Director calls ISA 'hotbox' of problems

by Jim Borden

The Idaho Student Association, as it exists today, is a "hotbox" of problems, according to its executive director, Will Roy.

The ASUI Senate recently voted itself out of the ISA, and the student government at North Idaho College has also decided not to continue membership next year. Idaho State University has never been a member of the student body/lobby organization.

Roy said that if only a third of the students of the colleges and universities in Idaho participate in the ISA, "then we're in trouble. Every time I talk to legislators or committees, they ask, 'who do you represent?'" he said.

"We can't survive simply as a lobby force," Roy told the Argonaut Friday in Boise. He added that the ISA will have an organizational meeting in April to try and solve some of its problems. All schools, members or not, will be invited to the meeting, he said.

Roy said the ISA should not be a strong central body. "Each campus must take a leadership role," he said.

He said also that the ISA has no "grassroots." "We need to structure the organization back to the campuses. That's when it realizes its functions," he said.

He said, however, that in the first place, the student bodies are not sure what they want from the ISA, and that, therefore, the organization does not know what to give.

He suggested that not only presidents of the student bodies but also a coordinator or administrative assistant from each member school belong to the ISA executive board. "That administrative assistant would be responsible for getting information here about the individual campuses," he said.

But, he said, the ISA has a "negative turmoil" going and that financial problems have only compounded matters.

Roy, who has been executive director for three months, said he was sorry to see the ASUI withdraw from the ISA before he had a chance to get it going.

"The U of I hurt its own case and that of all the students" in Idaho by withdrawing from the ISA, according to Roy.

Roy felt some of the ASUI's reasons for discontinuing membership were unfounded.

He said that a weekly newsletter had been requested and that he had sent out three in the first four weeks of the legislative session. He admitted he had had format and time problems. But, he said, ASUI President Bob Harding did not like the newsletter because it was not detailed enough.

He argued, however, that "communications is not a one-way street. I was only a phone call away. No one from the ASUI ever bothered to call me," to find out what was going on.

He added that Harding "never officially notified us of the ASUI decision" to withdraw from the ISA.

The ASUI also charged in a Feb. 15 resolution that "Boise State University's influence in ISA is sometimes a detriment to the U of I."

Roy, however, said that "I challenge Bob, or the Argonaut to find that I ever favored BSU" in his dealings with the ISA and the legislature.

He said that the Associated Students BSU are "nice in giving us office space, secretarial staff, and equipment free," but that that does not influence Roy or the ISA.

"If location means a chance for influence, well, that could be. I don't see it," he said.

Roy feels, however, that even after the ASUI/ISA disagreement, he could work with Harding, should the ASUI reconsider and rejoin the ISA. "I don't know if the opportunity is there. I would have to ask for a commitment to work on Bob's part," he said.

The director did, however, point to two projects in which the U of I can now participate, even as a non-member.

"We are planning a workshop for new student leaders in April," he said, "and we're also going to have a press workshop." Roy feels that good ISA/student press relations are essential to the work of the organization.

As for the future of the ISA, Roy said that there will be some form of the organization in the future. "What it will be, I don't know," he said.

ERA on shaky ground from ratification to repeal

by Kristen Moulton

The life of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in Idaho was on shaky legal ground from the time it was passed on March 22, 1972 until it was rescinded on Feb. 8, 1977.

Idaho's legislature was one of the first to approve the proposed 27th amendment after Congress passed it on March 22, 1972.

ERA was ratified by the Idaho legislature after a suspension of the rules. It was introduced and passed all in one day—the last day of the session. Most bills and resolutions take a minimum of 14 days before final action.

There were attempts in three separate sessions between 1972 and 1977 to rescind the earlier ratification. Each time the Idaho House voted to repeal and each time the Senate refused to go along.

The Idaho Constitution requires that the Senate pass constitutional amendments with a two-thirds majority, which it did with ERA. But, last year, a resolution repealing the ratification passed in the Senate by a simple majority vote of 18-17. ERA proponents question the legality of such an action.

Though considered a victory by anti-ERA forces, the rescission may not be legal. Congress has never accepted action by a state legislature withdrawing previous ratification of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

If three more states do not ratify the amendment before the March 22, 1979 deadline, Idaho's questionable methods and rescission won't matter anyway. The repeal action by three states, including Idaho, will only become an issue if 38 states pass the amendment. Thirty-five have ratified ERA so far.

There was little debate about ERA when it was first passed and when it was rescinded. Senators from southeastern Idaho argued only that the ratification of ERA should be repealed because women would be drafted. One read a poem about woman as being made from the rib of man and therefore beside, not against him.

Many senators voted against the ERA because they felt section 2 of the amendment would preempt states' rights. Jenifer Klindt, chairman of the local National Organization for Women (NOW) group says that the argument was "a cop out." At least six other amendments to the U.S. Constitution have the same clause which allows for enforcement by appropriate legislation by Congress.

Klindt says there was a massive campaign by the Mormon Church, the Stop-ERA movement and some members of the John Birch Society to convince the people to accept illogical ideas about the ERA.

Susan Hill, head of Stop-ERA in Idaho, says that her group "continued to present documentation to the public dealing with the detrimental ramifications of the ERA." Based upon the facts, she says, the ERA was rescinded as demanded by the people of Idaho.

The ERA, if adopted, would invalidate as many as 1,000 state laws. It would mean a recodification of many laws in Idaho, if only in the language.

"Idaho has pretty good civil rights laws," according to Klindt. There are not so many discriminatory laws here as elsewhere in the U.S., she says.

But, there are Idaho state laws that could be found discriminatory. In fact, the case that inspired the ERA passed by Congress in 1972 was an Idaho case.

Mackin discusses alcohol, police, improvements

by Kristen Moulton

City ordinances prohibiting alcohol on school property will have to be clarified if businesses on university property are to legally sell alcohol, according to Moscow Mayor Don Mackin.

Mackin was interviewed on KUOI-FM's Media Analysis by representatives of campus media Friday night.

It is presently unclear, he said, whether the term "school" applies to the university and its properties. Rosauers and the University Inn under construction are both located on university property. Rosauers sells alcohol and the University Inn will if it is granted a state liquor license.

Another alternative would be to recommend in the city's Comprehensive Plan that a new university zone be created, he said. The new zone would have different rules than the present commercial and residential zones.

Though the legislature makes the ultimate decisions in laws regulating the number of liquor licenses in a city, Mackin said, "I would hope that someday we would see a phase-out program for licenses that would be palatable for license holders."

Mackin said the mayor's office is not involved with the day to day narcotics enforcements of the Moscow Police Department. The planning, direction and execution of drug busts are not part of the mayor's responsibilities. He said that he is willing to meet with student or administrative representatives if there are serious problems with police enforcement on campus.

The city's shopping list of capital improvement items is long and there is a critical need for the city council to determine which ones will be developed and which to put before the voters, he said.

The city needs to identify and quantify the items and needs to investigate the sources of funding, Mackin said. The voters in the next five years will be faced with capital outlay items such as a community center, a high school, a swimming pool, a library, waterwells, water reservoirs, street improvements and a multi-level parking structure.

Mackin favors the construction of a new indoor swimming facility that would be built in conjunction with a community center of the Moscow School District. The option of an indoor pool is the most expensive of five options concerning a community swimming pool, one of which may go before the voters.

Main Street, a state highway, "has almost reached the point that it is beyond maintenance by reasonable city equipment and manpower," he said. "The street has a cracked concrete base that lasts only so many years." The State Highway Department hopes, he said, to re-do Main Street in 1980.

The couplet program now under study by the city, would make Jefferson and Washington streets the state highway through town, he said. The state would then have to return Main Street to the city in better shape than the present, he said.

Mackin said he is not a "history buff," but would support the purchase of the old post office building only if it were to be used for a city hall.

ERA recission may be illegal

For the first time in nearly a century of litigation, the Supreme Court invalidated a state law on grounds of sexual discrimination. It found that an Idaho statute stating "males must be preferred to females" in choosing executors of estates was unconstitutional by the 14th amendment.

Anti-ERA forces says that most all other cases of sexual discrimination could be covered by the 14th amendment and that there is therefore no need for ERA. Proponents of ERA say that the process of taking each statute to the Supreme Court on 14th amendment grounds would not achieve the equality provided by the ERA.

In Idaho, it is the husband's primary duty to support his family. If ERA was adopted, both partners would support the family, whether in or out of the home. Rather than force the woman out of the home, proponents say, the amendment would allow a woman to be recognized as a contributing homemaker.

By Idaho law, only the wife is eligible for support in the case of divorce. With ERA, whoever supported monetarily before divorce, would continue to do so.

ERA would invalidate an Idaho law barring a woman from voting if she has a domicile separate from her husband.

In Idaho, a woman must have her husband's signature before obtaining a loan. He doesn't need hers. ERA would invalidate the discrimination based purely on sex.

A woman loses all credit ratings to her husband in a divorce and the husband is responsible for all her debts in a divorce case. Such laws would be unconstitutional if ERA was adopted.

Various child custody and employment laws in Idaho would require recodification.

Pro-ERA forces charge that the attempts to rescind an earlier ratification are illegal. Anti-ERA forces claim that the current attempts by proponents to extend the seven-year deadline for passage are likewise unlawful.

Also on the program is a short talk by Norman Best and a documentary, "Union Maids," the story of three women involved in the early labor struggle.

Union members and faculty are requested to bring I.D.

Press conference focused on civil service, economy

by Marty Trillhaase

Washington, D.C. — One of the cardinal rules of American journalism is whatever the President does is news.

President Jimmy Carter presented no earth-shattering comments Friday when he addressed 200 college media representatives.

But that didn't stop many of the students from reacting as if Carter had announced something big. An ocean of right arms reached into the air with the intention of grabbing a fraction of Carter's allotted 25 minute question and answer session. Few succeeded.

Carter acknowledged the enthusiastic response almost immediately. "It's not often we have a chance to have a photographer's session," he said to the hundreds of clicking high-speed shutters.

The President's proposed new civil service guidelines focused quickly on the firing of Pennsylvania District Attorney David Marston.

Marston was a Republican appointed by the previous administration. Although his termination had been assumed with the transfer of power, Marston's case became controversial when he asked for an extension. He charged he was involved with an investigation of a Democratic Congressman in his state.

"There's nothing about the Marston affair that causes me regret," Carter said. But he added the publicity accorded the incident had blown the affair out of proportion.

Carter added he would welcome an investigation of the matter. "I would not hesitate to have the facts put on the table," he said.

Carter expressed optimism about the value of the dollar on the foreign markets this year. Currently the dollar is worth two German marks. Traditionally, the dollar has been worth twice that.

The President said several factors will contribute to a rise in the dollar's value. First, the U.S. will not increase its rate of oil imports, he said. The imports have contributed to a record trade deficit in 1977.

Another factor contributing to the trade imbalance was the growth rate of the U.S. economy, Carter said. He added the growth rate enabled Americans to buy foreign goods. The president said the growth rate will decrease somewhat this year.

Various trends will also aid the dollar, Carter said. "There will be an inevitable correction in the value of the dollar," he added.

Carter termed his pardon of Viet Nam War era draft evaders as partially successful.

He added Congressional restraints have hindered the program.

The President noted he has looked into possible pardons for military deserters. But he added the subject is not a black and white one. There are different levels of desertion, he said.

The President has proposed a $1.46 billion increase in funds for college student assistance for next year. The program consists of grants, work study and loans.

The Congress is also considering an alternative tax credit plan. Carter said he will not accept both.

But he was critical of the tax credit proposal as well. The credit would cost more and benefit all families, including upper class, Carter said.

His plan would apply to those families with an annual income of not more than $25,000.

Carter was asked how he could support the Equal Rights Amendment and not abortion. "I don't see the two inter-related in any way at all," the President said. He added his position on abortion has not changed since the campaign.

"I think the government should find reasonable alternatives to abortion," Carter said.

He said contraceptives should be made more available and adoption procedures should be eased.

The President acknowledged his following in the opinion polls has slipped in the past year. But added that his performance has remained higher than that of his administration. Carter said the performance of an administration is rated according to factors out of its control.

"The measure of how well an administration does depend on other people," Carter said. "In almost every situation, a president's power is severely limited," he said.

Friends, Unlimited seeks more male volunteers

by Andrew Brundage

Friends, Unlimited, like the Marine Corps, is looking for a few good men.

The program matches volunteers age 18 or older with Latah County young people 5 to 15 years of age. Friends, Unlimited provides "the young person with companionship, role modeling, exposure to community activities and guidance on a continuing basis," according to the organization's brochure.

Although most "little brothers and sisters" are from single parent homes, some are referred to the program through Health and Welfare, Mental Health and Community Services.

Friends, Unlimited could use more male volunteers, said Breck Seiniger, program director.

"We have about 45 children in the program annually," said Seiniger.

U of I students make up 95 percent of Friends, Unlimited volunteers. In addition, U of I fraternities and sororities are sponsoring events, such as parties, every six weeks for the children and their big brothers and sisters.

Big brothers and sisters spend about three hours a week in different activities with their young friends. The activities have included a tour of the Moscow fire station; cooking, sewing and piano lessons; sports; and, for one lucky youth, a trip to Disneyland and Mexico. Seiniger said youth applications increased after the youngster returned and bragged to friends about his "trip around the world."

ISA organizational meeting

While in Boise for the Regents' meeting last week, I stopped to see Will Roy, Idaho Student Association executive director.

He talked candidly about the problems the ISA is having and about the ASUI withdrawal from the organization. As with any story, there are two sides to this one. If you've been reading the Argonaut this spring, you are well aware of the ASUI's side. Today's story on the ISA, hopefully, presents the other side.

In my interview with him, Roy told me that the ISA will have an organizational (reorganizational, if you will) meeting next month. He said all schools, U of I included, will be invited to attend. Roy, I think, is sincerely concerned with the welfare of the students of this state.

But it makes it difficult for him to lobby student interests when he only represents half (or less) the state's student population.

ASUI President Bob Harding and the Senate decided to withdraw from the ISA because of problems the organization is having. Here is a chance to alleviate those problems.

If the ASUI sent a representative to the April meeting, the ISA's problems could be discussed. If nothing was resolved, the ASUI would be none the worse off. Should, however, the problems be resolved to the ASUI's satisfaction, we would all be much better off. Senator Rick Howard told me yesterday he supports the IDEA of the ISA. Prove it.

I am well aware of the bad blood that exists between the ASUI and the ISA. Reconciliation is sometimes difficult. But if the ASUI indeed supports the idea of an organized, collective student organization/lobby, it will either try to patch things up with the ISA, or initiate an alternative student lobby. Anything less would be pure hypocrisy.

Letters

Questions to Betsy

Editor,

Betsy Brown, in her article entitled "error on both sides" which appeared in the Feb. 24, 1978 Argonaut and which dealt with the subject of abortion, stated: "...but in many cases the rights of an actual autonomous person (the pregnant woman) outweigh those of a potential person (the fetus)." This statement of hers is just simply made within the article—there are no logical premises stated which lead to this conclusion nor does she attempt to list the "many cases" as distinguishable, I presume, from the "few cases." Also, the terms "actual autonomous person" is left undefined. My Merriam Webster defines "autonomous" as "having the right or power of self government, independent." The category of the "actual autonomous person," then, excludes a lot of persons—for sure it excludes the boy with a thirty-five I.Q. that I had dinner with last night, it excludes many residents in Paradise Villa, it excludes most children I know.

Also, it can be argued, at least from my experience in counseling pregnant girls contemplating abortion, that many of them would not fit into the "autonomous" definition of Merriam Webster. Rather than acting independently with the power of self government, they are scared and frightened—scared and frightened of what their parents, friends, and society in general will say or do to them for being unwed mothers.

And so, Betsy, I agree with you—the abortion issue is not cut and dried. But neither is the concept of the "autonomous" person versus the "potential" person. Who decides who is actually autonomous? Who decides what the rights of the potential person are in contrast to the non-autonomous person in contrast to the actual autonomous person? Is every pregnant woman an actual autonomous person as you imply?

These are just a few of the questions that came to mind as I read your article, Betsy. (Fr.) Rich Wemhoff Off campus?

Editor:

The ASUI is a student organization which caters to all U of I students regardless of where they live, the level of their school career, or their nationality.

My immediate concern here is the off-campus students who comprise more than half of the U of I student body. Presently, there are four ASUI senators, Daniel Prohaska, Greg Switzer, Mark Nuttman, and myself, representing the off-campus students.

In previous years (including last semester) there have been attempts made by senators representing off-campus students to involve them in issues that relate to students in general. Meetings and seminars were organized by said senators, but the response was overwhelmingly dismal. Apathy probably contributed to the lack of interest.

This semester the ASUI Senate is very conscientious about the problem and so are those individual senators mentioned above. The senate is aware of the problem of a centrally-located place where the off-campus students can meet at a convenient time. As a result, last Wed. night $100 was allocated strictly for the purpose of renting space downtown, organizing seminars, and developing other means of getting more participation for and from off-campus students.

Since our first meeting in the Vandal Lounge this semester was a failure, another meeting is arranged for March 10 at Johnnie's Cafe (226 W. 6th St.) at 3:30 p.m. Free beer has been offered for this starter by Bob Harding, ASUI president. The money is from his own pocket.

All off-campus students are invited. You should make an effort to be there. Your senators will be there. Together we may work out ways of communicating your views to the senate regarding such issues as the University Administration's proposal to increase fees by $14; grad tuition by $10; and in addition an ASUI $6 fee increase may be requested. Your views need to be heard on these and other issues. So be there if you care.

Identity crisis

Editor:

The time was 8:36 a.m. Friday, March 3 when a friend of mine brought a copy of the Argonaut to my room insisting that I read the letter to the editor entitled "Doublemint Farce."

Being the dedicated student that I am not, I tossed my Organic Chemistry aside and read through the letter. When my eyes descended upon the closing of the letter, my head separated itself from my shoulders for the simple reason that I, Jeff Rast of Tau Kappa Epsilon (noble sounding, huh?) did not write that letter.

It is my guess that whoever wrote that letter is suffering a severe identity crisis in which case he chose to identify with me (I'm flattered), or else the author played a very effective practical joke. I would appreciate it very much if the anonymous author would muster enough courage to come to me and unveil his motives for signing my name to the letter "Doublemint Farce."

Oh yes, as for Doublemint Day, I've never heard of it. Jeff Rast

Library opinion survey circulating

A U of I Library Opinion Survey was distributed to 440 random students on and off campus, last week in an effort to evaluate the services and facilities offered at the U of I library, Nancy Buck, ASUI Senator, said Monday.

The survey, which asks questions about library facilities, hours, services, policies, loan periods, and problem areas, was initiated by Buck and Mike Hollmann, a U of I graduate student who holds a master's degree in library science.

Robert Blank, department head of the political science department, Warren Owens, library director, and Richard Beck, associate director of the library, also helped formulate the questions.

The ASUI appropriated $150 to Buck and Hollmann to cover costs of duplicating the survey, envelopes and the computer analysis the collected data will go through.

Although the ASUI has no power to implement physical changes, they can suggest changes, Buck said.

"We are hoping this survey will instigate some real, physical changes, but it also has potential budget justification for the library budget next year," Hollmann said.

All surveys should be completed and handed in by March 16. They may be given to any ASUI senator, brought to the ASUI offices in the SUB or to the first floor of the library.

"It is important that everyone respond considering the relatively small number of students we surveyed," Hollmann said.

Search for law dean continues

by Annette Cary

Three of the five remaining candidates for College of Law School dean were found acceptable by most of the search committee after the first choice candidate rejected the position. But after interviewing them, U of I President Richard Gibb found all three unsatisfactory.

Subsequently, the search committee for a new dean voted to extend the search. It will accept applications for the position until April 1, and submit a new recommendation to President Gibb by May 1.

Initially, Josephine King, associate dean at the Pace University School of Law, New York, and John Murphy, law professor at the University of Cincinnati, were found acceptable by all committee members, according to Elmer Raunio, chairman of the search committee and dean of letters and science. The third candidate, Sheldon Vincenti, associate dean of the college of law here, was acceptable to most, but not all, of the committee.

Raunio described committee favor for King and Murphy as "strong" in the initial round.

But after reading the report of the search committee and interviewing the candidates, Gibb said, "I did not see a close second (to Pasco Bowman, law dean at Wake Forest College of Law, who was first offered the position.) I did not like to extend the offer to such a far second."

Gibb cited Bowman's "quiet sense of dignity, experience in raising money, and good knowledge of law" as being the qualities that made him the original favorite.

"Any of the next three candidates would make a fairly good dean, but we are looking for an outstanding dean, not just a fairly good dean," said Gibb. He added that it was the committee's own decision to extend the search. "The extra months will be worth the time if we can come up with a candidate as good as Bowman."

The committee will give special consideration in its extended search to candidates who are women or minority members, Raunio told Gibb. Gibb maintains being a woman was "neither an asset nor a handicap" to King. "But if two candidates were comparable, one a man and one a woman, I would take the woman."

Jobs no problem for business and distributive ed. majors

by Sandi Stacki

Since 1957, 100 percent of the business education and distributive education majors at U of I have been placed in teaching, business, and government careers. So why are there so few students enrolled in these fields of education?

John Holup, assistant professor of distributive education, said there are more job opportunities in Idaho and adjacent states than the departments can fill with students. Since September these departments have had about 20 letters and calls from companies and schools with immediate job openings. Many of the positions remain unfilled.

Holup and Robert Kessel, professor of business education, said they feel some people turn away from fields in education due to the widespread notion that teachers are in oversupply. Fields such as B.E. and D.E. maintain a strong demand.

A business education curriculum trains students to teach business subjects at the high school level, do high level secretarial work, usually as an administrative assistant. It also provides training for various business areas such as personnel, public relations, and sales.

Distributive education is a vocational training program for people preparing to enter retailing, wholesaling, and service industries.

It combines a business background with the field of vocational teaching.

Holup said he feels many students have had no exposure to distributive education because it's a relatively new area. "The program here is turning out more trained students than it ever has, but it's still not enough to keep up with the growth of distributive education in the schools."

Jobs are available in B. E. and D. E. Kessel and Holup stressed that students who are interested in B.E. and D. E. should contact them in the Education Building, 885-6556.

A sign in Holup's office states "D.E. can open the door, but you must walk through."

Faculty council to consider proposed academic projects

Faculty Council will consider proposed academic projects for the U of I Foundation in its meeting today at 3:10 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge.

First priority for the academic projects is a fund to finance campus visits by "distinguished academic, business, and government figures." Second priority is a fund to finance tours, both in and out of the state, for campus organizations such as debate teams, performing arts groups and Ballet Folk. Third priority is a fund to finance sending U of I professors through the state on lecture tours. Fourth priority is to provide matching funds for federal and private grants, and fifth priority is a discretionary fund to enhance "educational experiences" for faculty and students.

Faculty Council will also consider:

—a memorandum from Vice President Thomas E. Richardson about campus security;

—a proposed policy about faculty personnel files;

—a change in the structure of the Cultural Exchange Coordinating Committee.

USDA meets with women

Soil conservation specialists from the USDA will be on campus March 6-10. On March 8, representatives will introduce women and minorities to services and work performed by the department. Interviews can be arranged at the placement center for anyone interested in professional, co-op, and summer employment.

A multimedia film, "Savior of Sorrow," will highlight the presentation March 8 at 7 p.m. in the Placement Center. The film presents general and specific information about soil conservation services, federal and state positions and necessary qualifications for positions with the department, said Jerome Mayfield educational development specialist for minorities.

Soil conservation service representatives said they would like to get more women and minorities interested in soil conservation services, according to Mayfield. The presentation will give students more opportunity to learn about positions in the agriculture department, he said.

The area representatives will answer questions after the film presentation. For more information, or to sign up, contact the Women's Center or Minority Advisory services.

Idaho netters roll over WSU, 8-1

The U of I tennis team started its season with a bang, blasting WSU 8-1 Sunday in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

"I was pleased, pleased with everybody," Idaho Coach Rod Leonard said. "It's nice to beat WSU and to start off with a win."

Leonard said he was exceptionally pleased with the play of Jim DeRoeth, Steve Davis and Scott Moreland. All three defeated their opponents in straight sets. It was DeRoeth and Moreland's first collegiate match in over a year because both were redshirted last season, according to Leonard.

A crowd of approximately 150 watched as the Vandals breezed to a relatively easy victory. All three doubles matches were won in straight sets.

Spring break will see Vandal tennis heading south to Utah and Nevada for an 11-day road trip.

"We will play the best tennis of the year," Leonard said. The Vandals will wind up the trip against Weber State.

Weber is expected to be the main rival of the U of I team for the Big Sky conference title this year.

Leonard is anticipating tough competition from eleventh nationally ranked Arizona State University and sixteenth ranked Brigham Young University.

Saturday's Kimmel Indoor track meet at the Dome was in the finest tradition of an allcomers meet. Almost everybody came.

"We had at least 1,100 kids here," sighed a tired Mike Keller. Keller, who had put in an 8-hour day along with his unpaid officials and volunteers, began the meet at 9 a.m. and saw it through to 5 p.m.

"It's just too big for us to handle. We were expecting maybe 650 kids but 1,100, no way."

Approximately 50-60 men and women teams from Idaho, Montana and Washington broke a total of six high school and six collegiate Kibbie Dome record. Midway day Washington State charges down the tartan track a 9.2 apparently breaking a old record by a full second. The meet, however, rained the more than 4 feet so nullified.

Idaho women's basketball ended its season on a winning note, defeating Gonzaga Friday night 79-53 and Whitworth 81-64 Saturday night.

"It's been an excellent season," Idaho Coach Bonnie Hultstrand said. "It's the best season Idaho has had as far as I know." The Vandals ended their season with a 10-7 record.

Regionals will begin this weekend at Whitworth. Idaho was one of ten schools vying for four at-large berths. The Vandals found out Friday night they wouldn't be in the regional competition.

"We're definitely disappointed because we worked particularly hard on regionals," the Vandals said.

Idaho's record isn't exactly its season. It lost to Central Washington University and Washington University by a points in four games.

Freestylers set tempo at regionals

Fighting its way out of a seven-team field, U of I men's swim team tied for fourth in Nor-Pac regional competition in Eugene last weekend, producing four school records and a pleased coach.

"We had a really good year," said Chet Hall, Vandal coach. "When you take a bunch of walk-on freshmen like we had this year it's been real good."

Records were set by freshman Mark Nordquist in the 1650, 1000 and 500 freestyle. Steve Cobb, a sophomore, first broke the 500 mark, then watched Nordquist go for a 4:48.7 to beat his time. Not to be outdone, Cobb ended up going 1:47.4 to the old 200 freestyle mark for another Idaho record.

Lifetime bests came from Doug Hill, Tom Zimmer and Pat Brausen. Hill went 1:06.0 for a 14th place, while 10th went to Zimmer with a 1:05.9 Pat Brausen, a freshman, did a 1:02.3 in the 100 backstroke and Zimmer turned in another career best in the 300 breaststroke.

Idaho went 9-6 in dual meets this season, and Hall said he liked what he saw.

"They'll all return as far as I know," he said. "Walk-ons can walk off, but they'll all return I think - at least, I hope."

Nor-Pac first place went to Washington University with 1,095 points, way behind in second was the University of Oregon with 799, followed by Puget Sound with 457, Montana and Idaho with 445, then Portland State with 374.

Collegiate records crash

Midway through the race, Georges Kablan ripped back a 9.2 100 yard dash, setting an old world indoor record. He earned first with a time of 1:05.8.

Records were set by high jumper Grandview Track and Field in the old 800 meters and by Montana State in the 3-mile.

the 3-mile went 17:26.7 for first. The old mark stood at 18:52.4

Idaho's field events took precedence as the Vandals took firsts in the discus and shot. Charlie Schomoeger threw a 145-6 in the plate event with teammate Jeff Johnson in second. Johnson threw a 54-4 1/2 to win the shot.

In the last collegiate event of the day, the men's mile relay, Idaho took a commanding lead only to lose in the anchoring stretch. Eastern Washington's man edged out Idaho's Malcolm May by .2 of a second for a time of 3:18.2.

Idaho's don't make regionals

Idaho's disappointing season has left many fans and players feeling disappointed. I'm sure they feel this team has earned to go to regionals," said coach Chet Hall.

Idaho is not a representative of the Eastern Four leaders to the University and Eastern Washington with a total of seven players.

Idaho has a "good core of players" for next season as only three players will be graduating. Seniors on the Idaho team this year were Jean Hayman Chamberlain, Terry Janusiewicz and Kim Morine.

As the season wore down, Janusiewicz, Betty Fiandaca and Mary Flomer led Idaho past Gonzaga with 15 points each.

Against Whitworth, Idaho had six of eight players scoring in double figures. Fiandaca led with 15 while Morine and Cathy Feely added 14 each. Flomer hit 11 for the Vandals and Kathy Ball and Chamberlain put in 10 points each.

Coffeehouse offers great music

by Kathy Barnard

Guitars, jeans, free coffee, in white styrofoam cups, a little disorganization and a lot of excellent entertainment: these are the ingredients for an ASUI Coffeehouse.

Providing a forum for local musicians and good entertainment for students is the program's mission, Steve Jacobsen, ASUI Coffeehouse Committee chairman, said.

The coffeehouses, held every Saturday night in the Vandal Lounge, are free.

"We try to stress performing from a musician's point of view and use as much local talent as possible.

Lately, we have had incredible success. During the last few sessions between 100 and 200 people have come in to watch or participate," he said.

Space is now becoming a problem, Jacobsen said.

"People keep walking through the sessions on their way in and out of the SUB," he said. "Even with signs up, this is a problem and can be really disruptive."

The committee is considering moving the sessions to the Satellite SUB, but this also has drawbacks.

Sound equipment, chairs, and other facilities would have to be carried back and forth and "that's a hassle," according to Ed Statzel, coffeehouse committee member.

Coffeehouse has existed about four years, but this is the first year it has been a regular event, Jacobsen said.

"Bob Payton, our publicity manager, has really made an effort to make this thing consistent," Jacobsen said.

The ASUI funds the coffeehouse program, which is run by a six-person committee. This year the program received $1,300. The money pays for coffee, the featured performers and incidental expenses.

Committee members set up sound equipment and chairs, publicize the sessions, and line up featured performers and open mike participants.

Coffeehouse usually opens and closes with an open mike session. During open mike sessions anyone may perform. Although most participants are musicians, other acts are also encouraged.

"We want talent; it's not gonna be a freak show, but we do encourage variety. Like if someone wanted to do a juggling act or mime or readings or something like that, we would love it," Statzel said.

At first, musicians were hesitant to participate, Jacobsen said, but now "they are coming out of the woodwork."

"The atmosphere we try and create here is really conducive to performing. We want to try and stay as informal as possible. The crowds are great, but we're not going for the masses. We're going for an atmosphere."

In addition to open mike sessions, the coffeehouse also features two local performers every week. The performers entertain for an hour each and receive $5.

"It would be nice if we could make it more profitable for the musicians, but nobody comes to play for the money," Statzel said.

KUOI-FM tapes the coffeehouse sessions and plays the highlights on Monday evening. They have started trading these tapes for tapes of Boise State and Walla Walla coffeehouse sessions, so the exposure the musicians get is increasing, Statzel said.

This Saturday, Liz Toole, lead singer for Harmony Grits, and Mary Meyers will be the featured performers. The session will start with an open mike at 8 p.m. in the Vandal Lounge.

Assets make Julia worth seeing

by N.K. Hoffman

"Look at the faces of the people coming out."
 "They're not exactly jumping for joy."
 "I don't think this movie has a happy ending..."

—Early ticket-buyers waiting to get into Julia.

Strong characters, excellent acting, superb photography, magnificent settings, and a good sense of period: anyone of these assets would be reason enough to go see a film; Julia has them all.

Lillian Hellman (played capably by Jane Fonda) is almost aggressively American; she never really learns to speak another language in spite of all the time she spends in Europe. She can't truly understand her friend Julia's fanaticism either, but she supports her.

"In Cairo, where my mother lives, the servants live under the ground. Eighteen people in three rooms, no windows," Julia (Vanessa Redgrave) tells Lilly during one of their weekends at Julia's grandparents' estate. Fighting this kind of injustice, and later Hitler's tyranny, Julia moves farther and farther away from Lilly's world.

Douglas Slocombe, director of photography, uses colors and places like a painter. The Eastern seaside is straight out of Andrew Wyeth. Apples and glassware and silver take on a rich three-dimensional luminosity that resembles a Vermeer still life. The light in the European scenes is diffuse and enhancing. Chandeliers shimmer and gold gleams.

Music edges in at the transition points, and there is just enough to let you know where you are on the timeline as the movie flips back and forth between the twenties and thirties, between Hitler and childhood, between saying hello and saying goodbye.

No, the picture doesn't have a happy ending; happy endings were infrequent occurrences during World War II.

Julia will be playing at the Audian at 7 and 9 p.m. until March 12.

Hemingway defines hero

by David Gaffney

Ernest Hemingway's short story hero, Nick Adams, comes to life this Thursday at 7 and 9 p.m. on the Borah Theatre screen in a film called The Adventures of a Young Man.

Paul Newman, Jessica Tandy, Eli Wallach and Richard Breymer star in this semi-autobiographical movie about Nick Adams, the subject of Hemingway's best short stories.

Director Martin Ritt, who also directed Sounder, has made a romantically enchanted movie with The Adventures of a Young Man. Its basic emotion is a nostalgic sadness for Nick's past life, which is established in the opening hunting and fishing scenes of the film.

After leaving his small home town in the Michigan woods, Nick learns about life from a railroad brakeman just before an Italian countessa gets him to volunteer as an ambulance driver during the Great War in Italy.

But this is only the beginning of Nick's adventures as he encounters a series of characters who portray Hemingway's image of manhood.

Paul Newman plays a fine role as an itinerant prize fighter, and shows Nick that boxing and life are closely related.

Eli Wallach, as Nick's war-time buddy, shares Nick's fear of death and war and shows him, basically, how to survive war.

Both Jessica Tandy and Diane Baker give excellent performances as the women in Nick's life.

Although this movie is a rambling adaptation of Hemingway's short stories, it is, in the end, a charming view of Idaho's favorite son, Ernest Hemingway.

Vandals drop two to Cougars

Two losses to Washington State University over the weekend dropped the Vandal baseball team to 1-2 on the season.

"I never do feel good when we beat ourselves," Vandals' Coach John Smith said. Smith's concern about pitching for the '78 season proved to be well-founded as Idaho gave up eight base-on-balls in each game of a doubleheader against the Cougars Sunday.

In the first game Idaho lost 3-0 and fell 9-6 in the second. Third baseman Rick Britt had a total of three hits in the two games along with centerfielder Pat Bailey. Terry Hiller collected his three in the second game while playing second base.

Idaho will entertain Whitworth at Wicks Field Saturday.

The Anheuser-Busch Natural Light Paper Airplane Contest

6. Preliminary judging to select the farthest flying 100 paper airplanes will be conducted in an indoor location by the D.L. BLAIR CORPORATION, an independent judging organization.
7. The top 100 farthest flying airplanes (the Finalists) will be flown again indoors to select the farthest flying paper airplane using the same criteria as stated above.
