other cartoon characters will speak here next Wednesday, Sept. 7, to kick off the first Issues and Forums presentation of the fall. National figures as well as university-faculty members will participate in lectures and panel discussions on issues of interest to students. There will also be a Popcorn Forum bi-weekly throughout the year, with a noon speaker and free popcorn at the SUB.

ASUI Programs will sponsor this year's homecoming, parents weekend and a November blood drive. There will also be a people to people program, designed to promote cooperation and understanding between native students and students from foreign countries. Dinners and student exchanges will be sponsored.

The ASUI Programs Department consists of a program manager Devon Cuddy, and a six member program board. Anyone interested in becoming involved with the ASUI programs should contact Cuddy at 885-6486.

Musician smokes a pound a week

(ZNS) Jamaican musician Bob Marley claims that he smokes more than a pound of marijuana every week.

Marley, in an interview with The New York Times Magazine, indicated that he smokes several "spliffs", or cigar sized joints of Ganja, everyday.

According to the reggae musician, on an average day, he consumes the equivalent of two and a half ounces of pot. That adds up to about 60 pounds a year.

Play tryouts to be this week for pop musical 'Godspell'

Auditions will be held this week for the musical Godspell, the first fall production of the U of I department of theater arts.

Auditions will be in the Performing Arts Center at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and from 3 to 5 p.m. Friday.

Godspell will be under the direction of Carl Petrick, who directed last year's production of Rashomon and the Summer Theatre production of Cabaret.

All students are encouraged to audition, regardless of their major.

Struckman directs KUID FM music

Jim Struckman has been appointed music director at KUID-FM at the U of I, according to Parker Van Hecke, station manager.

Struckman, an architecture student now in his thesis year, has been with KUID-FM for more than a year, and has worked for the station in various capacities, including announcer and assistant music director.

He said he sees the musical format on KUID-FM continuing to serve the public with a variety of sounds.

"KUID-FM has long offered its listeners an opportunity to hear music that ranges from country to classical. We hope to continue to offer a good variety presented with a smooth flow that makes listening a pleasant experience."

The motto for the newly-redecorated SUB Gameroom is "let's go first class," says co-manager Mike Roberts. Located in the basement of the Student Union Building, the Gameroom will be open this semester from 10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Major renovation has taken place in the bowling lanes, including new pinsetting machines and ball returns for all 12 lanes. A pro shop has been added, featuring supplies for bowling and pool.

The pool room has been revamped with hanging lights over all the tables. All eight tables have been leveled and refelted. A snooker table and a billiards table are available. Three foosball tables are also located in the poolroom.

The rest of the gameroom facility is devoted to 19 pinball machines and five video games.

All facilities are open to the public, and prices are $1-per hour per table for pool and five and a half cents per frame for bowling. Discount cards are available for both pool and bowling. All other machines are coin operated.

Special events during the year will include a weekly high score contest on a different pinball machine each week and red pin and moonlight bowling. Moonlight bowling will have only the pins lighted, creating more of a challenge, and red pin will entitle the player to a free game if they make a strike when the number one pin is red.

Tournaments in foosball and pool will be held this fall and bowling leagues will also be formed.

Reservations of all or part of the Gameroom are available for groups, and food service may also be obtained.

Talisman House offers hourly child care services

This school year gives rise to yet another auspicious service for the Talisman house. The main floor of the Talisman house will be reserved for children, during week days from 8:55 a.m. to 5:05 p.m.

According to Corky Bush, assistant dean of students, the Talisman house will be used for part time child care services on an hourly basis, in conjunction with parents' class schedules.

There is already one University operated child care center on Taylor Street that serves about 40 children. But that one, says Charles Hauntz, member of the executive board of the child care center, "is designed for full or half day care, five days a week."

This new child care home, on the other hand, is designed for those students who wish to bring their children in for an hour or so while they are attending classes. "This is on a contract basis, arranged in advance," said Bush. For example, a parent would establish particular times throughout the week that her or his child will be at the center. Rates are charged by the hour, and will be up this year from .75 per hour to .85 per hour. "That's still a better price than the child care services downtown," notes Bush.

Right now, time and energy is being spent on bringing the Talisman house up to par with fire, safety and health codes. According to Hauntz, a fire door must be installed and the first floor must be rewired electrically. The U of I physical plant will rewire the house. According to Bush,

"The Talisman house will meet the electrical code specifications by the end of September."

The child care center will open Aug. 31, Wednesday, but will be closed Friday evening through Labor Day weekend for fumigating. After that, the center will be open for a maximum of 12 children, three years old to 3rd grade. There will be two staff working at the house.

Jim Silvestri, manager of the Talisman house, says, however, this is only an experiment. After one year, regardless of the daycare home's success, they will move out. After that time, the center might move to another location, but it definitely will not be located in the Talisman house.

During the evenings and on weekends, the Talisman house will still exist but the future of the Talisman house as a separate entity is uncertain at this time.

Mark Nuttman, manager of the Talisman house last year, said he would like to be program coordinator this year.

Silvestri says he doesn't think the Talisman house will be closed since it has so many services. In the past, the Talisman house has been used for such things as coffeehouse with live entertainment and a meeting place for groups like the Moscow Food Coop. Currently, downstairs, there is a wood workshop, a sewing room with both an industrial and fabric sewing machine, and a newsletter and design room.

One thing that will change in the near future is the transient housing services. Soon, according to Bush, persons staying overnight will be charged $3.

For more information about the Talisman house call 885-6738. For information about the child care center, call either the Talisman house or Lauri Edwards, director of the child care center, 885-6414.

Toronto concert gets high

(ZNS) A Toronto music promoter, Duff Roman, has announced plans for a concert next year that promises to be one of the "highest".

Concerts In The Sky Limited, plans to produce a "superconcert" next July at the top of the 1800-foot tall "C-N" communications tower in Toronto. The concert, featuring a yet to be identified "super group", will reportedly be staged inside a shell, 459-feet in diameter, constructed at the top of the tower.

East coast drug heads uncovered

(ZNS) The names of alleged Mafia King-Pin Meyer Lansky and fugitive financier Robert Vesco are reported to have been linked in a major drug-smuggling ring uncovered by federal officials in Rhode Island.

The Providence Journal is reporting the local, state and federal prosecutors seized sensitive ledgers last week during a series of drug raids in the Eastern United States. According to The Journal, among the names appearing on these ledgers are those of "Lansky" and "Vesco", each name followed by, in the words of the The Journal "amounts in the millions of dollars."

The Journal, along with a providence television station, WJART, quotes investigators as saying the ledgers seem to be the accounting books detailing "front money" in an international drug-smuggling scheme involving 200 drug dealers in 18 US States and three foreign countries.

One Rhode Island police chief is quoted as saying the ledgers contain the names of many other well-known "organized crime figures."

This is not the first time that Vesco's name has been linked to alleged drug-smuggling operations. A former Federal Drug informer, Frank Perorr, told a senate committee three years ago that the Nixon White House and the Drug Enforcement Administration killed an investigation into international heroin trafficking when Vesco's name suddenly surfaced in the midst of the investigation.

The Senate Subcommittee

later held hearings on Peroff's charges, but dropped its investigation when the allegations could not be proved. Vesco, who is wanted in connection with a $200 million swindle, is living in Costa Rica where he has successfully avoided extradition to the United States.

Staring will lead to legal problem in Colorado courts

(ZNS) Does a person have the constitutional right simply to stare at somebody else?

This tricky legal question will be presented later this year to the Colorado State courts.

The publication National On-Campus Report says that a former student at the University of Colorado in Boulder has hired an attorney after being banned from campus for staring at several women in the campus cafeteria.

The women complained that the steady stares from a complete stranger are unsettling, and have had the former student banned from the campus. However, the attorney who has entered the case claims "staring is constitutional," and says he will challenge the Colorado anti-staring statute in the courts.

Food coupons available

Pregnant women, nursing mothers and children up to 4 years old can qualify for a nutrition program sponsored by the Idaho Public Health Department. According to Margaret Lantz, of the Public Health Dept., the Women, Infants, Children (WIC)

Program has food coupons and nutritional counseling available for qualifying persons.

For further information, contact the Public Health Dept. at the Federal Courthouse Building, 882-7506.

Former theatre arts head new dome manager

By MARK JACOBSEN

Edmund M. Chavez, professor of theatre and former head of the U of I department of theatre arts has been named to an interim position as manager of the ASUI-Kibbie Dome. He replaces Dennis Hedges, who resigned earlier this summer to take a job in Corvallis, Oregon.

Chavez recently returned prematurely from a Fulbright fellowship at the University of Mexico in Mexico City.

A University wide strike delayed the beginning of the fall semester in Mexico, so Chavez returned to Moscow after receiving permission from the U.S. state department.

"I returned home early and I didn't have a job. I wasn't budgeted to teach until my scheduled return," Chavez said.

One search committee failed to find a replacement to fill the Dome manager's position and with fall semester fast approaching the job simply had to be filled.

Dr. Tom Richardson, vice president for student and administrative services said, "We were not successful in finding a candidate to fill the job. I knew he (Chavez) was back so I approached him. I talked to several people involved in the search and they all agreed Chavez would be good." The ASUI Activities Center board also agreed to hire Chavez. "I never filled out an application," Chavez admitted.

Chavez will receive a flat $6,000 for the semester as Dome manager. He will also be teaching two courses in oral interpretive speech for the School of Communication.

According to Elmer Raunio, dean of the college of letters and science, Chavez will be paid $3,675 as a professor on a one-third time assignment.

Gary Quigley, ASUI vice-president, said that Chavez was the perfect choice for the job because no one could be found on such short notice with Chavez's qualifications. Quigley doesn't foresee the new dome manager encountering any real problems; especially since entertainment was cut from the ASUI budget and there will be no concerts at the U of I this year.

The search for a full time successor for Chavez is being sought, as Chavez will return to teaching, spring semester, this year. "I just want to keep things running smoothly until I return to teaching and someone else takes over the job," said Chavez.

New, veteran RA's counsel halls

Fifteen new resident advisors have been named to serve in U of I residence halls during the 1977-78 academic year.

The new appointees, who were selected by the U of I Housing Office and the Office of Student Advisory Services, will join 13 returning advisors when fall semester opens Aug. 29.

According to Tim Miller, Student Advisory Services student development programs coordinator, "the counselors are trained to be 'para-professional counselors'."

He explained they are given information about campus and area referral agencies that serve student needs, and "are responsible for educating students about their rights and responsibilities as residents, serving as hall government advisors, providing leadership for educational programs and other activities and promoting a good academic atmosphere."

The new advisors from Idaho--all juniors, seniors or graduate students--include Cyndy Thomas, Cheryl Mayer, Eileen Tierney, Carol Anne Pochardt, Wes Fujii, Brain Kemmerer, Harold White and Michael Fuller.

New advisors from out-of-state include Marck Vedder, Todd Brown, Rita Zaccone, Bruce Connery, John Bryer, Dianne Larson, and Don Jackson.

Returning dormitory advisors include Fred Endow, Mike Ayersman, Tom Kuntz, Linda

Ripa, Cindy Hinkel, Kristen

Reich, David Vergobbi, Lawrence Pon, and Kevin Richardson.

Other returning advisors are Cindy Staszak, Cindy Fuller, Gene Sandone, and Dana Zentz.

Inauguration day to include land symposium, banquet

The inauguration for the new President of the U of I, Dr. Richard D. Gibb, has been set for Friday, Oct. 7, University officials have announced.

Activities planned for the day include a morning symposium at the SUB on optimum land use planning in Idaho, the inaugural ceremony at the Kibbie-ASUI Dome at 2:30 p.m. and a no-host banquet at 6:30 p.m. at the SUB. All events will be open to the public.

According to William "Bert" McCroskey, professor of architecture and chairman of the inauguration committee, nationally known figures in agriculture and forestry are being sought for the symposium. "The land use topic was chosen as an appropriate one for the university because it is a land grant institution," McCroskey said, adding the topic is one of great concern to Idahoans.

Gibb, who took the helm of the University July 1, is the school's 13th president but only the fifth to have an inauguration, a formal ceremony investing him with presidential authority. The first was Dr. Alfred Upham who served as the sixth U of I president from 1920-28. The most recent was Dr. Ernest W. Hartung who served as chief executive from 1965 to June 30 of this year.

Gibb came to Idaho from Indiana where he served as commissioner of higher education.

Women assume top positions

(ZNS) Business Week magazine reports that men are gradually adjusting to the fact that a woman can be as good a boss as a man.

The magazine says that more and more women are moving into senior management jobs, so much so that one company has warned their young executives that they "should not be surprised" if sometime in their career they are working for a woman.

Women bosses have been rated as often being superior to men, because, Business Week says, "they insist on super performance because of their own needs to be super achievers."

The magazine adds that one problem with women bosses, however, is a fear among many men that "males still hold the key to ...upward mobility."

Ready to serve mouse sickens man

(ZNS) The H.J. Heinz Company, famous for its "57 Varieties", has been slapped with a $35,000 damage suit by a Ohio man who claims that he bought a surprise 58th variety that could be called "mouse soup."

Ronald Kalin, of Garfield Heights, says he purchased a can of Heinz "ready to serve" vegetable soup from a vending machine last November to go with his sandwich at lunch.

When he had eaten about three fourths of the soup, Kalin says, he saw the head of a mouse and two feet protruding among the vegetables.

Kalin contends he became so violently ill that it cost him more than $1000 in hospital bills to get over the incident.

Dr. Richard Gibb happy as new U of I president

Dr. Gibb ponders a point... Argonaut/Steve Davis

By ROSEMARY HAMMER

On July 1, 1977, Dr. Richard Gibb moved into his office in the administration building, and began his work as the 13th president of the U of I. Unanimously approved by the Regents in March, Gibb formerly served as head of the Indiana Commission for Higher Education. In this interview, Gibb candidly reveals some of his philosophies, ideas and concerns for the University.

Argonaut: After your first week here, you told a reporter that you "couldn't be happier." Do you still feel the same way?

Gibb: Exactly. We met with the alumni last night in Pasco, Washington and as I was driving back, I thought "my feelings are just as positive today as the day I got here. I couldn't imagine having been selected for any position I like as well as this one."

Argonaut: What's the toughest problem you've faced since you first arrived here?

Gibb: I haven't had any major problems. I've had a number of minor problems develop, beginning the first hour of the first day. The first day, it was indicated to me that some students were unhappy with the selection of three advisors appointment of the three for minority students. They said they were going to issue a press release later in the day, and that ultimately, I would hear from them. In two or three weeks, they did approach me. They objected to the procedure used in the persons, and thought that their employment should be rescinded. That was the first problem I inherited. But, while that's an important problem, I don't consider it to be of great magnitude.

Everyday, some problems develop, and I would say that's inevitable on any campus. If you have more than one person on the campus, you have, occasionally, some conflict. These are not major. They are to be expected. People have different interests, and sometimes they conflict and compete with each other.

I think any president can expect to address day-to-day problems. I think the success of the president depends pretty much on whether or not he's able to tackle those problems and make some decisions.

Argonaut: In July, you said "Faculty and students will participate in policy formation but I will assume responsibility for decisions, and I am not going to abdicate that." Some people interpreted that statement to mean - well, the buck stops here. But some people, I think, feared that you would have a dictatorial way of running things. Just what did you mean by that statement?

Gibb: The former. As I interviewed with a number of faculty, deans, and others on this campus back in February, I had the definite impression that a number of those people felt that the decision making was resting primarily with committees, and that many people weren't quite sure who did have the responsibility. I didn't know for sure that was the case, but it came through so strongly in virtually every instance.

I think any time a new president takes a job, people listen very carefully to everything that's said. Those who fear one thing will interpret it one way, while those who fear another will interpret it differently.

I suppose the biggest concern I have is, I have received hints, so to speak, that a few, not many of the faculty, have or had the view that I was appointed by the board to get rid of faculty government. A few believed I may have been appointed to do something about these excess programs. At no time did the board discuss with me faculty government or academic programs. Didn't even mention it!

Argonaut: You'd think that would be one of the top things a committee selecting a new president would consider.

Gibb: I think that that suggests that the board itself had no great concern about these two matters. It doesn't mean that they aren't interested. But, if they thought this was a major problem, I think they would have asked me about it. So, my interpretation has to be that they did not perceive faculty governments or the number of programs a major problem here.

I think, however, that while the board didn't say this in so any words, they definitely wanted someone who was willing to make decisions at an appropriate point in time, and not delegate the ultimate decision making to a committee.

It is my style to delegate to the various administrators, and others. But once it comes to me, and I go to the board, the board holds me responsible, and I can't abdicate that responsibility.

I do not consider faculty governments, and an increasing amount of committees synonymous with power. Indeed, I think quite often as you add more committees, you weaken faculty governments. It breaks down someplace.

Argonaut: What do you think of student government, the SUI. Do you see it as ineffective, or just a bunch of vice kids?

Gibb: It's too early to say.

Argonaut: Well, what are your first impressions?

Gibb: Very positive, very good. And, I think it's working. I don't know that that is the case. So far, I very much like what I see. With the student government, with the maturity of the students, their ability to look at problems, to understand. I was pleased.

I indicated to the students, the first time I met with them, back in February, that I would not give them answers that I thought they wanted me to give. I think that struck a very positive note with the students. I think most of the time, in fact, perhaps all of the time, they'd rather know for sure the views of the president, even if they disagree, than being misled into thinking the president thinks this way when he really doesn't.

There'll never be a question in the minds of the students about how I feel about a subject.

Argonaut: Would you favor, or fight against, a proposal for tuition?

Gibb: I'd only support a tuition increase as a last resort. Perhaps I should say fees instead of tuition. Students asked me about that, I think, during a first interview.

Argonaut: It is a hot topic.

Gibb: I know it is. It is with the students; it is with the board. And I think it probably is to many of the legislators. But, if I were the one to make the final decision, I'd say, "no fees." Let's provide a tuition free, or fee free education. But that is not the case at the moment, and I don't have the authority to say there will be no fees next year. The University couldn't operate.

Now, about the future. I will support a fee increase under one circumstance. If it would appear that we can't maintain quality with the funds provided through the state legislature, and the only way we can maintain quality is through a fee increase, then I'll support it. I think almost all students would agree, if we had that kind of a difficult choice, better to have some increase and have quality.

Argonaut: Yes, but fees and tuition are two different things.

Although the dollar amount may not change, whether it's called "fees" or "tuition". The Idaho State Constitution prohibits charging tuition at the universities. There has been some talk of initiating a tuition charge here.

Gibb: Again, I would support the implementation of tuition only under that one circumstance; if that's the only way we can maintain or improve quality.

The big danger, if we do charge tuition, is that then it's awfully easy for those who appropriate the money to say, "well, you did it once, you can add a little more, add a little more. So we take in $10 million in student tuition. If on the other hand, we receive $10 million less in appropriations, we haven't accomplished anything. I would be opposed to tuition implementation under those circumstances.

Argonaut: Since you yourself do not drink, does that in any way color decision making in regard to establishing a drinking policy on this campus? Can you separate your personal views and presidential decisions?

Gibb: Absolutely. Personal habits don't affect me at all. Everyone's different. Everyone's vices are different. I happen not to drink, but I'm not prudish about that. My attitude on that is: I don't mind if you do, if you don't mind if I don't.

Argonaut: Do you have any vices?

Gibb: Oh, I'm, sure I do. I don't know if I could enumerate them. I do have a lot of hobbies and interests. Unfortunately, I swear once in a while, and I probably shouldn't. Sometimes I'm not as polite to people in my own family as I should be, which is totally unjustified.

It may be just as much a vice to drink coffee or tea, as I occasionally do as for someone to drink alcohol. I'm not really sure I would consider drinking a vice.

Argonaut: What would you like to see the Regents come up with for a drinking policy on this campus? What would you like their position to be?

Gibb: My main concern is, whatever the policy is, let's have it. The students ought to know what the guidelines are. I'd like to know what the guidelines are.

Now, do I have any definite ideas as to what they ought to be? Not any strong ones. Whatever the laws say, that, of course, I have an obligation to enforce.

I am really hung-up on not having double standards. I don't want to see one set of standards for students, and another for non-students.

Stereocraft - The Right Choice!

Choosing a dealer is probably your most crucial hi-fi decision. Naturally enough, we think you'd be wise to choose STEREOCRAFT. Here's why:

The STEREOCRAFT people are professionals. We didn't get into this business, now in its seventh year, by accident. We never sold TV, or furniture, or appliances. Our first love and consuming interest is high fidelity. We continually appraise new equipment, select the best, and then use our 4-store buying power to bring it to you at the lowest possible prices.

When you come into our store, we're there to help, not hassle, you. We are thoroughly trained to give you straight, understandable answers to all of your questions. We are not on commissions, so there's no pressure to force you to buy in order for us to get paid. We enjoy our work, and you'll enjoy our store.

Your continued satisfaction is important to us. We're more than just a warehouse, post office box, or telephone number; and you're more to us than just another consumer. If there's a bug in your system you can't handle, call us. We'll drop by and check it out if it can't be cleared up over the phone. And, as a STEREOCRAFT customer, you'll be informed by mail ahead of the general public when we have a special audio equipment sale.

Of course, whether you're a new or long-time STEREOCRAFT customer, you get full advantage of our no-rip-off prices (we GUARANTEE no one can beat our system prices!) and liberal Customer Protection Plan. Come in soon to get acquainted!

STEREOCRAFT Systems are "best buys"... we choose them that way. These two are especially good values! (Other systems are on display, ready for your evaluation.)

System 1: "The Real Thing"

This system brings you the greatest savings we know of on famous name brand stereo equipment. Its components are a beautiful size that will fit easily into your room and decor. Turned low, it's a great companion for study; or you can crank it up and invite the gang in!

Over-obedient kids found cruel

(ZNS) Two University of Jordan researchers report they have found that most children are, in their words, "over-obedient," and will willingly inflict pain on others if told to do so by an adult.

The researchers, Khalwa Yahya and Mitri Shanab, tested 192 youngsters on their willingness to administer painful shocks to volunteers locked in a nearby room.

The volunteers in the experiment did not actually receive shocks; but the kids at the controls were led to believe the buttons they were pressing caused the volunteers to pound on the wall, plead for mercy and finally pass out in pain.

The Jordan researchers report that 73 percent of the children tested, ranging in ages from six to 16, ignored the screams from the volunteers and shocked them into unconsciousness at the instructions of an adult.

Players scramble for a loose ball in last Saturday's varsity scrimmage. Final practice sessions are underway and the Vandals will scrimmage again this weekend before playing Rice University in Houston, Tex., on Sept. 10.

Vandals end pre-season

With pre-season practice over halfway through, the 1977 Vandal football squad is beginning to take shape. Working with a roster of close to 115, U of I head coach Ed Troxel is putting the finishing touches together for the Sept. 10 opener against Rice University in Houston, Tex.

Last Saturday's scrimmages gave Troxel the opportunity to see both the freshmen and the veterans in action following more than a week of intensive conditioning. The first three days were spent working outside to help condition the players for the heat and humidity of Houston.

"I think the team's total condition is excellent," said Troxel. "We had excellent practices outside and the hot weather we experienced was great for conditioning, but we still have a lot to do to prepare for Rice."

Troxel said he has been pleased with the quality of his freshmen and called last spring's recruiting his best since joining the U of I.

"It looks like we have excellent speed and excellent, blue chip athletes," said Troxel of the frosh. "A lot of these young men are going to fit into our program real quick. There is not one disappointment."

Another one of the strengths of the program this year is the interest of the many free agents, unrecruited players who try out for the team. With more than 20 of them trying out this year, there is a wealth of talent for Troxel to draw on.

"Free agents have been a boon to the program," said Troxel, who added that five returning lettermen on scholarship were originally unrecruited athletes who made the team.

Troxel said the main job confronting him and his staff is developing the backup people for the intended starters this year.

"I really can see some interesting battles developing between last year's starters and those that are returning, including also the freshmen," Troxel said.

"I think our offensive line came back in good physical shape. They now have to work close together and have to get a good working relationship between them.

"The same is true of the defensive line, which is also in good condition. The linebackers look good, but we need some depth there. And, of course, our secondary is solid because of experience. We have six players ready to go there, but need to develop two more for backup support."

With a 7-4 record last year and a second place (5-1) in the Big Sky, the Vandals are picked to finish second again in the conference this year by conference coaches. Last year's conference champ Montana State is also favored to repeat.

"We finished strong last year," said Troxel. "I think it will be a four way race for the title between us, Northern Arizona University, Boise State and Montana State."

Locker fees rise

A fee increase for use of lockers and towels faces part-time students. A $7 per year fee will be charged all members of the faculty, staff and the part-time student body using U of I lockers and towels.

The locker-towel charge is currently included in full-time student fees. However, according to Don Amos, business manager, the finance department is considering a proposal to increase the charge to the full-time student next year.

Gary Quigley, ASUI vice-president, said he is not opposed to a user fee increase, but an overall increase would have to be looked into.

WSU drops Idaho football plans for '79 calendar

The U of I has been replaced by the University of Montana on the 1979 Washington State University football schedule.

The change was announced in a University of Montana press release and officials at both WSU and Idaho confirmed the revised schedule was being discussed.

Dr. Leon Green, athletic director at the U of I said, the change was not definite but both Idaho and WSU athletic officials were discussing it. He added, "There's nothing definite yet on how far we're going. Both they and us have some problems with our scheduling."

Green indicated that the change was related to both Washington State's problems with rearranging the new "Pac-10" schedule and Idaho's Big Sky scheduling.

Green said, "It's a mutual agreement, but it hasn't been finalized. We'll have a further announcement when the season's over."

WSU's Athletic Director, Sam Jankovich said, the change, if finalized, wouldn't necessarily mean that Idaho and WSU would not play one another in 1979. He added, "We have some flexibility in 1979 and it might be possible to play Idaho at some other date that year."

Idaho and WSU had been originally scheduled to play one another on Sept. 15, 1979.

Jankovich said, "There is no definite move to limit Idaho's future games against WSU. We have to make some adjustments for the Pacific-10. Idaho may be making some adjustments as well. We'll sit down at the end of the season and work out something definite."

Vandal defense jump high in an attempt to block an extra point which was kicked last Saturday night in a inner-squad scrimmage in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Martial arts club formed

The new Martial Arts Club will have its first meeting at 7 p.m., Sept. 7, in the Combat Room of the Memorial Gymnasium. The club welcomes all styles of martial arts and will offer instruction in Tai Kung Fu.

Mark Rohlfing, instructor, holds a black belt in karate and a brown belt in kung fu. His primary interest is self-defense.

Jim Wandler, assistant instructor holds a blue belt in karate.

Martial Arts Club meetings will be held every Monday and Wednesday from 7 - 8:30 p.m.

A $10 monthly fee will be charged. The club is open to students, faculty and staff. Spectators are welcome.

For further information, call Rohlfing, 882-1714 or Wandler, 882-7069.

Three sports lead women's athletics

There will be an organizational meeting for the women's cross country enthusiasts tomorrow, at 4 p.m. in the Women's Health Education Building (WHEB), room 200.

Organizational meetings for women's intercollegiate field hockey and volleyball will be held Thursday, Sept. 1 at 4:15 in rooms 200 and 201 in the WHEB.

Interested undergraduate women should either attend the meetings or contact Dr. JoDean Moore, cross country and field hockey coach WHEB 107, or Amanda Burk, volleyball coach WHEB 203.

"This year should be a building year in field hockey," said Kathy Clark, assistant athletic director and head of women's athletics.

"I feel we have a good chance to get into the regional playoffs in volleyball. From there we could get in the small college national playoffs," Clark said.

The U of I women's volleyball and field hockey teams are competing this year as independents.

The first competition in volleyball is the Boise State Invitational tournament, in Boise, Friday, September 23 and Saturday, September 24.

Women's field hockey will start its regular season Friday, October 7 against BSU and will play NNC at Nampa the next day.

Intramurals need student referees

There will be a meeting this Thursday at 4 p.m. in room 109 of the men's gym, for all students interested in officiating for intramural touch football. Officials will earn $2.30 per hour throughout the year. Officials will also be needed for basketball and other sports this fall and next spring.

According to Bob Whitehead, intramural director, all students interested in officiating must attend the meeting.

There will also be a managers meeting next Tuesday, Sept. 6, for formation of teams and leagues for touch football. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in room 109 of the men's gym.

For further information, contact the intramural office at 885-6381.

Probable fee increase approved by Regents

The State Board of Regents has tentatively approved an Idaho student fee increase for fiscal year 1978-79. The money raised will go to Idaho intercollegiate athletic programs and is part of the $3.5 million increase in state dollars destined for higher education. Semester fees will increase $4 at the U of I and $3 at Lewis-Clark State College to support men's athletics. Women's athletic fees will be raised $2 at Boise State University, $6 at Idaho State University and $10 at LCSC. The U of I will not have a women's athletic fee increase, but will instead receive $85,900 from the state's general fund. The women's program at LCSC will receive $11,200 in state funds with the men's athletic program receiving $12,700.

Kathy Clark, assistant athletic director and head of women's athletics, said, "The increase in funds will help put women's athletics on a firm base." The proposed 85,900 would almost double the current budget in U of I women's athletics.

According to Lynn Tominaga, ASUI president, the increase in expenditures is part of a move by the Regents to conform with federal regulations requiring equal educational opportunity.

The tentative fee increase would raise total athletic semester charges to $32 at the U of I, $28 at ISU, $28 at LCSC and $20 at BSU.

The proposed fee increase came as a surprise to student leaders. "I didn't know about it until the day of the Regents meeting," said Tominaga.

A.L. Alford Jr., Board of Regents President, said student governments were not consulted because, "There is no way you can communicate with students during summer vacation and the plan wasn't studied until June."

After speaking to several of the Regents, Tominaga said, "The board will probably institute the fee increase, but it will be close."

Tominaga noted there is opposition across the state by all college student governments to oppose the fee increases.

The ASUI Senate will vote for or against the fee increase tonight in their first meeting. "If the Senate votes for the resolution, which is against the fee increase, then we'll fight it," Tominaga said.

Three sports to head women's athletics

The first organizational meetings for women's intercollegiate field hockey and volleyball will be held Thurs. Sept. 1 at 4:15 p.m. in rooms 200 and 201 in the Women's Health and Education Building (WHEB).

Interested undergraduate women should either attend the meetings or contact Dr. JoDean Moore, field hockey coach, WHEB 107, or Amanda Burk, volleyball coach, WHEB 203.

"This year should be a building year in field hockey," said Kathy Clark, assistant athletic director and head of women's athletics.

"I feel we have a good chance to get into the regional playoffs in volleyball. From there we could get in the small college national playoffs," Clark said.

The U of I women's volleyball and field hockey teams are competing this year as independents.

The first competition in volleyball is the Boise State Invitational tournament, in Boise, Friday, September 23 and Saturday, September 24.

Women's field hockey will start its regular season Friday, October 7 against BSU and will play NNC at Nampa the next day.

Muhammad Ali vs. the "Man of Steel" in hopes of saving the planet earth

(ZNS) After nearly two years of secret negotiations involving presidential candidates, movie stars and the world's heavyweight boxing champion, a revolutionary new Superman comic book is about to make its debut.

The Village Voice reports that the December issue of Superman is going to feature a grueling prize fight between the Man of Steel and Muhammad Ali.

The plot involves intergalactic invaders who say they will spare the planet earth only if their own kind can be beaten in a boxing match. Both Superman and Ali insist they should have the right to fight the invaders, so a match is arranged to select the winner.

Adding color to the comic pages is the fact that many celebrities, including Jimmy Carter, Raquel Welch, Frank Sinatra and ex-president Jerry Ford, are depicted as sitting at ringside during the bout. Before each celebrity was drawn, however, D.C. Comics first obtained their permission.

The Voice reports that Carter agreed to the request that he be shown with Rosalynn, but only if Amy was not also included.

Who wins the Titanic battle between Ali and Superman? D.C. Comics says the outcome is being kept a top secret until December.

New Community School offers an alternative

The Moscow Community School is an alternative in elementary education. "It's not a place for all children," says Deb Rose, teacher at the school. This school directs its energies toward "kids who are independent and don't need a lot of outside structure." There are no tests. "There is nothing bad that I can do to these children, we don't have a principal," said Rose.

The school days are flexible with classes that stress individual learning. The overwhelming attitude here is realizing each child as a unique person with unique learning growth rates and interests.

The Moscow Community School, at the same time, competes with both minimum finances and an idea, which, although not new in the country, is new in Moscow. Often therefore, "it becomes hard for parents to make that decision to send their kid to the Moscow Community School," observes Rose.

The school, located at 1st and Jefferson in the basement of the Episcopal Church, is looking forward to 12 students this school year. Eight have already signed up for this fall. Four more students will be accepted.

Students who attend Moscow Community School are registered under one of two classifications, paying and non-paying. The fee charged for those parents able to afford it is $40 a month for nine months. There is no charge to parents who fall into an income bracket which would declare them unable to pay. Of the four remaining openings, two are available for students whose parents are in the latter category.

The Moscow Community School needs both types of families. Money, of course, keeps the school functioning. However, since Rose is teaching as a VISTA volunteer, the non-paying students are a requirement for the school to receive VISTA funding.

Appropriately, one of the goals of the school is to become a public school so no one need pay tuition.

The "mini-courses" tendered this month (registration was August 20) were short, week-long adult education classes, and were a vehicle to raise money for the school. 25 classes were offered in areas such as drying fruits, belly dancing, banjo and t'ai chi. 45 people registered, paying a fee of $5 per class. That money will then go toward insurance, license fees and the surety bond.

This year school opens Sept. 6, and usually follows the U of I schedule for vacations.

It is an involved process to delineate an average school day, explains Rose, since the learning process is so intensely individualized. A day can be described as time filled with more than half a dozen options for the children to choose among.

The two required classes are "Individual Work" in which basic skills are taught (reading, writing, spelling and math) and "Silent Reading."

Most of the other classes are practical applications of Individual Work sessions. Rose also likes to center some classes around monthly themes, such as environmental awareness.

"I like to make learning as interdisciplinary as possible," comments Rose.

For example, math and basic motor abilities are combined in a class titled "Making a Mess with Fractions." When the kids must decide what they all want for lunch, go out and buy food and then cook it themselves at the school, they are using their English, math, nutritional, and social skills.

"We take the kids from where they are to where they want to go in the most comfortable time," Rose said. These children don't have to learn some things until they're ready--some want to learn right away, some don't. But when a person decides it's time, the skills are quickly learned.

Hence, Rose says she prefers to see children working independently toward their own goals.

The Moscow Community School makes the effort to help students become self-directed, "to learn how to learn," according to Rose. It is an intense, real learning situation combined with a low student-teacher ratio, she stressed.

For more information about the Moscow Community School, call 882-1254.

Foundation plans arboretum

In 1910, trees planted on a weedy hillside southwest of the U of I Administration Building formed the nucleus of the first arboretum west of the Mississippi River. Today, the U of I Foundation is planning an addition to the Shattuck Arboretum, named for Charles Houston Shattuck, a former U of I forestry professor who planted 300 species of trees for study purposes on that hill.

The arboretum expansion will feature the planting of additional groves throughout the campus, a botanical garden, a conservatory, experimental plots for instruction and research, hiking paths and trails.

In addition to new plantings, the project is expected to include programs in plant introduction, systematics, breeding and physiology. It would also serve as a regional information center for plant materials, nursery management, disease control and landscape design.

Campus chairman for the project is Dr. Arthur Boe, professor of plant and soil sciences, who heads a committee to advise the U of I Foundation on planning the arboretum extension. The foundation committee for the project, headed by Roy Eiguren, a U of I law student, is in charge of procuring the funds. A new organization to support the effort, the Arboretum Associates, has also been formed.

The first area expected to be developed is a 63 acre plot designated by the Board of Regents and located adjacent to the ASU Golf Course and bordering Walenta Drive. Richard Carothers Associates, a landscape architecture firm from Boise, has been chosen by the foundation to make a detailed planning study of the area at an estimated cost of $40,000. Implementation of the study, grading, site preparation and installation of the water system will cost an estimated $170,000. The establishment of the new plantings is estimated at $80,000, making the total fund requirement about $290,000. According to Dr. Ernest W. Hartung, executive director of the U of I Foundation, implementation of the project will begin when the required $40,000 for the first phase of the project has been raised.

Arboretum Associates, a voluntary membership group, has been formed to bring the public into interaction with the arboretum project. Organizing the association are Hartung; Boe; Eiguren; Rusty Jesser, representing ASU; and two women from the Moscow and Idaho Federation of Garden Clubs, Lillian Pethel of Kamiah and Lois Kirkland of Moscow.

According to Boe, the organization provides a means for interested people to contribute time and advice as well as money to the project. The dues will be primarily used for year-to-year upkeep and plant additions. Members will receive a monthly newsletter informing them of the activities of the arboretum and will be eligible to participate in all arboretum functions.

"We're hoping this will be a public organization very much involved in planning and development of the arboretum" Boe said.

Membership applications for the Arboretum Associates are available from the University of Idaho Foundation, Inc., Moscow, Idaho 83843. Inquiries about the project and donations should be mailed to the same address. All gifts to the U of I arboretum project are tax deductible.

Several prospective buyers inspect peaches at the Moscow Food Cooperative's farmers market. The market meets every Saturday morning from 8:30 to 12:30 and will continue as long as the harvest season lasts.

Farmer's market meets Saturdays

Moscow has a farmer's market that meets every Saturday morning from 8:30 to 12:30 during the harvest season.

For the second consecutive year, the Moscow Food Cooperative is sponsoring the market behind the old post office building at the corner of Third and Jefferson Streets.

According to Janet Daily, a Co-Op manager, the market will continue through September and will probably "last until sometime in October." Last year, the market ran until mid-October.

The market can only sell fruits and vegetables. County health regulations prohibit the sale of baked goods and meats, Daily said.

There are two restrictions on fruit and vegetable vendors who wish to participate, Daily said. They cannot sell their produce for two weeks in a row and they must obtain a state tax number to collect sales tax. A temporary tax number can be obtained by calling the Idaho State Tax Commission in Lewiston at 743-9492.

The Co-Op receives no share of the sellers' profits. Some of the vendors do make contributions for advertising costs, Daily added.

Prospective patrons should bring their own containers for their purchases, Daily said. She added that although the market usually operates until Noon, the best produce is gone by 9 or 10 a.m.

Judge suggests rape may reflect a "normal reaction"

(ZNS) Candidates to replace Archie Simonson, the judge who recently suggested that rape was a "normal reaction", say that a transcript of the judge's remarks to the bench has hardly cleared his name.

Judge Simonson had predicted that a court record of a controversial May 25th hearing for a 15-year-old teenager, who pleaded no contest to a second degree sexual-assault, would have a "chilling effect" on efforts to remove him from the bench. A recall election has been set for September 7th.

According to Moria Drueger, a lawyer and the only woman opposing Simonson in the recall, however, the transcript hardly vindicates Judge Simonson.

The transcript shows that assistant district attorney

Theatre organ repairs should soon finish

Restoration of the 50-year-old Robert Morton theatre organ in the auditorium of the U of I Administration Building will be completed by the beginning of fall semester, according to organ technician George Graham of Spokane.

The repairs are "coming along fairly well," Graham said. The organ can be operated at the present time as the mechanical work is done, but the new pipes have not yet arrived. Graham has installed some new key ivories, cleaned switches and contacts, and will replace 15 or 20 pipes. Work on the organ began in mid-May.

In late 1972, vandals stole six pipes and broke several others. The School of Music lacked the funds necessary to renovate the organ, so its use ceased. Then in 1974, an extension of the auditorium stage was constructed out over the organ.

To rescue the organ, which first arrived at Moscow's Kenworthy Theatre in 1927, Marian Frykman, professor of music, and Imogene Rush, program coordinator at the Student Union Building, formed an informal committee to raise funds for restoration. A total of $800 was needed for repair work. In addition, $1,250 was required to construct security devices for the console and the pipe chambers, work which now has been completed by the UI Physical Plant.

The ASUI donated $500 to the restoration fund. Other donors include the U of I Alumni Association, $200; the local chapter of American Guild Organists, $100; and private sources, approximately $800. About $450 is still needed to cover the $2,050 restoration cost.

The most time-consuming job was extending the windline, a job required because the console has been moved from under the stage, further from the pipes, said Graham, who has installed and repaired organs for better than 55 years. He has serviced the U of I theatre organ since it was put in the auditorium and installed the concert organ in the Music Building in 1953 shortly after the building was constructed.

The theatre organ was originally installed in the Kenworthy Theatre at an approximate cost of $12,500. When talking movies arrived in Idaho three years later, the organ fell silent.

Milburn Kenworthy donated the organ to the university in 1936, at a time when the School of Music was trying to raise money to buy an organ. It has been said that when installation was completed on May 19, the Robert Morton was the first pipe organ ever to be installed in a university in the United States.

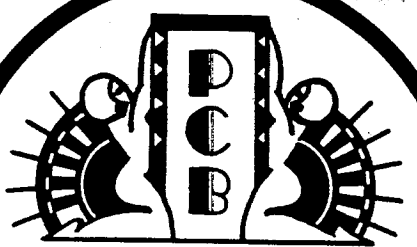

Through the years the organ has been used for organ classes, orchestra and choir accompaniment, special concerts and accompaniment for silent movie classics. It was also used during Miss University of Idaho pageants.

The organ has two manuals, or keyboards, and six ranks, or different sounds, of pipes. It contains 450 pipes, plus various traps and special effects including bass drum, snare drum, castinets, bird call, cymbals, tambourine and wood block. These instruments are located in the two organ chambers on either side of the auditorium stage.

The organ also contains four percussion instruments: chimes, orchestra bells, xylophone and, as in every other theatre organ, the chrysoglott.

Gifts to the Theatre Organ Fund can be sent to the U of I Business Office, Moscow 83843. According to Frykman, the organ will again be used for concerts, choir accompaniment and accompaniment for special silent films.

Why tomorrow's professionals choose Hewlett-Packard's first family of advanced calculators today.

They're proven performers. In space. On Everest. In the labs of Nobel laureates. Since we built the first, back in 1972, our advanced calculators have been tested by millions worldwide, and they've passed.

They have staying power. Today's classroom problems quickly grow into tomorrow's on-the-job problems. HP calculators are designed and built to handle both. They're investments in a future that happens fast.

They're straightforward. "Advanced" doesn't mean "complicated." It means "uncomplicated." HP calculators are, above all, straightforward.

They're easy to use. HP calculators not only grow with you; they grow on you. They feel natural, comfortable, because we designed them to work like you think.

They're efficient. HP calculators take the direct approach. All feature RPN, a time-saving, parenthesis-free logic system. All programmables feature a memory-saving keycode merging capability.

They're personal. Professionals design their own ways to solve their particular problems, and they expect their calculators to be versatile enough to accommodate them. Ours are.

There's a variety. To say we offer a full line is an understatement. We offer a choice. That's why we publish a unique "Selection Guide" that spells out the capabilities of each. Your HP dealer has your free copy.

Clinic adds 'new dimension' for veterinarians

Following four years of planning and construction, the U of I's Veterinary Medical Clinic at Caldwell officially opened its doors in mid August.

"The $1.3 million facility is a major Idaho contribution to the Northwest College of Veterinary Medicine," said Dr. Floyd Frank, dean of Idaho faculty in the joint program between University of Idaho, Washington State University and Oregon State University.

Located on a 20-acre site at the U of I Agricultural Research and Extension Center, the clinic, directed by Dr. Stuart Lincoln, will serve three purposes of benefit to veterinary students and Idaho livestock producers.

The purposes, Frank explained, will be to provide an out-patient service on a referral basis, increased animal disease research, and on-the-job training and teaching of food animal medicine to senior veterinary students.

Prior to development of the clinic, Frank pointed out that some animal specimens were accepted for special research projects but the projects dictated which specimens were needed.

"A new dimension has been added," said Frank. "With our staff increase of three to nine professionals highly trained in diagnosis and treatment, we can now accept diseased animals referred to us by outside veterinarians."

Another aspect of the clinic which makes this service possible is the additional facilities. The new clinic, due to be dedicated today, has treatment, examination and surgery rooms, X-ray facilities, hospital accommodations for cattle, swine and sheep, plus laboratories for histopathology, clinical pathology, virology, microbiology, sterilization and necropsy.

Not only will these facilities and the additional personnel benefit livestock producers with referral service, they will increase the research that can be done on food animal disease problems.

"Emphasis will be placed on research problems that have practical application for Idaho's livestock industry," Frank said.

He explained that unlike that Bureau of Animal Industry Laboratory where research is principally related to animal diseases subject to regulation, the Caldwell clinic will not confine its activities to just those diseases.

But neither will the Caldwell facility restrict itself to research and referral services.

Equally important is assuring that in the future Idaho will have on hand veterinarians familiar with the state's livestock problems.

For this reason, veterinary medicine students will spend some of their senior year in clinical training at the facility.

The teaching program is operated on a rotating basis with the school year divided into four 4-week blocks of time. A student can spend up to three of those blocks at the Caldwell clinic.

The first student to study at the Caldwell facility will be Daniel DeWeert, who will arrive Sept. 1, according to Dr. Lincoln. He said just one student will study there during the fall but 12 are expected during the spring.

Since Idaho's principal food animals are present in large numbers in the Caldwell area, students in the program will have an excellent opportunity to gather first-hand knowledge of disease problems peculiar to Idaho.

Frank emphatically noted that veterinary students won't be learning those problems just from a book, but rather "they'll be working side-by-side with practicing veterinarians."

On hand at the clinic is videotaped, auto-tutorial teaching equipment enabling students to learn through self-teaching. "There will be very little in the way of classroom lecture, but students will be required to know what is on tape," Frank added.

"These students will really be trained to work with the major livestock industries in an effective manner," Frank said.

'No comment' official comment from assassination committee

(ZNS) The House Select Committee on Assassinations, in an effort to keep its public profile as low as possible, has abolished its entire press office.

The 12-member committee, which is reportedly reinvestigating the major political assassinations of the past 14 years, recently dismissed its official press spokesperson Bert Chardak and all of Chardak's assistants.

The committee's new chief counsel, former Cornell University Professor, G. Robert Blakey, has instructed all staff members to answer all questions about the committee's activities with a simple "no comment."

The committee is being so tight-lipped, in fact, that it won't even reveal when its next public session is scheduled. During one of its last public sessions, held last June 7th, the committee reported that it had subpoenaed a former CIA contact agent named Loran Hall. Hall was to appear during a public session in Washington.

Blakey contends that the low profile is being maintained to prevent leaks and rumors about committee activities that could undermine his investigation.

The only thing known about professor Blakey's investigation is that he has quietly appointed a new counsel named Gary Cornwell to head up the probe into President Kennedy's murder. The 32-year-old Cornwell is a former prosecutor who, like professor Blakey himself, is an organized crime-Mafia specialist.

This has led to speculation, and it is speculation only with no hard evidence to back it up, that the assassination probe maybe concentrating on possible connections between organized crime and the assassination of J.F.K.

Proper textbook usage key to college success

A textbook, properly used, can be invaluable in any course. It provides you with essential course information, reinforces your class lectures, helps clarify and complete notes, supplies visual aids and helps you prepare for exams. The following six steps have proved to be successful in using textbooks, and they can easily be applied to any assignment.

1. Survey the entire book
2. Read for the main ideas
3. Question yourself as you read
4. Underline and make margin notes
5. Use study guides
6. Review systematically

Survey the entire book

Glance through the text as a whole: chapter headings and summaries, reading suggestions, quizzes, chronologies, discussion questions, graphs, pictures and diagrams.

Scan the table of contents to grasp the organization and scope of the text.

Read the preface carefully to understand the author's purpose and approach.

Read the concluding chapter before reading it. The heading and summary will give you an understanding of the topics or concepts to be emphasized.

Read for the main ideas

The author is trying to convey important ideas in each chapter. These, rather than details, should be your primary concern. Periodically ask yourself, "what is the author trying to convey?"

Co-ordinate your class notes with your reading. Keep full, legible, and accurate lecture notes. Like your textbook, they are a basic reference and you can return to them for guidance.

Read your assignment before each class. You can then join in class discussion to clarify and reinforce your understanding of the material. You will remember better and cramming for exams will be unnecessary.

Summarize what you have read. After finishing a page, restate the main ideas in your mind and then glance back to see if you are correct. Before closing your text, jot down the major points of the material you have read. You will find that most of the supporting details will return to you rather easily.

Question yourself as you read

Ask yourself What, Why, How, Who and When? It will help you grasp the author's main ideas.

What is the meaning of the title of this chapter? What is the purpose of headings and sub-headings, the topic sentence and the concluding remarks? What is the meaning of the important terms that are highlighted? What do the photographs, tables, diagrams or graphs demonstrate?

Why has the author chosen a certain sequence of thought? Why does he elaborate upon a particular point so extensively?

How would you rate the effectiveness of the author's style and presentation? Does he use humor, exaggeration, irony, satire? Are many examples used? Are the graphs and pictures appropriate and easy to understand?

For whom is the author writing? If it is a history text, is it biased? If it is psychology, does the author belong to a special school of thought and does this attitude shape the text's ideas?

When was the book written? Have new developments dated the author's opinions?

Ask questions in class. Bring specific inquiries with you. Make certain you are an active participant and that reading plays a vital role in your classroom work.

In the first installment, the importance of a preliminary survey of the book was stressed, and tips given on how to prepare class assignments.

Underline and make margin notes

Mark your text freely and underline key statements. Bracket significant phrases and put light check marks around special points. This will give you a clear idea of the most important material when you review.

Writing in the margins is helpful. Ask question, disagree, modify statements, rephrase concepts in your own language. By challenging the author's ideas, you will read actively and you remember what you have read.

Take notes as you read. To make your learning active and to retain what you have learned, you must take notes. They will be very useful later, reminding you of your first reactions to passages in the textbook and information that you might otherwise forget.

A journal or reading log is recommended. After you have read a section or a chapter, record your thoughts.

You may want to summarize whole chapters in a brief paragraph. In any event, transcribing your thoughts to paper will help you review and to write essays or term papers on what you have learned.

Use study guides

These guides often contain a synopsis of the textbook and raise provocative questions that can add to your depth of understanding. Use one as you read, and return to it when you review for your exam.

Consult the text supplements mentioned in the author's suggested readings or bibliography. Often a point that seems obscure in your text can be clarified by a special study of the subject.

Review systematically

Review is an on-going discipline. It is essential to successful study.

You review a phrase or sentence by underlining it; you review a page after you have read it by recalling the major points; you reassess the meaning of a chapter by going over your textbook notes; you reevaluate the material in class by joining in the discussion; you record points of view and interpretations in your notebook as you listen to the professor and other students; you make your final review before the test by re-examining your underlinings, your notes in the margins, lecture materials, and notebooks.

Before your final exam, avoid cramming at all costs, even though it may be tempting. It creates tension that may hinder your memory during the exam and prevent you from remembering afterwards.

The easiest way to review is to assemble your summary notes of each chapter. Concert the statements into questions and check the individual chapters to see if you are answering the questions fully and accurately.

Your margin notes and underlining will help you to recall details. If you have kept a reading journal, these reflections will be a further aid in remembering particular ideas. Your class notes will reinforce your reading. Pose rigorous questions to yourself, but as you approach your exam, remember one important point: Do not clutter your mind with details. If you have read the text carefully and can identify major ideas, you will remember supporting information and data.

(ZNS) England's highly publicized attempt to promote less hazardous cigarettes made of cellulose instead of tobacco has apparently flopped badly.

The New York Times reports that almost none of Britain's 22 million smokers has switched to the safer "wood pulp" cigarettes despite a $1000 million government program to develop and promote them.

According to The Times, about the only impact the substitute cigarettes have had in England is to stimulate a few new jokes: The word is reportedly going around that people smoking the substitute cigarettes are coming down with "artificial cancer"; other reports have it that by smoking wood pulp, smokers are apt to catch "Dutch Elm disease."

A summer of significant events

Dr. Richard Gibb's installation as U of I President and Dr. Boyd Martin's appointment to an Idaho UN committee were among the events that made news on campus during the summer.

The following is a short list of some of the significant events, presented here for those readers who have been gone since spring session.

July 1—Dr. Richard D. Gibb took office, saying he will lead the institution and be responsible for making the decisions.

July 1—Dr. John Knudsen was named as new Business Dean, replacing Dr. Gerald Cleveland. Cleveland resigned to take a position as professor of accounting at Seattle University's Albers School of Business.

July 1—Dr. John A.

Lawrence was named department head for Agricultural Education. He succeeds Dr. Dwight L. Kindschy who retired after 30 years on the university faculty.

July 1—Ernest W. Hartung moved from U of I President to Executive Director of the U of I Foundation.

July 1—The Economic Development Administration (EDA) awarded the University a $260,000 grant, plus a loan of an equal amount to carry out an innovative drought relief program.

July 8—Gov. John Evans named Cheryl Hymas of Jerome to the U of I Board of Regents, to replace retiring Edward Benoit.

July 8—The Idaho Supreme Court ruled that the US Constitution does not guarantee a person the right to possess marijuana in the privacy of his own home. The decision was handed down to former ASUI vice-president Brian Kincaid.

July 8—Jerry N. Wallace, former U of I assistant budget officer became the new University director of budget, replacing Dale R. Aildredge, who left to become financial vice-president and bursar at Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston.

July 15—The Perch closed down after 26 years, but the name will live on in the form of a new grocery store.

July 15—Dr. Leon Green resigned as head of the Athletic Department effective Feb 1.

July 22—Regents tentatively raised athletic fees by $4 per semester for the 1978-79 academic year.

July 22—Frank Young, director of admissions, announced his retirement effective Nov. 30, after 30 years at the university.

July 29—Dr. Boyd Martin was appointed by Gov. John Evans as Chairman for Idaho's observance of United Nation Day.

July 29—The U of I Student Health Service is once again fully staffed with the addition of two physicians—Drs. John L. Rogers and Donald K. Chin.

Illinois researchers discover Verbosity reflects anatomy

(ZNS) A study by three Illinois State researchers has concluded what some people may have long suspected. Women and men speak different languages.

The survey found that men and women talk about the same amount, but that men interrupt women about five times as often as women interrupt men, and twice as often as men interrupt one another.

The researchers say that women's language was also more emotional than men's and the men tended to speak more emotionally when there were women around.

Idaho senators nix possibility of federal pot decriminalization

Last week, United States Senators McClure and Church gave their opinions on decriminalizing marijuana and tax matters during interviews with the Argonaut. Both men were home for the congressional recess.

James McClure, Idaho's Republican junior senator, said he was opposed to the decriminalization of marijuana in any form.

McClure said one reason was the hypocrisy involved with legalizing pot only. "You can't decriminalize the possession of marijuana and not the sale of it also," he said.

The present legal restrictions, McClure said, can be seen as "having some parallels to prohibition." However, the comparison falters because "in the western world, alcohol had been used throughout history. Marijuana doesn't have the same history of usage," he added.

Prohibition tried to eliminate an "established" concept, McClure said. The current pot laws deal with a relatively recent problem, according to McClure.

Frank Church, Idaho's Democratic senior senator, said Congress wouldn't move to decriminalize marijuana. He said Carter's recent proposal to soften the criminal penalties will "probably meet with disapproval" in the Congress.

Church said he was personally in favor of lessening the penalties associated with simple possession. However, about the extent and form of the revision, Church had no specific proposals.

"The penalties may be reduced for simple possession" Church said, but "pushers" could expect their penalties to remain the same.

Another current controversy the senators expressed views on was the discrepancy in the tax deduction allowed single and married head of households.

Married taxpayers are presently entitled to a $3,200 standard deduction whereas single taxpayers only receive a $2,200 standard deduction.

McClure stated, he has "supported proposals which would give single head of households an equal tax break." He said it is "very unlikely" that such legislation be passed this year, however.

Church said, "In the Carter tax reform proposals, an attempt will be made to eliminate tax discrimination." Church was optimistic about the reform's chances for survival.

"Congress is now in the process of narrowing the gap" between the two types of deductions available, Church said.

Ultimate high: hole in your head

(ZNS) Some folks will go to any lengths to get high.

Two London residents, Amanda Fielding and Joe Mellon, are reported by a Miami Magazine to have obtained permanent highs by having holes drilled into their heads.

The publication, Superstar magazine, insists the story is true, saying the operation is known as "trepanning." It is said to involve drilling a rather large disc out of the skull, and was used centuries ago to relieve pressure on the brain and allow more oxygen inside the skull.

Fielding is reported to have told Women's Wear Daily that she now enjoys a "permanent high." Mellon is quoted in the same article as stating that the hole in his head gives him in his words "a permanent level of childhood in terms of consciousness."

The article does not explain how either of the two subjects with holes in their heads manages to keep unwanted debris away from their brains.

Oswald 'trial' is second try; 'The Fugitive' failed

(ZNS) ABC is imposing a tight lid of secrecy around the final outcome of its up-coming four-hour TV special, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald."

The dramas, which will be televised in two two-hour segments this Fall, is a fictionalization of the alleged assassin's trial, depicting what might have happened had Oswald lived long enough to present his case to a jury.

ABC reports it doesn't want

Corpse explodes during cremation

(ZNS) The British government is denying a bizarre report that a nuclear-powered pace-maker implanted in the body of a man with a heart problem exploded when the man's body was cremated recently at a London crematorium.

According to initial press reports, the small explosion released particles of deadly plutonium into the air at London's Solihull Crematorium.

Britain's Secretary of State for Social Services, David Ennals, says that he checked the report out and claims he found that the pace-maker, which did explode during a cremation, was powered by mercury cells rather than by plutonium.

Officials in both the United States and England claim that the bearers of plutonium-powered pace-makers are "identifiable" at all times, so that the pace-makers can be removed immediately after their deaths.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has warned that a bad highway accident involving a nuclear pace-maker could release plutonium into the surrounding environment.

anyone—from the network's own attorneys down to most of the members of the cast—to know ahead of time what the final verdict will be.

To keep the verdict a secret, the network shot the final scenes with just a handful of actors and actresses.

ABC says that the Oswald trial will include evidence supporting the Warren Commission's lone assassin theory as well as new evidence uncovered by Warren Commission critics.

Incidentally, the last time ABC attempted to keep an ending a secret was during the filming of the final episode of "The Fugitive" 10 years ago.

"The Fugitive" ending, however, leaked out and appeared in news columns long before the show appeared on television.

Several university administrators switch jobs

Several U of I administrators, staff, and faculty members will assume new posts within the University this year and next year.

When Frank Young, director of admissions here, retires Dec. 1, his position will be combined with that of registrar, President Richard Gibb has announced.

Matt Telin, currently registrar, will become director of admissions and registrar, while Judy Ann McNevin, now assistant to the director of admissions, will become associate director of admissions. Judith Reisenauer, currently administrative secretary to the registrar, will become administrative assistant.

Gibb said the the funds saved by the move, roughly $17,000, will go into academic programs.

"That money can go quite a ways toward laboratory equipment or other steps to improve the quality of education at the university," the president said, adding he believes the combination will in no way jeopardize the effectiveness of the admissions and registrar's functions and in fact may further strengthen them.

"This doesn't mean we'll have this arrangement forever," Gibb said. "We'll assess the change in about a year to see how it is working."

The president noted that "wherever practical, we ought to look at the internal structure of the university and, if it can be made more efficient, we should do it."

Dr. C. Randall Byers has been appointed chairman of the Department of Business in the University of Idaho College of Business and Economics.

He replaces Donald W. Seelye who resigned as chairman in order to devote more time to teaching.

Seelye, professor of labor relations, had served as chairman since April 1974. During that time he was active in arbitrating several contract disagreements between public employees and local government units and served on numerous university and state committees. Associated with the U of I since 1959, Seelye has received several outstanding teacher awards from student organizations.

Dr. Byers, associate professor of statistics and management, has been teaching courses in management sciences, statistics, computers and management information systems at U of I since 1973.

He holds a bachelor's degree from U of I, a master's degree from the University of Wyoming and a doctoral degree from the University of Minnesota. He has done research on the use of computers in teaching statistics.

Dr. James S. Malek, the English professor who was chairman of the U of I Department of English from 1973-76, has been appointed acting associate dean of the Graduate School.

Since the retirement of Dr. Edgar Grahn, Graduate School dean, Dr. Ronald Stark has been serving as acting graduate dean as well as coordinator of research. Stark has asked to be relieved of both responsibilities effective Sept. 1 and expects to return to teaching research as professor of forest entomology.

Malek came to the university in 1968 and served as director of graduate programs in English and vice chairman of English for two years before becoming chairman. A specialist in literary criticism, he has written "The Arts Compared: An Aspect of Eighteenth-Century British Aesthetics," a book published in 1974, as well as numerous journal articles.

Glassford conducts hiker survey

Ready to shoulder your backpack and ramble off into your favorite wilderness area? Or is cruising into the backcountry with four-wheel drive more your style?

If you count yourself among the rapidly growing legion participating in primitive country recreation, you could become involved in a research project being conducted by Tom Glassford, an undergraduate student in the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

Glassford is spending 11 weeks this summer talking with visitors at access points in the Eagle Cap Wilderness of northeastern Oregon and the Selkirk backcountry of northern Idaho. He asks them to complete a 15 minute questionnaire designed to survey their attitudes and preferences concerning wilderness and backcountry areas.

Hikers have responded to questions such as:

—How many other parties per day could you meet on the trail and still enjoy your trip?

—What type of wildlife management program would you favor in wilderness and backcountry areas?

—Other than designation, how would you describe the differences between wilderness and backcountry areas?

—Suppose your favorite wilderness area always seemed to be crowded with other recreationists. If the Forest Service began to inform people of less crowded backcountry areas that offer similar recreational opportunities, would you visit these areas?

Glassford hopes his study will aid future efforts to redirect certain wilderness users to semi-wilderness backcountry areas which would better suit their recreational needs, leaving designated wilderness areas to those recreationists who seek a true wilderness experience.

If Glassford's conclusions confirm the idea of redirecting wilderness users to backcountry areas, this information will be included in a report to the Forest Service.
