Hot topics covered by Gibb in first conference

By JIM SPIERSCH

U of I President Richard Gibb spoke about the alcohol policy, athletic fee increases, campus security and his impression of his job so far, at his first press conference since taking office July 1.

When asked if he expected the Board of Regents to set an alcohol policy, Gibb said, "I'm always reluctant to anticipate what the Regents will do but I'll be very surprised if they don't approve some kind of a policy."

He added, "My biggest preference is that we have some kind of a policy so that we know what the ground rules are."

As far as the specifics of the policy are concerned, Gibb said, "I have no strong feeling about that. We have a policy that says we will follow the state laws and city ordinances."

I can live comfortably with that. I can't imagine one I'd be uncomfortable with, but whatever it is, I hope we have a chance at least to look at it before it's implemented.

A proposal by the ASUI would permit the use of alcohol in campus housing, but not in the Student Union Building or other public places on campus.

Although the alcohol policy isn't on the agenda of today's meeting at Sandpoint, according to A. L. Alford Jr., board chairman, it will probably be discussed.

Regarding the athletic fee increase, Gibb said, "I would rather it came from the Legislature for state appropriations and we're talking about some $50,000. We did ask in our budget request that it come from state appropriations."

Last July the Board of Regents tentatively approved a $4 increase to raise $50,000 for the U of I sports programs. The ASUI Senate in Tuesday's meeting voted to oppose that increase.

Gibb said that student fees will go up as long as inflation continues to rise at 6 or 7 percent annually. He said the University must have additional funds to comply with federal requirements to make women's athletic programs comparable to men's athletics.

He added, the University is rapidly using up its athletic fund reserves and if athletic fees aren't increased "we soon will go in the red."

Gibb concluded saying, "I hope we don't get bogged down in a prolonged discussion each time over this or some other $4 fee increase. We have more important things to do." He said that he doesn't want to "spend time quarrelling about a $4 fee when the total cost of attending the university is beyond a $1,000 a year. We shouldn't be penny wise and pound foolish."

Armed police on campus don't bother him either. Gibb said, "I don't ever want to see an officer with a side arm out of the holster, unless it's to save someone's life." He will "take steps to see that anyone carrying a gun on campus knows how to use it. Being prepared to handle emergencies is more important than carrying a gun on campus."

President Gibb has been "getting an overview" of the state during the past month. He visited the Idaho Nuclear Engineering Laboratory in Idaho Falls and agricultural experiment stations in Parma, Caldwell, Boise, Teton and Aberdeen. He's even met with legislators in Lewiston and expects to meet most of the state's lawmakers by Christmas.

Praise for roles of women postpones army study release

(ZNS) The U.S. Army is reportedly running into considerable conflict in its own ranks about the idea of a woman soldier.

Knight News Service reports that the army this week abruptly postponed the release of a study which is said to praise the performance of women in combat support units. The study allegedly recommended that women's combat roles be expanded.

The report is the result of the army's year-old "Project Max Wac". Max Wac was established to determine whether women soldiers would impair a combat unit's ability to accomplish missions on the battlefield.

According to one of the researchers working on Max Wac, the new data could inevitably lead to an expansion of the role of women in the armed services.

Knight News says the study was expected to be released in San Francisco last Sunday at the American Psychological Association Convention. However, its release was suddenly postponed by the U.S. Army Institute, which claimed the Pentagon wanted time to assess the impact of the study. It's reported that "a considerable degree of controversy has developed with the army" over the issue.

ATO's are suspects in burglary

Robert B. Woodruff and Rolland R. Reid, both of the ATO House, were arrested August 23 and charged with first degree attempted burglary in connection with an incident last June 30, on campus.

According to the campus police, Woodruff and Reid were arrested when they were found in a window well at the administration building about 2:30 a.m. They were charged with having tools commonly used in burglaries in their possession, including a crowbar. They were released on their own recognizance.

According to Ed Schmitz, chief of campus security, the case was turned over to the city prosecutor. He said that by the time the prosecutor had drawn up the legal papers and prepared a case against Woodruff and Reid, they had left town for the summer.

Schmitz said the campus police arrested Woodruff and Reid upon their return to campus last Tuesday. They were then charged with first degree attempted burglary for the June 30 incident. The pair was released on their own recognizance.

Reid said he and Woodruff will enter a plea of not guilty at the preliminary trial September 9. They are represented by Moscow Attorney Cope Gale.

It only happens twice a year. And no, it's not a visit to the dentist's office although some regard it with the same relish. It is the bi-annual U of I registration.

Senate protests Regent's proposed fee increase

By JIM SPIERSCH

The ASUI Senate adopted a resolution Tuesday night protesting a proposed $4 hike in fees to help finance intercollegiate athletic programs.

At a meeting of the U of I Board of Regents being held today at Sandpoint, the senate will suggest that the needed money come instead from the State Legislature.

In July the Board of Regents tentatively approved a $4 increase to raise $50,000 for U of I sports programs. The Senate agreed that the Regents should seek state funds and complained that the proposed fee increase had appeared without prior knowledge or consultation of the students.

out that a decision on such a fee increase is not necessary until next spring, after the board receives its annual appropriation from the 1978 Legislature. The Senate also argues that additional student fee increases may be necessary in the next two years to finance the athletic department.

The resolution stated, "The handling of the proposed fee once again points up the need for a fee consultation policy, adding that further attempts should be made by the student government administration to develop such a policy.

The senate resolution points out that a decision on such a fee increase is not necessary until next spring, after the board receives its annual appropriation from the 1978 Legislature.

The Senate also argues that additional student fee increases may be necessary in the next two years to finance the athletic department.

The resolution declares that such a fee hike should be adopted under the provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act.

The U of I had asked that appropriated funds for men's athletics be increased $85,900 and for women's athletics $50,000. The $50,000 would provide for an expansion of the women's program, while the men's would not be enlarged.

The U of I had asked that appropriated funds for men's athletics be increased $85,900 and for women's athletics $50,000. The $50,000 would provide for an expansion of the women's program, while the men's would not be enlarged.

Sherman Carter, U of I financial vice president, in a memo to the ASUI, said that some $90,000 in reserve funds is being used in the current fiscal year to support athletic programs. "The $50,000 is needed to replace running out. These reserves, built up from past ticket revenues, are expected to be all gone by fiscal year 1980."

The Regents approved a budget request to the $85,900 for men's athletics. The $50,000 would be raised by the student fee hike.

Carter said, "The money generated by this fee increase, will be used to replace reserves which are now paying for travel and other operating costs of the athletic department."

Also included in the meeting was the oath of office taken by six new senators and the election of Rusty Jesser as president pro-tem.

Wages of sin on the rise

(ZNS) It seems the wages of sin, at least these days, are higher taxes.

Newhouse News Service reports that the Internal Revenue Service has issued several new regulations to prevent couples who are living together without benefit of marriage from employing certain tax breaks.

Married couples may calm a $750 tax exemption for a spouse, and each dependent.

However, Newhouse News reports that if two people live together out of wedlock, the IRS regulations say they may not file a joint income tax return. The agency also says it will not allow one partner to take a tax exemption for the other as either a spouse or a dependent.

Salt craving boy overdoses

(ZNS) The foster parents of a six-year old boy who reportedly craved salt so strongly that he fatally overdosed on it are now facing possible homicide charges.

A Cleveland grand jury will begin looking into the case of Robert Arnold, who reportedly went into convulsions and died about two hours after ingesting what coroners described as a "grossly excessive" amount of low sodium salt during a meal last week. The excess salt reportedly caused the boy's heart to stop beating.

According to his foster parents, Arnold had kept salt hidden throughout the house, and he (quote) "always salted his water, milk, pop, kool aid and every other liquid," as well as his food.

Low sodium salt consists of regular salt plus potassium chloride; this latter chemical, according to coroners, is what stopped the boy's heart from beating.

According to coroner Charles Hirsch, the parents had a duty "not to indulge the boy in his craving for salt, but to protect him from it."

ASUI fee increase proposed

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

Vowing to take the financial plight of the ASUI to student patrons of Moscow night spots if needed, ASUI President Lynn Tominaga revealed plans Wednesday to place a measure on the November student election ballot that, if passed, would increase ASUI fees by $3.

If the senate approves Tominaga's bill, the issue would be decided by the students when they choose next year's ASUI President. Roughly 33 percent of the student population usually votes in presidential elections, Tominaga noted, "so we shouldn't lack the votes." That should help the proposed fee increase's chances.

That wasn't the case last spring. ASUI rules require a voter turnout of at least 25 percent for such measures to pass. That figure was never reached, defeating the proposed increase, although it received a majority of the votes cast.

Tominaga said he plans to start promoting the increase proposal which would raise $17 thousand in revenue, by the middle of October. That would give him a month between then and election day to get the word out.

The promotion campaign will include a visit to each of the University living groups, he said, but added it won't stop there. Tominaga said he will go where students are. "We'll even go to the bars and preach," he said.

Tominaga said the loss of income resulting from the defeat of the proposed fee increase last spring has forced the curtailment of some ASUI departments and the elimination of entertainment. The ASUI subsidizes 12 departments.

But that number could dwindle should the proposal fail a second time, he said.

The ASUI currently receives approximately $200 thousand from registration fees. Those revenues are divided among the various ASUI departments, with each department expected to provide some of its own income.

How well those departments are earning income won't be known until November when the ASUI financial situation is reviewed. Tominaga said the review will show which departments are pulling their own weight.

Unfortunately, those that aren't will find very little sympathy from the ASUI leaders. Last year ASUI departments tapped a $28 thousand contingency fund dry for lack of income. This year that fund is less than one fourth its former strength, Tominaga noted. Tominaga said he will shut down a money losing department rather than go in the red. "We can't operate on a deficit budget. It would be a loss to the students," he said.

Tominaga said the new Senate has not considered the matter as yet. He added he will present the bill in final form, placing the issue on the November ballot, by the first week in October.

Tominaga said he has the support of the seven returning senators and they "will work to convince all the new senators how bad off things really are."

Should the measure pass at the polls, Tominaga said, ASUI entertainment might be reborn, but there's no guarantee of that. "First we would try and salvage."

He added if the fee increase proposal is defeated, "a lot of programs will be closing down in March and April."

Student exchange, out of state for less

The National Student Exchange enables students to attend other campuses without paying out of state tuition or fees.

According to Corky Bush, director of special services, there are 75 students on the U of I campus this semester from other schools. She said the U of I has 62 students at some of the other 39 schools involved in the exchange program.

Bush said, any student interested in the exchange program for either spring semester or next year should contact her at the Women's Center, ext. 6285.

Sirhan may visit Kennedy murder site

(ZNS) An attorney for Sirhan Sirhan will ask a Los Angeles court this week to authorize the return of the convicted assassin of Robert Kennedy to the Ambassador Hotel where the killing occurred.

Sirhan's attorney Godfrey Isaac is scheduled to appear before Judge William Hogoboom on Thursday afternoon, to make what Isaac calls "an unprecedented request."

Isaac says Sirhan believes that his visit to the murder scene might jar Sirhan's memory, enabling him to recall events immediately before and during the 1968 shooting of Senator Robert Kennedy.

Sirhan has contended for the past nine years that he went into some sort of mental trance, and that he can remember none of the events leading up to the senator's death.

The honeymoon, part II

Married student housing leaves me with mixed emotions. The rent cannot be beaten in this town. However, the nine page lease with all the rules and regulations makes my skin crawl... and I have just finished a regimented life with the military.

We were on the "list" for over a year before a one bedroom unfurnished apartment came available. When we signed the lease, we had to prove we were married—and to each other. A xerox copy was then attached to the lease. Student renters with children must show birth certificates of their offspring.

Our apartment is carpeted. It has washer and dryer hook-ups. We have a garbage disposal. We also have two stoves and two refrigerators. The housing office will not move anything out of any unit. Rentors cannot remove anything unless they move and store at their own expense. Housing explained that they have no storage available. Rentors are not allowed to store anything outside of the door. This rule is often broken. Where is a family supposed to keep a barbeque, sleds, a hose, tricycles and a child's plastic swimming pool?

We proposed to buy or build a storage shed along the side of our unit, but were turned down. Housing said the units should look uniform. So, now we have everything in front of our door, too. That's uniformity.

Each rentor is allocated one parking space and a green housing parking sticker. If he has two cars, one has to be park in the other campus lots. If he wants to take the green stickered car on campus, he needs the blue sticker. If the second car is found in the housing lot without a green sticker, it will be ticketed. If it has no blue sticker (that is now in the first car on campus), it will be ticketed. Housing said, "Sorry."

The lease rules tell us how to clean our home; this includes procedures for cleaning the appliances, the bathroom tile and the fans. Our place came complete with two dirty fans, a dead mouse on the bedroom floor and a yellow bathroom with mold on the ceiling. The yellow bathroom has since been cleaned to its original white.

No doubt the housing office has had problems with student renters and tries to alleviate problems with rules. Most of the rules are common sense, while the others are impossible to follow.

However, my greatest complaint about married student housing concerns the insect population that presently rooms with us. Large brown spiders waitz across the floor every day. Cockroaches "six-step" in the bathroom. Have you ever stepped on a moving something in bare feet? In the dark? Try an earwig sometime, because it bites.

Our neighbors said the unit has not been sprayed during their occupancy—over a year.

But spraying is not in the housing contract. My phoned complaint about the bugs did not receive an answer.

There are benefits to living in married student housing. It is cheaper for us than living downtown. We can walk to campus. The water and garbage removal is paid for. And we can hear whatever our neighbors do in the bathroom. Marvelous.

LETTER

Editor:

As the Panama Canal issue heats up again, it will do us well to review some historical facts. As I looked through my thick file on the issue, I decided to compose the following true-false examination for all those who would presume to give advice.

1. Colombia, the original sovereign over the Isthmus, refused to give the U.S. permission to build the Canal.
2. The U.S. then supported the Panamanians in a war of national liberation from Colombia.
3. No Panamanian saw the 1903 treaty in its final draft form, and no Panamanian was present in Washington when it was signed.
4. When the Panamanians did arrive they were stinking mad at what had happened.

5. Secretary of State Hay stated that the 1903 treaty was "very satisfactory, vastly advantageous to the U.S.; and, we must confess with what face we can muster, not so advantageous to Panama."

6. At the time many U.S. newspapers and commentators criticized the treaty as a blatant act of imperialism.

7. The 1903 treaty allowed the U.S. to buy rights not land.

8. In 1905 Secretary of War Howard Taft admitted that Panama retained "titular sovereignty" over the Canal Zone, and U.S. courts have consistently backed this view.

9. All Latin American countries, most of them virulently anti-Communist, totally support Panama's claims over the Canal.

10. California Senator Hayakawa has said that "we stole the Canal fair and square."

All of the statements are true and I will be glad to provide documentation to those who doubt their veracity. Those who score seven to ten right are urged to write Senators Church and McClure in favor of the new treaty. Those who score less than seven correct are urged to go back to their history books before expressing an opinion on such an important issue.

The local climate

This may be the best time of the year.

The weather is still wavering between summer and fall. Brisk mornings, sunny days, and cool nights. And even though the semester has begun its rush to the end, no one seems to notice. Students still smile on their way around campus.

Even the ASUI Senate looks good so far. The newly-elected senate President Pro-Tempore, Rusty Jesser, urged his fellow senators to note "that it's time we do some things that the students can see."

Already the president, Lynn Tominaga, and the vice president, Gary Quigley, are working with the University's President Gibb to formalize a policy already in effect: that students may keep alcoholic beverages in their private domains when they attain the legal age.

But other problems show no improvement or are backsliding. No new promising reports of needed funding to improve the library have appeared and the Regents are apparently trying to stick the students for another athletic fee increase without adequately consulting with them first.

The students must also remember that until the senate and Mr. Jesser show their recovery from the dealings crafted silently last semester which resulted in the entertainment program annihilation and the chaotic disruption of the student newspaper, they should be kept under observation.

Relapses are nothing to smile about.

Charlie Brown and preservation preparation

By BILL LOFTUS

This fall there will be two self-subsistency courses offered to U of I students.

Both are the stories of struggle and vision.

One of the courses operates outside the jurisdiction of the University and the other is a new course within it. The first is free, carries no academic credits and occurs at the teacher's home, a place known as Poverty Flats, C. Brown, proprietor, located seven and a half miles northeast of Moscow. The second course falls under the U of I's agriculture department special topics 204 and 404 headings.

The first class, which began in 1972, exists outside academia's realm. It's instructor, bearded, bespectacled, slightly scruffy looking and riddled with a sense of intense urgency, goes by the name of Charlie Brown.

A former president of Night Line, Brown seems genuinely concerned about the needs of others. Night Line is the U of I agency which tries to smooth out personal crises that citizens experience. He was also the director of Pullman's High Street Center which recently folded due to lack of funds. The Pullman organization is affiliated with the national string of Hotline Centers.

Brown recently withdrew from Night Line because of personal problems. "It's hard to help others with their problems when your own are always on your mind," he said.

The concern for others still manifests itself in other of Brown's actions, however.

"I started the class," Brown said, "as a result of sitting down one day and thinking about if hard times like the Thirties depression hit again, which of my friends would make it? I could only think of one."

His course in self subsistency includes numerous topics. The identification and use of edible and medicinal plants in this area begins the class agenda. Complete home construction follows; it includes framing a building, plumbing and electrical techniques. Water witching, dairy farming (Brown said the class will hand-milk a dairy animal), poultry care, bread baking, canning, soup making and beer and wine brewing are also topics, he said.

"I feel really good about the water witching part," he said. "It's one of those things that people never accepted before, but now they're starting to."

Students may attend the class for all or only part of the subjects, he said.

Since it began, five years ago, "about a hundred students per semester" have begun the class, Brown said. "Usually, about 30 to 40 finish." People tend to drift away as the regular university semester progresses, he added.

Brown teaches the class with no financial help from the U of I. The self-subsistency class, which is open to anyone in the Moscow and Pullman area, does receive some money from Washington State University. Brown has no other funding sources.

"WSU gives me some money for gas," Brown said. He provides rides for those who wish them. Brown maintained the course is free but added, "If students can help me with a buck for gas, I'd appreciate it."

This fall, those interested will have to meet him on the first evening to be guided to his home. He said those wishing to drive to subsequent sessions would be welcome

Previously, Brown's course was taught at the Talisman House at 625 Ash Street on campus. It was part of the Free University program. Brown said the location change came because it appears "the Free U may not happen this year."

According to Brown, lack of organization and funds are the major factors contributing to its demise. After bemoaning the loss of the free university program, Brown began to criticize the current theory of the University.

Brown said, "In 1973, the federal government passed a law saying each land grant university must offer a course in self-subsistency. The University says that we have agriculture courses that cover it. That's bullshit! We don't have anything like it."

In general, Brown charged, "The universities are no longer a place of higher learning. They're boot camps. All they care about is churning out candidates for employment, so every third person is the same."

Brown said that because his course doesn't directly increase a student's chances for employment, it doesn't fit in with the University.

Students may sign up for Brown's class by calling him at home in the evenings at 882-0193, or they may sign up at the SUB information desk in the lobby. Further information may also be obtained from the same sources. At present, Brown only said the course will start "soon."

But, the situation may be changing at the U of I because of a "round the barn approach," according to Dr. Audus Helton. Helton is a professor of plant sciences at the University.

Read more about the University's approach to student self-subsistency in next Tuesday's Argonaut.

A fitting punishment

(ZNS) A Kent State University professor recently convicted of criminal trespassing has received an odd sentence.

Edward McGehee was one of 69 persons charged with criminal trespass in connection with recent protests against the University's plans to build a gymnasium on the site where four students were shot in 1970.

McGehee, an English professor, was sentenced by a judge last week to write a 1500 word essay on civil disobedience.

Child care services for U of I students offered for first time

Part time child care for children of U of I students will be offered on campus for the first time this fall under a pilot program administered through the U of I Office of Student Advisory Services.

Lorri Edwards, director of the U of I Child Care Center, said the program is for children three years of age through the third grade and will be limited to the children of students enrolled at U of I for the fall semester. Care will be available for children during the student's in-class hours.

The child care facility is located at Talisman House, 625 Ash St. Registration for Vasectomies being reversed for many (ZNS) An increasing number of the seven million American men who have had vasectomies are reportedly changing their minds, and are now asking that the procedure be reversed.

Some medical authorities are predicting that an estimated 10 percent of those who obtain vasectomies will ask them to be reversed, many of them because they have since remarried and want more children by a second wife.

the center's services is now operating.

"Parents may reserve time for their children to be cared for on an hourly basis for the whole semester at the time of registration," Edwards said. "For instance, someone with a 10 a.m. class Monday, Wednesday and Friday may arrange to leave a child for that hour for the whole semester."

The center will be open for child care daily from 8:55 a.m. to 5:05 p.m., and 10 children can be accommodated during each hour.

Registration will be on a first-come, first-served basis with a charge of 85 cents per hour made for the care. Parents must pay for all time reserved, whether or not it is used, Edwards noted.

"It will take cooperation to make the system work," she said. "If this year's program is successful, we hope to be able to have an expanded program next year."

Edwards will serve as administrative director with two staff members, Rob Murray, a senior majoring the early childhood education who is working in the University Year for Action program, and Patricia Scott, also a senior in early childhood education.

AFTER DINNER TREATS — New U of I students were the guests of faculty and staff members for dessert and conversation in informal gatherings at individual homes this week as part of new student orientation. Participating in this activity were President and Mrs. Richard Gibb, who opened their home to some 30 students. Freshman pre-medicine major Ching-Chao Wang, and sophomore accounting major Willa Soncarty, are served dessert made by Betty Gibb, center.

Outdoor program avails activities

The Outdoor Program at the U of I provides opportunities for the students and staff of the University to experience outdoor adventure at a low cost.

Fifty to eighty activities per year are organized or sponsored by the Outdoor Program. Sleeping bags, tents, snowshoes, cross-country skis, rafts, kayaks and other outdoor equipment may be rented at low price on a daily or weekend basis. The availability of the equipment fluctuates with seasonal demand but items may be reserved on each Tuesday for use that week. Members of the community may also use Outdoor Program equipment by purchasing a $3 ASUI Outdoor Rental Center Membership Card each semester. Reservations for non-student rentals are taken on Thursdays.

Some of the outings that the Outdoor Program is sponsoring in September are: Sept. 3, Snake River raft trip (already filled); Sept. 4, Little Bald Mt. hike; Sept. 5, rock climbing, Moscow Mt.; Sept. 7, 10, 11, 14, kayaking instruction on the Clearwater and Snake Rivers; Sept. 17-18, Stevens Peak backpack trip; Sept. 24-25, Seven Devils hike and climb trip. Participation in some outings will be limited but sign-up sheets are posted in the Outdoor Program office in the basement of the SUB for those who wish to reserve a position.

Man against Nature: sport blends talents

By GEORGE KATSILOMETES

Orienteering is easily becoming the ultimate back-to-nature sport, blending running, map reading, and compass calculation in a race against the wilderness.

Orienteering is a conflict sport, pitting man against nature. The sport's theme makes a contestant determine the fastest path through terrain and find specific checkpoints along the way. In essence, to be a standout, a person must be both physically and mentally fit.

Orienteering has not only largely grown in parts of the United States, but also at the U of I, where the 50 member Orienteering Club has been formed.

According to Captain Lawrence Broughton, faculty advisor for the club, the sport is not growing solely because of its following by the school's military science department, but because it has a good appeal in the Moscow area.

Broughton participates and also teaches orienteering. He notes that its uprising has resulted because people want to be in shape, not only physically but mentally.

The orienteering expert also pointed out that the Moscow area is one of the best for the sport, due to its many hills and types of terrain.

Though the sport has not been in the United States for more than a decade, its history dates back to the late 1910's, where it was invented by Major Ernst Killander, a Swedish national youth leader who felt that the world was interested too much in spectator sports and not enough with participation.

The Major organized a series of cross-country running events through Swedish forests, and orienteering was born.

The sport soon spread throughout Europe and finally into the U.S. in the mid 1960's. Orienteering here was first picked up by the military which used it as a training drill.

Yet the sport was not truly recognized until 1970, when the United States Orienteering Federation (USOF) was established.

Now the federation holds an annual championship.

In such an orienteering event, each contestant is given a map of a region and a compass. Each runner then gets a master map marked with red and white boxes called controls, which he is to locate.

Quickly he copies the location of each control and begins. Then with compass, map, and wits for guidance, he tries to find each control. At each control is a punch which marks a runner's card to prove he did indeed find the control.

After hours of physical and mental exhaustion a runner finishes the course, getting as many controls as he possibly can in the allotted time. Yet it isn't a feeling of pain the runner feels when he's finished, but rather one of pride, for he has gone against nature, and nearly won.

Mel Blanc will visit, says, 'What's up doc?'

Mel Blanc, the man whose voice is familiar to millions as Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig and dozens of other cartoon heroes, will visit the U of I next week and talk with at least one voice in the SUB Ballroom at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday.

Blanc has been at it over 40 years, giving life to such characters as Sylvester and Tweety Bird ("I tawt I taw a puddy tat), Yosemite Sam, Foghorn Leghorn, Speedy Gonzales, Barney Rubble of the Flintstones, Pepe LePew and of course, Daffy Duck.

Born in San Francisco 68 years ago, Blanc grew up in Portland, Oregon. He started doing his voice characterizations in grade school, he says, "entertaining students and teachers, getting big laughs and lousey grades."

He got into radio in 1927 and by the 30's and 40's was a star in what became to be known as "the golden days of radio." Blanc starred in his own show and was also a featured guest with the likes of Jack Benny, Judy Canova, Abbott and Costello and Burns and Allen.

Cartoons and television have brought Blanc's characters to viewers around the world. When the Road Runner goes "beep, beep," it's Blanc in the background.

Blanc's humor has seen him through rough times too. In 1961, he was in an auto crash that demolished his car and literally broke every bone in his body. He was in a coma for 21 days and had to wear a full body cast for a year. It is said that when he emerged from the coma, Blanc looked up and said, "Eh, what's up doc?"

Blanc is the first speaker in this year's Issues and Forums series, presented by the ASUI programs committee. Admission will be free.

ENTERTAINMENT

The first "Coffeehouse" of the year was held last Tuesday in the SUB. Free coffee and music will continue throughout the year. Contact ASUI Programs at 885-6484 for more information.

AT&T claims suicide caused by conscience

(ZNS) The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is claiming that a "guilty conscience" rather than phone company pressure and harassment drove a former Bell Telephone Company executive to suicide three years ago.

The unusual testimony is being presented in a trial in San Antonio, where the family of T.O. Gravitt and another former Bell executive, James Ashley, are suing the phone company for $29 million in damages.

Gravitt committed suicide in 1974, leaving behind a note which charged his employer, Southwestern Bell, with committing massive fraud and alleged the company hounded him to death.

However, psychiatrists representing the phone company testified this week that Gravitt killed himself mainly because of a "guilty conscience." AT&T contends that the former executive took his life after he learned that the company was investigating his alleged use of company funds for his personal needs.

A 10-man, 2-woman jury in San Antonio is currently listening to testimony in the case.

Muzak: music to not listen to (ZNS) The Muzak Corporation, the company which pipes millions of hours of music into offices and factories, reports that it is actively attempting to perfect music that no one listens to.

According to the company, the whole purpose of its service is to provide music that people can "hear," yet don't want to "listen" to.

A news release reports that Muzak technicians pore over every potential Muzak tune and literally remove all sharp contrasts from the music that might catch a listener's attention.

The final smoothed-out product, the company adds, is given a "stimulus quotient" depending on how lively it is.

According to Muzak, the tunes are then arranged on tapes so that the melodies with the highest "stimulus quotients" are timed to coincide when workers in an office or factory are the most tired.

In this way, says Muzak, their music subtly perks up offices during slow periods. According to Muzak, the worst complaint it can receive is a reaction from customers "saying they like a particular song." The company says that memorable songs are removed and toned down to prevent listeners from relating to them. After all, Muzak explains "we don't want them (the workers) putting down their pencils" on the job and listening.

Three films offer mixed fare

By PHIL BAECHLER

It's a good week for film-goers in Moscow this week, with three films in town offering a variety of subjects. Woody Allen's newest film Annie Hall is playing at the Micro, Star Wars is held over at the Kenworthy and the NuArt is offering The Deep.

True love and terminal neurosis might be a good tag for Allen's newest. His usual comic slapstick takes on additional depth in this semi-autobiographical tale of Alvie Singer and his various relationships with women. Singer traces his sexual insecurity to a nervous childhood (he grew up under the Coney Island roller coaster).

Two early marriages fail hilariously before Singer meets the archetypical spaced-out chick, Annie Hall. Diane Keaton does a good job of portraying the intricate Annie, who is at once simple ("Do you really think so? Well lah di dah") and complex. Allen suggests a surreal side to her introspection with scenes of her leaving her body to watch herself and Singer making love.

Paul Simon makes his movie debut as a mellow, coke-sniffing musician.

Be prepared to laugh.

While Allen explores inner space, Star Wars hits the great outer space for a science fiction intergalactic game of cowboys and bad guys.

Special effects are the big draw here, with plenty of laser zaps, exploding planets and starships, as well as a wealth of space critters. Over 350 effects are used, compared to a mere 35 in 2001.

Carrie Fisher stars as the oh-so-sweet princess Leia, whose rebel forces need secret information in order to defeat the baddies. Even without a white hat, Mark Hamill is the typical "Good guy," while Harrison Ford sneeringly plays the cynical mercenary. Alec Guinness is excellent as a guru-like master of "the force".

The real comic heroes of the film turn out to be two robot "droids," C-3PO, a golden robot programmed for protocol and sounding like the typical English butler; and R2-D2, a small squawk box that looks like a cross between a vacuum cleaner and a giant Easter egg. This is the Abbot and Costello of robotdom, with R2-D2's most memorable lines consisting of a series of meaningful and sometimes humorous squeaks, chirps, and grunts.

Be prepared to cheer the good guys and hiss the baddies, and be careful not to get vertigo or space sickness.

Jaqueline Bisset, this year's winner of Hollywood's wet T-shirt contest, stars as the main attraction in The Deep. She and Nick Nolte play a couple whose search for underwater treasure is complicated by bad guys, sharks (of course) and plenty of water.

Singer Judy Collins will appear on KUID-TV, CH 12, this Sunday at 7 p.m. and again next Tuesday and Friday at 8 p.m.

Star Trek spaces again

(ZNS) A sign of the changing times we live in is this report from Gene Roddenberry, the creator of Star Trek.

Roddenberry says that the general configuration of the famous starship, the U.S.S. Enterprise, will remain almost the same as it was before for the new two-hour episodes of Star Trek that will be filmed for television this fall.

One of the changes Roddenberry has made is the inclusion of "heads" aboard the spaceship. Roddenberry explains that 10 years ago, when Star Trek made its debut, toilets were never included in a TV series. He credits Archie Bunker with making the john respectable.

Speaking of Star Trek, creator Gene Roddenberry says just about every member of the old crew, except for Leonard Nimoy, has agreed to appear in the new TV series.

Roddenberry told a "Trekkie Convention" in Washington, D. C., last week that actor William Shatner, who plays the part of Captain Kirk, has given his verbal assurance that he will appear in the up-coming Star Trek specials.

However, Nimoy, who plays the part of Mr. Spock, a scientist from the planet Vulcan, has reportedly refused all offers to return to the role. Roddenberry says he still hopes to talk Nimoy into making a few guest appearances in the new episodes.

Big Mac's big price causes big trouble

(ZNS) Ronald McDonald has been hauled into federal court to face price-fixing charges.

The operators of five McDonald's restaurants in the Arizona area are charging that the worldwide hamburger chain has rules which prevent them from lowering their own prices. The independent owners contend that they would like to offer special prices on such things as "Big Macs" and french fries, but that McDonald's corporate leaders won't let them.

McDonald's is reported to have threatened to revoke their licenses because of their willingness to cut prices.

Women organize rugby club

By KIT FREUDENBERG

A women's rugby club is being organized this year by two enthusiasts, Linda Steele and Lenore Mobley.

The first practices will be Tuesday, 5-7 p.m. on the field between Targhee Hall and the Farmhouse, and Friday, 3-5 p.m. on the far west intramural field.

Steele said that rugby is an exciting sport with "lots of action." After watching the Blue Mountain Rugby Club, the local men's team, several women decided that they would like to be "ruggers," too.

A "rugger" is a rugby player. Rugby clubs have their own colors, songs, skits and methods of doing things at parties, according to Steele. About 40 women signed up at registration to play, and she hopes more will come to the practices.

"It doesn't matter if you don't know how to play," said Steele. Most of the women who signed up know nothing about the sport, she added. However, several male ruggers will be instructing various plays and player positions at the practices.

"Rugby is not a sport you practice to play; you have to practice and play," Steele said. She hopes to field two teams of 15 players each with some replacements.

The club organizers want to play other women's rugby clubs in the area. Steele said there are clubs in Oregon and Missoula, and enough in Denver for a league or "union." She said she hoped WSU would organize a club, also.

Rugby is a different sport, and that is why she wants to play. "It's something new," she said. The sport could not be any rougher than other female team sports, Steele added.

As yet, the club is unnamed. The club colors are cream and dark brown. The club songs have yet to be written and sung.

For further information, contact Bill Futymoski at White Pine Hall, by calling 885-7405.

Referees, coaches sought

The U of I Women's Athletic Program has several opportunities for members of the campus and Moscow communities to get involved in their program.

They are looking for people with expertise in cross country, track and field, gymnastics, swimming and diving, and basketball for the position of assistant coach. The assistant basketball coach will assume the coaching duties for the junior varsity

Swim team meets

An organizational meeting for the women's swimming team will be held Thursday Sept. 8 at 4:15 p.m. in room 200 of the Women's Health Education Building. The team needs undergraduate swimmers and divers. Practice will begin Oct. 4.

The team has several excellent prospects for the upcoming season said Coach Susan Tandy. Terry Bell, a returning diver "should do very well," said Tandy.

Two incoming freshman that should be welcome additions will be Linda DeMeyer from Olympia, Wash. and Kathy Bernard from Wisconsin.

team also.

Another area of involvement in the women's program is officiating field hockey, volleyball, basketball and gymnastics. Trained officials are needed immediately, but anyone willing to be trained will find an opportunity to participate also.

Anyone willing to serve as officials for home events, in track and field and swimming will also find a place in the program. In many cases a minimum of instruction is necessary to be of any assistance to the event.

Anyone interested is asked to contact Kathy Clark, Head of Women's Athletics, in the Women's Health Education Building (WHEB) Room 104, or the coach of the respective sport.

Coaches in the women's program include Clark, bowling; Amanda Burk, WHEB 205, volleyball; Bonnie Hultstrand, WHEB 105, basketball and tennis; JoDean Moore, WHEB 107, field hockey, track and field and cross country; Judi Haas, WHEB 206, gymnastics; a swimming coach is yet to be named. All the coaches can be reached at 885-7921.

Cross country for women new at Idaho

An experimental U of I Women's cross country team is being organized for the first time this year. The first meeting was held Wednesday night.

Bonnie Bukowski, a junior exchange student from Auburn, Massachusetts, will provide experience for the team. She ran cross-country at the University of Massachusetts for two years.

Sue Hatch, a sophomore, will also be competing in cross-country. Last year she ran the two-mile outdoor for her first season in Women's track.

Tentative meets have been scheduled. The first at Whitworth on September 24. A two and a half to three mile course will be run in the meet.

Coach JoDean Moore is looking for assistant coaching help. Interested persons should be able to travel and have knowledge or background in cross-country as a participant or coach. Qualified people should contact Moore at Women's Health Education Building (WHEB) 107 or Kathy Clark, Head of women's athletics, at WHEB 104. Both can be reached at 885-7921.

U of I cross-country team to hit 1000-mile preseason workout

Argonaut/Jim Collyer

The hurdles always seem to get a little taller as the day wears on.

By PHIL BAECHLER

The U of I cross country team has been working hard lately in their preseason conditioning, so last Wednesday Coach Mike Keller took them out for an "easy" workout: a mere ten mile jog from Troy to Moscow along rural dirt roads. "Most of these guys have run 500 miles this summer to get ready for the season," said Keller. "They will all be getting another 500 or so before the first meet this year." Keller drove a van ahead of the team, stopping occasionally to dig an arrow in the dirt to point the way on the forks in the road. Looking down from a ridge, Keller watched as the team wound its way uphill in small groups. "We have one of our largest groups ever," he said. "Twenty one kids are running now and talent-wise it's one of the most consistently good bunches we've had." Keller has five returning runners from his team that placed third in the Big Sky conference last year. Doug Beckman and Graydon Pihlija both finished in the top ten in the Big Sky last year, and Terry Griffin, Pat Wilson and Rick Ward are all veterans of last year's team. One of the changes in this year's competition will be the fact that the Big Sky will compete with the Western Athletic Conference for the District Seven championships in November. Previously, the top team in each conference went to the national championships, but this year the top four finishers in the District Seven runoff will qualify. In cross country scoring, the first five finishers on each team are given the same number of points as their place of finish. The team with the lowest number of points is the winner. This makes it important that a team be well rounded because the runners finishing farther back affect the scoring as much as the front runners. Keller said that the whole team will travel to Spokane September 10, to compete in the Spokane Heart Run, a ten mile race and a marathon sponsored by the Heart Association. "That will just be for fun," said Keller. "Our first regular meet will be the Fort Casey Invitational at Whidbey Island, Wash., Oct. 8. We'll take about ten or twelve kids to that." Keller stopped the van and looked down a long hill at the approaching team. The groups of runners were smaller now and spaced farther apart as the hills took their toll. "We train frequently on hills," said Keller, "because I feel that if you can run the hills, you can run the flat. But if you train exclusively on the flat, that doesn't help you when you have to run the hills. It's also not too hard to find good hills in the Palouse." The front runners approached, and Keller pointed out freshman Steve Ortiz among them. Ortiz was one of the premier high school runners last year, and Keller expects him to fit into the program well. The change to college cross country is a tough one for many freshmen. Most of the courses are 10,000 meters or six miles, compared to the two and a half miles most high school racers run. Freshman runners have to get used to the longer distance and also to being one of the pack instead of a front runner, Keller said. Keller drove ahead through rolling wheat fields and stopped to mark the mileage in the dirt so the team would know that the end was near. "The kids run three or four miles on their own in the mornings and then we work out in the afternoons for about ten miles," said Keller. "Today is an easy day, we'll have a hard workout tomorrow." With at least 500 more miles of training ahead of them, the Vandal harriers are already well on their way to being in shape.

An unidentified horse leads the Vandal Harriers through the deep dark forest.

Defensive Vandal Back goes after team quarterback in preparation for the season opener against Rice University in Houston, September 24.

Vandals prepare for Rice

Vandal football squads bumped heads last Saturday night in their first preseason scrimmage.

One of the most interested spectators was Ed Troxel, head coach for the U of I. He has been watching the game again on film this week, looking at ways to tune up the team in its final weeks of pre-season drill.

"We haven't seen some plays yet, but we'll see them in the scrimmage this week," said Troxel. "We look well balanced, and have seen a steady improvement in our passing game."

Troxel said the next few weeks will concentrate on bringing the backup units up to competitive strength and working for consistency

"We're keeping a good practice attitude and polishing what we've got," said Troxel.

The passing game will be one of the areas for polishing, working for consistency between the quarterback and his tight end and wide receivers, Troxel said.

Special teams and defensive units aren't neglected though, as the Vandal coaching staff stresses the benefits of pressing the opposing team's passing game as well as stopping them on the ground.

Troxel complimented the overall condition of the team

The second pre-season scrimmage will be this Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in the dome.

U of I Intramurals begin

Men's and Women's Intramural sports will get under way next week with organizational meetings.

The first Men's Intramural Manager's meeting will be September 6. It is at 7 p.m. in Rm. 109 of the Memorial Gym, according to Men's Intramural Director, Bob Whitehead.

The Intramural Representative Board of the Women's Recreation Association (WRA) will meet Thursday, September 8, at 12:15 a.m. in the Women's Health Education Building (WHEB), according to WRA President, Debbie Ingram.

Men's Touch football and tennis are tentatively scheduled to begin Monday, September 12. Golf and volleyball are planned to begin September 24 and October 12, respectively. Women's golf competition will start

Field hockey looks strong

The Women's Field Hockey Team has set the nationals in Denver as their goal this season.

Coach JoDean Moore predicts a strong team with ten players tentatively returning. Seven seniors won't return, four of them starters. However, Moore said, their spots can be filled with experienced recruits.

The team started meeting this week and will begin a conditioning program designed to prevent injuries. The hockey team will be practicing two hours a day, five days a week until the first game.

The first game will be played at home against Washington State University on October 4 at 4:30 p.m. Two other home meets will take place October 21-22 and October 28-29.

The first away games will be played at Boise State University (BSU) October 7-8. Here the team will be up against some of the season's toughest competition. They will be playing BSU, Brigham Young University and Northwest Nazarene College.

Last season 24 games were played in eight weekends. The team's record was 16-6-2. Three of Idaho's losses went to Western Washington.

Coach JoDean Moore describes the field hockey team as a dedicated and enthusiastic group. "They are serious about the game, but also have fun playing. The team has set a big goal for itself and will work together to achieve it."

The regional qualifying tournament will be held in Tacoma November 12-13.

The following weekend, the regionals will take place at Simon Frazier College in British Columbia.

September 9. Track and football will begin Tuesday, September 13.

Students residing in residence halls, fraternities and sororities may enter intramural activities by contacting their respective intramural representatives. Off campus students may become involved in the program by contacting the Men's Intramural Office in the Memorial Gym or the Women's Recreational Association in the WHEB.

U of I progressing in salary equalization for sexes

By SANDI STACKI

The University has made progress in equalizing salaries between men and women employees and in hiring women since it began its affirmative action program in July 1974, according to Sandi Gallagher, affirmative action officer.

Gallagher said one of the major aims of her office is making sure there is no "sex differential" between the salaries paid employees performing the same work. To this end, she said, the University has improved the data system used in its annual salary reviews. The improved system will help identify salary discrepancies based on sex and race Gallagher said.

She said the Exempt Staff Salary Equity Committee has proposed that a similar computer-based system be used with salaries for all exempt employees. The proposed system relies on positions and qualifications of the person filling the position. Gallagher predicts the University will begin this means of salary review for non-instructional, professional staff this fall.

Gallagher said the overall goal of her office is "to attempt to eliminate all discriminatory practices so that women and minorities can be represented at all levels of the labor market in a similar proportion to society as a whole."

She said that while individual departments have made progress in training and hiring women and minorities, "until women and minorities are trained in non-traditional roles, such as engineering and forestry, and also the number of women at doctoral levels increased, the ideal proportion to society won't be realized."

Gallagher said the University seems to have made progress in hiring women faculty members. She said the percentage of women faculty members increased from 9.6 per cent in 1975 to 14 per cent in 1976.

The number of women faculty members is up from 52 in 1975 to 81 in 1976. This compares with 488 and 496 men in the same years.

Gallagher cautioned that while there "appears" to have been an increase in hiring women faculty members, the numbers could be misleading, since the University has regrouped its classifications during this period.

Gallagher said the problems of training, educating and hiring women and minorities are intercombined. She cites the case of forestry in which 1 per cent of those people available with doctoral degrees are women, which makes finding a qualified woman forestry professor difficult.

She notes that the university does have a women faculty member with a PhD in forestry, "so we're ahead because availability is so low." While this instance could be considered an achievement, said Gallagher, U of I utilization in many other departments doesn't meet the national availability of women and minority faculty members in their disciplines.

Recruiting minority faculty members to the university is even a bigger problem than attracting women faculty members, said Gallagher.

She said the low number of minority people in the area and state leads to a situation where some potential minority faculty members might feel like "outsiders" here, and therefore choose to teach at schools with a higher proportion of minority members in their area.

This problem, combined with the same training and education problems found with women, have served to keep the university's proportion of minority faculty members well below their proportion in society.

Gallagher said some possible solutions to these salary, training and hiring problems will be included in the updated affirmative action plan now being reviewed by President Richard Gibb. Gallagher said the plan, which is required by law to be updated each year, will be available to the public later this semester.

Firewood permits available

Free firewood permits are again available from the Clearwater National Forest's Palouse Ranger District.

The district recently cut off issuance and use of the permits because of "extreme fire danger," according to Dave Colclough. Colclough, the district ranger said the restrictions were lifted last Saturday when the rains dampened the danger.

The permits entitle individuals to ten cords of free firewood from Forest Service lands. The permits must be renewed each season. Permit holders may only cut dead wood. Live trees and cedar may not be cut according to permit regulations.

The firewood obtained with a permit may only be used for personal use, Colclough said. Commercial permits are also available at the Potlatch ranger station.

This year the permits are effective through February 18. Previously, they were only valid until October 31. The reasons for the extension, Colclough said, were "a lot of people like to go hunting later in the year and bring back a load of firewood at the same time, also we're trying to get more utilization of fuel supplies."

If wet weather causes road conditions to deteriorate too much, the firewood season may close in mid-November or December, Colclough said.

Permits and information may be obtained at the district's Moscow office at 1221 South Main Street or at the Potlatch ranger station located on Alternate Route 95 west of Potlatch. The respective telephone numbers are: 882-3557 and 875-3311.

Legality of pumping under investigation

(ZNS) The American Civil Liberties Union is attacking a North Dakota court for ruling that a 20-year-old man's stomach be pumped in order to recover a possible marijuana cigarette he had swallowed.

A Minot, North Dakota, judge, Everett Olson, recently issued a search warrant for, in the judge's words, "The contents of the stomach" of the suspect, whose name was not released. The warrant was issued after the man allegedly swallowed what looked like a "joint" in front of arresting police officers.

A soggy cigarette containing leafy material was reportedly rescued and has since been sent to the police lab.

The ACLU says that the U.S. Supreme Court, following a similar stomach pump search in 1952, issued a unanimous decision that looking into a person's stomach without his or her approval, violates that person's constitutional rights against self-incrimination.

Regents ponder public schools

SANDPOINT — Sticking to public school matters, the Idaho State Board of Education yesterday considered fiscal year 1979 public school budget requests and the first distribution of the Districts Building Account.

The board will present the budget requests in final form to the Idaho Legislature when that body convenes in January.

Representatives of Idaho School Boards presented requests for a 12 per cent increase in salary and wages, and in their operational budgets. The school boards also requested a 10 per cent increase in capital outlay.

The State Department of Education presented its plan for distribution of an emergency $1.7 million building fund appropriated by the legislature last year. Several Idaho communities, feeling the pinch of massive growth, had exhausted their own revenue raising

There was some good and bad news for the board as it reviewed the quality of public education in the state. According to a study completed last year, 98.5 per cent of Idaho school age children were enrolled in school.

On the other side of the coin, the board learned that the state ranked 37th in the nation for teacher salaries.

Idaho also has a higher percentage of schoolage children as compared to adults than most other states, the board was told. A representative of the Idaho Education Center noted that the state ranked eighth in the nation in terms of that proportion. He added that the only neighboring state ranking higher was Utah which ranked first in the nation.

Based on the high student load and the low salary figures, the Board moved to accept the 12 per cent increase request of the school boards.

Cheryl Hanis of Jerome was sworn in as the newest member of the board. She replaces Ed Benoit of Twin Falls whose term expired this year.

The Board will reconvene today to consider higher education items. Among U of I policies to be discussed by the board are a proposed $4 fee increase and a possible revamping of the University's alcohol policy.
