Borah speakers—

Rights support right for U.S.

by Jim Borden

"Human rights is no longer an internal affair. 'Intervention' needs redefining."

"The time is now when countries like the United States must stand up for human rights."

"The United States should support victims of oppression and also democratic movements in countries with dictatorships."

The United States "needs to help the rest of the world" to freedom and human rights.

The singular thoughts expressed above came from four different voices during last night's opening session of the Borah Symposium. Three of the voices have either fled or been forced from their homelands. The other is "glad to be in America without a dictator."

Rose Styron, poet and said anyone who speaks freely is in danger in such a country.

But, she said, President Jimmy Carter's stance on human rights has given hope to prisoners across the world.

She added, "The human family can't survive without peace, and peace without freedom is not worth having."

Responsible for the second of the quotes is Godfrey Binasisa, former Ugandan attorney general. Binasisa had to flee Uganda after dictator Idi Amin labeled him a Zionist and an American imperialist agent.

Binasisa said the right to life is a privilege Amin grants at his whims, and he can withdraw that right at his fancy. "This is revolting to the minds of all reasonable people," he said.

He said the American people can help deny Amin

KUID televises Borah

KUID-TV's live coverage of the Borah Symposium will continue tonight at 7:30. Discussion topic tonight is "Should Human Rights be a Central Theme in U.S. Foreign Policy?"

The symposium is being broadcast on channels 12 and 13 until 10 p.m. and viewers will be able to call questions in when the panel discussion starts.

member of the board of directors of Amnesty International, voiced the first of the quotes above.

She said that in oppressed countries, the voices most feared are those of the free speakers and thinkers. Using Argentina as an example, she financing by boycotting Ugandan coffee. Binasisa said Amin had earned $400 million in sales in America alone since his takeover.

He said the U.S. "owes us a moral obligation" as "your country was founded on freedom."

He finished with a quote he found in America: "Opposition to a tyrant is obedience to God."

The third of the quotes can be attributed to Dr. Igor Glagolev, a former U.S.S.R. economist.

Glagolev outlined a "system of violation of human rights" being used in the Soviet Union. He said denying immigration is an important part of that system, "and that includes my family."

He said the proponents of human rights there are jailed, tortured, and destroyed "mind and body."

But, said Glagolev, the majority of the Soviet people don't support aggression or the violation of human rights. He said there is a democratic movement afoot in the U.S.S.R.

To help, Glagolev said, "It is necessary for you to stop financing communist governments with trade, and that the U.S. should support victims of oppression in other countries, actively support democratic movements all over the world."

Glagolev stated that "when democracy is introduced in the U.S.S.R., all major global problems will be dissolved."

The last of the quotes came from Eugenio Velasco, a former Chilean attorney who was forced out of Chile for defending human rights after a coup there in 1973.

He said that at that time, there were many social problems in Chile and many people were awaiting a coup. Until then, Chileans had lived in peace and freedom, he said.

Then the armed forces seized power and thousands were arrested. Velasco said 85 percent of the women imprisoned were raped and 90 percent of all prisoners were subjected to the "barbecue," a specialized electrical shock. Velasco personally witnessed some of the abuses, he said.

He said, "You are safe and free here. You need to help the rest of the world to that end."

Board ups dorm fees, downs Boise pavilion

by Marty Trilhaase

Pocatello—The State Board of Education Board of Regents Friday approved increases in dormitory rates, but opted to postpone considering a proposed $14 per semester fee increase until May.

The housing increases will bring the price tag of a standard room up roughly $100 per year.

That increase sets yearly dorm rates at:

- $1,130 for a general double room and an "A" meal plan,
- $1,230 for a general double room and a "B" meal plan, and
- $1,290 for a general double room and a "C" meal plan.

The housing rate hikes passed the board easily.

But it was another story when two student fee increase proposals came up for approval. The first was a proposed $25 per semester fee increase at Boise State University. That increase, would have increased later to $50 per semester, was to have financed a $20 million multi-purpose pavilion.

The second increase, requested by the U of I administration, would have raised the uniform student fee $14 per semester. The increase would have financed recreational facilities, intramural sports and men's intercollegiate athletics.

The board withdrew the BSU proposal from the agenda, thereby all but killing it. Regent John Swartley of Boise asked the BSU administration to look at other methods of funding.

The increase, proposed with the nod of the BSU student government, had also raised student eyebrows recently. BSU Acting President Richard Bullington told the board petitions against the increase had raised 700-1,000 signatures.

ASBSU President Mike Hoffman noted the pavillion proposal had found student approval via a questionnaire and a ballot. The questionnaire, distributed through classrooms, resulted in 1,134 for and 255 against. It was much closer on the ballot, 531 in favor, 510 opposed.

Regents meeting

Although the current pavillion concept appears dead, it may be modified and re-presented to the board.

The U of I's increase proposal appears to be delayed because of procedural questions. The move came at the advice of Milton Small, board executive director.

Small said the current system of presenting increase proposals to the board needs improvement. He added the board should set guidelines for what time of the year increase proposals may be submitted and when they take effect. Small said the board should not "act hastily or in a scattered manner."

The board distributed funds appropriated by the legislature for next year as follows:

- $23.3 million for the U of I with a total budget of $27,248,300
- $2.5 million for Lewis-Clark State College
- $16.2 million for Idaho State University
- $16.1 million for Boise State.

The board revised its liaison policy for KUOI-FM with the approval of station manager Chris Foster and ASUI President Bob Harding.

The new policy provides for student appointment of station managers with the formal approval of the liaison officer. The liaison officer may remove the manager for violation of the U of I or Federal Communications Commission policies.

The board passed a stiffer policy in March. But Board President A.L. "Butch" Alford, of Lewiston, noted control of the student owned station was never the board's intention. "We do recognize we hold the license," Alford added.

As holder of the station license, the Board is required to show supervision.

Alford authored an amendment to the measure calling for Board review in December. The review would guard against regent control, Alford said.

The board also elected its officers for the 1978-79 term. Leno Seppi of Lava Hot Springs replaced Alford as President. J. Clint Hoopes of Rexburg was elected vice president and Swartley was elected secretary.

ISA future in doubt

Representatives of various Idaho college student bodies met at Idaho State University Friday in an attempt to salvage the ailing Idaho Student Association.

But after a two and one-half hour meeting, the only commitment made by student representatives was resubmitting the matter to the various student governments.

The ISA was dealt a serious and perhaps fatal blow earlier this year when the ASUI pulled out. That left Boise State University as the only major university member. Idaho State University never joined the ISA.

ASUI President Bob Harding and ASUI senators Rob Mitchell, Linda DeMeyer, and Greg Switzer attended the meeting. Harding said he would present the question of ISA membership to the senate. He added he could not predict the senate's response.

Mitchell told the Argonaut he supports the concept behind the ISA. But he added the ISA itself is strained by a lack of unity among members. "The students aren't arising from a common dissent," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said any statewide student organization must be an effective student lobbying force, as well as a clearing house for student input. He added the organization must command a strong commitment from members.

Switzer said the meeting succeeded in outlining problems within the ISA. But he noted the meeting itself was technically a gathering. No chairman presided and no votes were taken.

The ASUI Senate may face several resolutions on the ISA Wednesday night. One, authored by DeMeyer, provides that the ASUI supports a statewide student organization in principle, but will not make a commitment to the ISA. The resolution, however, also provides that the ASUI will remain open to future proposals.

Mitchell and Switzer indicated they may submit another resolution.

Argonaut wants creative material for spring section

The Argonaut is accepting poems, fiction, short drama, essays, line drawings and photographs for the spring literary section.

Contributions should be brought or sent to the Argonaut office in the SUB basement. Entries should be typewritten.

Deadline for submitting material is April 21 at 5 p.m. Contributors should bring the material in early to insure close consideration. The editors may accept late contributions until April 28 only by special arrangement. For more information, call 885-6371.

ISA, minorities resolutions set for senate consideration

The ASUI Senate will consider resolutions concerning the Idaho Student Association and the funding of minority student associations in its 7:30 p.m. meeting Wednesday in the SUB Chiefs' room.

A resolution written by Sen. Linda DeMeyer states Friday's ISA reorganizational meeting in Pocatello offered "no real solution to past problems." The resolution also states the ASUI offers no commitment to the association at this time.

The resolution adds that the senate is willing to listen to future proposals from the student lobbying group.

DeMeyer was one of three senators attending the Pocatello meeting.

The responsibility for funding minority student groups is the subject of a resolution submitted by ASUI President Bob Harding. The resolution states that, although the ASUI morally supports such organizations, their funding should come from Student Advisory Services.

Harding recently vetoed a request from the Black and African Student Association for ASUI funding.

Also before the senate will be the Student Union budget, submitted by Harding, and a resolution commending the work of Faculty Council Representative Dan Mertens on the recent change in drop date policy.

Report blasts faculty evaluations

Student evaluations of individuals' teaching methods should be eliminated or completely revised, according to a Faculty Council ad hoc committee report.

The report found that:
 •mandatory evaluation has not improved teaching;
 •evaluation has had an inflationary effect on grades;
 •evaluation has had an adverse effect on faculty morale;

•many faculty questioned use of evaluations at administrators' discretion or use by administrators with faculty permission;

•if the evaluation program is retained, the forms should be revised to eliminate items considered irritating or inapplicable.

The committee, appointed last fall by Faculty Council Chairman Elizabeth E. Stevenson, surveyed on-campus faculty members but did not poll students.

Faculty Council will consider the report today in its 3:10 p.m. meeting in the Faculty Lounge.

Other agenda items include a recommendation from Faculty Affairs Committee about the campus security plan, the proposed policy on faculty personnel files and a proposed amendment to the State Board of Education's personnel policy.

Faculty Affairs Committee recommended Faculty Council representatives work with Vice President Tom Richardson to propose a security plan to "balance the need for building security and the maintenance of a proper academic atmosphere in the university."

The committee report stated it did not believe the intent of the current campus security policy is to make spot checks of individuals in buildings or to allow security officers to search individuals for permits and place persons in custody if they did not have use permits.

However, the committee noted the proposal leaves a possibility of search and seizure. The proposal does not preclude spot checks from becoming official or "from being initiated by eager members of the security force," according to the committee.

The proposed revision of the board's personnel file would simplify the regulation. The revision reads, "The institution by which the faculty member is employed shall have the right to be represented by counsel of its selection at the hearing."

The current policy includes a provision that the university's counsel could present witnesses.

Cheerleading clinic scheduled

Cheerleading clinic begins today at the Women's Health Education Building from 4-6 p.m. All men and women currently enrolled at the U of I are eligible to attend. Tryouts will be April 17.

Truby addresses professors

Roy Truby, state superintendent of public instruction, will speak to members of the American Association of University Professors, (AAUP) and other interested faculty members at noon April 11 in the SUB Appaloosa Room.

Truby is also an ex-officio member of U of I's Board of Regents.

The executive committee of the professors' organization has suggested Truby discuss:

—personnel policies at the university, especially due process in appeals procedures and statements of reason for not reappointing faculty members without tenure.

—future funding of higher education.

—any possibility of collective bargaining.

Truby's speech will be brief so that faculty members will have time to voice opinions and ask questions, said Roger Wallins AAUP chapter president.

Noon programs resume

Women's Center brown bag noon programs resume Tuesday with "Role Model Resource Bank: Who's Advising You?"

Isabel Miller, who teaches a course entitled Women in Transition, will explain her research with women on campus in various job positions. This "resource bank" of women can aid and advise women interested in their respective fields.

At Wednesday noon, Joan Brigham, program director and coordinator of treatment of the self control unit at WSU, will talk about a behavioral approach to weight control.

The self control unit deals with alcohol, smoking, bio-feedback and weight control.

Bids open for programs

U of I's Athletic Department is accepting bids for rights to sell football programs for the upcoming season.

An April 14 deadline has been set for the sealed bids, according to John Ikeda, assistant athletic director.

Five home games are scheduled and the programs will sell for $1 each. For further information contact Ikeda at 885-6466.

Funds short for co-op bins

Moscow Food Co-op still needs $700 for wood to build food storage bins, despite three fund raising activities, according to Janet Daily, co-op coordinator.

The most recent fund raiser was a $3 per plate vegetarian dinner Saturday at St. Mark's Episcopal Church.

Daily said the planned bins will be more efficient than the plastic buckets the co-op now uses.

"Food for display and food being stored will be kept separate. Also, the bins will be at arm level instead of on the floor like the buckets," she said.

Daily hopes the co-op will have enough funds in a month for volunteers to begin bin construction.

The co-op will particularly need people with carpentry skills. In the mean time, volunteers to help with benefits are needed, said Daily. "We need people to wait tables, clean afterwards, cook, make posters and provide entertainment," she said.

Last journey

I first went to Montana a few years ago with a friend of mine who lived there. One of the first things I noticed was the little white crosses beside the road in various places. I asked Doug about them and he told me they represented places where persons had died in automobile accidents in the past.

This made me quite nervous. I didn't like being near places where people had died. I wondered about the circumstances in which those people had perished. I became terribly conscious of my driving (and Doug's, as we were moving quite fast). I asked Doug to slow down, which he did, ever so slightly.

Since that time, I have been to Montana twice. Once was on a weekend vacation to Missoula. The trip was nothing more than a pleasant summer cruise to a neighboring state. Yet, the crosses still made me nervous and I watched my speedometer and other traffic closely.

The last time I was in Montana was last week to bury Doug. He became one of those crosses. I'm not sure if I'll ever be able to go to Montana again.

Speakers focus on rights

Should human rights be a central theme in U.S. foreign policy?

A U.S. State Department representative and a British journalist will explore that question tonight in the closing session of Borah Symposium 1978, "Human Rights in Foreign Policy."

The session begins at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom.

Presenting the Carter Administration's view of the place of human rights in U.S. foreign policy will be Robert Maxim, human rights officer, Bureau of Human Rights, U.S. Department of State, Washington, D.C.

Serious questions about current U.S. foreign policy, which have given human rights emphasis, will be probed by Robert Moss, editor of Foreign Report a highly influential bulletin published in London by The Economist. The second speaker's topic will be "The United States should be in favor of human rights, but..."

Richard Charnock, United Press International (UPI) Boise Bureau chief, will moderate a panel comprised of Reed Irvine, journalist and founder and chairman of the board of Accuracy in Media, Inc.; and Bill Hall, editorial page editor of the The Lewiston Morning Tribune and former press secretary for Sen. Frank Church; and Rose Styron, poet, journalist and member of the board of directors of Amnesty International.

Emma Rothschild, political scientist and author, expected to be a panel member tonight has cancelled due to illness. John T. Donnelly, associate professor of economics at WSU will take her place. Alan Rose, assistant professor of foreign language at U of I joined the panel last night.

gay blue jean day

Word is out, or should be by now, about the observance of National Gay Blue Jeans Day at the U of I this Friday, April 14. On that day, all gay people at the U of I are being encouraged to wear blue jeans. It is appropriate for us to be reminded of a difficult human rights problem of our own, so soon after this year's Borah Symposium dealing with the topic of human rights and foreign policy.

There is also a certain amount of humor in this occasion. Now, paranoid "straight" people will head for the closet, frantically searching for corduroys or polyesters - anything so that they needn't get stuck wearing blue jeans on Friday. Of course, all this careful wardrobe planning is quite unnecessary.

Think about it. As any student of elementary logic could tell you, if all gay people are wearing blue jeans on Friday, that does not mean that everyone who wears blue jeans then is gay. (The organizers of Gay Blue Jeans Day have been quite careful to emphasize this.)

So what's the point? If, as usual, almost everybody wears blue jeans this Friday, then we won't be able to tell the gays apart from anybody else, will we?

That, precisely, is the point.

You see, the peculiar notion that homosexuals are somehow "queer" is responsible for most of the prejudice and discrimination against them. It is true that some Christians will quote the Bible to prove that being gay is a "sin." But most Christians accept the authority of the Bible because they find that it usually agrees with their common sense notions of morality. And the "common sense" idea that homosexuality is "unnatural" and that gay people are "perverts" is deeply ingrained in our society.

Yet, especially in these days of overpopulation, it seems very probable that our emotional disgust at homosexuality is simply the result of a mere cultural taboo that has lost any validity it once might have had.

If you think about it, being gay is actually quite natural. After all, we like to think of sex as being more than a simple biological process. Ideally, sex is also supposed to be a form of communication and an expression of love. Even physical attraction can be as much an attraction of personalities as it is a matter of hormones. And obviously, it is as natural to wish to express one's love to a member of one's own sex as it is to express one's love to a member of the opposite sex.

I realize that this idea has terrifying implications for us "normal" people. It might force us to wonder just how "normal" we are. Could it be partly true that "We have met the enemy and they is us."? Certainly, many scientists have claimed that most people have both heterosexual and homosexual tendencies.

I regret bringing this to your attention; it is most unpleasant to consider. Actually, I'd rather not think about it myself. But it is time we faced the truth that gay people are no different from straight people in any essential way. Ninety percent of us will continue to cling desperately to the labels "normal" and "straight." But ultimately, the labels "gay" and "straight" are meaningless. And this seems to be the whole idea behind National Gay Blue Jeans Day.

Referendum

Editor,

Some of the people who use the Women's Center decided that there was a need to generate some positive reinforcement for teachers who have succeeded in developing a non-sexist attitude towards teaching. In response to this need, we started an informal "Blackboard Referendum" on the Women's Center blackboard. Students were asked to write down the name and department of those teachers that they felt were trying hard to be non-sexist, and also to add any explanatory comments they felt were necessary. The following teachers were named:

Jim Day, of the class Self-Sufficiency 204/404
Bob Haynes, Ag. Engineering, "very encouraging and positive"
Dr. Alan Rose, French
Dr. John Bush, Geology, who was praised for his use of non-sexist language
Dr. Kent Hackman, History (on sabbatical)
Dr. Jim Calvert, Math, "feminist, activist, helpful"
Dr. Mary K. Biaggio, Psychology
Joy Williams, English
Dr. David Barber, English

Dr. Nick Gier, Philosophy
Dr. Richard Daly, Economics, "very encouraging"
Dr. Sharon Araji, Sociology
Mary Ellen Motzer, Geology
Ruth Wintower, English

This was meant to be a very individual, subjective and spontaneous thank you, a sort of unofficial "pat on the back." This was not an official Women's Center program; it was a simple thank you done as simply as possible. We also apologize if we have left any deserving teachers off the list (we probably have). It was not intentional. To all of the teachers named, THANK YOU! You have made life a little nicer for all of us. (Name withheld upon request)

Evaluations

Editor,

Once again it is time for the students' voice to be heard! An ad hoc committee established by the Faculty Council has completed a report concerning student evaluations of teachers. Their recommendation is: "for the good of the University of Idaho...the current program should be thoroughly re-evaluated and either eliminated or completely revised."

But there seems to be a gross injustice here! The committee has only looked at one side of the stick. The other side, our side, has been completely neglected. They surveyed a total of 420 faculty with 292 responding in time. This was a good response but how many students were surveyed?

NONE! Does this mean that students are not affected by this issue? Of course not! It just means that the results and recommendations of the committee are biased.

What can we do about it? There are two extremely constructive and important things you can do. First, you can read the committee's report, which can be obtained at the faculty secretary's office, Faculty Complex Building. Second and most important, you can go to today's Faculty Council meeting. It is being held at 3:10 p.m., today, in the Faculty Complex Building.

They will be discussing the committee's recommendations today. Let yourself be heard!

It is your chance to let the council know that you value the teacher evaluation program. It is your chance to express the fact that you value the opportunity you have to give constructive opinions regarding your classes!

Darrell G. Coleman

Jackson says growth is Idaho's major concern

Idaho could be totally self-reliant, according to gubernatorial candidate Larry Jackson.

Jackson, a Republican State House Representative from Ada County, said "Idaho has the ability and the resources to be self-sufficient" at a get-acquainted meeting Friday in the SUB. He spoke to about 25 students, faculty members and Moscow citizens.

He cited growth as the major concern of the Idahoans he has talked to.

"Growth has people concerned and confused. They don't know what's happening or how to handle it," he said.

"Even though they are concerned, however, there is no overriding issue and that is going to make beating Evans even more difficult."

Jackson, a pitcher in the major leagues at one time, has been described as a "moderate Republican." He said there was a definite difference between himself and Governor John Evans, who has been described as a "moderate Democrat."

"I really have a problem

Ravenscroft opposes tuition

Vern Ravenscroft, a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, told the Argonaut Friday, in-state tuition is not the answer to funding higher education in Idaho.

Ravenscroft was on campus during one of several stops he is making in northern Idaho this week.

"I've been quoted many times as opposing in-state tuition," he said. The state has a responsibility to provide an education to its citizens, he said, and that responsibility carries with it a commitment to adequate funding.

The state legislature has given education a high priority, he added.

Ravenscroft stressed the need to avoid "unreasonable duplication" of services in the state's colleges and universities. Idaho's university system could potentially serve a population double what it is now, he said.

"There is no way in my mind that we can permit duplication of professional schools" within the state, he said.

Ravenscroft criticized federal proposals for increased wilderness area in Idaho.

"The numbers and size of areas being studied are unreasonable," he said. A few acres of the proposed wilderness area are worthy of analysis to see if they should be designated as wilderness, he said, but "all the rest of them ought to be returned to multiple-use management."

with labels, but there are some definite differences between myself and Governor Evans. I am fiscally very conservative. On the other hand I am very liberal when it comes to sponsoring programs that will directly benefit or change the lives of Idaho citizens."

One of the programs Jackson supports is state education. He disagrees with imposing an in-state tuition on students of state colleges and universities.

"Despite the drought of last year, the Idaho economy is strong. We are not in a position of badly needing money to afford our colleges and universities. Even if we were, that cost should be absorbed by the state, not by the individual student."

Jackson also touched upon possible water diversion, increasing wilderness areas, and the use of pesticide 2, 4, 5-T in northern Idaho.

This is Jackson's fourth swing through northern Idaho. He said he will probably return for even more campaigning because "my name identification is not as strong as it should be in northern and eastern Idaho."

Ravenscroft also criticized Gov. John V. Evan's veto of an investment tax credit bill, calling the veto a "serious mistake." The bill would have provided a three percent tax credit for investment, primarily benefiting industry.

The bill was vetoed because it was feared it would attract too much new growth, Ravenscroft said. But a three percent tax credit would not be a determining factor to new industries deciding to come to Idaho, he said, while it would be very helpful to existing industry.

The legislature did a "monumental job" in completing a workable water plan for the Snake River, Ravenscroft said. The plan insures Idaho will continue to control its own water by demonstrating to the federal government that all of the water is being used in the state, he said. "The next responsibility will be to establish policy for the other rivers, one at a time," he said.

Gays wear jeans Friday

"Gay people will wear blue jeans," is the theme of National Gay Blue Jeans Day to be participated in Friday on the U of I campus.

It should not be presumed that all those wearing blue jeans Friday are gay.

According to the National Gay Task Force, what makes this event worthwhile is the talking and, hopefully, thinking it generates. The point to National Gay Blue

City chief happy with campus cops

by Kristen Moulton

Campus police as a division of the Moscow Police Department (MPD) is working well, but will be continued only if U of I administrators and students are satisfied, according to Clark Hudson, Moscow Police Chief.

Hudson was interviewed by four campus media representatives on KUOI-FM's Media Analysis Friday night.

There have been few complaints from students in the year since the arrangement began, Hudson said. Although the decision whether the current arrangement will be continued is up to U of I administrators, Hudson said it has been a headache to manage two separate divisions.

Hudson was in favor of the ASUI Police Policy Committee's recommendation of a student security force to aid the campus division. "Any assistance we can get from the students would be very valuable," he said.

The building-use permit plan on campus is helping, said Hudson, though there are no regular check stations for the officers.

Moscow has a relatively low juvenile crime rate, primarily because of the example set by university students, according to Hudson.

There are approximately three reported cases of rape in Moscow each year, he said.

Feds require exit interviews for loan students

Students with National Direct Student Loans are required by federal regulations to participate in an exit interview before termination as a student.

Anyone who has an NDSL loan and is graduating or does not intend to return to the U of I should arrange for an interview. Interviews provide information about how the loans are to be repaid, cancelled or deferred.

Interviews can be scheduled with the Student Loan Office, room 211 of the Administration Annex, 885-6760.

but added there may be six to eight times as many that unreported.

Though narcotics enforcement has no special priority in the MPD, Hudson said "there is a good possibility that there are narcotics agents in Moscow." If there is such a narcotics agent working for the city, he or she is on the city payroll, he said. There would be room for only one such agent on the payroll, he said, but "state and federal agents do move in once in awhile."

There is also a good possibility that a "spring bust" is in the making, Hudson said. Labeled "spring round-up" by some students, an annual drug bust historically occurs sometime in the spring before school is out.

Asked if he would warn the marijuana-smoking public if marijuana in the area contained the pollutant paraquat, Hudson said he would tell smokers that if they had to use it, to stay away from Mexican-grown marijuana.

He said he is not happy with decisions handed down by the local judiciary. There should be more penalties imposed for drunken driving, he said, instead of withheld judgment upon withheld judgment.

Hudson would like to see the recently-formed Humane Society take over the enforcement of dog laws in Moscow, but said it is unlikely such an arrangement would work.

He added that people should adopt a dog because they want a pet, not because a publicized tear-jerking picture has caused them to feel sorry for the animal.

About 2300 people showed up for the England Dan and John Ford Coley concert Sunday night. La Blanc and Carr also performed. Photo by Jim Johnson.

Sunday's concert: They're even better live

England Dan and John Ford Coley live and England Dan and John Ford Coley on albums are two different experiences. They proved that in a fast-paced performance under the Dome Sunday evening.

After La Bland and Carr of "Falling" fame kept the audience semi-awake with some standard rock and roll, England Dan and John Ford Coley entered with surprising vitality. Even standards like "Gone Too Far" and "We'll Never Have to Say Good-bye Again" had an added spark of life that never really comes across on their albums.

The group moved from the softness of "Wanting You Desperately" to the country twang of "Showboat Gambler" with ease, and touched upon the classical sound as well as hard rock.

Their performance peaked with "Holocaust." The song opened with electronic thunder, then softened into lyrics of world peace.

Although at times the group's sound is reminiscent of the breeziness of Seals and Crofts, England Dan Seals said in an interview after the concert that they make no conscious effort to make their music similar or different from his brother's sound.

"We kept the fact the Jimmy and I are brothers a secret for six years so the public wouldn't compare our music. John's and my music is a part of us and grows from within us, Seals said.

The varied backgrounds of Seals and Coley explain the wide spectrum of their music.

Coley brings a classical influence to the group, having once considered becoming a classical pianist. Seals, on the other hand, was raised on what he calls "real simple hillbilly music."

Seals, the more outgoing of the two, explained their merger into rock.

"John realized that he wouldn't be able to sing as a classical artist, and I decided that country really wasn't where it was at for me."

Although their music is incredibly varied, almost every song carries an optimistic note. Both Seals and Coley agreed that this optimism is a reflection of the Baha'i Faith to which both belong.

"I hate songs about doom, death and pestilence," Coley said quietly. "Nothing, absolutely nothing, is worth getting down about."

Coley became a member of the Baha'i Faith, which revolves around world unity, six years ago. Seals has been a Baha'i for nine years. They take their beliefs very seriously and hold "firesides," informal discussions of Bahaism, after almost every performance.

The talent, variety and sincerity of England Dan and John Ford Coley was very evident in their performance Sunday. It doesn't come across on their albums and that is really too bad.

Mel Brooks strikes again

by N.K. Hoffman

Mel Brooks seems to take great delight in shooting down Hollywood traditions. He has already deflated westerns, horror films and silent movies; in High Anxiety he aims his b.b. gun at the Hitchcock film.

In this manic-depressive movie, the highs are fantastic and the lows are never so low as to be boring. Some of the scenes are classics.

Mel Brooks, who produced, directed, and partially wrote High Anxiety, also stars in it. As Richard H. Thorndyke, a Harvard professor who inherits an insane asylum (the Psycho-Neurotic Institute for the Very, Very Nervous,) he is charming.

He also sings the movie's title song, which he composed.

Cloris Leachman, as the mustached Nurse Diesel, is even weirder than she was in Young Frankenstein. She acts her part to perfection.

Madeline Kahn doesn't make it as a blond, but in every other respect she comes off well.

How come Harvey Korman always plays perverts? How come he plays them so well? Who cares? He's great.

Besides stealing camera angles, Brooks and co-authors Ron Clark, Rudy deLuca, and Barry Levinson have lifted whole scenes from the Hitchcock movies Vertigo, Psycho, and The Birds.

High Anxiety is playing at the NuArt until April 22.

Mel Brooks and Madeline Kahn fight their way past elevators, pigeons, airport security, mad bellboys, men with braces, and practically everything else, and for what? Find out by seeing High Anxiety, playing at the Nu Art.

Tracksters take second at Cheney

The U of I track team captured seven first places and two seconds to tally 70 points for a second place win against Eastern Washington University, Spokane Falls Community College and Central Washington University.

Eastern scored 83 points to win the meet while SFCC had 28 and CWU 24.

Vandal Coach Mike Keller cited the efforts of his shot put and discus people along with three sprinters.

Don Allemeersch tied his seasonal best in the shot put with a toss of 54-6. In the discus Charlie Schmoeger and Jeff Johnson landed tosses of 168-foot-2 and 163-foot-1, respectively.

After being out of competition for three weeks Greg Illorson came back to post a 10.5 second effort in the 100-meter dash.

Also placing for the Vandals were Steve Willson in the 100-meters and Graydon Pihlaja in the 800-meters.

The Vandals will travel to Boise this weekend to compete against Boise State University and Idaho State University.

"We will only be taking 18 people," Keller said. Idaho will be without the efforts of triple jumper Osita Nsofor, sprinters Claude DeFour and Warren Reed and javelin thrower Mark Worley. All were out with injuries. Worley will red-shirt this season because of a torn ligament in his arm. He placed second in the Big Sky in the javelin last year.

Vandals drop three to Boise

Three losses to Boise State University this weekend dropped the U of I baseball team to 8-11 on the season and 2-4 in Nor-Pac conference play.

Idaho came from behind to win 8-7 Sunday afternoon for the squad's lone win of the trip. Mike Brown relieved pitcher Mike Hamilton to pick up to win. The Vandals dropped the nightcap to the Broncos, 6-5.

In Saturday's games the U of I lost the opener, 7-4 and the nightcap, 11-3.

Women face EOSC tomorrow

After a week-long layoff the U of I women's tennis team will meet Eastern Oregon State College tomorrow at 3 p.m. on the courts behind the Womens' Health Education Building.

"We don't expect to lose any more matches this season," Coach Bonnie Hultstrand said. Boise State University and Washington State University will be two tough matches, she said.

Ruggers 2-2 at Mud Bowl

The Blue Mountain men's rugby team won two and lost two in mud bowl tournament action in Seattle over the weekend.

The Moscow Mules, the Blue Mountain Rugby Club's second team, suffered a 74-0 loss to Spokane Saturday afternoon at Shadle Park High in Spokane. The loss puts the Mules at 2-2 for the season.

The Mules pitted an inexperienced backfield against Spokane's winged backs.

Scott Moreland smashes a serve to his opponent in weekend tennis action. Moreland helped the Idaho team to a 42-3 victory in the Inland Empire Tournament by maintaining a perfect tally for the tourney. Photo by Dave Kellogg.

Partridge tops Idaho placers

Idaho women tracksters took a second place and six fifth places in a weekend meet with five other colleges in Spokane.

Idaho's highest finisher was Cindy Partridge who took second in the two mile with a time of 11:52.

Debbie Danaher placed fifth in the 400-meter dash at 1:03.26, Penny Rice, fifth in the 800-meter run at 2:26. Joyce Taylor took fifth in the 100-meter hurdles at 17.1 and Patty O'Connor placed fifth in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 1:11.1.

Also taking fifth places were two of Idaho's relay teams. The 400-meter relay team clocked in a time of 53:35 while the mile relay had a time of 4:25.4.

Idaho grabs Inland Empire crown

Joe Hignight returns a shot to his opponent in the Inland Empire Tournament in Idaho tennis action over the weekend. Hignight was undefeated in the tourney as the U of I team compiled an impressive 42-3 record to win the tournament. Photo by Dave Kellogg.

Idaho tennis spent the weekend showing just how strong it really is.

Amassing a 42-3 record in the Inland Empire Tournament, the Vandals handily defeated Washington State University, the nearest opponents, who racked up 35 wins and 10 losses.

"I couldn't have asked for a better tournament," Idaho Coach Rod Leonard commented. "It showed how tough the University of Idaho is.

"It went excellently. It was a beautiful weekend," he continued. "The players really came on. They're excellent mental athletes. You have to be mentally strong and our team was."

The U of I team started the tournament out on the right foot, shutting out its first three opponents. Five of the Idaho singles players were undefeated in the tournament along with the number one and number two doubles teams.

"I was very pleased with our performance," Leonard said of the Vandals first encounter of the tournament against Eastern Washington University. Rain forced the match to be played indoors at the WSU fieldhouse.

"We had a lucky break, so did Washington State," Leonard said. The indoor courts at WSU are similar to the ones in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome in the fact that the ball moves slower.

"They're better than the 9-0 loss to us," Leonard said of the Eastern team.

The U of I's second and third wins came at the expense of Central Washington University and Montana State University. Central played Idaho Friday in the WSU fieldhouse while MSU met the Vandals Saturday on the courts behind the Women's Health Education Building. Scores of both matches were 9-0.

WSU suffered a second defeat of the season to the Vandals, 7-2, in Saturday afternoon action. Boise State University also found defeat at the hands of the U of I team Sunday morning, losing 8-1.

"It's always rewarding to beat Boise State and Washington State," Leonard said. "It's nice to get revenge for the rest of the year. We want to do 9-0 to them each time."

Six of the matches in the BSU encounter were split sets, with Idaho winning five. The last time the two met five of the matches were split sets and three went to the Vandals who won 6-3.

"I said earlier that we have a tough schedule," Leonard said. "It helps in close matches. Our guys win. We're just tougher, match tough I guess you would call it."

Undefeated for Idaho were Jim DeRoeth, number one, Steve Davis, number two, Joe Hignight, number four, Scott Moreland, number five and Jim Gerson, number six.

Photogs shoot Sandpoint citizens

Eight photojournalism students and their teacher spent the weekend in Sandpoint, Idaho, doing assignments for the Sandpoint Bee.

Kenton Bird, editor of the Bee and a U of I journalism graduate, gave the students 27 assignments to choose from. Phil Schofield, photojournalism teacher, came up with the idea.

Students photographed a variety of subjects, from a revival meeting to a day at a local dairy.

Cory Auverson spent an afternoon photographing activities in a senior citizen's center. "I felt like they let me into their world," she said.

Karen Greeley "had a nice experience" photographing handicapped citizens making wooden blocks.

Andrew Brewer took some pictures in the local jail and also spent a day that began at 4 a.m. in a Sandpoint dairy.

Steve Davis, Clarke Fletcher, and Regina Spicer tried to photograph wildlife, but couldn't find any.

Instead, Davis covered a revival meeting.

Fletcher took pictures of guitar-making techniques.

Spicer spent an afternoon in Clark Fork, talking to and photographing an old man named 'Pop.'

Thad Alton spent his time in the backwoods, investigating people who try to live off the land.

N. K. Hoffman spent a morning in a bookmobile, an afternoon photographing CETA workers in a park, and another morning with a Sandpoint game warden.

If the students' work is up to par, it will be featured in picture pages in the Bee in the coming month.

Group exposes media flaws

Accuracy in Media is out to expose flaws in the media, errors of commission or omission, according to the organization's chairman of the board, Reed Irvine.

Irvine, one of the Borah Symposium participants, spoke to students in a communications theory class

Monday.

He contends that much of the errors which appear in print occur because of reportorial carelessness, incompetence or because of misunderstandings.

Irvine said that his organization handles complaints about all areas of reporting, corresponds with editors and publishers about inaccuracies, and Irvine himself writes a syndicated column.

"Most editors and publishers are sensitive to criticism," he said. "They don't like it. Most of our letters end up in the trash."

He said that to get attention, AIM is buying space in newspapers to publicize media inadequacies, and buying shares of stock in media corporations to have a say at stockholders' meetings.

Irvine contends that media errors, particularly omission, may result in distorted perception on the part of the public.

He said, for example, last month stories on Cuban political prisoners appeared almost everywhere but in the New York Times and the Washington Post. The NYT publisher had, what Irvine termed a "lame excuse" for not running the story.

Lewiston Morning Tribune editorial page editor Bill Hall attended and defended the newspapers' side of the story saying, "We make an honest attempt to include what will be of the greatest interest to our readers."

Hall said that when he and others of the Tribune staff meet to decide stories and placement, they don't think in terms of "what's the most left-wing or communist," they decide on reader interest.

Veterans may still file for bonuses in some states

For veterans from many states, the deadline has expired for filing for a bonus, but there are still seven states in which you can yet file. Veterans from the bonus-paying states who believe they may be eligible should contact veterans affairs agencies in their home states.

For Connecticut and North Dakota, the deadline for filing is December 31, 1978. If you are from Michigan, you have two years in which to file, as the deadline is June 30, 1980. In Illinois and New Hampshire, the deadline was last year, but both states have put an indefinite extension into effect. Other states with no deadline for filing an application are Vermont and Massachusetts. There are no indications that any of the expired programs will be revived, state officials report.

Only three states are still accepting applications for World War II and Korean Conflict service bonuses—Connecticut until July 1, 1978, and no deadlines are set for Illinois and Massachusetts.

If you need further bonus information, contact the Office of Veterans' Affairs, UCC 241 or phone 885-7979.

Jensen correction

The Argonaut incorrectly stated in a headline Tuesday that Dwight Jensen is a candidate in the gubernatorial race. Jensen is in fact a candidate for the U.S. Senate seat held by James McClure.

Jensen announced his candidacy Tuesday, not Monday.

ACADEMIA
YEAR 2

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution.

Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected, technical/non-technical, scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, lab fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out. It might even make your education finances seem elementary.

Renovation for handicapped

In beginning efforts to make the university accessible to the handicapped in policy and physical facilities, $30,000 has been allocated from the general education plant outlay.

Upgrading and replacement of ramps, new handrails and new signs for handicapped parking on some streets are among changes being made, said Dianne Milhollin, coordinator for handicapped student programs.

York Associates, an architectural firm from Boise, has been hired to give cost estimates for necessary structural changes recommended in the University's transitional plan.

The plan, a result of committee study, states as its goal "to provide the most immediate accessibility to the most critical and most used parts of campus to handicapped students."

The most used parts of campus would be the Administration Building, Annex, Library, UCC, Physical Science, Agricultural Science, College of Mines, at least one of the Engineering buildings, and the College of Education, College of Forestry and Health Center, which only need a few modifications to become accessible, said Milhollin.

The committee is still studying alternatives to physical construction in planning ways to save money, said Milhollin. Building modifications are not always necessary. Some shortcuts can be made to cut costs, she said.

Milhollin said dixie cup dispensers could be installed instead of lowering water fountains to the level of wheel chairs for example. The law doesn't say everything has to be physically changed.

Wilderness topic of lecture

Dr. Roderick Nash, award-winning author, historian and conservationist, will present this year's Wilderness Resource Distinguished Lecture at the U of I during Natural Resources Week in April.

Entitled, "Wilderness Management: A Contradiction in Terms?," Nash's lecture is set for 8 p.m.

Tuesday, April 18, in the Agricultural Sciences Auditorium and will be open to the public without charge. The address is sponsored by the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences' Wilderness Research Center, and will be a highlight of resource-related activities during the week of April 15-22 at the university.

Could you survive in the wilderness with no food--for 8 days?

Find out how they did it by 4 men who survived.
