A guantlet of darkness endangers night travelers

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

There is a curfew on this campus. It isn't imposed by police or officials, however.

People are restricted in how and when they move about the campus at night. The restriction stems from darkness and fear. Both are just as effective as an actual curfew and just as real.

Community police and women's group leaders have expressed a need for better lighting on campus. Campus police chief Ed Schmitz said he receives an average of 6 to 12 complaints each year about the lighting. Moscow police chief Clark Hudson said poor lighting is an invitation to "any sneaky crime." Donna Granville, director of the Women's Center calls the situation "frightening."

Lighting an outdoor area is chiefly done for the benefit of the motorist, said Moscow city engineer William Smith. But he added that it has been shown effective in reducing crime as well. The Transportation and Traffic Engineering Handbook, published by the Institute of Traffic Engineers, states his point. The book is used by traffic engineers in designing lighting systems. In addition to promoting driver safety and comfort and reducing accident rates, adequate lighting "includes social and economics gains. Serious crime can be reduced," according to the handbook. But Smith noted, "there is a line to be drawn economically." Smith is responsible for the city of Moscow, not the campus. The principle factors of lighting, however, apply to both.

Describing the lighting on the campus as "inadequate", chief Hudson said poor lighting encourages certain types of crimes, ranging from prowling to burglary to assault and rape. Hudson noted that no reported cases of rape occurred last year in Moscow. But during the 1975-76 school year, he added, three reported cases of rape occurred. Two of them happened on campus.

Reported cases are the tip of the iceberg when dealing with sexual offenses, Granville said. For every reported case of rape, as many as 10 cases of attempted or actual rapes may have gone unreported.

"It's been shown the more lighting, the less criminal activity occurs," Hudson said, adding "the criminal doesn't like to be shown."

Schmitz agrees, saying, improper lighting "creates a potential criminal problem."

Granville said darkness is a source of concern particularly to women. She noted FBI crime statistics for last year showed rape is the only violent crime on the increase. "I think most women are very aware of darkness," she said.

Five women accompanied Granville and two Argonaut staff members on a tour of the central campus at night last week. They were Janifer Klindt, Dianne Milhollin, Sharon LeTourneau, Julia Uberusga and Syd Kinnaman. The women said they walk through some of the dark areas frequently alone.

"Sometimes I feel scared," Kinnaman said. "You don't know what it is that you're afraid of...you're vulnerable."

Granville said the situation evokes "out-and-out anger" from her. She said she feels restricted by darkness, since men need not fear darkness as women do. "It's just not fair because I have to watch," she said.

Milhollin fears not only the possible attacker who may lurk in the darkness, but the unlit cracks and bumps in her path as well. She is partially blind. As a result, she said, she can't drive. "I'm just totally vulnerable from the time I leave home to the time I arrive at my destination," she said.

Women are instructed to walk in lighted areas at night by police and rape prevention experts. "I walk in the street," Uberusga said, because it has better light. But she added, it doesn't help. I still don't feel safe."

"The better lit areas are, the safer we all are," Granville said. But she added she can't blame officials when they receive little or no input on the matter. "There's a dual responsibility," she said. People should inform officials and officials should act, she said.

Vice-President Tom Richardson noted much of the problem is due to the energy crisis. Idaho and its sister mountain states face a shortage of hydro-electric energy this year as a result of a winter drought that left many reservoirs severely lacking of water.

"A problem was that about the time we identified the problem (with campus lighting) we ran head on into the energy crisis," Richardson said. Richardson received an analysis of campus outdoor lighting needs from Campus Police head Schmitz last fall. That analysis called for additional lighting in 17 areas. It was submitted to Physical Plant Director George Gagon in April, he said.

What is being done with the plan and how the energy crisis is delaying its implementation is the subject of this story when it concludes Friday.

The central campus, surrounding the Administration building is one often traveled day and night. It may also be one of the darkest. The women said they walk through the area at night, frequently alone.

Sorority popularity surpasses previous record

By KRISTEN MOULTON

An enduring tradition at the U of I, sorority living has had its largest spurt of popularity since 1965. The number of co-eds enrolled for rush hit a peak of 200 in the fall of 1965 and wasn't matched until 279 girls rushed this year.

At a time when Greek living was considered out-moded and undesirable by most students across the U.S., the Greeks on this campus attracted a steady flow of freshmen to their living groups throughout the late 60's and early 70's.

Until 1975 the number of girls pledging houses was leveled around 200. The past three years have witnessed gradual increases, with this year's number marking an all-time high. The enrollment has remained the same, however.

The influx of girls seeking sorority affiliation was a problem this year, as there were only 170 openings for 279 girls. In the years 1965-1974 there was plenty of room for all rushees.

In an effort to allow more girls to become affiliated, the nine sororities on campus increased their quotas of girls to be pledged by six to nine, permitting 75 more girls to pledge. Out of the 279 girls beginning rush, only 34 did not pledge, half of those dropping out of the process by their own decisions.

Because of the excessive number of girls now belonging to sororities, an experiment of housing some of them in the residence halls has been undertaken. "We worked closely with the housing staff and came to an agreement that this experiment could only be successful if the pledges who were in the residence halls made a commitment to stay for the semester and no concessions were made," says Bruce Pitman, director of resident student programs.

Pitman says that 6-8 pledges along with 1-2 members of each house are now living in the dormitories, each paying hall dues and participating in most hall functions. The girls are asked to stay a minimum of nine weeks, with a rotation at mid-term in which those girls will swap places with pledges now living in the houses.

"We're hoping in time, if our experiment works, that this will decrease some of the animosity between Independents and Greeks," says Pitman. Perhaps it already has, as one hall resident stated "these people have always been on their own section of campus and therefore so much easier to judge critically. When we live with them, it's not near as hard to accept their preferences."

According to Pitman, this current Greek popularity is a trend throughout the northwest and looks as though it will continue.

Two alternatives are being considered to remedy the housing problem. One is to bring another sorority chapter to the Moscow campus. Pitman claims that there have been inquiries from several national sororities.

Responding to this proposal, Wendy Ambrose, scholarship chairman at Kappa Kappa Gamma, said "I think it's a good idea because there are only so many spaces. It seems like a way to solve the problem and avoid hurting people."

"Another house is a year of affiliation than do the members, by approximately $175.

Despite the extra cost, girls still join sororities; many strongly influenced by family tradition. "A deciding factor was that my two sisters also are both Greek," says Cathy Jones, an Alpha Gamma Delta pledge. "I was also attracted by the fact that I would be part of a group, rather than alone in the mass of students." She possibility," says Lisa Olson, president of Alpha Gamma Delta. "I think we should also consider having girls pledge and live in dorms before they move to the sorority houses," said Olson, referring to the second alternative. "Having the Greeks live in the dorms should bring the Greeks and Independents closer together and would encourage the Greeks to think of their sorority as something more than just a place to live."

Argonaut/Steve Davis

Renee Brickner, member of Delta Gamma sorority, participates in her second "rush" here. The campus sororities had a record number of rush participants this year.

For many, the sorority offers benefits beyond the fact that it is on-campus housing. Financially, according to Pitman, on-campus housing is more economical for students than off-campus.

Though the Greek students pay basically the same for room and board as do those living in residence halls, the added costs come in the form of group obligations. A Greek pledge pays more in her first also encountered a commonly expressed advantage of having her "sisters" assist her academically.

One misconception concerning Greek students was disproven in a random survey conducted here last spring. "The old myth that Greeks come from wealthy backgrounds was proven non-applicable here," says Pitman. "The study found that a higher percentage of off-campus students came from higher income homes than on-campus students and there was virtually no difference in parental income between resident hall and Greek students."

The opportunities this year for girls desiring to go through open rush, that is pledging any time throughout the year, appear fairly slim. But there will probably be a limited informal rush as in years past, according to Pitman.

Forest Service establishes new research natural area on Lochsa River to save unique plants

The U.S. Forest Service recently acted to establish a 1,281 acre Research Natural Area in the Clearwater National Forest.

Charles Wellner, an affiliate U of I faculty member and an employee of the Forest Service, worked on the project. The Lochsa Research Natural Area is about six miles upriver from Lowell, in the Lochsa Recreational River reserve.

Wellner said the area represents "a little bit of west coast country that's left over." Certain flora, which used to be more widespread in the west has persisted in this area, he said.

The main reason they are still found there is because of climatic conditions, Wellner said. It's warmer than most of the surrounding areas because of its rather low elevation. As our weather became colder, most of the plant species notable in the refuge were forced back to the warmer coastal areas, he added.

This is the 10th Natural Research Area established by the Forest Service in Idaho national forests.

The Lochsa Research Natural Area contains Pacific Coast types of vegetation. Unusual species in the area include flowering dogwood, red alder, and ghost orchid. Existence of these and other Pacific Coast types of vegetation this far inland is considered rare.

The new Research Natural Area is part of the Clearwater Basin. Elk and deer use the area for winter range. The area also supports populations of game birds, including ruffed, blue, and Franklin grouse.

The steep, mountainous area is dissected by several streams. It is divided into two units, Chance Creek and Canyon-Deadman. Elevations in the area range from 1,600 feet to 2,100 feet.

"Overcommitted" Ayersman resigns ASUI senate position

Citing "personal reasons" ASUI Senator Mike Ayersman resigned his position, effective Sept. 7. The search for a new senator will begin immediately.

ASUI President Lynn Tominaga said that Ayersman was overcommitted. He said Ayersman was delegated more responsibility as a senior dormitory resident advisor and simply couldn't handle the load.

"We'll start advertising in the Argonaut and at KUOI this Friday," Tominaga said. "It'll take about two weeks for us to replace him."

After applicants have been interviewed, Tominaga will select the new senator.

In the case of a resignation, the applicant can be either on or off campus. For further information contact the ASUI Office in the Student Union Building.

Vandals stage early morning raid; Gamma Phi Beta sorority sacked

Vandalism was reported by the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority last Wednesday, according to campus police.

During the early morning hours, someone entered the basement of the house and strewed sawdust from the construction site on the carpet, couches, chairs and in hairdryers. The intruder then entered unoccupied rooms and dumped clothing and other personal possessions of the women into piles.

The vandalism was first noticed by one woman when she found paper toweling and toilet paper throughout the hallway. The police report said there was apparently no noise during the incident.

No construction tools were taken, according to the construction foreman in charge of the remodeling.

- SB 131 adopting a Kibbie Dome Activity Center manager job description and insertion of it in the ASUI policy;

- SB 137 creation of a House of Representatives;

- SB 169 provides guidelines for probationary procedures for delinquent senators, and their possible removal.

New bills include various appointments to the student faculty committee and a creation of an Academics Department which would serve as a student ombudsman. It would concern itself primarily with the "functioning" of faculty.

Students are not the only ones busy as a result of the new semester. With everyone coming back from summer vacation, undercover agents are doing a little studying of their own.

The use of narcotics agents is growing more rapidly every day, even here in Moscow. Sources say that six additional narcs from Boise, probably state narcs, are in town in hopes of setting up a fall bust, instead of the usual spring round-up.

At least the use of state narc's is better than using students to inform on fellow students, as was the case in previous years.

An example is David Dorn who was president of the campus chapter of the John Birch Society, and who stated when his sister was arrested for possession, it was the best thing that could have happened to her.

Another case involved a former U of I varsity basketball player, Sid Hansen, who apparently enticed his friends to score for him and then turned them in.

Last spring, narcs made an impressive bust on Rocky Stevens. He was caught with 241 pounds of marijuana, which slowed the flow of pot for a considerable amount of time. This was obviously cost effective; however, at what point are dope busts and for what amount considered cost effective?

Should taxpayers be expected to foot the bill for people holding or selling small amounts of marijuana? Taking into consideration that most narcotic busts are victimless crimes, is the use of narcs really worth the taxpayers money?

Narcs receive a salary, living expenses, per diem, travel expenses, front money (for making dope deals), plus an expense account for making contacts in bars or whatever, all of course at the expense of the taxpayer.

The use of narcotics agents is the main vehicle the prosecution has in getting a conviction of a victimless crime, but does this justify the amount of money spent in setting up a single bust?

The fact that narcs are allowed to break the law to enforce the law is totally unjustified. Narcs are allowed and encouraged to sit down with suspects and indulge in whatever it is that's being passed around the room. On what premise is this all right for them and against the law for everyone else?

As a word or two of caution, in hopes of keeping victimless "criminals" out of jail, the following is a brief description of the alleged narcs.

The alleged narcs were seen in a local tavern shooting off their mouths and flashing ID cards, apparently as a result of some super-imposed ego trip.

The leader of this narc squad is described as 6'3", approximately 245 lbs. He is between the age of 38-45, is bald on top of his head and is usually dressed in western attire.

His comrades are much younger ranging from 19-24. They were described as having long hair, beards and are usually seen wearing "grubbies."

Upon seeing any of these individuals, you are advised to warn anyone they may have been in contact with.

Dark dangers

To the Editor

If you have a night class, or have walked home recently from the library at closing time, or across the Ad. lawn at night; you've noticed that when darkness descends on the streets of Moscow, it really descends. I have noticed too.

Perhaps the City of Moscow feels that saving energy is more important than a person's safety, but I feel that the darkness is dangerous.

Many dangers lurk in the darkness. A few days ago a friend of mine tripped while groping across the Ad. lawn in the dark, and twisted his ankle rather severely. Tripping is not the only danger. Another friend walking across the Ad. lawn at night came upon a girl traveling a different way, and by the time she saw him, he was about five feet away. She screamed and basly frightened him. She was probably afraid of the dark and imagining boogiemonsters, but her unexpected scream nearly gave him a trauma that night. And the nights are getting longer.

Perhaps we have to wait for something more tragic than this to happen before Moscow realizes that streetlights are a sensible use of energy. Until the lights are back on at night, though, keep an eye open for the boogie monsters...

Asking for it

When it comes to parking regulations, the campus police, hand in hand with the U of I administration, are no less than a frenzy of efficiency. Park your vehicle illegally, and you may rest assured that a ticket will flap from your windshield upon your return.

However, if you are a woman, and you walk through the campus after dark, you know only too well that administrators and policemen care more about parking lots than your safety.

Why is there plenty of time and money for parking, but none for the safety of women after dark?

A judge presiding over a controversial case was in the news recently. He seems to think women who are raped "ask for it". The next time a woman is raped on this campus, ask yourself who "asked for it". Was it the woman, or our inefficient administrators, who gave her a dark path home?

'Belly' Folk offers classes

While the Ballet Folk of Moscow is best known for instruction in traditional dance, classes are also being offered and are still open for more exotic forms of body movement. These classes include Oriental (or Belly) dancing, Jazz, Tai Chi, and Yoga.

Oriental dancing has grown in popularity as people discover that it is a fun form of exercise. Classes for beginners and advanced start Wednesday, Sept. 14, and are being taught

Authors bring trolls to life in Idaho

By BILL LOFTUS

Last Saturday, Bookpeople on main street hosted an autograph party for Meredith Motson, co-author of The Search for Trollhaven.

Her co-author, Odd Bjerke, couldn't attend the session because his truck broke down near the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness, Motson said. The Search for Trollhaven, a children's book, resulted from Bjerke weaving a story and Motson writing it down and filling it out, she said.

The Search for Trollhaven is an excellent children's book. The story moves well with trolls trudging from their Norwegian home to a place called Ee-da-how.

Their new home, of course, is Idaho. The authors use the trolls to represent friendliness, sharing, helpfulness and all the other good old fashioned virtues. They (the authors and the trolls) also take frequent stabs at the polluting hand of man in the temperate paradise of Idaho.

As a children's book, Trollhaven will probably create a new generation of insomniacs as the intended readers wait for the next chapter. However, for adults, the book leaves something to be desired.

It is entertaining in a rather basic way. Trollhaven lacks the complex rations of immorality versus morality that most adults of the 1970's prefer.

Even with the drawback mentioned above it is a good diversion if viewed as light reading. Trollhaven is certainly better than television, and as a children's tale, something to be recommended with no reservation.

The illustrations deserve commendation also. Marvin Wood, the illustrator, provides pencil sketches which can stand by themselves, but also fit the tone of the book.

Jedi Knights to join forces here

Individuals in the Moscow community can become members of the first college chapter of the Royal Order of the Jedi Knights, to be organized on the U of I campus.

Merilyn Snyder and Wayne Rush will call for the dance, and recorded music will be used. Bring your dancing shoes.

KUID documentary illustrates rights of exceptional kids

Most of the more than 8 million handicapped children in America today have been barred for years from the nation's classrooms.

For the first time, most handicapped children will be enrolled in public schools this fall. A new federal law enacted in 1975, the Education For All Handicapped Children Act (Public Bill 94-142), has required public school systems throughout the country to open their classrooms and create the special education necessary for handicapped children in the U.S.

This Thursday at 8 p.m. KUID-TV channel 12, presents INCLUDING ME, a documentary hosted by Patricia Neal. It portrays the little-understood world of these handicapped children with six compelling portraits — deaf, blind, paraplegic, emotionally disturbed and mentally retarded children and young adults — who have won the right to go to school. The Education For All Handicapped Children Act guarantees all handicapped, including the most severely handicapped, the right to a publicly supported, appropriate education.

The program will be repeated Saturday at 4 p.m. followed by a local program produced by KAID-Boise explaining how the law will affect the public school system in Idaho and what Idaho has done and will be doing for the handicapped.

Host Patricia Neal, herself the victim of multiple disabling strokes, provides insight into the social and physical obstacles handicapped children face.

Including Me is produced, directed and written by Linda Janower, the mother of a hearing-impaired child.

Farrell champions 'men's lib'

By BILL LOFTUS

The author of the The Liberated Man, Dr. Warren Farrell, will present a free program in the SUB Ballroom at 7:30 p.m. this Thursday.

Farrell has researched his topic well. He spent five years at the Kinsey Institute for Sex Research formulating his thoughts on the changing role of men in today's society. Men's roles were also the Farrell has worked with over "300 consciousness-raising groups" already, according to a press release.

subject of his doctoral dissertation at New York University in 1974. Farrell has toured the lecture circuit for the last five years.

A men's beauty contest, a role-reversal date and time for questions will supplement Farrell's lecture. He will also work to organize a "consciousness-raising group" if there is interest, Tim Miller, of New Student Orientation, said.

The program is sponsored by New Student Orientation with assistance from the ASUI Issues and Forums committee.

Sylvester Stallone's 'Rocky' hits big

By PHIL BAECHLER

If you haven't already seen it, you owe it to yourself to see Rocky, playing tonight and tomorrow at the Micro.

Now, you may think that it's a movie about boxing and want to skip it. Don't. Ask anyone who has seen it and you will find out it is the story of many different things: determination, guts and love.

Rocky won the Academy Award for the best picture of the year and I for one agree that it deserved it. Sylvester Stallone's portrayal of the down and out fighter Rocky Balboa is great. His career in two-bit local fights barely makes him enough to feed his turtle. What changes his life is a million to one chance to fight the world heavyweight champion.

Talia Shire is superb as Rocky's girlfriend Adrian. She comes on as a shy girl with overlarge glasses, a loser like Rocky. Her initial reluctance to break out of her shallow shell and stand up to her domineering brother is overcome by her growing confidence as she gains support from Rocky's pep talks.

The background settings provide a glimpse of the rough neighborhood Rocky lives in and add an air of authenticity to the plot. Supporting characters also add to the film: Adrian's overbearing brother Paulie nipping constantly from a bottle of booze, the aging boxing coach, the greedy promoter and of course an egotistical champ, Apollo Creed (greed, get it?).

Anyone who roots for the underdog has to see this. Stallone is great portraying the long shot, his determination and his sometime doubts make this a classic American success story.

The music's not bad either. I spent about half the summer driving my friends crazy with my imitation trumpet rendition of the theme music. The film is the kind that gets into your blood. I have seen it four times and each time the audience was out of their seats cheering at the end. I'll be back there again cheering tonight.

A collection of collages by Phil Corlis comprises the first show. The prints are made with a xerox process and are a part of Corlis' masters thesis. All exhibits are free.

Bergman festival films continue

The Ingmar Bergman film festival continues on KUID-TV this week, with films each weeknight at 10 p.m. Wednesday night's film is Secrets of Women, followed by Monika Thursday night and A Lesson of Love Friday night.

Secrets of Women (1952) was Bergman's first comic adventure. Three sisters-in-law tell about their marriages and affairs as they await their husbands at a lakeside resort. The fourth sister-in-law sneaks away and elopes.

Man's search for meaning is the theme of Monika (1952). It was misrepresented as a sex film on its initial release in America and has only recently gained true recognition as a psychological masterpiece.

Comedy is again the center of A Lesson In Love (1954).

Cross country team places high in Spokane competition

The U of I cross country team saw its first action of the season this past weekend with a ten mile race in Spokane sponsored by the Heart Association. Idaho runners finished in seven of the top ten places.

Led by freshman Steve Oritz, who finished second to WSU's Mark Higginson, and senior Rick Ward, who finished fourth, the Vandal Harriers were running in a group at the start of the race, but got ahead of the race stewards. Ahead of the pack, they came to an unmarked turnaround and ran a half mile out of the way before getting back on course.

Other Idaho runners in the top ten were Terry Griggin, Pat Wilson, Doug Beckman, Derek Shirley and Dennis Weber.

Keller said the frosh will run again Sept. 24 at Whitworth College and the top runners there will go with the varsity to the first meet next October.

KUOI-FM IS CHANGING! Our new format will feature programs that cater to a variety of musical tastes. Tom LaPointe, our Program Director, states "KUOI, as your student station, reflects the diversity of the student body as a whole. So as listeners will notice, we will be offering a variety of music types ranging from "classical" to "rock" or to "folk". We hope you'll listen not only to your favorite type of music, but to one or all of the types offered. We're students having fun and hoping to put out some good sounds."

With that in mind, we offer as an appetizer, the sounds of classical and jazz albums. The classical sounds will be served on Monday from 6 pm to 10 pm and jazz artists may be enjoyed on Sunday from 6 pm to 2 am. Please tune in - you'll be glad you did.

Defensive end Tom Eilertson and the rest of the Idaho defense stop a Rice University ground play last Saturday in Houston. The Owls won the game 31-10

Vandals blow season opener

By PHIL BAECHLER

Houston, Tex.— Their offensive backfield riddled with injuries, the Vandal football squad lost their season opener to the Rice University Owls 31-10 last Saturday night.

Following five days of rain and high humidity, the playing field was hot and so was the Rice offense, breaking loose twice from the Vandal defense with the long gainers that broke open the game for them.

The first was a pass from quarterback Jeff Swab to David Houser that went 76 yards to put the Owls ahead 10-0 at the half.

The Vandals began having problems on offense right from the start, losing last year's top rusher Robert Brooks in the first series of plays. With running back Tim Lappano left in Moscow with a pulled hamstring, and Robert Taylor playing with an ankle problem the remaining Vandal backs had their work cut out for them.

Fullback Lance Hubbard was shaken up in the third quarter, leaving quarterback Craig Juntunen, sophomore fullback Glenn Ford and backup quarterback Rocky Tuttle to carry the offensive load for the rest of the game.

"We lost a little confidence when we lost Brooks," said coach Ed Troxel, "but we still played well. The first half was really pretty close. We were moving the ball more than they were, but they got a big play and that made the difference."

Vandal quarterback Craig Juntunen brought the offense to life in the second half with a drive around the right side for a gain of 46 yards to the Rice 17 yard line. The Rice defense held for three plays, forcing Idaho to settle for three points on a field goal by Ralph Lowe.

Rice came back strong, as Charlie Taylor returned the next kickoff 55 yards to the Idaho 38. Seven plays later the Owls scored to make it 24-3.

The Vandals then put on their best drive. After an exchange of possessions, quarterback Juntunen broke loose on an option play and sprinted around the right side for a 31 yard gain to the Rice 42.

Juntunen looked to his receivers after that and found junior Rick Mayfield open to bring the ball up to the Rice 12. With the momentum finally going their way, the Vandals were anxious to score. Two plays later, Juntunen did just that, running the option again, this time around the right and into the end zone for the Vandal's first touchdown of the season. Eight yards into the endzone Juntunen was hit by a Rice defender and sprained his ankle slightly, causing anger on the Vandal bench. Lowe converted the extra point to make the score 24-10.

The Vandal defense came back strong, stopping Rice early in the fourth quarter. With the ball back in their possession, Idaho's offense again began moving down the field. Juntunen connected on two passes and ran for 10 yards to put the Vandals within scoring range with a first down on the Rice 20.

Sophomore Glenn Ford broke up the middle for three yards, but on the next play a pass over the middle from Juntunen was tipped up and Rice's Robert Williamson came up with the ball on the seven yard line.

The Idaho defense came eack strong again, giving Idaho another possession, but after a drive to the Rice 35 yard line, the offense failed to convert a fourth down play and had to give the ball back to Rice.

Three plays later, Rice again broke a big play with fullback Earl Cooper finding daylight on the sidelines and streaking 66 yards for the final touchdown. Cooper led the pack in rushing with 167 yards and was a major factor in Rice's offensive success.

It was Rice's ability to break for long yardage that spelled the scoring difference against the Vandals. Otherwise the Idaho defense was consistent and came up with the ball. Had it not been for the early injuries, the first half could have been better for the Idaho offense, but in the second half they definitely showed they could move the ball with the people they had left.

Coach Ed Troxel is not sure about the full effect injuries will have on the Vandals. Brooks will probably need surgery for torn ligaments in his left knee, but there is uncertainty about the condition of Robert Taylor's ankle. Hubbard and Juntunen should be ready for this week's game against Pacific which is scheduled this Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Kibbie dome.

Women's Rugby organized for initial season

A women's rugby club, Dusty Lentils, is being organized in Moscow with the help of the existing men's Blue Mountain rugby club.

Four members of Blue Mountain Rugby — Harry Goodall, Woody Hanestin, John Hengish and Zack Mobley have been acting as instructors for the women. Because all the women are new to the game, they are being taught the rules in addition to the actual plays. The club has been making excellent progress with punts, run lines and passing drills, Mobley said.

Fifteen people make up a team, and about twenty women have already shown an interest in playing and have been participating in practice.

Interested women can still become participants by getting in touch with Lenora Mobley at 882-0971, or Bobby Royce at 882-8654. Practice is held on Tuesday and Wednesday at 5:00 to 6:30 p.m. on the intramural field behind the Wallace Complex.

A tentative game is being set up with Missoula for some time at the end of October.

Manager needed

U of I varsity basketball is seeking a manager. Interested parties should be willing to work from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. and will start work about Oct. 9. The basketball manager will be expected to work all home games and some of the away games with area colleges.

For further information contact Jim Jarvis, head basketball coach or Wes Sordorff, assistant coach, in the athletic department in Memorial Gym or phone 885-6466.

held in the Women's Health Education Building.

The volleyball team is holding a clinic for 60 area high school players and coaches this weekend. Many of these schools have new volleyball teams and four main areas will be concentrated on: hitting and blocking, receiving serves, serving, and offense and defense.

The coaches will be instructed on strategies and drills.

Coach Amanda Burke said the team has a strong core group, plus new added strength.

Bowlers meet

The University of Idaho Women's Intercollegiate Bowling Team is holding an organizational meeting Tuesday, September 13 in the Women's Health Education Building Room 200. The meeting is set for 4:15 p.m.

Any full-time interested woman undergraduate who bowls a score of approximately 150 should attend to hear what is planned for the year.

Two years ago the University of Idaho women's bowling team was rated 8th in the nation. Last year one member attended nationals. A lot of good people have graduated and the team is looking for new strength, according to Kathy Clark.

For further information contact Kathy Clark, coach for this year's team, in WHEB Room 104, or call 885-7921.

About 120 people participated in the annual Army ROTC raft trip down the Clearwater River on Saturday. The rafters launched their craft below Lenore and paddled downstream to Spaulding Park. The trip lasted almost five hours. Immediately after putting into the river, most of the raft crews became involved in races and water fights. The officers' canoe was forcibly swamped and tipped over. However, the majority of the trip was spent alternately paddling and getting wet. A free all-you-can-eat picnic dinner of hamburgers, baked beans and watermelon was provided at the voyage's end.

Men's soccer kicks off season

The men's 1977 season will kick off this season's play with an away game Oct. 1 at Spokane. The first home match is against Montana, Oct. 9, in the Dome.

Women's soccer, a newcomer this year, will be practicing alongside the men every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Kibbie Dome from 7 to 9 p.m.

It's an open practice and walkons are encouraged to attend.

"There looks like there's a lot of interest in it this year," said spokesman Jim Anscorb. "It looks like there will be a good turnout."

Men's soccer at the U of I is divided up into two teams, "A" or the traveling squad, and "B" or the "JV's." Anscorb said

"We'll probably win it this year. We're looking pretty strong and have a number of starters coming back."

That includes L.A.-reared Albert Ayala, a forward, and U of I chemistry professor George Rubottom of Moscow, at right forward.

In the backfield defensive fullbacks Terry Bartle and Rob Murray should stop the drive.

But that doesn't mean all positions are taken up. Far from it.

Anscorb said the team lost a six-year center field player. Other spots are still up in the air, including that key position, goalie.

"We're getting a new guy from University of Nevada at Las Vegas," he said, "and he looks pretty good."

So far Anscorb's the only Idaho boy on the club, he sees U.S. soccer taking off like a rocket. He said that in the past foreign players "dominated" the team but that maybe this year could be the turning point.

The coaching staff consists of Larry Houston, Programs Coach, Rob Murray, Field Coach, and Bruce Ridley, Sideline Coach.

Rugby club wins

The Blue Mountain rugby club "scrummed" their way to a 34-0 rout over Spokane City here Sunday.

The hot afternoon game failed to raise the ire of the players however. One spectator said the team had barely finished the game when they hightailed it for the nearest tavern.

the delineation was a bit misleading in that the "B's" actually played more games than the varsity.

"There's a lot of teams from Lewiston and other towns who play us," he said.

Idaho soccer is a member of the Northwest Intercollegiate Soccer League which includes Montana, Gonzaga and Whitworth, both of Spokane; Whitman of Walla Walla, Wash., Central Washington, of Ellensburg and Eastern Washington State of Cheney.

Anscorb predicts Idaho to grab the NISL championship this November.

Senate investigators locate witness

(ZNS) Senate investigators say they have located a witness who mysteriously dropped out of sight last month when he was scheduled to testify about secret C.I.A. mind-control experiments.

The scientist who has been found is Walter Pasternak. According to Senator Edward Kennedy's subcommittee on health and scientific research, Pasternak was directly involved in the CIA's "operation midnight climax," a project including agency-run brothels, both in New York City and San Francisco.

The subcommittee reports that Pasternak has been subpoenaed to appear as a witness during hearings into drug experiments scheduled for September 20th and 21st in Washington D.C.

Other witnesses also subpoenaed to appear include Dr. Sidney Gottlieb and a CIA LSD specialist named Dr. Robert Lashbrook. Dr. Gottlieb is reported to have been one of the highest CIA officials involved in the agency's secret drug program known as "M K ULTRA."

In order to secure Gottlieb's testimony, however, senators have already agreed to grant him full "immunity," meaning that he may not be criminally prosecuted for any illegal activity he may admit to during his testimony.

Gottlieb is the former CIA official who is reported to have personally destroyed many of the "M K ULTRA" documents when he retired from the agency in 1973.

However, other documents that have just been made public, including a diary kept by a former CIA operative, indicate that, in one instance, Gottlieb personally delivered more than $4000 in cash to a CIA brothel in New York City.

In a related story, newly-discovered agency files reveal that CIA mind-control experiments continued until at least 1972 under the code name "M K SEARCH." Previous to the release of these documents, the agency had insisted that all drug experiments had been halted in 1964.

Latah County Fair opening

The Latah County Fair will officially open at 3 Thursday afternoon. It will continue until Saturday evening at 9. Bob McKay of Intermountain Shows, Inc. from Spokane will provide "some real good rides," according to Gordon Dailey. Dailey is the Latah County extension agent helping to coordinate the fair.

4-H exhibits and a new tractor-driving competition will begin Wednesday, Penny Morgan, the county 4-H agent, said. The contest will begin at 4:30 p.m. to test the skills of FFA drivers.

Dailey said, "We've shaken the space around considerably for this year's fair." Many of the exhibits and shows will be housed in the National Guard Armory this year, he said.

Some of the highlights include a 4-H style show at 7:30 Thursday evening, an old time fiddlers performance at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, and a slide show Saturday evening at 7:30, Dailey said.

The slide show will be the culmination of a photo contest open to amateurs. Only slides will be accepted, Dailey said. Entries will be accepted from 3 to 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Further information about the fair may be obtained by calling Dailey at 882-6548.
