Rights overview opens symposium

A world overview of human rights violations will lead off major sessions of Borah Symposium 1978, "Human Rights in Foreign Policy."

The overview will be 7:30 p.m. Monday in the SUB Ballroom.

Rose Styron, a member of Amnesty International's board of directors, will keynote with the overview. Following speakers will discuss the violation of human rights in Uganda, USSR and Chile.

Godfrey Binaisa, Uganda's former attorney general and constant criticizer of President Idi Amin, will speak about Uganda. Igor Glagolev, a former Soviet economist and a member of the Institute for World Economics, will speak about the USSR.

Eugenio Velasco, former Chilean ambassador to Tunisia and Algeria and petitioner for action on human and civil rights in Chile, will address the violations in that country.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, will moderate a panel comprised of Dr. Emma Rothschild, political scientist and author; Reed Irvine, journalist and founder and chairman of the board of Accuracy in Media, Inc.; and Robert Moss, editor of Foreign Report.

Monday and Tuesday symposium participants will visit classrooms to discuss human rights issues. High school students can meet with symposium participants from 8 to 10 a.m. in the SUB Gold and Silver Room both Monday and Tuesday.

A special meeting of people interested in Amnesty International will be held with Rose Styron at the Campus Christian Center Monday at 4:30 p.m.

Tuesday at 1 p.m. Emma Rothschild will discuss global energy and food crises in relation to U.S. foreign policy implications. The lecture will be in the Borah Theater and is open to everyone.

The closing session of the symposium, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., will explore the question, "Should Human Rights Play a Significant Role in U.S. Foreign Policy?" Both evening sessions will be televised live by KUID-TV, Channel 12.

For more information on Tuesday evening's issues, speakers and panelists see Tuesday's Argonaut.

The Borah Symposium, open to the public without charge, is held annually in recognition of the peace efforts of the late Sen. William Edgar Borah, the "Lion of Idaho."

The event is funded by the Borah Foundation, established in the senator's name by Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago attorney and close friend of Borah.

Marijuana sprayed by the herbicide paraquat in Mexico could cause permanent lung damage to its smokers, according to recent studies. The Idaho Narcotics Bureau in Coeur d'Alene said that 85 percent of the marijuana circulating in this area is from Mexico.

Herbicides contaminate pot, harm smokers

by Rod O'Dell

Since 1973 Mexican marijuana fields have been sprayed with the herbicide paraquat in an attempt to stem the flow of pot into the U.S. But the failure of the program has appeared in the form of marijuana contaminated with the toxic herbicide, ingested into the lungs of American smokers.

Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, has said that the herbicide could cause permanent damage to the lungs of persons smoking contaminated marijuana, and Congressional sources admit some 100 paraquat-related deaths so far in the U.S.

About 18 percent of the samples tested in the southwest have shown contamination, but no one is sure if the herbicide is in the marijuana Northwestern smokers are using.

But the odds of getting paraquat with your pot are better than good.

George Harrison, head of the Idaho Narcotics Bureau at Coeur d'Alene, said that 85 percent of the pot reaching this area is from Mexican sources. It may be routed through Vancouver, Portland or Seattle, but the origin is Mexico, he said. Harrison said there have not been any confirmed cases of paraquat poisoning in North Idaho so far, but the symptoms are related to many other ailments, such as colds or flu.

"There's no way to be really sure where the pot you're getting is coming from" he said. Dealers are claiming to be selling Columbian, Hawaiian, or some other exotic weed, but nearly all of it is just plain "Mexican commercial," he noted. The contaminated pot is mixed with clean marijuana and sold as Columbian or Hawaiian to make the buyer less wary, he said.

The director of a Spokane drug clinic said a similar situation was occurring in her area. Barbara Wiest of the Spokane Youth Self-help drug clinic said that dealers were passing off Mexican grass as Columbian or Hawaiian "to cover their ass." Wiest said that dealers were mixing the pot to hide the yellowish appearance of the contaminated weed, and selling it as more exotic marijuana to cover their financial losses if the true origin were known.

Wiest said there have been no cases of paraquat poisoning that have been proven clinically, but "we believe we've seen some symptoms of paraquat poisoning." The clinic director said that the most acute symptoms are blister-like sores in the mouth, but other symptoms such as sinus-type congestion in the lungs, a deep cough, and headaches could be the sign of less severe poisoning. The problem is there has been very little research on the effects of paraquat on humans and the medical community is unsure of what to look for, she said.

Wiest and Harrison agreed that since the paraquat issue has come out, there has been an increase in the amount of "Columbian" pot being sold on the streets.

Although several police and pharmaceutical labs exist on the Northwest, none are testing for the toxin, and it may be some time before any begin.

Don Galpin, associate professor of pharmacy and director of the Street Drug Analysis lab at Washington State University, said the lab was unable to test for paraquat because there is no analysis procedure set up.

Local lab not equipped for analysis

The lab has received several samples asking for a herbicide analysis, he said, but he could not say when the samples would be tested if at all. The WSU program tests samples of drugs sent anonymously by users for a $1 fee, and the testing is done by pharmacy students as "an academic exercise." Expanding the program to test for paraquat would require additional manpower and money, he said, neither of which is available presently.

Galpin said he is working to develop a scheme to analyze for paraquat, but the decision to go ahead with a program rests with higher-ups. The director added that a paraquat analysis program would "probably bury the lab in samples." Galpin stressed that other than a laboratory analysis, positive identification of paraquat-contaminated pot was impossible. There are no readily apparent physical characteristics to identify it, he noted.

Harrison said that the forensic lab at Coeur d'Alene is also not equipped to analyze for the herbicide. The procedure has not been determined, and would require some sophisticated equipment, he noted. Harrison said he is considering doing some spot-checks of the drugs seized by police and sent there for analysis, but was unsure when such a program could be started.

A California and Oregon firm have a mail order kit for users to make their own determinations of contamination, but experts question the reliability and accuracy of such means.

Gary Lee, professor of weed sciences at the University of Idaho, who has worked with herbicides for 17 years, said he would not trust a $5.95 kit to make a careful analysis of the dangerous toxin. Lee said the fatal level of paraquat is not known when the herbicide is ingested through the lungs.

With no labs testing for the drug, and 85 percent of the area's pot coming from Mexican fields, experts fear that it is just a matter of time before someone develops an acute case of paraquat poisoning.

Harrison said that persons who believe they have come into contact with the poison should not worry about the legal aspects and should seek help, either through the health department, or their doctor. Harrison said if someone has a quantity of marijuana that has caused sickness to bring in a sample and discontinue use. Harrison said he doubted someone bringing in marijuana under these circumstances would be busted.

There is one definite solution to the problem, however. But Mason, head of the Idaho State Bureau of Narcotics in Boise said, "It's all illegal anyway—if they don't smoke dope there's no problem with it being contaminated."

Idaho district judge orders Twin Falls paper to pay up

An Idaho district judge has ordered the Twin Falls Times News to pay $1.9 million damages in a libel suit because the paper would not reveal names of confidential sources, according to an Associated Press report.

Idaho District Judge Theron Ward imposed Tuesday what he called "sanctions" against the Twin Falls Times News because it refused under court order to reveal the source of confidential tips and other information. As part of the sanction, the judge ruled the paper could not present a defense in the libel case.

Ward ruled that because there was no defense, the newspaper defaulted in the libel action and must pay $1,942,680 to Sierra Life Insurance Co., Twin Falls. The company asked for $36 million.

The paper's attorneys said an appeal would be filed with the Idaho Supreme Court. But the case has been to the court twice already on related issues and the paper lost both times.

Sierra Life said a 1975 series of news articles on the firm's financial dealings damaged business.

Key to the case has been the newspaper's refusal to reveal whom it talked to while preparing the articles. The paper claimed it didn't have to reveal sources because no tips or other confidential information was used in the stories without outside confirmation.

Ward in 1977 ordered the paper to reveal its sources

The paper appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court. But the court held to its earlier stand that there is no "newsman's privilege" under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

After that, Ward again ordered the paper and two former employees to disclose sources. After they again refused, he ordered the paper's defenses stricken.

Trial was held but the paper could present little in its behalf.

Ward said in an Aug. 30, 1977, decision that Sierra Life hadn't been able to show the malice required under Idaho law in libel cases.

But he said unless the paper disclosed its sources, "there remains a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the very disclosures defendants have refused to make would in fact establish...malice."

Ward ruled that Sierra lost 12 trained insurance agents because of the stories. The firm proved it costs $72,164 to train an agent. The judge assessed $865,968 damages for loss of agents.

He also granted $1,076,712 for present and future loss of insurance business.

Reporter Bill Lazarus and Managing Editor Richard High, both of whom were named in the libel action, since have left the newspaper.

Judge Ward declared the newspaper to be in default since it could not present a defense. In his decision, the judge said the judgement was "a sanction for refusal to comply with an order of the court directing disclosure" of the confidential information.

Jensen runs campaign on personal proposals

by Kristen Moulton

Dwight Jensen, a recently announced candidate for the U.S. Senate, told students here yesterday that the key strategy in his campaign will be to point out Sen. Jim McClure's weaknesses, formulate his own proposals and meet with the people of Idaho.

The meeting, sponsored by Campus Democrats, was one of several Jensen is making in northern Idaho this week.

McClure is using his expertise and experience in energy to support oil industry and not in researching alternative sources of energy, Jensen said. The senator has consistently voted for legislation that gives tax credits and subsidies to oil companies and allows high imports by the oil companies.

Imports, specifically oil imports, are causing much of the devaluation of the dollar, he said. Jensen said the U. S. should reduce substantially and quickly the number of oil imports.

Jensen said there is a need for a sound and effective energy program. Solar energy in its present state could feasibly provide 40 percent of the heating in a home, he said.

If the federal government were to under-write a company's attempts to provide the service and equipment needed for solar energy, jobs could be created, investments made and the public could have cheaper energy bills, he said.

He does not oppose atomic energy, but is not comfortable with the current safety and terrorist-proofing procedures. Breeder reactors are not now feasible, he said.

"McClure almost entirely ignores the farmer," Jensen said. "What he has proposed has nothing to do with agriculture." Jensen plans to release the details of a farm proposal next fall, but said that the general outline is based on the concept of 100 percent parity, is family-farm oriented and will not make payments to farmers for not farming.

Jensen said that he would most likely take his farm proposal to the senate if he won the election.

There are too many deductions in the federal income tax system, he said. There should only be deductions for legitimate expenses of living, expenses of providing jobs and for donations to non-profit organizations.

The tax system tends to favor those making the most money, Jensen said, but should be a graduated system, assessing more taxes to those who make more money.

"If it takes a tax increase to make reasonable advances in higher education, then such taxes are viable," he said. In-state students should not have to pay high tuition to state-supported schools, he said.

Federal financial assistance for college students should be granted on a determination of genuine need, he said. Conventional financing should be used by students who don't have that need, Jensen said.

The U.S. has been "too heavy-handed lately" in persuading Israel to resume mid-east negotiations. But, the U.S. must certainly be concerned with genocide, he said.

Jensen said he opposes the neutron bomb and "anything else that would put radiation into the air." If it were necessary, the U.S. could "beef up conventional forces...the means of neutron bombing do not justify the end," he said.

Any decisions dealing with wilderness areas should be made only in accordance with reasonable and strict guidelines of environmental standards, he said.

Jensen, who lives in Boise, is a native of southern Idaho and 1955 graduate of Idaho State College.

Tenure update adjusts to Board's changes

Faculty secretary Bruce Bray has put together a comprehensive update of the U of I faculty tenure policy section of the university handbook. The update encompasses changes made by the Board of Regents in 1975 and 1977. It will primarily affect section 4170 of the university handbook, which has not been adjusted since 1974.

Bray stressed that this is just a formal recording of already established policy.

"This is not Bray's proposal for a revised tenure policy. I only tried to do a competent job of presenting what I understand the policies to be," he said. "It is just 'clerk work,' if you will."

The board revoked several paragraphs of 4170 in April 1975, because they were in conflict with provisions of the Policy Manual for Higher Education Institutions. The revoked paragraphs dealt with:

- dismissal or termination of tenured and non-tenured faculty.

- Standards of eligibility for tenure status.

- notice of and standards for nonreappointment or termination of appointment of nontenured faculty.

- evaluation of faculty members.

- interpretations relating to tenure.

Bray's update will bring the handbook into conformity with the Policy Manual.

It will also bring the handbook in line with the Board's redefinition of faculty. The Board clarified who qualified as a "faculty member" in February 1977.

"Any member of the university faculty and the cooperative extension faculty who holds one of the following ranks: instructor, senior instructor, assistant professor, associate professor or professor" come under the Board's faculty personnel policy by this definition.

Bray said the updates will be included in an entirely revised handbook which will be published this summer or early next fall.

Regents to listen to student views first hand

President of the State Board of Education A.L. Alford Jr., Lewiston, and Regent J.P. Munson, Sandpoint, will be at the U of I Tuesday, April 11, at 7:30 p.m. to meet with students.

The meeting is scheduled so that the Regents can hear firsthand student concerns, said student body vice-president Gerry Wright. Discussion topics may include the alcohol policy, fees, the eastend facility construction, and others he said.

The exact meeting place will be decided and publicized prior to the Regents' visit, Wright said.

Sunday evening was meant for Relaxation.

Morals fickle as fashions

Fashion has once more flipped its fickle fancy at human ideals. Last fall, the well-dressed self-proclaimed bearer of social conscience was seen on Moscow streets wearing a "Free Press, Free Society" placard over her or his shoulder. That was when two cases, one involving Lewiston newsman Jay Shelledy, the other involving the Twin Falls Times News, had brought the issue of confidentiality of news sources to the fore.

But furor over the Shelledy case died down. The placards were no longer local social vogue. Concern over the larger issue, that of the individual's right to information which may bear on his or her life, was seemingly discarded as easily as placards were dropped in waiting garbage cans.

Now an Idaho district judge has stricken the Times News' defense and ordered the paper to pay $1.9 million damages because it would not reveal names of confidential sources. Hopefully, it's merely indicative of poor observation on my part, but I've heard only a few disinterested moans over the judge's decision. Alarm over hamstringing the press by potentially alienating news sources is apparently out of style this spring.

Armbands and posters displaying concern over regents' control of KUOI seem to be dominating the spring fashion plates. Will they, too, soon go the way of white bobby socks?

Not everyone agrees on how or to what extent students should control KUOI or journalists should maintain confidential sources. Conjuring agreement on those issues is not the object of this editorial. Rather, this editorial poses a rhetorical question: should one's commitment to such social, even moral, issues change with skirt lengths and trouser cuts or should commitment lodge in the individual's own social and moral conscience?

KUOI head standards set

Communications Board Thursday night approved criteria for hiring future KUOI station managers.

Recommendations include a specification that applicants have a knowledge of F.C.C. rules and regulations.

Applicants should also have knowledge of the chain of command from KUOI to the ASUI, the university and the regents.

In addition, applicants should be familiar with all workings of the station, have a working knowledge of the KUOI budget, be willing to work at least 40 hours a week for twelve months and have experience working with a staff of volunteer disk jockeys.

Applicants should also be aware of the student audience and the surrounding communities and have ideas to increase both listenerships. Applicants should have knowledge of format policies to be introduced.

in a pig's eye...

Only a month after the constitutional deadline, ASUI President Bob Harding has finally submitted his budget proposal for next year. What is most surprising about the budget is its size: It's not that big.

This is a surprise because for the last two semesters Harding has been the spearleader in efforts to increase the ASUI Activity Fee, normally $15.75 either by $3 (last spring) or $6 (last fall). Harding has been claiming that the increases are necessary because there was no way to provide a continuing level of ASUI services without the new money. Under the gun to justify those claims, Harding decided that perhaps with judicious budgeting, all of a sudden a fee increase is not necessary.

There are just a few flaws in this budget proposal, however. First of all, he apparently felt that paying student senators $40 a month for their work was unnecessary, so he cut out their salaries entirely. This might be because he feels that students who run for office (and get elected) have so much ego gratification the money has no meaning.

If the senate agrees with this philosophy, they might go one step further, and cut out salaries for ASUI president and vice president, and save another $2,300 over the $5,300 save by the lack of senate and faculty council stipends. But then again, the Senators might feel that is a poor attitude and decide to restore the money. That would be a good move. Believe it or not, most senators do deserve that $40: the job if done right, is worth much more than that to the students. Somewhere an additional $5,300 needs to be found.

The next problem is with the golf course. Last year, when estimated income was to be $55,000 the drought breezed by and the season became longer: long enough to exceed income projections by $7,000. The drought seems to have passed, and the season will probably not be as good. Since this year they are guesstimating a $60,000 income figure, it might be safe to think $55,000 again. That means $5,000 more. We are now about ten thousand short.

The Senate Special Projects fund is money that gets parceled out during the year for unexpected happenings, and has been cut from about $3,600 to $282. That fund has proved its worth, and the Senate might like to have something to fall back on. Of course, that $3,600 is misleading when you consider that the ASUI got an additional one-time special this spring worth $17,000 with the temporary fee increase. Let's just give the senate back $3,000, and now we are looking for $13,000.

One of the hotter items this spring is Entertainment. Ironically, Harding was the swing vote last spring in the Senate Finance Committee that killed any entertainment budget for this year. The entertainment manager has done an exceptional job of procuring concerts for the U of I, but unfortunately his enthusiasm overreached his budget, which, thanks to the current president, is nonexistent. The dollar losses of the Firefall concert took away a majority of the reserve capital that the ASUI had built up. It's too bad, but that's what the reserve was for: unexpected losses.

Entertainment has requested only $4,000 for next year. But in a little tiny footnote in the budget proposal indicated that a separate reserve of $10,000 "to be used to cover losses in concerts" is being set aside. However, no where else in the budget is this amount allocated. The Senate probably should find that ten grand, just in case. We now total $23,000 that must be found.

The Senate is now facing the nasty choice of either cutting back a lot of ASUI activities a certain percentage across the board, or pick them each apart. Another alternative is that they could come out with a responsible budget, unlike the president, that anticipates and prepares for untoward events. But perhaps that is unfair to the president. Maybe he recognizes these shortcomings, but wants the Senate to feel good about finding them itself. Then the Senate, not the president, can be the messenger of bad tidings that will need to propose a fee increase.

But then again, maybe somewhere in the budget is a program or two that could be cut out completely, and save anywhere from $23,000 to say $27,000. It would be most seemly if it was a program whose amount of users can actually be determined, and some cost effectiveness can be established. The senate will hopefully be able to find a few of these areas, and then present to the Regents a responsible budget that does not call for a fee increase.

Letters

Harding guilty

Editor,

I would like to reply in regard to Mr. Harding's letters appearing in Tuesday's edition of the Argonaut.

It is appalling to see Mr. Harding accusing other students of being childish for dumping soapsuds, dyes, etc. in the library fountain while he is, in another letter, criticizing a student for daring to express his opinion over the loss of $18,000 of ASUI money in one evening's concert.

An interesting note is that Mr. Harding's wording, "...cheap, libelous cuts..." in reference to Mr. Risken's letter makes Harding as guilty as he claims Mr. Risken to be.

It is really sad to see that the president of the ASUI is either unwilling or unable to make a distinction between organizations within the ASUI and persons who, although they may be participating in those organizations, express their opinions on other issues. Steve Risken speaks for himself, not, as far as I can tell, for KUOI. Bob Harding may speak for himself, but he identified himself as the President of the ASUI in his letters. It is unfortunate that his powers of distinction are not as acute as his office demands.

I am a member of the infamous Gault Hall Volunteer Fire Department but I do not wish to repeat the defence of Scott Baillie or Gault Hall. I also do not wish to attack their

At both the Heart and Firefall concerts I worked at the barricades flanking the stage and what I saw made me thoughtful and a little sad.

I saw many different and interesting people both on the floor and in the stands but there was one thing of which I saw very little: the students of the University of Idaho. I do not know the percentages and will not venture to guess. What I say is my own opinion supported by chance remarks I heard.

I saw junior high school students trying their first cigarettes and conning beer from their older counterparts.

I saw high school students who were having difficulty listening to the concert because they didn't know that when you drink more beer than you can hold, your

Risky Risken

Open letter to Steve Risken,
I just read the letters written by G.H.V.F.D. and Bob Harding, ASUI President, in reply to Steve Risken's accusations. I was inspired, just inspired, by Bob Harding's ability to stomp on wrong doers like Steve Risken and all you other fair weather friends of the ASUI. Steve Risken, you nasty ol' guy.

Do you, Mr. Risken, realize what you as a student owe to the ASUI? Do you realize what the ASUI owes Scott Baillie and the Entertainment Committee? Do you know what the Entertainment Committee owed Firefall? $18,000, that's what.

I must say, Mr. Risken, your behavior is typical of all you media types. It's people like you who cause little problems like Watergate, Koreagate, Firefallgate to be blown out of proportion and make folks like Richard Nixon, "Good Time" Tongsun, and Bob Harding look bad. What's more, you make all of these accusations, causing busy people like Mr. Harding to have to answer embarrassing questions about the loss of a little money. Don't you realize that Bob has better things to do than answer and explain things to the people who voted him into office? Autocratic leaders just barely have enough time to give commands and demand that they be carried out.

Another thing to be said here, Mr. Risken, is when students here at the U of I ask for entertainment, we get ENTERTAINMENT. I know that what we got can be compared to asking for a cup of water and getting the Johnstown flood but Scott Baillie was just cranking out entertainment as requested. Furthermore, I'm sure that Bob Harding has made it one of his top priorities to find Scott's off button before he entertains us to a bigger fee increase.

In summation, Mr. Risken, because people like you are around, persons who lose student money on expensive projects will always be put to the trouble of having to explain why they hadn't planned or prepared adequately beforehand. Officials in the ASUI have more pressing things to do. Don't they?
Robert Abbott

KUOI defense

Editor,
Mt. Harding has made the crass assumption that Steve Risken's views regarding Entertainment Committee chairman Scott Baillie reflect those of the staff of KUOI. He apparently feels that KUOI is engaged in a vendetta against the Entertainment Committee. Mr. Harding, what motive could we possibly have? Budgets?! That's absurd.

Merely because Mr. Risken happens to be employed by KUOI does not mean that he reflects the views of the entire staff. Nor does it mean that he is incapable of writing a letter to the editor, or airing a commentary, in a private capacity.

One last point, Mr. Harding. To falsely accuse someone of libel might be considered libelous in itself. You'd better check your facts.

Letter Policy

The Argonaut will accept open letters to the editor until noon on the days prior to publication. Letters must be signed in ink by the author, but names may be withheld upon request. Quigley loses out to housing act

A small claims judge has declared the U of I Housing Department not in violation of the Idaho Landlord-Tenant Act in a suit brought by former ASUI Vice President Gary Quigley.

Consequently, housing does not have to pay Quigley court costs and a $35 security deposit, tripled to $105.

Quigley brought the suit because, he said, "I was interested to see if I could get the university to comply to the act. It's a brand new law and I lobbied to have it enacted."

Any person moving into a U of I dormitory must pay a $35 reservation/security deposit. Under certain conditions, the deposit may be refunded when the student moves out of the dorm.

Quigley, a former McConnell Hall resident, failed to tell housing of his intent to move off campus before last semester's Dec. 8 notification deadline. The university did not refund Quigley's deposit when he requested it.

Quigley contended the university should refund his deposit anyway because of an alleged violation of the Landlord Tenant Act under section 6-321 of the Idaho Code. This requires the contract to specifically state for what purpose the money withheld will be used.

"But what the reserve deposit is for is self-evident, it's fairly clear," said Ron Ball, assistant director of student housing. He and Bob Parton, director of housing, represented the university in court.

Gary Quigley

Quigley also argued the university is required to give a tenant "an itemized, signed statement saying how the money withheld is used." He maintained the deposit was not actually used for a security deposit, although that is how the contract referred to the $35.

Ball said any deposit not returned because of late cancellation is classified as "general operating" money. He claimed section 6-321 of the Idaho Code referred mainly to money used for damages so a list of what the money is used for is not necessary.

In an interview after the suit, Ball said if Quigley had "lived up to his requirements and cancelled on time, he would have had no trouble getting the refund." He said, "Quigley had sufficient time—we sent him several notices. The deadline is two weeks before the end of the semester so it's out of the way before dead week and so we can make room for other students."

No new students are moving into McConnell Hall where Quigley lived. Ball maintained this was no reason for making exceptions.

Since Judge Bill Smith ruled in the university's favor, no changes are planned in the housing contract or procedures because of the suit, Ball said.

Council decides on IP grading

Students who are making progress on ongoing projects in undergraduate courses will receive grades of IP (in progress) at midterm instead of the present incompletes.

Faculty Council made that decision in a short meeting Tuesday.

The proposal was prompted by senior art courses which require students to assemble portfolios throughout the semester, according to Richard Jacobsen, chairman of the University Curriculum Committee. Instead of receiving an incomplete for midterm, students will receive IP, which is considered to represent at least grades of C or P. When the thesis or project is accepted, however, the IP grade will be replaced with a final grade, according to the proposal.

The proposal will revise regulation E-2 of part three of the university catalog.

The Council also passed a proposal providing additional procedures in the appointment and reassignment of administrators holding academic rank.

According to the proposal, the salary of a new administrator holding academica rank, such as department heads, must clearly specify the portion of the salary paid for administrative duties. When an administrative appointment ends, and the faculty member returns to teaching or research duties, his salary must be adjusted to fit his changed job description.

Faculty Affairs Committee chairman, Siegfried Rolland, said the proposal "provides a basis for negotiation which does not now exist."

In other business, the council sent a consulting policy, which deals with changes in policy language and adequate faculty representation, to committee headed by Harry Caldwell, university geography professor. They discussed President Gibb's non-approval of a presidential scholarship, and Elizabeth Stevenson, Faculty Council chairperson, made an open invitation to faculty members to march in the academic procession at commencement.

Apartment building on the upswing: university doesn't plan to cash in

by Kristen Moulton

The apartment building boom in Moscow may not be so much a response to students' needs for housing as a response to an increasing population, according to Robert Parton, director of housing and food services.

Parton said that the private apartment complexes are not specifically geared toward college students, but to "the general influx of people."

Both Ray Bugh, local contractor, and Richard Fryhling, Moscow city planner, agreed that the recent increase of apartment building is due to a demand created by the university, by commercial growth and by population growth in general.

Building permits were issued for 57 new apartment buildings in Moscow last year, the highest number since 14 buildings went up in 1971. The buildings, many still under construction, will supply 369 new apartments to the market. No building permits for apartment housing have been issued this year.

The population of Moscow did increase by a slightly higher percentage in 1975 and 1976 than past years and could have stimulated the upsurge of apartment dwellings. The population increased by a steady 1.3 percent each year since 1930 and grew by two percent in 1975 and 1976.

A housing survey conducted last spring by the Student Counseling Center and Student Advisory Services found that more students prefer apartments to any other type of housing. The survey also found that a large majority of students, 73 percent of those questioned, felt that there was a serious or moderately serious housing problem here.

Many more off-campus students, those who live in homes, apartments, mobile homes or rural areas, than on-campus students felt that there was a housing problem.

On-campus students, living in residence halls, Greek houses, married student housing and cooperative housing, comprise about 47 percent of the student body, according to the survey. Off-campus students accounted for 52 percent of those questioned.

Though 61 percent preferred apartment living arrangements, the university does not plan to build any in the near future, according to Parton. The lack of money prevents the university from building, he said, but if the money were there, married student and family housing would have top priority.

A large percentage of those surveyed, 48 percent indicated they would be willing to live in university-built and managed apartments. The survey report noted that this percentage basically matched the percentage of on-campus students.

Major concerns about all student housing included lack of privacy, excessive noise and high costs.

According to Ron Ball, assistant director of housing, it is less expensive to live on-campus than off. The survey results found that the cost of living on-campus was, in fact,

The average cost of off-campus housing is between $125 and $150 per month, the survey found. That cost does not include food or expenses and does not account for the fact that many apartments are shared by several people. A comparison with a 1971 study indicated that rent prices have risen 37 percent.

The average cost of living in a residence hall was $152 and in a Greek living group, $158, according to the survey results. Both averages include the cost of meals.

Residence hall occupants may face $100 increase per year if the State Board of Education decides to raise the fees in its meeting today. Ball said that if the increase passes, it would not have much impact on the number of students living in residence halls.

University housing's occupancy level is usually between 95 and 100 percent, said Ball. He doubted that the increase in the number of apartments locally has had or will have any effect on occupancy levels.

"There has recently been a high incidence of students moving off-campus and later back into university housing," Ball said. So far this semester, he said, 40 to 50 students have moved back into university housing after having lived off-campus.

Apartment owners in Moscow generally have no problem finding renters and most have waiting lists of prospective renters.

According to Richard Landis, a Moscow apartment complex owner, the apartment business is seasonal, with housing in demand nine or ten months of the year. The university's busy months bring more personnel, as well as students to the area, he said.

Don Redinger, also an apartment owner, said that most apartments are consistently filled with both students and non-students.

One housing trend gaining momentum is that of students buying permanent homes, according to Ball. In the survey conducted, 30 percent of the students regarded their current addresses as permanent, not just temporary college housing.

Bugh, who is now building apartments, said that the demand for apartments fluctuates from year to year just as other factors in the community vary. He said the current spurt of apartment building will eventually level off.

Landis said that the builders of the area have overbuilt and predicts a surplus of apartments next fall.

If all you know about England Dan and John Ford Coley is that they did "I'd Really Love to See You Tonight," "Nights Are Forever," and "Falling," prepare to be surprised at their concert 8 p.m. April 9 at the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

According to their press releases, the musicians have played hard rock and roll, soul music, a little jazz, even folk music and 'heavy metal.' "The only type of music we really didn't play is polkas," a release quoted Coley.

"John and I are moving toward a heavier sound in the things we do and the songs we write also," said England Dan, a.k.a. Dan Seals.

The Moscow concert will highlight songs from the duo's newest album, Some Things Don't Come Easy. "Opening the concert with soft, melodic songs for which they have become famous, the performance builds with

The show must go on

Tennis tournament will be played despite weather

Despite the rain and general poor weather conditions the show must go on and go on it will, as the U of I tennis team will play host to the Inland Empire tournament this weekend.

Play is scheduled to begin this morning at 9:30 as the Vandals will take on Central Washington University. However, if wet courts prohibit outside play Idaho will meet CWU in the Washington State University fieldhouse at 8 a.m. All games that have to be moved inside will be pro sets, according to the Idaho Coach Rod Leonard.

"It is supposed to be dry and warm Saturday and Sunday. Hopefully it will be that way tomorrow," Leonard commented yesterday.

A two-week long layoff faced the Vandals after a successful road trip over spring break.

"The layoff was not as good as it should have been,"

Leonard said. The rainy weather forced limited practices.

The Vandals second match comes at 2 p.m. today as the U of I team meets Eastern Washington University, a team Leonard expects to provide some of the tougher competition in the tournament.

Big Sky rival, Montana State University, will meet the Vandals in opening action Saturday morning at 9:30.

"They're stronger than the last time we met them," Leonard said of WSU. The Cougars will play Idaho at 2 p.m. tomorrow. In the two teams first meeting Idaho won all the doubles matches and all but one of the singles matches to down the Cougars, 8-1.

Boise State University will meet the U of I team in both teams final match of the tournament at 9:30 Sunday morning.

On the spring break trip the Vandals defeated the Broncos, 6-3. In that match Idaho won all of the singles matches but only one of the doubles.

"They're a good team," Leonard said of the Boise team. "It was a good match."

The tournament will be a round robin tournament with each of the teams playing all of the others once. If any team comes out undefeated it will be declared the automatic winner. If no team is undefeated the team will be the least number of losses will be declared the winner.

Optimism about the tournament radiates from the Idaho team.

"We're probably favored to win," Leonard said. "There should be some good matches."

"We expect some strong opposition from Eastern and WSU," number two ranked Idaho player, Steve Davis, said. "We're just getting over our injuries and sickness. If we make it through this weekend we should be good for the rest of the season."

In the number one spot for Idaho will be Jim DeRoeth, who is currently sporting an 8-1 record. Davis has compiled a 7-2 mark so far this season. Mike Maffey, who is playing in the number three spot, filling in for Rob Knox who is out with pneumonia, has a 2-6 record.

Joe Hignight goes into the tournament with a 3-6 tally. He is recovering from a sprained ankle but will play this weekend. In the fifth spot is Scott Moreland with a 5-4 mark and Jim Gerson, 6-3, will play as number six.

Pairing up in the first doubles spot will be DeRoeth and Davis. At number two will be Knox and Hignight and in the third spot will be Maffey and Gerson.

After this tournament the Vandals will only have two more home matches.

"This would be the best opportunity to watch the team this year," Leonard said.

Program bids taken for football

U of I's Athletic Department is accepting bids for rights to sell football programs for the upcoming season.

An April 14 deadline has been set for the sealed bids, according to John Ikeda, assistant athletic director.

Five home games are scheduled and the programs will sell for $1 each. For further information contact Ikeda at 885-6466.

BSU plays host to Vandals

Boise State University will play host to the U of I baseball team this weekend in Nor-Pac Conference play.

Weather permitting, two double-headers are on tap this weekend. The first is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. (MST) tomorrow with the second to be played at noon (MST) Sunday.

Both teams sport 1-1 conference records going into this weekend games.

"They've got a good ball club," Coach John Smith said of the Broncos. "They are about the same as last year.

"If we can do well in the Boise series it will be a boost to us in league play," he continued. "It's going to be a dog fight to see who wins it (the league)," he added.

Some defensive changes were made in the Idaho lineup when the team met Portland University Monday. Third baseman Rick Britt was moved to shortstop and leftfielder Ken Druffel was moved into third base. Bill Stokes is in left field for the Vandals.

"People are going to have to beat us. We won't be giving any away," Smith said concerning the lineup changes.

Pitching in tomorrow's games will be Tim Martin and Brian Stokes. Mike Brown and Mike Hamilton will be on the mound for Sunday's games.

All doubleheader games are seven innings long while single games are nine.

A single game against Nor-Pac rival, Gonzaga, was rained out Wednesday. The game was to be played in Spokane. It has been rescheduled for Tuesday at 2 p.m. in Spokane.

"We can't be postponing many games this month because we don't have the time to make them up next month," Smith said. A regularly scheduled game against Gonzaga will be played at Idaho's Guy Wicks Field Wednesday at 2 p.m.

Lay-off faces women netters after 7-2 loss to Montana

A loss to Montana State University Wednesday night dropped the U of I women's tennis team to a 2-2 seasonal mark.

"Montana State is good. They'd have to be good to beat us," Coach Bonnie Hultstrand said. Three of the matches were split sets. "We'll have one, maybe two more tough matches this year," she said. The two matches she was referring to will be against Boise State University and Washington State University. Barb Propst and Mary Pat Wheeler were lone winners for Idaho in Wednesday's match as MSU swept the doubles to take the match 7-2.

The Idaho team will have a week long layoff before it meets Eastern Oregon State College next Wednesday.

"It will give us a chance to revamp a little and find out where we're going," Hultstrand said. "I was pleased with the play last night but there were a lot of things we need to work on," she said yesterday.

"It will be a good time for a rest," she commented about this week's layoff.

PRESCRIPTIONS

How are prescription prices determined?

At Hodgins Drug we use a "professional fee" pricing system. The prescription is simply the price of the product from our supplier plus a flat fee.

How is the "professional fee" determined?

The fee is the result of a complete financial analysis of the pharmacy — from taxes to label costs. The services offered are important. At Hodgins Drug we provide patient profiles, insurance & tax records, charge accounts & free local prescription delivery. We've streamlined our system to keep service fast & costs down, but not at the expense of patient care.

How is that different from other systems?

Prescriptions are traditionally priced on a "markup". In other words, the more it costs the store, the more the store makes. On inexpensive products the store does not cover expenses, but on expensive drugs it makes much more. Let's take an example:

How do larger quantities save you money?

Each time you fill a prescription it costs — for containers, paperwork and time. So when you fill your prescription once for 100 tablets instead of twice for 50 tablets the savings are passed on to you. Ask the pharmacist about your medications — some of them can be filled in larger quantities.

Can I ask for price comparisons?

Yes! We're happy to explain what we're doing! We feel we'll gain a new customer.

Keep in mind the advantages of the fee system:

- (1) You pay only for the product & our costs — when your doctor prescribes an expensive drug you aren't penalized.
- (2) On "maintenance medication" — such as blood pressure or diabetic products you save even more by buying larger quantities.

Senior Citizens

- (3) You don't need a "discount card" or an age bracket to qualify. The fee system is the only equitable way to keep prices as low as possible. Your health is too important to us — we don't play games with you or your pocketbook. Take a moment & compare our prices. It will be worth while.

Don't spend another dreary Sunday night at home.

Idaho chosen for archeology plan

Idaho has been selected as one of three states in the nation to participate in development of a pilot state archaeological plan, according to Dr. Thomas Green, state archaeologist with the Idaho State Historical Society, Boise.

Green made the announcement in Moscow Wednesday during the semi-annual meeting of the Idaho Advisory Council of Professional Archaeologists held on the U of I campus.

Archaeology faculty from U of I as well as from Idaho State University and Boise State University are expected to participate in the project along with professionals from several federal and state agencies, Green indicated.

The selection was made by the federal Interagency Archaeological Services (IAS), a subunit of the Department of Interior's Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service (HCRS). IAS will provide the project's first year of funding to be administered through the office of the state historic preservation officer, Dr. Merle Wells, and the office of the state archaeologist.

The Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service, a recently reorganized combination of federal agencies, has set as a goal the full inventory of historic and archaeological properties on federal lands within the next five years. As a first step, the IAS is encouraging states to begin cultural resource planning for the orderly conservation, preservation and use of the resources.

Green Wednesday asked the Idaho Advisory Council of Professional Archaeologists to help develop a state plan, funded in part with IAS money. The emphasis will be on designating culturally significant study sites around the state, and reviewing archaeological information available on the units. This information will provide a basis for decisions on further inventory and research work.

Senate votes to help fund African student group

The ASUI Senate Wednesday voted to fund a black students' association and agreed to support the proposed increase in graduate tuition.

A bill was passed allocating $500 to the Black and African Students Association.

The association had originally requested $950 to help pay for its programs and activities. The original bill was defeated, then reconsidered and finally passed after being amended to $500.

Voting against the bill were senators Rick Howard, Dave Lockhart, Matt McLam, and Linda DeMeyer.

The senate passed a resolution in favor of the proposed graduate tuition increase. Senators McLam, Juko Wani, Daniel Prohaska and Nancy Buck voted against the measure.

The resolution had been tabled at an earlier meeting but was reconsidered following the defeat of a Wani-sponsored resolution in opposition to the increase.

A bill establishing a committee to study the needs of foreign students at the U of I was passed. The committee is to develop a questionnaire to be distributed to all foreign students. Also passed was a bill allocating $50 for the preparation and distribution of the questionnaire.

The appointments of eight students to the ASUI Election Board were approved.

Appointed were Reagan Heese, Rose Peyron, Bruce Connery, Marcie Rehfeld, Karen Beatty, Tom Cazzasa, Dave McClure, and Kevin Morley.

Board considers fee proposals

ASUI President Bob Harding will present the students' position on the proposed fee increase to the Board of Regents at its meeting in Pocatello today.

ASUI senators Rob Mitchell, Greg Switzer, and Linda DeMeyer will also be at the meeting. All four officials also plan to attend a reorganizational meeting of the Idaho Student Association later in the day.

Harding will be armed with four senate resolutions concerning the fee increase. The senate voted to oppose the $10 student facilities increase and the $2 increase for men's intercollegiate athletics, and to support the proposed $2 intramurals fee and a $10 increase in graduate student tuition.

The primary concern of the senators will be the ISA meeting. According to Mitchell, they will be attending with an "open mind" to hear what is said and report back to the senate as a whole. Harding agreed that he is willing to listen but said "the senate has given me no indication that the ASUI has changed its position on the ISA." He added that the ISA has presented "no new proposals," and said the ASUI would be reluctant to spend more money on the organization "for the same amount of nothing."

Chamber Singers perform classics for spring concert

A varied program of music, ranging from Brahms' Gypsy love songs through modern American songs, will be presented by the U of I Chamber Singers at a concert at 8 p.m. April 13, in the Music Building Recital Hall.

The group's director, Harry Johansen, assistant professor of music, said the program includes "Exultate Deo" by Alessandro Scarlatti; "Selig sind die Toten" and an Easter Dialogue, "Weib was weinst du," both by Heinrich Schutz; "Three Reincarnations" by American composer Samuel Barber, with poetry by James Stephens; and 11 Gypsy love songs, "Zigeunerlieder" Op. 103, by Johannes Brahms.

Students can complain by bashing car panels

Snow Hall's car bash has been rescheduled for this Saturday at 11 a.m. in the parking lot at Sixth and Line Sts.

Persons will be charged 25 cents for two chances and 50 cents for five chances to bash a 1955 Chevy with a sledge hammer.

The car panels will be sectioned and titled with topics of student concern, such as the alcohol policy, fee increase, cafeteria food and Board of Regents. Persons may bash the car wherever they wish. Music will be provided at the location.

"If we could get enough support," said a Snow Hall spokesman, "it might even be feasible to submit some kind of tally to the ASUI—just to let them know the students' feelings on a few major areas of concern."

Concert set-up closes Dome

The ASUI-Kibbie Dome will be closed to student use Saturday at 6 p.m. to setup for the England Dan-John Ford Coley concert can begin.

The dome will also be closed Saturday, April 15, at 6 p.m. to begin setup for the Bob Hope concert.

Workshop discusses handicapped

Physical education for special populations in the schools, an issue of concern to parents was discussed recently by northern Idaho educators at a U of I workshop on physical education for the handicapped.

"Parents should have some idea about what the school's responsibilities are in providing physical education for special children and they should be aware of federal legislation that supports these programs," said Dr. Ernest Lange, U of I associate professor of special and physical education and workshop director. The workshop is one of a series being conducted around the state.

The workshop, designed primarily for teachers and other members of the education profession, aimed to "begin informing teachers and teachers-to-be of the considerations necessary for individualization and mainstreaming in physical education for special education children in the schools," Lange said.

One of the main topics of discussion was Public Law 94-142 which sets forth the responsibilities of schools and other public agencies offering educational opportunities to the handicapped.

The intent of the federal law is to "insure a free appropriate public education" for all handicapped children and it provides that they be placed in a regular classroom situation as much as possible. Procedural safeguards are written into the law to insure that its intent is followed.

Much of this information is also helpful to parents of handicapped children, Lange said, and the teachers will help to inform them of programs and services available.

"Parents, through cooperation with teachers, can carry on activity programs at home, which may serve as a catalyst in promoting a better understanding of the child's restrictions, as well as a means by which strengths can be utilized to greater advantage in providing the total educational service to the child," Lange said.

Lange said parents or teachers with questions concerning physical education for the handicapped are welcome to contact him at his office in the U of I Women's Health Education Building or telephone 885-6273 to discuss the subject.

Wallace Complex Committee's second annual photo contest will run from April 12 to 20. The contest is limited to amateur photographers only.

All photographs must be submitted to the Housing Offices, on the second floor of the Wallace Complex, by 5 p.m. Friday.

Each contestant is allowed to enter all categories, but may submit no more than five entries per category. Each contestant is limited to a total of 25 entries.

The categories are black and white, 5 x 7 or larger; color, 5 x 7 or larger; slides; experimental and small prints (groups of three or more pictures, smaller than 5 x 7, which depict a specific theme.)

All photos must be framed or mounted on mats. Name and address, title of the piece and the estimated value of the photo and frame must be on the back of the photos.

First place winners in both official judgments and people's choice will be awarded $5 certificates to be used at Ted Cowin's Photo Shop. Other winners will receive certificates in their divisions.

Student use of gymnastics room could improve

Student response to open nights at the Women's Health Education Building gymnastics room has been good, but could have been better, according to Randy Welsh, ASUI recreation board chairman.

The board is paying $260 this semester to keep the room open for student use Tuesday and Thursday nights and to provide a supervisor.

The room, on the second floor of the WHEB, is open from 7-9 p.m. each of the two nights.

The board last night discussed opening the room for more than two nights per week but made no decision. There are 10 to 15 students using the room on an average night, said Welsh.

The board also funds some 20 organizations that provide student-oriented recreational or social activities.

ACADEMIA
YEAR²

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution.

Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected, technical/non-technical, scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, lab fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out. It might even make your education finances seem elementary.
