The old house in Grouse, Idaho is said to be haunted. Even at a distance, it's a spooky sight.

A ghost haunt in Idaho

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

Grouse, Idaho—except for some power and telephone lines and a few automobiles, the 20th century has not made its mark on this ranching community some 25 miles southwest of Arco.

That doesn't mean nothing much ever happens here. An afternoon spent with the couple who managed the Grouse Post Office for roughly two decades reveals nearby cemeteries dating back to the 1880's, winters spent "snowed in" from the outside world, blood curdling tales of a local axe killer who decapitated his victim and played soccer with the remains...and the haunted house just 500 yards down the dirt road.

Lynn and Ruby Keele first noticed oddities at the house 12 years ago. At that time, their relative, William Taylor moved into the house with his new bride, Phylis.

Taylor had remained single until his mother's death in 1964.

Mrs. Keele said Taylor's mother objected to her sons' marital prospects until her death—and possibly after.

At least Phylis may have thought so, Mrs. Keele said. "She said she felt so funny in the house alone," Keele said. Phylis Taylor may have been only lonesome, but she repeatedly sought company when her husband was not home.

A neighbor, Russ Boyer, was the first to experience the curious events. Boyer told Dorothy and Kathy, daughters of William and Phylis, he had seen a "strange lady flying down the hall," Mrs. Keele said. The experience "scared him so bad he fell down the stairs," she added. From that time the daughters determined the place was haunted.

Dorothy and Kathy have since married and moved away. But time has not changed their minds. They believe the house was haunted.

Six years ago, while cleaning the upstairs, Kathy found an old photograph of a woman. The woman resembled the one Boyer claimed to have seen in the hallway, Mrs. Keele said.

Mrs. Keele said her daughter asked her to help with the house cleaning. She too came across an interesting item, an old cook book. She said she began to read it aloud "because I thought Kathy was standing behind me.. I just felt her standing behind me." But when Mrs. Keele turned around, she found herself alone in the room.

William and Phylis decided it was time to move on. Following their farewell party, the Keele's son, Joe, noticed the house lights on, Mrs. Keele said. She added the Taylors had been out all evening at the party.

He found no one home, at least not the Taylors.

"The lights came on and mysteriously the doors opened and closed," Dorothy said.

Ruby Keele acknowledges the possibility of a reasonable explanation for the phenomenon. But she added, "I'm a very sensible person and I know there's something there." She said only a miracle would get her into the house again. "I wouldn't go spend a night in that thing for anything," she said.

Apparently, the current residents of the house feel differently. Bill and Pat Watson have been living in the house since May. Mrs. Watson said she hasn't noticed anything strange in that time. "I'm alone here all day," she said. "If it is haunted, at least I have company," she added.

Mrs. Watson said she hadn't heard any stories about the house until she moved in and her new neighbors, the Keeles reported the incidents to her.

"I'm not very superstitious about those things," Mrs. Watson added. She noted the house was built without a foundation in 1912. Consequently, the settling of the structure causes creaking of the floorboards, she said. "It gets to creaking and your imagination runs wild," she said. She acknowledged the place could be haunted, "but I've not heard anything."

A room inside is somehow less than inviting

A closer view, and it's easy to see why ghost stories about the house persist.

Senate considers use of statements on ballot

A bill permitting the use of campaign statements or slogans on the ASUI ballot was considered by the Senate in its meeting Wednesday night. Space for up to twelve words would be provided below each candidate's name, as an aid to the voters in identifying the candidates. The bill was tabled and will be on the agenda next week.

Numerous appointments were made to ASUI Boards and Committees, including: Rusty Jesser, Sally Johnson, Dave Lockhart, Mark Mustoe, Janice Whittinger, and Carol Yanning. Senate ad hoc committee on parking policy;

Mark Metkin, Library Affairs; Diane Frisch, Student Services; David Esterl, Space Allocation; Jim Poston, Traffic Committee; Bob Shurtleff, Administrative Hearing Board; and Rick Stinchfield, Affirmative Action. Also appointed were Dave Schultz as ASUI Financial Manager and Greg Rice, Assistant Financial Manager.

In other business, four committees were repealed as being obsolete. They were the Central Business District Committee, the Student Fee Policy Committee, the ad hoc Food Service Committee, and the Spring Music Festival Committee. Senator Mark Nuttman asked why the Spring Music Festival Committee should be abolished. According to Vice-President Gary Quigley, the bill being repealed had simply changed the name of the committee from the Blue Mountain Committee. However, no bill has been found to show that such a committee actually exists.

A representative from the Faculty Council reported that the regulations on P.E. requirements have been changed. Instead of the current wording exempting mothers, persons over 30 years of age, veterans, and transfer students from the requirement, the regulation will now exempt parents, veterans, persons over 30, and transfer students who have 2 P.E. credits.

Legislator wants new drinking age set

A Southeast Idaho legislator may introduce a bill into the next lawmaking session which would, if passed, raise the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 years of age for liquor and 20 for beer.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, is considering introducing the measure that would make Idaho the third state to raise its drinking age since 1976. Minnesota raised its legal age to 19 last year and Maine followed suit in March.

Bateman said he is watching the Maine law closely. "Their state is similar intemperament to ours," Bateman said. But he is reluctant to sponsor the measure until he receives feedback from experts in alcohol related problems, he added.

Bateman commented the lower drinking age gives minors easy accessibility to liquor. "Seventeen year olds associate with 19 year olds," he added.

Bateman said his mail is running three to one in favor of the proposal. He said teenage drinking is becoming a problem nationally. "The problem is reaching epidemic proportions in our area," Bateman added. Law enforcement officials are also supporting the measure, he said.

Idaho's drinking age was previously 21 for liquor and 20 for beer. The age was lowered by the legislature in 1972. Eighteen states have left their drinking ages at 21. Six place the limit at 19 and one designates the lawful age at 20.

Lowered drinking ages followed the ratification of the 26th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. That amendment lowered the voting age to 18.

But Bateman said the amendment does not pertain to age of majority. "We gave them the right to vote. That's all we gave them" he said. Bateman added the 21st amendment, which repealed prohibition, left alcohol policies to the discretion of individual states.

Bateman acknowledged he has a fight ahead in the legislature. "I think we'll get it passed in the house," he said. But in the state senate where the Republican majority hinges on three votes, Bateman said it will be "more difficult."

Comm board hears ex-staffers' complaints

Two former Argonaut staff members presented complaints and proposed policy changes concerning that newspaper to the communications board Tuesday night. Jim Spiersch, ex-writer, and Bill Loftus, ex-managing editor, recommended to the board the establishment of a news editor position, a written editorial policy from the editor, and a different procedure to handle staff complaints concerning the editor.

Spiersch quit the Argonaut Oct. 10 after differences of policy with Rosemary Hammer, editor. Hammer fired Loftus Oct. 15 for a "bad attitude and constant conflict" with her policies and procedures.

Hammer maintained she does not need a news editor, because she fills that position herself. She admitted to the board that the Argonaut needs a managing editor, but said no qualified persons have applied for the job.

Members of the communications board questioned Hammer and staff members of the Argonaut concerning the two men's complaints. Marty Trillhaase and Kit Freudenberg, staff writers, endorsed the proposed policy changes. Both writers said policies and job descriptions should be written to avoid confusion and problems.

Steve Rinehart, Idahoian staff writer and former Argonaut writer, told the board that complaints and difficult situations arise at the Argonaut every semester. He said he was sorry to see Hammer lose two "good writers."

Steve Davis, photography director, suggested that Hammer submit written editorial and business policies to the board to review with the proposals and complaints from Loftus and Spiersch.

Chairman of the board, Craig Heitman, agreed with Davis and scheduled another hearing for Friday at 2:00 p.m. in the SUB.

Marijuana may be embalming high

(ZNS) The marijuana which some people are smoking these days may, in fact, be parsley leaves sprinkled with a generous amount of embalming fluid.

This report comes in the wake of a bizarre hold-up in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, last week, where two armed men robbed a funeral home at gun-point.

The only items they took, said the police, were three 12-ounce bottles of undertakers' embalming fluid, worth about $4 each.

A state drug officer said later that embalming fluid has been turning up recently in the underground pot market. Pennsylvania's Governor's Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse claims that parsley can be soaked in the fluid, then dried out and sold as marijuana for $40 to $45 an ounce.

Drop date proposals still open

The University Curriculum Committee is continuing to accept proposals to alter the drop date and policy for all university classes. Changes are being considered to help eliminate excessive drops and W's from appearing on students' transcripts.

Richard T. Jacobsen, chairman of the UCC, said one more general discussion will be held by the committee before shaping a questionnaire for a poll of the faculty. The questionnaire, which will seek suggestions and comments from the faculty, will not be distributed for at least two weeks.

Frank Carson, UCC secretary, said questionnaires will also be sent to the ASUI offices, so students can submit suggestions.

ASUI President Lynn Tominaga and Dan Mertens, a student faculty council representative, submitted a proposal to retain the present deadline for dropping a course, four weeks before the end of the semester. The proposal suggested a limitation on the number of W's that may be recorded on the student's transcript free of charge, and a fee charge for every credit that is recorded as a W thereafter. A $5 charge was suggested for W's in excess of 10, but both students considered these limitations to be "negotiable" figures.

Changing the drop date became an agenda item after the committee received a drop date change proposal from the school of communication faculty. The proposal urged the UCC to consider moving the drop deadline to one week after midterm grades are made available.

Student representatives were generally against this proposal, expressing concern that all students should not be penalized, because some abuse the system.

Study Abroad deadline soon

U of I students wishing to take part in the foreign study program during the January-March winter quarter in London, England, or Avignon, France, must apply by November 1, according to Paul Kaus, director of the program.

Kaus said students at either site will have "an opportunity to interact directly with the foreign culture while enrolled for regular U of I courses."

"The fee at both the London and Avignon sites is approximately $1,200 per quarter which allows a student to earn 10 credit hours.

Kaus said faculty interested in teaching in the study abroad programs in London, Avignon and Cologne during the 1978-79 school year must submit applications by today. He said several people have picked up forms but none have been returned.

Edmund Chavez, Kibble Dome manager, asks people to stay away from the dome while the end walls are being sandblasted and repainted. He says it's dangerous. The work should last about two more weeks — but it depends on the weather.

Christian seminar set

A consideration of important academic issues from a Christian perspective will be the theme of a conference here for faculty and graduate students on Nov. 4 and 5.

Dr. James Houston, principal of Regent College, Vancouver, B. C., will be the featured speaker for the conference which is being sponsored by Concern and Inland Christian Laymen. The event will be at the SUB.

Registration will be conducted beginning at 7:30 p.m. today with the first talk scheduled for 8 p.m. on "The Christian Scholar in the 1970's."

On Saturday, the second session will begin at 9 a.m. on the topic, "The Environmental Issue: A Critique of Naturalistic Ethics." The third session scheduled for 11:15 a.m. will be on "The Threat of Technocracy in Human Society."

Following a lunch break, the conference will resume at 1 p.m. with a fourth session on "Chaos of a Structured World." The fifth and final session is scheduled for 3 p.m. on "Understanding the Creator in Today's World." The conference will close at 5 p.m. after a question and answer period.

Each session will be followed by small group discussion.

"So called sculpture"

As everyone knows, there's a big controversy over that new piece of so-called sculpture they stuck in the middle of the Ad lawn. Well, I figured the situation was a big mess so I said to Betsy Brown, "Hey, you're the hot-shot columnist, why don't you do something on the junkyard monument they just put up?" She said it was too trivial for her to bother with, and if it bugged me so much I should write a column about it myself. So that's what I'm doing. Personally, I hated it the first time I saw it. They were still getting it up and they'd just finished digging a hole and plopping it in. I heard it was donated by a steel company. Well I could believe it. It looked like a cross between a phallic symbol and one of those steel beams they use in construction. I figured the warped place at the top was supposed to make it look a little less obvious. Anyway, it was just like something a bunch of macho types on the board of directors of some steel company would donate for public relations purposes.

Somebody someplace said that the new sculpture was supposed to be a nice contrast to the statue of the old soldier. It looked more like an out-and-out insult to me.

O. K., so that soldier wasn't much of a work of art itself to start with. It was just a dumb plaster war memorial, glorifying guns and militarism and all that. Now that the rifle's gone and the hands are knocked off and the hat's battered and the nose is chipped, it's different. It's like it's acquired a certain dignity from all the abuse it's taken. Because if you look at the old soldier up close you can see that it's actually just a young kid who probably was deluded by a lot of talk about patriotic duty and military glory and ended up crippled and useless. And now he just stands there stoically to take whatever else happens to him; partly because there isn't much else he can do about it. So instead of being a war memorial it's turned into a sort of anti-war memorial that stands for all the young men that ever got conned or forced into fighting a war in defense of their country's "manhood."

In that case, that thing the steel company supposedly gave us would stand for the macho ideal that got all those young soldiers screwed over. And it would stand for all the people—like steel companies - that make money off wars. That's why I decided it was an insult to that unfortunate plaster soldier.

Letter policy

The Argonaut welcomes letters from students, staff and community members. Letters should be typed, under two pages long, and must be signed. Hand written letters are accepted, but stand much less chance of being published. Writer's names may be withheld if the editor feels there is a valid reason to do so.

Well, then I found out that the steel company didn't donate it, we bought the stupid thing ourselves. And not too many people seemed to think it was a phallic symbol - and you have to admit that you have to get really abstract to see much resemblance to the real thing unless you have the steel company theory to help you out. Then I started hearing some of the people I know talk about the way they saw it, and why they thought it was really neat, so I had to wonder if I shouldn't change my mind about this sculpture.

But I'll tell you what still bugs me. That's the idea that they could just put that thing there in the middle of the lawn without any explanation and expect us to like it. It's the pushy-idea that "this is good art and you'd just better like it and if you don't, you're stupid." It's intellectual blackmail, that's what it is! People do the same thing with classical music and grammar and Shakespeare and poetry and algebra. They make people think they can't be intelligent unless they like the stuff. It makes you wonder if anyone would put up with such garbage unless they were blackmailed. No matter how culturally worthwhile something is, we have the right to judge it by our own standards and decide what we like and what we don't.

And so, Fine Arts people, if you're going to just shove something down our throats without any word of explanation, you have no reason to complain if we think it's stupid. Because if you can get away with forcing it on us, we can get away with refusing to like it.

Strange Situations

There are two rather strange articles in today's issue of which students should take note.

The first, I hope, is merely amusing. Representative Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, says he would like to submit a bill to the Idaho Legislature next session that would change this state's legal drinking age. This ardent protector of Idaho's young adults wants to see no one under 21 drinking hard liquor. If Bateman has his way, you'll have to wait until you're 20 to have a beer.

The risk of Bateman's changes being passed into law is probably small. I hope. One never knows just what politicians, especially in Idaho, will come up with next.

The second article is related to the first only in its foolishness. Unlike the first, it seems a very real threat. The Moscow Planning and Zoning Board is considering a proposal to build a road. That's O.K.

Here's the stinky part. They want to put it through the ASUI Golf Course. Not near it...through it! I admit my knowledge of golf is slight. Nonetheless, even I can see the difficulty of putting (or whatever golfers do) over, under, or around a steady line of automobiles. I understand golfers regularly deal with "hazards," but this is carrying the challenge of golf a bit far.

The proposed road would also interfere with plans for a new arboretum.

Another road does seem warranted to ease traffic congestion on campus. The proposed route, however, would cause more problems than it could possibly solve.

The Planners and Zoners have formed a subcommittee to come up with a better idea. Let's hope they do.

Gays want recognition as "ordinary people"

"We're people, not something different, not something apart."

By SANDI STACKI

It may take some time, but members of the Northwest Gay People's Alliance feel that eventually intolerant attitudes toward homosexuals will change. They feel that gays should receive the same civil rights as any other minority and people will realize that stereotypes are obsolete; gays are just ordinary people.

"Moscow is more accepting than a lot of towns in Idaho," said the Gay Alliance female president. "For the most part, people tend to be more open-minded and willing to talk and exchange ideas with anyone."

A college campus is a good place to be gay, said Liz, a member of the organization, but "I think it has a lot to do with the person's confidence in themselves. People won't pick on me, 'cause I won't listen to them," she said.

"People have nothing against a man being gay in this community, maybe because it's an artistic community," said Chuck, another member.

Gay students expressed anxiety and concern about the denial of civil rights to homosexuals. They cited a recent Supreme Court decision to refuse to hear the case of a fired Tacoma teacher. The teacher had taught at the school for 13 years with no evidence of ill-teaching effects, and was fired only because he was gay, said the alliance president.

"I think the only way we're going to get civil rights is when responsible people realize that fear of the unknown, perhaps fear of something in themselves, color their thinking," said Chuck.

"Gays shouldn't have to ask for civil rights.

"We're people, not something different, something apart. We want our rights," said Chuck.

According to the president, the alliance tries to maintain a "speakers bureau." Professors can contact the association and a speaker will talk to classes, providing information about the organization and "what it's like to be a homosexual in our society."

"It creates a public image, and helps get rid of stereotypes," she said.

"Homosexuality is just an emotional thing and shouldn't be a political thing."

people they know and respect are gay," said Liz. "Homosexuality is just an emotional thing and shouldn't be a political thing," she said.

"People shouldn't let fear get in their way. They're afraid that if we have civil rights we'll try to convert people. They let

People in the class will realize that the homosexual speaker is an ordinary person, wears ordinary clothes, and looks just like they do. A lot of students don't realize homosexuals exist, she said.

"They think it's somewhere else if it exists at all."

"I'm sure everybody knows at least one gay that they don't know is gay," said Liz. She discussed the reaction of friends to a letter she recently wrote to the Argonaut. Some of Liz's friends already knew she was gay and some didn't. "I received mostly positive feedback. Only a couple of liason with gays in other places. "We need solidarity to get Civil Rights, just like any minority," said Chuck.

There are two intents to the meetings, said the president. The alliance works to promote political awareness for the members and the public, and to develop legislative support people felt uncomfortable," said Liz. "It makes people see that homosexuality is not the fearful thing they think it is, when it's the reality of a friend," she said.

"Homosexuality is not the fearful thing they think it is, when it's the reality of a friend."

NWPGA holds meetings every other Tuesday at 7 p.m. The group has about 30 members fairly equally divided between men and women, said the president. It is a non-profit organization within the state of Idaho, with a president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and gentelperson-at-large. The organization is a member of National Gay Task Force.

As the gentelperson-at-large, Chuck said he works as a of gay rights. The meetings also provide time to share common ideas, and give mutual support against common discrimination and persecution.

"We're all up against the same kind of prejudice in society," she said.

The alliance has recently established a newsletter, which will be put out every six weeks. It will contain local and national news, creative writing, and upcoming events.

"We don't encourage people to become public or come out of the closet. It's a personal decision," the president said. "It's real hard to be public in today's society."

Ridiculous

To the Editor:

It really seems ridiculous to me that two departments in a University cannot cooperate for the benefit of the students. I am referring to the Physical Education policy on the use of the swimming pool. The Outdoor Program has been trying to obtain time to use the shallow pool for winter kayak instruction--for instance eskimo rolls, braces, basic maneuvering, etc. It seems that the P.E. Department doesn't feel that such an activity requires instruction, since they don't teach it, nor do they feel that it is educational. The Outdoor Program hasn't been able to obtain the use of the pool so far this year, and if eventually they do, it will cost six dollars an hour to rent! That is utterly ridiculous, since the cost of the pool rental would be divided among the students taking the instruction--students who already are supposed to have pool privileges.

It looks like the Outdoor Program will have to go over to W.S.U. to use their pool for free, as they have done in the past. This is not a bad arrangement since W.S.U. is much more cooperative than our own University, but why should students have to go to the inconvenience of travelling sixteen miles when there is a pool right here on campus that is supposedly for their use? I think that the P.E. Department should be aware that different departments of the University should cooperate for the benefit of the students, who pay their salaries.

Whoops

To the Editor:

This past Tuesday I stopped by the sub to pick up a copy of the Argonaut at noon and later on that evening. Search as I might I could not find one anywhere either time. This has been my experience many times in the recent past. With half the student body living off campus and the SUB being their main stopping-off point on campus, I think it would be appropriate to deliver an adequate supply there. If you can't find a copy to read, there's not much point in having a campus newspaper.

Bob Frederiksen

Athiest's views

To the Editor:

The recent discussion in the Argonaut over Christian ideas has lacked a consistent and all-embracing attack upon the Christian ethic. I should like to remedy that situation, for I am an ATHEIST.

1) The Mystic rejection of any type of rationality and logic leads ultimately to the rejection of thought and all mental-sensory processes. This can be clearly seen in the more fundamentalist Christian groups which proclaim outright that one must have faith in the nonexistent before one can "understand." We are told not to think; then and only then can we comprehend the incomprehensible. In other words, one must become truly irrational and unthinking before one can accept Christianity.

2) The mystic rejection of the senses and of all worldly things leads to the rejection of love and to the hatred of men in general. Worldly goods and acts are evil and as "filthy rags." Being productive and creative is called valueless. Looking at a beautiful man or woman is somehow wrong. Making love to someone you cherish is somehow a sin. (But to a rational being, sex is the most glorious celebration of the joy of being alive.) Finally, Christians view the entire world and all mankind as evil. And of course, the only solution to the problem of being with sinful people is to get entirely away from them. The Christian solution is death: the "final release". If you don't worship the day you will die you are defined as "wicked." Death becomes the good-life is the bad. Christianity offers you death as its ultimate goal. I offer you life.

3) Pride and self-esteem are the height of depravity in the Christians' book. But self-esteem is necessary for the normal, healthy functioning of any human. Only the man of self-esteem, only the man proud of himself and his actions, only the man who loves himself, is capable of loving anything or anyone else. The man who lacks self-esteem is the one with psychiatric problems. The church more than any other institution helps fill the psychiatric offices.

4) The Christian notion that women should be entirely subservient to the dictatorial wishes of the man is repugnant to any concept of humanness. Somehow women aren't humans. Are they lower animals then?

5) The altruist acceptance of self-sacrifice and martyrdom is totally irrational. If everyone is sacrificing himself to everyone else, what is its purpose? The only conceivable purpose of every little sacrifice must be to show one's readiness for the one big sacrifice. Its purpose is to actively show how much you hate yourself and this world, and how much you long to die. If Christ is the ultimate good then, "Up on the cross everybody!" But I say, "Come down off the cross! Your life is an end in itself!"

There are hundreds of other specific Christian ideas that show conclusively how reactionary and evil the entire Christian ethic is, but space prohibits.

But one relationship most people fail to see is the following:

Mysticism (the rejection of logic and rationality) is necessary for altruism (self-sacrifice to others). Altruism in turn is necessary for collectivism (that everyone should work for the good of the community, or society, or god). And finally collectivism is necessary for STATISM (the idea that everyone must work for the good of the nation and that the state must have the power to enforce this).

That is, mysticism and altruism are necessary for any form of authoritarian government be it theocratic, Continued on page 6 fascist or Communist. (The fact that fascists and communists may reject Christianity is irrelevant because both fascists and communists are mystics and altruists.) Note that a mystic (i.e., Christian) may not necessarily be an authoritarian but an authoritarian is always a mystic. I find this to be a grave indictment against Christianity; one that is, of course, ignored by Christian "philosophers." And the Christian acceptance of the state simply because it exists is horrendous.

Who am I to attack the centuries old dogma by calling it destructive, evil and reactionary? I am the Greeks' Prometheus (who was eternally punished for bringing fire to man.) I am the Bible's Satan (bringing to man the fruit of the tree of knowledge.) I am Nietzsche's Superman (the creator personality.) I am Ayn Rand's John Galt (offering man life and freedom.)

Senate and cops

To the Editor:

In an effort to evaluate the services that students get from the auxillary services on campus the ASUI Senate has formed a committee to evaluate the Moscow sub-division, known as the Campus Police Force. The committee members have gained input from other schools and their enforcement practices and has also patrolled the campus with the Campus Police Force. We are now attempting to get as much input as possible from those people directly served by our enforcement system. We will be holding open hearings on the effectiveness of the Campus Police Force. In our evaluation we will need as much information as possible to correctly assess the value of the Campus Police Force.

The meetings will be held on;
Tuesday (November 1st) at 7:30 p.m.-9:00 p.m.

Gay scare?

To the Editor

This letter is another of many that have been generated by the recent "gay scare." In reference to Janice Turner's letter that claims the backing of "the rest of us all Americans" in her condemnation of homosexuality, a few points need to be made. First, her fear about the exposure of children to gay freedom--I and many others somehow survived the over-exposure in childhood to any number of philosophies without falling prey to them. Could it be that Ms. Turner still believes that people don't make their own decisions in the final analysis? If so, a massive industry such as television should be abolished completely.

It's a dangerous kind of tunnel-vision nationalism that Ms. Turner promotes. Opinions like hers constantly remind me that the struggle for human rights and the development of an "international mind" is still suffering birth pangs. My plea is that everyone occasionally back-off and remove themselves from petty day-to-day existence and see the world and humankind from a broader perspective. Step out of the confining culture and values you so readily accept and view the world for what it is—a writhing mass of humanity in nature, no one belief any more valid than another, no one person any more equal than another. Put a stop to the us-them neurosis that rains war and destruction on simple people. Beyond the mindless symbolism of "Anita, Charles Atlas and the rest of us all Americans", we must all be prepared to answer the question "Are you ready to be a planetary citizen?"

Kevin Harris

All American?

To the Editor:

Re: Janice Turner's Remarks dated 10-25-77.

Please don't lump "all Americans" into the group of supporters behind Anita Bryant and Charles Atlas. Some people prefer to remember that the U.S. Constitution proscribes deprivation of liberty as well as confers a freedom to associate. Granted such "rights" may or may not so clearly apply to the recognition of homosexuality, the least we can do is to avoid putting an "american" tag on only one side of the struggle. It seems more American that any group has the freedom to struggle out of repression. At least they aren't slaughtered for being individuals. (Are they?)

I consider myself an American. I am neither affiliated with the Campus Christian Organization or a "closet" gay. (I'm not even an uncloseted gay). It would seem the more "American" thing to do would be to encourage equality rather than discrimination (including reverse discrimination) and tolerance-understanding rather than persecution. I respect Ms. Turner's right to believe that homosexuality is a sin but I protest such belief being foisted on me because she and I share being Americans.

Children are indeed open to new ideas. Then do my little brothers and their friends who visit me, wonder if I'm gay because I live with two other women? What would they wonder if I lived with two men? If people assume that all the housing in Moscow that is occupied by two-sex combinations shelters a heterosexual relationship, then one-sex combinations must be homosexual relationships.

It's a pretty silly extension of logic, isn't it? Neither might be true.

If all children were fortunate enough to have open and receptive parents, Ms. Turner wouldn't have to worry about them being exposed to new "philosophies". They could handle it. Maybe we should all be more concerned about parent-child relationships.

I don't like any group crammed down my throat. Not Anita Bryant, or religious sects, or gay lib. But I am proud of being in the large and diverse group of "Americans." Let's not sully and subdivide that group UNLESS we give such divisions new names. Some Americans are gays, some are Anita Bryant fans, and some like myself, are neither. I do my own thing too, expecting recognition where it is due, but not more than what is my EQUAL right.

Thanks for hearing me too.

Success

To the Editor:

Thank you Homecoming Committee. The weekend was a success.

There is heartache and frustration as well as exhilaration in preparing and executing a weekend involving so many different areas and people, but you came through with flying colors. I feel privileged to have worked with each of you.

I know that you were sorry that there was not enough input from a wider and more diverse group of students, but perhaps next year there will be more.

The parade was difficult to arrange because of the number of people involved, the streets to line them up on and getting each in place, but you did it well.

Wrong one

To the Editor:

I'm writing this letter to the editor, because I hate being accused of being a gay activist. An equal rights activist possibly, but by no means am I the Charlie Brown promoting gay rights.

It seems that more and more I'm being confused with the Charlie Brown that has few teeth, wears an earring, smokes roll-your-own cigs, and seems to know everything there is to know about self-subsistence. I've never had a picture and full page about myself printed in the Arg., like the Charlie Brown here described. Instead I'm one of those off-campus people, here to attend college, get a degree and whatever else one can.

So the next time you hear or see my name and start to ask me if I wrote that screwy letter about gays in the Oct. 21 edition of the Arg., don't, I'm not.

Charlie Brown

C.C. what?

To the Editor:

This Fall isn't the first time the campus image of the CAMPUS CHRISTIAN CENTER has been confused.

The clear implication of Janice Turner's letter on Tuesday is that the CAMPUS CHRISTIAN CENTER views homosexuality as a sin. Ms. Turner has confused the CAMPUS CHRISTIAN CENTER with the Campus Christian Organization which doesn't seem to be an organization but three people who think homosexuality is a sin. The CAMPUS CHRISTIAN CENTER has no connection with the "Campus Christian Organization" nor have we placed ads in the Argonaut under that name. Several years ago the Center was believed by many to be a center for launching protests against the Vietnam war.

The fact is that the CAMPUS CHRISTIAN CENTER is provided by ten major Protestant denominations which were divided on the merits of the Vietnam war and which are currently divided about homosexuality. It is a Student Center open to all students to give expression to their concerns, whatever they may be.

Students especially interested in this issue should consider signing up for my course on "Sex Roles and the Christian Faith" to be taught in the Religious Studies program this Spring (RelSt 200 Seminar, Sec.

I would like to invite Ms. Turner and any other students unfamiliar with the Campus Christian Center to come in and get acquainted. Our current project is to promote a "Fast for World Hunger" in co-operation with St. Augustine's Center as part of the campus observance of Thanksgiving. We need your help.

Drink beer, eat pie or be ugly for Campus Chest

The annual Campus Chest charity drive will start next week. Sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, this year's events will include such favorites as the Ugly Man contest and Miss Campus Chest.

Entry forms are now available and should be turned in no later than 9 p.m. Sunday. Events will be Mr. Ugly Man, Miss Campus Chest, beer drinking contest, pie eating contest, lack of talent contest and legs contest. The week's festivities will be capped with a dance and free beer at the Moscow Mining Company, Nov. 4.

The Mr. Ugly Man and Miss Campus Chest contests will start Monday and will run through Friday. Each living group or other organization will place a picture of their candidate on a jar and money will be used for "votes." The group collecting the most votes will have their candidate crowned at the dance Friday.

The lack of talent contest will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in the Administration Auditorium. Only one entry per living group may perform and the slogan for the evening is "anything goes but the clothes." Talent, or the lack of it, will be judged by the audience. Ballots for the judging cost 25 cents each, and the winner of the contest will have the funds from the contest donated to their living group's Campus Chest Fund. Each act will be limited to 4 minutes, and the winning act will receive a plaque at the dance Friday.

Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. the pie eating contest will be held in Borah Theater. There will be categories for both men and women and each living group must furnish their own 8 inch unfrozen cream pie and towels for cleanup. A poker chip will be hidden in each pie and contestants must find it without using their hands. A 25-cent admission fee will be charged for spectators and the total admission fund will be split between the winning men's and women's team. In case of a tie, there will be a sudden-chomp runoff Friday at the dance, with pies furnished by Alpha Phi Omega. The winners will also receive a plaque.

Wednesday night will be the ever popular beer drinking contest. The drink-off will be at 8:30 p.m. at Rathskeller Inn.

There will be both mens' and womens' categories. Five member teams will race to see who can complete two rounds of beer. Each member must drink one glass of beer and place the glass upside down on their head before the next member may start. A $3.50 fee will be collected from each team, and the winning team will get its entry fee back. All participants and spectators must be 19 years old. A 75-cent admission charge will be collected from participants and spectators, this includes the usual cover charge. A band will play after the contest.

Thursday at 7:30 in Borah Theater the Legs Contest will take place. Contestants must be in a costume that covers their face so they will remain anonymous. A prize will be awarded for the most original costume. A panel of faculty members will judge. Prizes will be awarded at the dance Friday.

Friday will be the awards presentation and dance from 9 p.m. to midnight at the Moscow Mining Company. Awards will be presented at 10 p.m. There will be a 50-cent admission charge and free beer will be available for all participants with a valid U of I ID card.

The goal of the week long Campus Chest Drive is to raise $5,000 for charities in the area. Information on the events and entry forms are available from Ron Rowan at 882-6768, Ann Pardew at 882-3521 and Randy Brauner or Karl Blackstock at 885-7512.

Tricks and treats are in store here

By PHIL BAECHLER

It's Halloween time and there will be several nights of films and festivities to celebrate the weekend.

Halloween brings trick or treaters and many people will dress up in the most outlandish weird costumes they can find and prowl around campus. Of course some of them do that every day, but a special effort will be made for Halloween.

Four films are scheduled for the weekend, and three of them are guaranteed chiller thrillers. The first is the granddaddy of recent scare flicks, The Exorcist. It will be shown in the SUB Ballroom Friday at 7 and 9 p.m. and again at midnight. The midnight show will be $1 and the earlier shows will be $1.25. The Exorcist is sponsored by Theta Chi fraternity, and all funds will be donated to the Latah Senior Citizens Club.

Also showing Friday night will be Serpico, a film about the dangerous life of an undercover policeman. It is sponsored by SUB Films. Shows will be at 5, 7:30 and 10 p.m. Admission is $1.

There will be a special treat for the kiddies Friday night as Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity sponsors a tour of the "haunted house." The fraternity, located at 745 Nez Perce Drive, will have a variety of spooky displays on each of its four floors. Children under 12 are admitted free. Parents are encouraged to accompany children under eight. For you big kids, admission is 50 cents and proceeds will be donated to the United Way.

Sunday night the ASUI Film Society will present the Japanese horror film Kwaidan. Shows will be at 3, 6 and 9 p.m. in the Borah Theater. Admission is 75 cents. Kwaidan is the Japanese version of the ghost story.

Halloween night is Monday, and there is another horror film scheduled. This one is Count Yorga: Vampire. It is sponsored by the Campus Democrats and will be shown at 6, 8 and 10 p.m. in the Borah Theater. Admission will be $1. The film takes place in Los Angeles in 1973. Count Yorga uses seances, mental telepathy and a vicious smile to control his victims. There is a spooky scene when two men enter Yorga's mansion to attempt the rescue of several women being held there.

KUID-FM will even have some radio scares Monday night. The first is a radio drama The Road, recorded by the Moscow Community Radio Players, a group of actors from the Moscow Community Theatre. Written by Gene Fromherz, the radio drama tells the tale of a fateful evening as a young sailor rushes to the hospital to see his wife who is having a baby. It is a dark foggy night with all the elements needed for a spooky encounter on a long, dark road. The Road will air at 10 p.m.

At 10:30 p.m. on KUID-FM will be an original journey into the macabre entitled Henry Moreberg. This 10 minute short scary was written by Jonathan Perry of Moscow and tells the tale of a young English gent and a visit by the ghosts of his parents.

Following Henry Moreberg on KUID-FM the Moscow-Latah Library will sponsor a horror show recorded by a group called the Andrew Carnegie Memorial Review. Tune your dial to 91.7 for an evening of scares.

"Name That Gameroom" CONTEST

Contest Rules

The Student Union Gameroom is one of the many services provided for the university community in the Student Union Building (SUB). It features bowling alleys, pool and billiard tables and a variety of pinball and coin-operated machines in the "fun center" area. A new sign and possible decor of the area is currently being planned and it is the Student Union Boards' wish to offer a contest for the naming of the gameroom.

2 All entries must be received in the box at the Student Union Building Information Desk no later than November 1st, 1977. All entries will be judged for the best expression of what the Student Union gameroom means to the University of Idaho.

3 Judging will be done by the Student Union Board members.

4 This contest is open to all faculty, staff, students, and interested parties.

1 On an entry blank printed in the Argonaut or on a three by five card print your name and address and phone number. Also print on it the name that you are submitting for the "Name That Gameroom Contest." You may enter as many times as you like.

5 The prize for this contest shall be three hours of free entertainment (bowling, pool and billiards) for the winner and his friends or living group, at a negotiated date before the close of the 1977-1978 academic year.

All life's a stage

Drama takes actors to different times and different places. They in turn take us there as we watch them in a microcosm of life.

These actors are going to an unusual place and time: Germany during World War II. The plays they will be acting in are about the people who were then and what happened to them.

These actors are students. They will be performing two plays: The Jewish Wife by Bertold Brecht and I Never Saw Another Butterfly by Raja England Darova.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. in the U-Hut Theatre Friday and Saturday and at 7 p.m. Sunday.

All performances will be free.

Students, community, administrators speak Variety of opinions surface at alcohol open hearing

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

College administrators, Moscow residents and students offered protest, consent and advice on the proposed permanent alcohol policy for the four state financed colleges and universities.

The hearings, required by the Administrative Procedures Act, are being conducted by the Board of Regents across the state. The U of I's hearing was last Tuesday.

The Idaho Student Association successfully sued the Board in May, charging that its uniform alcohol policy violated the APA.

The Board established an 120 day emergency policy in September forbidding alcohol on campus, except in private dorm rooms. The board also began procedures to establish a permanent policy by next year.

But what that policy says may depend on the opinions gathered in the hearings. A hearing held at Boise State last week showed modest, at best, involvement from BSU students. Lasting roughly 20 minutes, the hearing involved 14 students.

That was not the case here.

Students, university officials, and local residents gave designated hearing officer Paul S. Boyd more than two sides of the alcohol argument.

U of I President Richard Gibb expressed support for the policy as it now stands. He stressed that the Board must issue a uniform policy for all four schools. "All of the campuses are under the jurisdiction of the same governing board. If attempts were made to develop a separate alcohol policy for each campus, in the long run pressures will develop which will require a similar policy for all," he said.

Gibb said the primary function of the university is academic achievement. Alcohol can interfere with this function, he said.

"The university operates in the public trust and public opinion of alcohol on campus cannot be dismissed," he said.

He added the policy should be even handed in its enforcement for students, faculty and general public alike. He added the policy should be fully enforced.

But the ASUI wants anything but a uniform policy. Since the emergency policy was enacted, ASUI leaders have pinpointed two areas they want changed in the policy for the U of I specifically. ASUI President Lynn Tominaga presented these goals.

Tominaga requested that the ASUI golf course be allowed to sell and serve beer and wine in the lounge.

He also asked that the Student Union Building be allowed to serve wine and beer at banquets, luncheons, and dinners on a catering basis. He presented a petition with roughly 1800 student signatures endorsing the policy changes.

Tominaga noted that the ASUI golf course is the only one in the state that does not serve alcoholic beverages.

The U of I student leader added 23 states allow beer in university student union buildings. "We are not alone in this," he said.

Several students disagreed with Tominaga and the position of the ASUI. Thomas Heward, a U of I student and former U.A. Army chaplain assistant on alcohol related problems said alcohol on campus is a detriment to the university's academic function. "Alcohol is, I believe, destructive to the University of Idaho," he said. He doubted the financial rewards of selling alcohol would compensate for the consequent reckless activity it may cause.

Carol Lee Black, a part time student and housewife, said the alcohol policy will only affect students for a few years. As a permanent resident of Moscow, she said the policy will have a continuing effect on her.

Black supported the alcohol ban on campus. "I appreciate these practices for my children," Black said.

But Moscow resident Charlie Brown promised resistance to any prohibitive measures. "You can pass all the laws you want, it's not going to do a bit of good," he said. He said such laws are like locks. They're made for honest people. The dishonest person will figure out a way to beat the system, he said. Brown stressed education is responsible for alcohol habits, rather than restrictions. David Waters, a student here, said the alcohol policy protects non-drinkers from the excesses of drinkers. He said he had no objection to drinking per se., but, he added, "I believe if we liberalize alcohol policies, we'll be hampering the rights of people to get an education from a high reputation university."

But Carol Webber, a Lewis-Clark State College student, disagreed. She said that as adults, and taxpayers, students should answer only to the law and the dictates of the legislature, not a governing education board. "I understand this is a political issue, but it is a political issue for the wrong reason," she said. Webber added the legislature should be upset that the regents have exercised legislative function. Her remarks were applauded from the audience.

Whether the opinions make any difference is up to the Regents. Subsequent hearings are scheduled at Idaho State University. The Regents must come to a final decision by December.

Speaker believes television advertising very misleading

Modern day advertising may be "ripping off" the consumer without his being aware of it, according to an upcoming speaker in the fall ASUI Issues and Forums series.

Dr. Wilson Bryan Key, president of Mediaprobe, Center for Study of Media, Inc., will speak on "The Great Media Rip-off Via Subliminal Perception" at 8 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 10, in the Student Union Building Borah Theatre.

He says that a probe he has conducted into newspapers, magazines, television, radio, billboards and other influences determining consumers' purchase preferences, personal identities and relationships with other people has uncovered bizarre techniques. Innocent looking advertisements may contain powerful signals to the viewer's unconscious mind which program behavior in a way similar to post-hypnotic suggestions, he suggests.

Many advertisements have hidden in them such covert communications as the word sex, phallic symbols and potent symbols of death, fear and perversion, according to Key. He explores with his audiences examples of subliminal advertising via slides, discusses subliminal techniques and supports his case with market research figures, experimental statistics and advertising illustrations.

Key does not agree with any suggestion that the images he finds in advertisements may be an accident of lighting the photographed subject, saying he thinks they are put there deliberately, probably during photoengraving or airbrushing stages of ad production.

He says he believes that subliminal techniques were a part of every U.S. election of the past 20 years.

Key holds a doctorate in communication, has taught at the universities of Denver, Kansas, Boston, Puerto Rico and Western Ontario, and has been a public relations director, radio producer, corporate and television consultant and served as head of an international research and development corporation.

Key is the author of two recent books, "Subliminal Seduction" and "Media Sexploitation."

The program is open to the public without charge.

Orange water plagues campus

Christmas colors ornamented the SUB last week with green coffee, red dishes, and "orange" water.

The water has a high iron content. This is not harmful, just distasteful and unappealing, said Dean Vettrus, SUB general manager.

"But its better than hauling your own water," said Vettrus.

The SUB is on the city water system, while most facilities on campus are on the University water system, according to Vettrus.

The city has employed a filtration system plant. But there is such a great buildup of iron that they have to flush the lines. The surge of iron produces the "orange" water in the SUB, some sorority and fraternity houses, and various areas in Moscow.

The city well supplying water for the SUB is approximately 250 ft. down, according to Vettrus. There are iron deposits where the well is situated.

The SUB has tried several ways to counteract the problem. Water softeners have been installed to purify the water but are not designed to prevent the iron from coming through the pipes.

The flushing of the lines alleviates the build-up of iron behind the filter system but causes problems for those on the other end.

Plates turn brown after washing. But there is an easy cure, Purex them and "you can see yourself" again.

Laundry comes out brown, when the iron content of the water is high, according to Vettrus. "I've brewed coffee and it turns green," said Vettrus.

Film production is also hindered. The developers are careful not to process film during the iron surge because it leaves orange rings around equipment used, according to Steve Davis, photo bureau director.

There do not appear to be any solutions to the problem yet.

Library celebrates

Twenty years of service to the U of I and the Moscow area is being observed this week at the U of I Library.

According to Warren Owens, library director, the present library facility opened its doors at 8 a.m., Oct. 23, 1957. The four-story structure was dedicated the following week.

"We have a display in the lobby and a "Happy Birthday to Us" cake as a part of the observance," Warren Owens, library director said.

The facility has been "very adequate," Owens said, but it was designed for 20 years of growth and the designers were unable to accurately project the growth in collections. "We are having some problems in housing the collection adequately while maintaining space for users," Owens said.

Argonaut/Steve Davis

Automobiles would replace golf carts on the ASUI greens if a proposal to the Moscow Planning and Zoning Board goes through. The proposed road would also cut through the new arboretum.

Proposed road would cut through ASUI golf course

A road cutting through the ASUI Golf Course and the new arboretum to connect the Johnson Cut-off Rd. and Nez Perce Dr. has been proposed to the Moscow Planning and Zoning Board.

The new road would reroute traffic from Hwy 95 and the new Pope subdivision annex around the university to the Pullman-Moscow highway.

The proposal has met with strong opposition from the golf course, residents of the University Ridge subdivision, and fraternities and sororities located on Nez Perce Dr., according to Jim Redinger, TKE House member. He said the P & Z board has given a special subcommittee three weeks to submit an alternate artery pattern for the southwest part of Moscow. The subcommittee consists of three P & Z commissioners, a resident of the University Ridge subdivision, Mike Helbling from the ASUI, and Redinger representing the Greeks.

According to Redinger, the subcommittee will be looking for a route from the Johnson Cut-off Rd. around all of the campus area to enter onto the Pullman-Moscow highway somewhere below the athletic fields.

Committee studies barriers to handicapped on campus

By MARY STOREY

A group of faculty, students, and staff has been formed to recognize and evaluate architectural barriers on campus. This is a result of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

Section 504 reads, "No otherwise qualified handicapped individual in the United States, as defined in section 7(6), shall, solely by reason of his handicap be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

Tom Richardson, academic vice president, has been named campus coordinator for assured compliance with regulation 504. Richardson said, "These regulations form the backdrop for the committee. We are trying to determine if there are any areas where a student is stymied by a particular building or program."

The 15-member committee is required by regulation 504 to evaluate the accessibility of all U of I programs and activities to handicapped persons. December 3, 1977, is the due date for a plan of any structural changes in facilities. These changes must be completed by June 3, 1980.

The committee must also determine whether current policies meet new regulation standards. Deadline for this evaluation is June 3, 1978.

Richardson emphasized that if compliance is not made in three years then federal aid to the University will stop. He said, "The ultimate weapon is that if schools do not comply then ultimately federal funding could be cut."

Richardson said, "Under the law, we are not compelled to alter every building. We are looking at it from the angle that if you want to study in any area, you should be able to study as a handicapped student."

Regulation 504 only requires that each University program be made accessible, it does not state that all facility barriers be removed. Any modifications made should not impose "undue hardship" upon the school. When accessibility can be achieved through other means, structural changes should be avoided.

Jean Hill, dean of academic services, and chairperson of the self evaluation committee said, "One of the greatest misnomers people have is that all buildings should be made accessible, which is not true, only all programs."

Hill said, "All programs should not only be made accessible, but more easily accessible." Dianne Milhollin, of Student Advisory Services, devotes half her time to making programs more accessible for handicapped student, according to her job description.

Anticipating the change in law, a fact finding committee for architectural barriers was formed in the spring of 1976. Richardson said, "It wasn't an indepth study, but it gave us some awareness of the problems." Many of the members of the 1976 committee are on the new evaluation committee.

It was noted that only in most recent constructions have architectural barriers been considered. The older buildings on campus, for example the Faculty Office Building, is one of the least accessible for those in wheel chairs, explained Richardson.

Changes have been made though. This past summer a portion of the Memorial Gym steps were ramped, along with those in Shoup Hall. Possible changes in the future include street curb cuts, and alterations of some of the rest room and drinking fountains.

According to Hill, the cost of making programs more accessible to handicapped students is hard to project.

"We do not have enough data, but I think the potential is there

Richardson said, "We'll be looking very carefully for ways we can make things accessible without spending massive sums."

Career day offers students options after graduation

Career Day, set for Thursday, Nov. 3 will give students an opportunity to talk to representatives from more than 40 Northwest and national businesses.

This third annual Career Day, sponsored by the Student-Alumni Relations Board (S-Arb) through the Alumni Office, will be held at the SUB Ballroom, 10 a.m. to noon and 1-4 p.m.

"It's to give students ideas on what to expect from a specific profession," said Judy Emerson, S-Arb president. "Maybe a student is confused or undecided what career they want to pursue. This will give them a chance to find out what it would be like to be working in the profession," she said.

Representatives will also be giving tips on what an employer is looking for in an interview situation as well as school curriculum, activities and grades, said Emerson.

"We hope we will have more students participate this year," she said. "Last year, the ones that did come felt it was really worthwhile."

The firms, organizations and corporations participating in Career Day will cover a wide range of business fields, including accounting, business, forestry, home economics, government, urban planning, agriculture, mining, engineering, real estate, insurance, sciences and the arts.

Individuals attending the event as career representatives include: from Boise, Frank Bowles Jr., Bowles and Associates; Rod Gramer, "The Idaho Statesman"; Janet Guentz, Idaho Beef Council; Max Hanson, Idaho Department of Agriculture; Janet Hardy, J.R. Simplot Co.; Robert Klump and Nile Miner, Idaho Power Co.; Leila Lewis, State Department of Education; D. E. Masterson, Ore-Ida Foods, Inc.; Steve Purvis, Ernst & Ernst; Curtis W. Young, Touche Ross and Co.

--from Coeur d'Alene, Ralph D. Kizer, Jim Pierce and John Wendell, U.S. Department of Agriculture and U.S. Forest Service.

--from Lewiston, Phyllis Charlo, Pottlatch Corp.

--from Moscow, Joanne Anderson, UI Extension Service; W.E. Anderson, Bielenberg, Anderson & Walker; Jack A. Harris, General Telephone Co.; G.K. Hough, Bank of Idaho; Jim

Hoyt, Lena Whitmore Grade School; Shirley Mix, Ad-1 Advertising; Tom Neal, KRPL; Doris Reiersen, Idaho First National Bank; Monte Walker and Dave Trail, Northwestern Mutual Life; and Jane P. Goetschel, "Daily Idahonian."

--from the University of Idaho, Roger R. Bafus, U.S. Navy; Dr. Ernest Ables, College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences; Dr. Harry Caldwell, College of Mines; Gerry Dacres and R.M. Kessel, Office Administration; Eloise Frank, Career Planning.

Large area of Russia dangerously radioactive

(ZNS) Two recent emigrants from the Soviet Union have given new eye-witness reports which seem to back up previous allegations that a major nuclear waste accident may have occurred in central Russia in 1958.

Allegations about a large atomic accident, which reportedly occurred near the town of Kyshtyn, in the southern Ural Mountains, were originally voiced several years ago by a pair of dissident Soviet Scientists.

At the time, both the Soviets and British atomic energy officials dismissed the stories as "fiction."

Now, The Chicago Tribune reports it has interviewed in Israel two recent emigrants from the Soviet Union, 40-year-old Ilya Voytovyetski and 30-year-old Olga Barr.

Voytovyetski states that as a student in the late 1950's, he often drove through the Kyshtyn area by car. He says prior to 1958, the area was active with people, communities and animal herds.

He told the Tribune that the region was suddenly closed for about a year, beginning in 1958. When the area was opened again, said Voytovyetski, it had become a barren, desolate wasteland, seemingly devoid of all life. He added that billboards along the highways urged all motorists never to stop or linger in the area.

Barr reports she moved to a military base in the Kyshtyn area in 1967 and was immediately warned to test everything, food and belongings, with a government-issued Geiger counter. She adds, "I became pregnant, and the Army doctors advised me to have an abortion because they said radiation had already caused many women in the area to have deformed babies. I had an abortion."

Barr also describes strange fenced-off areas in the countryside which she calls "graveyards of the earth." In these places, she says, the needle of the Geiger counter would jump crazily. She says that vegetation inside these areas was often over-sized, with mushrooms and berries bigger than tennis balls.

Silkwood witnesses receive threats

(ZNS) Rolling Stone magazine reports that several key witnesses in the Karen Silkwood case say they have been subjected to strange burglaries and threatening telephone calls in recent months.

Silkwood was the 28-year-old worker at the Kerr-McGee Plutonium Plant who died three years ago in a mysterious car crash while investigating possible safety violations at the Kerr-McGee Plant in Crescent, Oklahoma.

Silkwood's parents have since filed a damage suit on behalf of her estate. They allege her death was a direct result of negligence on the part of Kerr-McGee officials.

Rolling Stone says that one former worker, Jean Jung, recently submitted a sworn statement alleging that Silkwood was carrying a folder of documents minutes before her fatal car crash. Those documents have never been found.

According to Rolling Stone, shortly after Jung's name surfaced as a witness in the Silkwood case, her house was burglarized and ransacked, she received anonymous phone calls threatening her, and she was chased by a car.

The publication adds that another former Kerr-McGee worker, who might also testify against Kerr-McGee, claims to have received anonymous phone calls threatening to ruin his business if he continues to cooperate with the Silkwood attorneys.

Big Sky Roundup

Idaho football's winning again

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE

Two major clashes altered the Big Sky standings last week as Idaho travelled to Missoula and thumped last year's Division II National Champ, Montana State, 17-6. Meanwhile in Boise, Idaho's arch rival Boise State beat current Sky leader Northern Arizona, 27-13.

It was the Vandal's biggest win this season as Idaho's defense bottled up the run-oriented Bobcat offense, forcing them to pass during the second half. Two Idaho standouts on defense were Tim Sanford, named Big Sky "Defensive Player of the Week" for his contribution of 18 tackles and a fumble, and Steve Parker who early in the game pounced on a Montana State fumble that led to Idaho's first score.

Rushers Rocky Tuttle, Tim Lappano and Robert Taylor earned 273 yards between them. Tuttle rushed for the game's high of 104.

Idaho's now 2-4 for the season and will meet Weber State in Ogden, Utah, Saturday. Should Idaho continue its winnings ways sleeve, and uses it in a key game.

"We were caught sleeping on the sleeper," said Northern Arizona coach Joe Salem after Saturday's game with host Boise State.

What he meant was that BSU running back Cedric Minter, who headed for the sideline goal to give WSC their first win since the Montana game Oct. 1.

The tipsy-turvy game saw Weber's QB Morris Bledsoe complete 21 out of 31 passes for a total of 278 yards to lead the conference in total percentage of completions (506).

An attempted field goal by Montana State's Jeff Muri (far right) in Saturday's game with Idaho was to the right. Steve Parker (78) tried to block it.

(and they will), they'll be 3-2 in league action. Idaho to win, 24-21.

In the sports world, it's refreshing to know that a college team really does have a secret whammy up it's during the game, paused to tie his shoe while still onfield.

The Broncos went without a huddle, and before you could say, "Hey, something ain't right here," it wasn't. On that play Minter streaked down the sideline unattended and caught a 38-yard t.d. pass from QB Hoskin Hogan. He was all alone, dancing merrily, as was the rest of Bronco Stadium.

Cellar fellers Montana and ISU made war Saturday with host Montana slipping past 17-15 in another Big Sky tilt. Bruce Carlson, son of Grizzlie's head coach Gene Carlson saved the day when with 22 seconds to go, he connected with a 22-yard field goal. That win lifted Montana's record 1-4 in league play, 2-5 overall. Idaho State's now 2-5 on the season.

Idaho State travels to California Saturday to face Division I, Fresno State. The weather's warm but not the reception. Result: an easy win for Fresno. Montana's on the road, too, and will meet cross-state rival MSU in Bozeman. No upset here, MSU to win big, although in this game anything could happen.

Games to watch: No highlight games this week as far as the Sky leaders go, but Idaho could retain its fourth place berth and possibly move into third with a win over WSC. This forecaster rates an Idaho win over Weber State far above an MSU victory at the hands of last-place Montana. Should Weber State win...well, I'd rather not think about it.

Boise State will face Utah State in Utah, a team that has traditionally considered the rivalry anything but exciting, winning in a vast majority of the meetings between the schools. I choose Division I Utah State to win. NAU rests this weekend.

Weber State won Saturday as the Wildcats downed Minnesota's Bemidji State (try saying that four times fast!), 31-28. With a little more than a half-minute to go, Mike Korvas booted a 21-yard field

513 S. Main,

X-country readies for district race

By LINDA TRIEMSTRA

Men's cross country is preparing for District Championship in Salt Lake City Nov. 12. Depending on how the team fares in Salt Lake, it may also compete in the National Collegiate Athletics Association (NCAA) National Finals in Spokane Nov. 21.

According to Coach Mike Keller, the district meet will be scored three ways--as a Big Sky Conference meet, as a Western Athletic Conference meet and as an NCAA District 7 meet. Keller said that District 7 is rated the top district in the United States.

Keller added that the WAC includes schools such as Arizona, Arizona State and Utah. To qualify for the national meet, a team must be one of the top four teams placing in the district meet.

The U of I team has competed in meets at the Fort Casey Invitational, Whidbey Island, Wash., finishing third out of 34 teams, and in the British Columbia Championship in Victoria, which they won.

The Fort Casey meet was a 10,000 meter course, or six miles, and the Victoria meet was 12,000 meters, or seven and two-tenths miles.

"In high school, the kids usually run two and a half or three miles. In college they run six or seven miles. It's a big difference for a freshman," said Keller. "So it's kind of surprising that our two top runners right now are both freshmen."

Keller said that the top runner for Idaho is Steve Ortiz from Barstow, California. In high school, Ortiz was fifth in the state in the two mile, and was rated as one of the top three in the six mile.

Gary Gonser, Castle Rock, Wash., is currently number two man for Idaho. "He's doing a good job," said Keller.

The team includes five men who were on last year's team. They are Doug Beckman, a senior from Spokane, who was seventh in the Big Sky last year; Graydon Pihlaja, a sophomore from St. Helens, Oreg., ninth in the Big Sky last year; Terry Griffin, a junior from Beaverton, Ore.; Rick Ward, a senior from Ketchum, and Pat Wilson, Coeur d'Alene.

Others on the team are Dennis Weber and Bill La Forge, both junior college transfers. Keller said the team runs a minimum of 12 or 14 miles and a maximum of 16 miles, twice a day, every day.

Keller added that "everyone gets a chance to run" (in competition). "You may be wondering why we compete in so few meets. My philosophy of coaching is that we'd rather train and prepare for one big meet than run every weekend.

We'll find out how successful it is at district.

A Montana State opponent heads the ball, sandwiched between two Idaho defenders. The game was held earlier this season.

Netters take on Spokane Falls

The University of Idaho woman's volleyball team faces light competition this week with two away-games set for today.

The women volleyballers travel to Spokane to take on the Spokane Falls Community College women in both varsity and junior varsity contests.

From Spokane, the women move to Coeur d'Alene for a 7 p.m. dual-squad match with North Idaho College.

"This week will give us time to prepare for tournament play which begins the first weekend in November," coach Amanda Burk said. "We have been on the road for several weeks so the players really need this time to regroup and academically this is a good time, too, as we are into nine week exams."

"We have put in some new defensive plays that have helped us," Burk continued. "We moved Debbie Stinnett up from the junior varsity to give us some height at the net."

"We are very fortunate this year to have such a strong jayvee team on which to draw," Burk said. "They have a record of 7-1 and have faced some strong teams."

Last Saturday, Idaho got back in the winning column bringing their season record to 12-13 by splitting four games at the Northwest Nazarene Invitational at Nampa.

Idaho defeated Boise State 15-10, 13-15, and 15-11; lost to host NNC 13-15, 15-9 and 15-13; defeated College of Idaho 15-9 and 15-4; and fell to Central Washington 15-3 and 15-13.

"Our substitutes gave us a lot of help," Burk said. "Terry Fitch helped us in the front court and Debbie (Stinnett) also added to our front court play." "I feel we were 100 percent better this week."

Women grab sixth

The University of Idaho women's cross country team finished sixth out of nine schools in competition at the Eastern Washington Invitational last Saturday.

Individual finishers for Idaho were Cindy Partridge, 14th with a time of 16:42; Bonnie Bukowski, 27th with 17:36; Molly Ahlgren, 29th with 17:49; Jeanna Nuxoll, 40th with 18:27; and Sue Hatch, 48th with 20:17. Sixty-four women competed in the race.

Montana State topped the team standings with 27 points, followed by Whitworth with 41; Washington State with 81; Montana with 99; North Idaho College with 149 and Idaho with 158. Spokane Falls Community College, Gonzaga and Eastern Washington teams competed but did not have enough runners to earn official scores.

Upsets and surprises change Big Sky standings

Following last weekend's spectacular upset of Montana State, the University of Idaho football team will travel to Ogden, Utah, to play Weber State College. Game time is scheduled for 1:30 Mountain Time or 12:30 Pacific Standard Time.

Vandal fans will be wishing and wondering if Idaho can keep its newly initiated winning streak alive in the Wildcat homecoming game.

Idaho is currently 2-4 on the season and rates 2-2 in Big Sky conference action.

Weber State is coming off a 31-28 victory of Bemidji State last weekend boosting their season record to a 3-4 mark. The wildcats are 1-3 in conference play.

"This is a big ball game for us," said Ed Troxel, Idaho's head football coach. "If our kids continue to play like they have been and keep the momentum going they'll win." Troxel said.

Morris Bledsoe is quarterback for WSC. He has passed for seven touchdowns this season while compiling 1,330 yards on 86 completions out of 170 attempts.

His favorite receiver has been Tim Coleman who has 477 yards on 21 catches for two touchdowns.

The workhorse in the Wildcats backfield has been Mark Billmire. Billmire has 471 yards on 82 carries and has scored three touchdowns. Eric Hill ranks second in rushing with 344 yards on 96 carries.

For Idaho, Robert Taylor and Tim Lappano rank one-two in rushing for the Vandals this yards for eighth place in the Idaho rushing list.

Lappano who gained 89 yards last week, ranks 10th on the list with 1,171 yards.

Quarterback Craig Juntunen, a doubtful starter because of ankle problems, is the team's leading passer with 520 yards on 56 completions. Kirk Allen is the man Juntunen favors percent.

Against Montana State, Idaho defense proved itself to be a major key to the Vandal's victory. The defensive squad deflected a total of 15 against MSU, one more than they deflected in the previous five games.

Leading the play last Saturday was Tim Sanford who changed from a defensive end position to defensive tackle for last week's game.

Sanford's performance, his best of the season, included nine unassisted tackles, nine assisted tackles, one quarterback sack and one fumble recovery. It was good enough to earn him the Big Sky Defensive Player of the Week award.

Linebacker Robert Cafferty leads the defensive unit in total tackles with 93. He is also No.2 behind defensive back Bill Clark in pass deflections with five to Clark's seven.

Defensive back Rick Linehan is ranked second in total tackles with 64 (26 unassisted and 38 assisted.) He leads the team in interceptions with five.

Idaho orienteers place high in WSU meet

University of Idaho orienteers placed first in the advanced course, first, third and fifth in the intermediate course, and second in team events in last weekend's orienteering meet, sponsored by Washington State University.

Captain Larry Broughton, U of I, placed first in advanced course, finishing with a time of 70.47. Bob Hanson and Dave Fahy, both of the WSU ROTC, finished second and third, with times of 90.02 and 99.42, respectively.

Joe Cass, U of I, finished the intermediate course in 26.17, followed by Jim Smith, WSU ROTC, with 27.06; Rick Hufila, U of I, with 27.59; Dave Vosler, WSU ROTC, with 28.30 and Al Bruns, U of I, with 28.35.

Handball meets

An intramurals managers' meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in Room 400, Memorial Gym. The meeting will set the official starting date for the handball tournament, which is now set for Nov. 7. This is a doubles tournament, and deadline for entries is Tuesday noon.

Entry and starting dates for wrestling and swimming will also be set at the meeting.

The U of I team, consisting of Lt. Col. John N. Vanderschaaf, Broughton, Chad DeVore, Warren Rehn and Mark Townsend finished second with a cumulative time of 205 minutes. The team missed two controls. Team scores are a total of the three best times.

The WSU ROTC team of Douglas R. Bonebrake, Ronald J. Marsh, Hermit R. Nelson, Dan Dodge and Dave Fahy took first place with a time of 303. However, the WSU team missed only one control.

The WSU team of Roy Herman, Cane Overdane and Mike Fahshalz took third with a time of 445, and missed three controls.

Awards for last weekend's meet will be presented at a social meeting of the Orienteering Club. The meeting is scheduled for Nov. 4 at 7 p.m. Posters will announce the meeting place.

Law student top turkey trotter

Top ten finishers in last Saturday's turkey trot cross country run were Allan Galbraith, Law School; Todd Flank, Theta Chi; Don Schaectal, Delta Chi; Robert Mott, Town Men's Association 22, an off-campus group; Jim Viner, Whitman Hall; Jeff Brown, Delta Tau Delta; Jerry Mottern, Delta Tau Delta; Mark Hanley, Whitman Hall; Bob Surles, TMA 22 and Bill

Hughes, TMA 22. TMA 22 also took top honors in the team standings, with 78 team points and 100 intramural points, followed by Delta Chi with 83 team points and 97.5 intramural points. Delta Tau Delta was third with 140 team points and 95 intramural points. Each team had at least five runners. Scores for the top five runners decided team points.

Stockbridge photos survive, copying underway in Pullman

The first step in rescuing the famous Barnard-Stockbridge Photographic Collection, which portrays three-quarters of a century of life in North Idaho's Coeur d'Alene Mining District, is now underway.

Approximately 600 of the historic negatives have been copied onto high quality 35 mm film by Electrum Laboratories of Pullman, Wash. Ed Breidenbach, head of the photographic company, delivered the first set of new negatives to the U of I Library yesterday and picked up the next full box to be processed.

Funding for the rescue operation came from the U of I Foundation, Inc., the development arm of the University. Henry Day, Wallace, chairman emeritus of Day Mines and a member of the foundation's board of directors, was instrumental in raising more than $10,000 to save the oldest negatives which were disintegrating.

The collection, given to the archives of the library in 1965 by the heirs of the late Nellie Stockbridge, contains some 200,000 negatives from her photo studio. The negatives, exposed between 1894 and 1964, are of several types, the oldest being nitrocellulose sheets or glass plates.

The cellulose negatives are being done first, according to Warren Owens, director of libraries, because they are in the most danger of decaying.

"We don't know just how far that money will go," Owens said. "We'll get as many copies of the negatives as that money will buy. When the money runs out, we'll have to raise some more."

Owens said he expected to see all the cellulose negatives done, but that the glass plate negatives would likely have to wait until funds are available.

Handling of the negatives, which are stored in boxes in the air conditioning facility on top of the library, accelerates the process of decomposition.

As a precaution, Breidenbach is taking only one box at a time to his Pullman laboratories. Each box contains approximately 500 negatives.

Other precautions are being taken to ensure the safety of the nitrocellulose negatives which could explode under certain conditions. There will be no smoking allowed anywhere near the photo lab, Breidenbach said, adding that the ventilation in the laboratory will remain constant to eliminate any hazards. Care will also be taken to ensure minimal exposure to the air for the 80-year-old negatives.

Handling the old negatives is proving to be a challenge.

"I expected them to be dusty, but we're having to take more time cleaning each negative than I expected," Breidenbach said.

He and a copy expert he has hired are also having to cope with the fragile nature of the negatives and the envelopes they are in. Fortunately, the newer ones are more supple and easier to handle.

The film being used to copy the negatives is a special order radiography film designed for copying X-rays. It is an extremely fine grain, slow speed film.

A weekly delivery of copy work to the U of I Library is expected.

Sources of income for rescue of the collection, which has been rated one of the top 15 historical photo collections in the nation, came from Henry Day; William H. Love, president of Hecla Mining Co., Wallace; James H. Halley, president of the Bunker Hill Co., Kellogg; and the Idaho Bicentennial Commission.

Persons wishing to buy prints or to donate to the project may contact the U of I Foundation, Inc., Moscow, Idaho 83843, or telephone 208-885-6163.

Campus Capers

Three locked cars have been burglarized while parked around the dormitory area between Sunday and Tuesday, according to police reports. A Pioneer in-dash cassette radio valued at $180, and a brown leather case with new tapes valued at $133 were stolen from a 1969 Camaro belonging to Neal Davis, Whitman Hall. R. L. Anderson, Shoup Hall, had a mounted Pioneer FM 8 track tape player valued at $180 stolen from his vehicle. Scott Shephard of Whitman Hall reported his $90 Pioneer 8 track tape deck had been stolen from his car. In the Davis case, the police believe an expert committed the robbery.

An ambulance attendant gave first aid to Virginia A. Whitbelk, Moscow, Wednesday, after her 1970 VW struck a 1974 Toyota driven by Donald Nesbitt of Eagle, according to a police report. Nesbitt was turning onto 6th St. from the small access road leading from the horse barns. Whitbelk was going east on 6th St., attempted to avoid Nesbitt's car, and collided with it. According to the report, damages to Whitbelk's VW amount to $500 and $300 to Nesbitt's Toyota.

Susan Johnston, Alpha Chi Omega Sorority House, reported a blue face Seiko watch on a silver band stolen from her locker in the Women's Health Education Bldg. on Tuesday. The watch has been valued at $175, according to the campus police report.

House approves prisoner swap bill

(ZNS) The House of Representatives on Tuesday approved the legislation necessary to enable the United States and Mexico to swap prisoners.

According to State Department officials, approval of the bill means that 265 of the nearly 600 Americans currently being detained in Mexico should be back in the U.S. before Christmas.

A State Department spokesperson says that following the expected signing of the bill by President Carter, four planes will be dispatched to Mexico to bring home the jailed American citizens who are eligible for transfer under the treaty's exchange program.

The first shipment of American prisoners, says the department, is scheduled to arrive back in the United States on December 15th. Most of the inmates are young travelers who were reportedly busted on a variety of drug charges south of the border.

A Los Angeles-based group called "1732 Incorporated" has been crusading for three years to bring about the exchange. While hailing this week's Congressional vote and the eventual prisoner swap as a "great victory," the organization now says it has further plans.

Scientology minister is behind prison bars again

(ZNS) A minister with the Church of Scientology, who has refused to answer questions put to him by a Federal Grand Jury, is back in jail again in Washington, D.C.

Last week, the Reverend Arthur Maren was jailed for the second time after he again refused to answer questions about another former member of his church.

Maren had served 42 days in jail in August and September for refusing to answer similar questions. However, he was temporarily set free in early September while the government checked F.B.I. and other police agency records to determine if illegal wiretaps might have been used against him. The government told the court no illegal surveillance had occurred.

The Church of Scientology, in the meantime, has filed a $7.8 million law suit against the F.B.I., and a $750 million suit against the government for alleged harassment of church members.

Energy lack threatens environment

"No poor country can afford to enhance the environment. In order to survive, they must destroy the land and its elements," an environmental researcher said in an interview here Tuesday.

Dr. Donald A. Dahlstrom, vice president for research and development with Envirotech Corporation of Salt Lake City, Utah, said he feels that there is a real threat to modern man's lifestyle and environment created by an insufficient supply of energy.

"The poorer countries can't think of the environment because they have to tear down the forests just to have enough energy to heat their homes and have to overgraze the land for food," Dahlstrom said. "They don't think about replacing nutrients in the soil because they don't have the fertilizer we have nor the technology we have to use the land properly."

Dahlstrom was at the University to deliver the annual Almquist Lecture, sponsored by the Idaho Student Chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and the American Chemical Society student affiliate. His topic was "Endangered Species—Homo Sapiens, Energy and Minerals."

The real endangered species is man's lifestyle and the energy he needs to continue that way of living, according to Dahlstrom.

"We're used to living with cheap energy but we'll have to get used to paying more for it," he said, adding that in Europe, gasoline costs three times as much as in the United States.

While the United States is looking for new sources of energy, we are wasteful of the energy we have now, Dahlstrom stressed.

"Automobiles are the easiest example of energy consumption, as is air conditioning," he said, pointing out that Americans can get along with a lot less air conditioning but we have become accustomed to having our homes 69 degrees in the summer and 76 degrees in the winter.

"Industry is probably more conservative of energy than the individual is," Dahlstrom said. The reason is the cost factor. Industry has had to cut back on its use of energy because it is the first to be cut off when there is a shortage," Dahlstrom said. "But it must watch the expense of its energy consumption, too."

A petroleum and chemical engineer, Dahlstrom said that man's lifestyle and use of energy will change when man is forced by economics to do so.

"When the cost becomes too prohibitive to use cars, we'll use mass transportation." Sweeping a hand out towards the university campus, Dahlstrom said, "How many students will drive cars to campus when the cost of gasoline goes to $1 or $1.50 a gallon?"

"If we don't have enough energy and if the alternative sources to be used are more expensive, then we'll change our lifestyles," he noted.

Now you can subscribe to obscene phone calls

(ZNS) You've heard of obscene phone calls, but how about an "Obscene Phone Call Club"?

Chicago Sun-Times newspaper columnist Bob Greene says he has uncovered such a club, apparently operating right out of the heart of Chicago.

Greene reports that the the obscene phone call game plan goes like this: you dial a certain toll free number; sign up for the club, and leave your own number. Your number is then given out to other people who call the toll free number. Before long, according to the club, you would start to receive your very own obscene phone calls.

Greene said he talked to a spokesperson for the club and was told that women may leave their numbers for free; but men, who the club presumes will want to make the obscene calls, must pay $19 a year for the privilege of being given the women's numbers.

Greene says that apparently there are a lot of people interested in obscene phone calls. The columnist reports that he tried to telephone the club on and off for the better part of a day before he got anything but a busy signal.

Star Wars: Bible of the future?

(ZNS) A Rhode Island Clergyman has his own explanation as to why the movie Star Wars has been a box office success: The Reverend Ernest Ryden says it's simply because Star Wars has "subtly borrowed" its entire plot from the New Testament of the Bible.

Writing in his Lutheran Church newsletter, Ryden claims that "the force" that gives the inter-galactic knights their power in Star Wars is divine guidance. "He argues that the aging "Obe-Wan-Kenobie," played by Alec Guinness, represents a Saviour whose disciples become even more powerful after he is killed in battle against the evil knight, Darth Vader.

According to Ryden, the new disciple then flies his spaceship against the forces of evil and is successful only because he turns off his computer, and trusts the spiritual guidance of "the force."

The reverend does give the movie Star Wars some creative credit, however; he concedes that while the Christ figure in the Bible succeeded in saving only the earth, the hero of Star Wars saved an entire galaxy.

Council redefines PE rule

Two P.E. requirement changes for the general catalogue were made concerning parents and transfer students at a recent faculty council meeting.

By a close 9-8 vote after long debate, the council approved two parts of a motion submitted by Elizabeth Stevenson, chairman. The motion will amend general academic regulation J-3-b. The first part excluded parents from the P.E. requirement. The present requirement excluded only mothers from having to take P.E., which may be discriminatory according to Title IX.

Sandi Gallagher, affirmative action officer, informed the council that she had talked with the Health, Education and Welfare representative for Idaho. She was informed that exempting mothers alone from P.E. is discriminatory, but she said there are "no adverse impacts if the word parents is used."

Larry Peterson, a student council member, objected to excluding mothers and parents from the P.E. requirement. He said they might as well be excluded from humanities or geography.

Tamara Sliwaczek, also a student council member, stressed the necessity of P.E. in a well rounded education. All three student members present voted against the proposal.

The motion also states that students who transfer from other accredited institutions with the equivalent of one semester credit in P.E. activity courses, have completed one half of their requirement. The entire requirement will have been completed if a student transfers with two semester credits in P.E.

The original proposal presented to the council included a statement to deny veterans exclusion from the requirement. According to Gallagher, excluding veterans may have adverse effects on women, due to the unequal numbers of male and female veterans at the university. The council voted to continue the present policy, which allows veterans not to take P.E.

They did. The researchers then called for the banning of money on health grounds.

Moore and Palmer said their study came about as a response to what they called "a string of inane pronouncements on cancer dangers" by federal agencies.

The public interest-oriented federation of American scientists didn't think the research was so funny, however. In response to the study, the group is calling on American scientists to "Limit animal suffering" in experiments to the minimum possible.
